FIRE NEAR GAS TANK

Proximity to Big Receptacle Lends Touch of Excitement to Afternoon Blaze.

DAMAGE IS ONLY $200

Barn Filled With Hay the Seat of the Conflagration—Quick Work of Department Prevents Spread of Flames.

Fire from an unknown cause broke out in a small barn belonging to the Public Service Corporation, situated at the rear of the former Ivins' lumber yard on Watchung avenue, at 4:20 yesterday afternoon. The building is within twenty feet of two oil tanks and the main gas tank of the company and the fire department worked with feverish energy to prevent the flames spreading in the direction of the receptacles. The loss will reach $200, of which $150 is on the structure. It is insured for $800, with a like amount on the contents.

Though Chief Doane has conducted a strict investigation he has been unable to define the origin of the blaze. A farmer had just completed placing two tons of hay in the upper loft, the Public Service furnishing an Italian to help him. It is possible one or the other might have dropped a watch on the floor or else have been smoking.

The flames were first noticed by William Chamberlain, who turned in an alarm from box 21. The chemical engine was on the scene inside of a minute afterward and before another had passed, had a stream directed against the barn on the side nearest the tanks. With the arrival of the other apparatus two hydrant streams were put at work and the danger was soon removed. The firemen had to work for two hours, however, pitching out the entire two tons of hay and it was after 6 o'clock before the recall was sounded. The flames did not reach the lower part of the building and the damage to the upper part was practically confined to the roof, the firemen having to cut holes into it in order to let the smoke out and then soak the burning mass.

The proximity of the gas tanks had the effect of bringing hundreds of persons to the scene but it also kept them at a respectful distance and the firemen had the entire field of operations to themselves.

THIEVES WORKED BOLDLY.

Entered Front Door of Scotch Plains Store in Daylight.

A small store kept by Nicholas Delnero on Forest avenue, Scotch Plains, was robbed of $30 and several boxes of cigars, Monday afternoon between 4 and 5 o'clock. The thieves gained entrance while the proprietor and the members of his family were absent. They removed a pane of glass that had previously been cracked and were thus enabled to slide back a bolt in the front door.

The matter was reported to the Scotch Plains and also the local police, but they have practically no clue to work upon.

Searching for Highwaymen.

A force of detectives has been scouring the woods below South Plainfield for the highwaymen who robbed the paymaster of the Delaware Construction Company of $5,000 last week. The company has offered a reward of $1,000 for their capture and all Middlesex county is practically under surveillance at the present time. It is the belief of the officials that the robbers are still in the vicinity.

Frustrated a Burglar.

Returning from a party at an early hour, yesterday morning, Albert Springer, of South Plainfield, formerly of this city, came upon a man trying to force an entrance to the home of William Humphrey, who occupies half of a double house in which Springer lives. Springer drew a revolver and made for him but the fellow scurried off at top speed and disappeared in the darkness.

Bluecoat Basketballists.

The police basketball five is rounding into shape for matches. The five is a great combination of brawn, and with a little more practice in passing will be a team to give the best of fives a go. The line-up includes Patrolmen Overbaugh, Higgins, Flynn, Messler and Roundsman Flynn; substitute, Detective McCarthy. The team practices twice a week.

Hospital Sunday at First M. E.

Several local congregations that did not receive an offering last Sunday for the hospital will do so on Sunday morning, among them being the First M. E. church.

Second Anniversary Sermon.

Rev. A. E. Finn, pastor of the Park Avenue Baptist church, will preach his second anniversary sermon on Sunday morning.

A REVIEW AND OUTLOOK

Present Day Prosperity a Good Omen of the Future in L.V.F. Randolph's Opinion.

SOME DANGERS AHEAD

Extravagance a Vice of the Times As Is the Rapacity of the Pirates Commonly Called Leaders of High Finance.

In the New York Commercial, former Mayor L. V. F Randolph, president of the New York Consolidated Stock Exchange, reviews the year just closed not only from a financial standpoint, but in a much broader scope. He also takes a cheery aspect for 1906, but draws attention to the dangers that confront us as a people.

Mr. Randolph says:

"The growth and prosperity of the American nation have had no parallel. The chief moving force has been freedom. Every citizen, and even every immigrant, while respecting his neighbor's rights, could do his own pleasure and pursue his own plan of action. Along with liberty, and largely as its outgrowth and result, the development of science and industry, on a scale heretofore undreamed of, has enormously augmented the nation's wealth and well-being.

"No war nor important internal dissension has obstructed the path of progress. Providence has given us generous crops. Our surplus of products from the soil and of products from the factory has more than enabled us to pay for imports and for American foreign travel. A large reserve of gold has accumulated in the treasuries of the nation and of its banks. The year 1905 is closing under circumstances of unprecedented prosperity.

"It will be strange indeed if in a sky so bright as that above us no cloud appears. Such danger as exists grows out of the very conditions that make for our success; the conditions, namely, of freedom, vigor, alertness and strength, which characterize a nation made up of the more intelligent and enterprising inhabitants of many countries (and of their descendants) who have here established their homes and marked out their destinies. If all the details of human activity were perfectly directed, only good results would ensue; but this is impossible. In these days of manufacturing and commercial competition, over-trading and over-capitalization of industries must almost inevitably follow( or be a part of) unusual prosperity.

"By way of stimulating this natural human tendency to overdo trade and to create dangerous situations, the development of the world's gold mines and the great increase in our country of bank paper money have come along as powerful factors in assisting the enlargement of business and in augmenting a danger which may ultimately become serious. The cost of living is greatly increasing. Wages necessarily advance. Schemes of industry and of investment are enormously explained.

"The influences extend beyond America, but have here their largest illustration and power. On the other side of the world is an old nation which has, within the memory of many of us, been reborn, and has chosen to a certain extent and in its own way to sit at the feet of occidental wisdom. But this old nation thus reborn may yet prove wiser in its day and generation than we are. If Japan, coming victorious out of its war with Russia, can learn to do as well as or better than ourselves the things on which we pride ourselves, and can teach her great neighbor, China, to do the like, we may discover, in greater degree than we have yet realized, the advantage possessed by a race which has not learned the indulgences and vices incidental to extravagance and which, in the ordinary economies of its daily existence, can do work as skilfully and as well as our American people can do it, and at a far diminished cost.

"The great vice and danger of the American nation is the extravagance which breeds waste. Next to this, broadly speaking, are the dangers created by the audacity and rapacity of the so-called leaders of 'high finance.' Along with these go the perils of an exaggerated optimism, which lead on to over-trading and the assumption of ill-considered responsibilities and obligations tending toward disaster.

"The outlook for the New Year is bright indeed all over our favored land. Even in Wall street, tribulations have been few and seem but temporary. If we should be blessed with good crops in 1906 our national wealth would still further increase; but we are reaching a point in the development of our industries, finances and commerce where the note of caution will be highly important."

Rudolph Bleyer, of Grandview avenue, sails tomorrow for his former home in Austria to visit his parents.

FRECH AGAIN COUNSEL

Somerset County Board of Freeholders Choose Some Officials.

LONG FOR PHYSICIAN

To Raise $30,000 in Anticipation of Taxes for Roads—Committees Named—Meeting at Somerville.

When the Somerset County Board of Freeholders convened at Somerville after the noon recess yesterday it was decided to choose officials until the regular annual meeting, which will be held the second Wednesday in May. The men elected to office yesterday will fill the unexpired terms until that time, when there will be another election.

For counsel, John A. Frech was renominated and Azariah M. Beekman opposed him. The result was six to three in favor of Mr. Frech, two members not voting. For county physician, Dr. S. O. B. Taylor was renominated, and Dr. Frank L. Field, of Far Hills, and Dr. William H. Long, Jr., of Somerville, opposed him. Dr. Long was elected, he receiving seven votes, Dr. Taylor, two and Dr. Field, two. Joshua Doughty, Jr., and Oliver H. Perry were unanimously re-elected county engineer and county supervisor of roads, respectively.

It was voted to raise $20,000, in anticipation of taxes, for the improvement of county roads.

The new director, Henry W. Baird, named the following committees:

Finance—Codington, Smith, Emmons.

Auditing—Bunn, Gibson, Hoagland, Vreeland.

County Buildings and Grounds—Fitzga, Philhower, Bunn, Demler, Emmons.

Lunacy—Vreeland, Gibson, Philhower.

Stationery and Printing—Smith, Fitzga, Emmons.

Collector's Accounts—Philhower, Vreeland, Smith, Emmons.

County Roads—Hoagland, Bunn, Gibson, Fitzga, Demler, Codington.

Y. M. C. A. MEET ENTRIES.

Names Coming in Rapidly—Sociable for Athletes After the Event.

Entries for the annual championship athletic meet of the Y. M. C. A. are coming in rapidly. So far C. B. Koons, Harry Scull, Stryker Hoagland, Theodore Gavett, Clarence Steiner, Walter Sampson, C. Utzinger and Jerry Manning have signed. Entries close on January 16, and thirty names are expected to be on the list by that time.

As soon as the list is completed the committee will decide on a date. The competition for premier honors will be keen between three or four of the cracks. A few days after the meet a sociable will be tendered those who took part. The presentation of medals and prizes will be a feature of the affair.

An Athletic Committee.

The first dance of the O. F. C. football team will be held at I. C. F. Hall tomorrow night. The committee of arrangements includes a great array of local gridiron heroes: Berlin Banks, chairman; Frank Emmons, William McCullough, George McVoy, Frank Shepard, Harry Joseph, John Todd, Roy Phillips, Vincent French, John McCullough, Charles Hellyer, Everett Sherwin and Edward Kenner.

Cocked Hat Tourney.

The cocked hat tournament at the Park Club will hereafter be held on Monday night, instead of Tuesday. On account of the bridge whist tournament which closes Monday night, January 8, there will be no game until Monday night, January 15. The league ten pin games will be rolled on the dates scheduled.

Freeholder Wilbur Busy.

Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur inspected the bridge at Rock avenue on New Year's day. This structure has been under repair and the work is nearly completed. Repairs have also been ordered for the Sycamore avenue bridge.

Birthday Party.

In honor of her seventeenth birthday Miss Florence Morton, of East Third street, held a party last night. Music, dancing and refreshments were the features. A score of young people enjoyed them.

Missionary Workers Meet.

The Women's Foreign Missionary Society of the Park Avenue Baptist church met yesterday at the home of Mrs. C. W. Tennant, of Kensington avenue. The subject was "Peoples and Religions."

A Week of Prayer.

The week of prayer will begin at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Monday night, January 8, under the direction of the pastor, Rev. D. J. S. Zelle.

MORCOM GIRL CONFESSES

Pretty Seventeen-Year-Old Domestic Acknowledges Theft of $400 Worth of Rings.

GAVE TWO AWAY

Police Recover All the Jewels Through Her Statement and Return Them to Dickensens.

Under the searching examination by Chief Kiely, seventeen-year-old Amy Morcom, the pretty domestic arrested yesterday for the alleged theft of jewelry from her former employers, Mrs. Townsend Dickensen, broke down a few hours after her arrest and confessed her guilt. She made a full statement, and all the jewelry, amounting in value to $400, was recovered before last night and returned to Mr. Dickensen.

When the girl was first arrested she denied her guilt. She intimated that the arrest was due to Mrs. Dickensen's pique over her departure from the household, and insisted that she knew nothing of the missing rings. Chief Kiely could not break down her denial at a preliminary examination and had her locked up in a cell. After the bolts and bars had been given an opportunity to work their peculiar influence the chief had the girl brought before him again and it required only a very little of the third degree to knock the props from under the denial. She made full acknowledgment and told the chief where the stuff was to be found.

Amy said she took all the rings at one time about a month ago. An opal and diamond ring, worth $150, she gave to a young man, and a ring with four diamonds in it, valued at more than $100, she gave to a girl friend. The rest she kept, hidden most of the time. The chief sent men out after the rings and recovered them all.

Amy was arraigned before Justice Mosher this morning, who held her for the Grand Jury under a charge of grand larceny in $500 bail. Having no counsel, the girl entered a formal plea of not guilty. Mr. Dickensen appeared at the hearing and identified the rings.

The prisoner has been in the hands of the police before. About two years ago she was taken into custody for obtaining expensive candies by the fraudulent use of her employer's name. At that time the charge was not pressed on account of her youth, and because it was hoped she might overcome her tendency to take things that attracted her without regard to the morals involved. She takes the present affair quietly. She did not carry on in her cell and was composed when arraigned before the justice. She is hopeful of securing bail.

PLAINFIELDER SAID TO HAVE BEEN FATALLY HURT.

Despatch from Chicago to New York Papers Gives His Name as Charles J. Johnson.

The New York papers of last night's issue contained the following despatch dated from Chicago:

"Charles J. Johnson, of Plainfield, N. J., while endeavoring to board a cable train this afternoon was thrown under the wheels and received injuries from which it is thought he will die. He was taken to the Chicago Emergency Hospital. Johnson's hurts include a mangled wrist, a fractured skull, a badly cut face and internal injuries."

The city directory shows there are several Charles Johnsons in Plainfield, but none with the middle initial "J." A canvass of the others failed to reveal the identity of the man mentioned in the Chicago despatch. It is possible the name has been misquoted or else it is another Plainfield.

FANWOOD'S NEW OFFICERS.

T. J. Nicholl Re-elected Chairman of Committee.

The Fanwood Township Committee met last night to organize for the coming year. T. J. Nicholl was re-elected chairman; Theodore Bruchman, treasurer, and William R. Codington, township counsel. W. Scott Terry, the new member, took his seat for the first time. There will be no change in the police force for this year.

The members of the Board of Health are T. J. Nicholl, chairman; Dr. F. W. Westcott, inspector, and Charles H. French, secretary.

In Honor of Birthday Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. H. A. Todd, of East Third street, entertained a company of fifty at their home last night, in celebration of the birthday anniversary of Mrs. Todd, which occurred yesterday. The affair was most informal and varied amusements helped to pass a pleasant time, followed by the serving of refreshments. Mrs. Todd received many useful and handsome gifts.

BAR HONORS MR. MARSH

County Association Insists on His Serving Third Term as President.

MAKES PRECEDENT

Tribute Affects the Lawyer Deeply—No Call to the Bench, He Said, Could Touch Him More.

In re-electing Craig A. Marsh president for the third time, yesterday, the Union County Bar Association paid Plainfield's leading lawyer an unusual tribute. An unwritten law that a president serve but two terms has been in force in the association, but the members unanimously insisted that Mr. Marsh remain in the chair.

Mr. Marsh, when first asked to serve another term, declined a renomination, but his fellow members would not hear of his declination. The demand that he serve another term was unanimous. Judge Gilhooley, Judge Atwater, Prosecutor English and Surrogate Parrot voicing the desire of their fellow members in earnest speeches. By a standing vote in which every member present—and it was the largest meeting the association has ever held—voted aye, the organization insisted that Mr. Marsh stay at its head.

The tribute affected Mr. Marsh deeply. In accepting the honor he was hardly able to control his voice. In view of the manner in which the demand was made and the vote taken, he said, he thought no higher honor could ever come to him; that certainly no call to the bench would touch him as this call.

The association voted $500 for new books. It was decided to hold a bar dinner the latter part of this month and the following committee was appointed by Mr. Marsh to arrange it: E. S. Atwater, W. R. Codington, J. Kiernan, A. S. Swift and N. R. Leavitt.

J. R. Connolly read a legal paper on the history of the growth of representative government.

Plainfield Court Cases.

The list of cases on the court calenders for the present term, which began yesterday, includes the following of interest to Plainfielders: Supreme Court, Annie A. Guinn and husband against the E. P. and C. J. Railway Co., in tort, Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiffs; George Ball against E. P. and C. J. Railway Co., in tort, Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiff; William Egan against W. J. Ryan, on contract, Coddington & Swackhamer for the plaintiff; Mary Stevens against the E. P. and C. J. Railway Co., on contract, Coddington & Swackhamer for the plaintiff; Julia Agocheek against Joseph Stanachef, on contract, William Newcorn for the plaintiff and J. P. Owens for the defendant; Hezekiah Hand against M. J. Ginsberg, on contract, William Newcorn for the plaintiff. Circuit Court, E. M. Wood against E. P. and C. J. Railway Co., in tort, Craig A. Marsh for the plaintiff.

New Factory for Somerville.

The Somerville Board of Trade has been negotiating for some time with the American Manufacturing Company, which has decided to locate its plant in East Somerville and will begin the erection of a big factory there about March 1. This concern will manufacture staple hardware, such as mechanics' tools, specialties and light machinery. It has an authorized capital of $750,000 and 7,000 leading retail hardware dealers located in as about as many towns and cities in every State and Territory in the United States have pledges themselves as subscribers to the shares of the company.

Library Grateful to Benefactors.

Former Mayor Alexander Gilbert and Mason W. Tyler, who defrayed the expense connected with the placing of transparancies presented by O. T. Waring, in the Plainfield Library, were tendered a vote of thanks at the regular meeting of the board of directors of the institution, last night. A similar vote of thanks was extended to former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph for the defraying of the expense of protecting with fertilizer the plants and hedge around the library grounds. It was reported that arrangements have been made for installing a telephone in the library building.

Preparing for Big Sale.

The dry goods store formerly owned by Hill & Shupp, and sold to A. E. Force & Co., is now closed preparatory to taking account of stock for a big sacrifice sale. The clerks at the store are now engaged in arranging the stock for this sale.

—The olive oil sold by Neuman Brothers is imported by them direct fom France. It is strictly first quality and has their personal guarantee.

GARBAGE IS A MENACE TO PUBLIC HEALTH

MAYOR TAKES SEAT AS A HOSPITAL GOVERNOR

CHARITY BALL NETTED $1,717 FOR THE INSTITUTION.

It was announced at the meeting of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, held at the Casino last night, that the net profits from the chairty ball for the benefit of the hospital were $1,717. The very gratifying report was made by the committee in charge, accompanied by a check for the amount named.

Mayor James F. Buckle, as the city's representative, an ex-officio member of the board, took his seat for the first time and seemed much interested in the discussions.

The greater part of the meeting was occupied in adopting a new set of rules and by-laws, amended throughout and intended to meet the present extended work of Muhlenberg Hospital. Some of the amendments occasioned a lively discussion, but finally the rules and by-laws were unanimously adopted, and it is believed that they will more fully meet present-day requirements. It was decided to have the Nurses' Home connected with the gas main and this work was ordered done.

L. T. L. FESTIVAL.

The annual Christmas festival of the Loyal Temperance Legion was held in the W. C. T. U. rooms, last night. There was a large attendance of children and friends. The programme, in charge of Mrs. Alvah TenEyck, superintendent, was a good one. There was the usual Christmas tree, elaborately decorated and filled with gifts for the children.

The programme included the singing of Christmas carols and recitations by Hazel Godown, Grace Vandenburth, Elsie Perrine, Harold Wahlig, Marion Strader, Anna Vail, Helen Vandenburg, Ruth Wahlig and songs by Marguerite Higgins and Ethel Vail. After the entertainment there was a distribution of candy and oranges. Miss May E. Howlett, treasurer of the Legion, assisted in the entertainment.

CLARENCE STEINER WON TEST.

Got 87 2-3 Points Out of a Possible 90 in Gymnasium Competition.

Leaders for the boys gymnasium class were chosen at the Y. M. C. A. yesterday afternoon after a vigorous test by points. Twenty-one boys took part in the test, which was conducted by Kenneth Robbie.

Clarence Steiner won first honors with 87 2-3 points out of a possible 90. Charles Line was a very close second, 1-3 of a point behind. Those two, with Russell Conroy and Russell Morris, who finished next in order, were appointed leaders. They will wear special emblems on the floor and have advanced teaching in gymnasium work.

BOWLING ALLEY OPENING.

Individual Tournament Will Be Arranged Among Y. M. C. A. Rollers.

It will be open night on the Y. M. C. A. alleys Friday, to inaugurate the new season. The alleys have been repaired and refinished and are in the best shape they ever have been.

Within a week an individual tournament will be arranged, and on the results of the competition the make-up of the representative team will be based. As soon as the tournament is over a league will probably be organized among the alley enthusiasts, to be conducted independently of the crack five. The latter will be matched against leading teams of this vicinity.

Boys' Club Fully Launched.

The mechanical drawing class will start at the Boys' Club tonight, and with its commencement the complete educational course of the institution will be in full swing for the first time this season. About fifty boys are enrolled, as many as the club can handle.

Mr. Robbie Takes Hold.

Class work under the new regime, with Mr. Robbie as physical director, was resumed at the Y. M. C. A. after the Christmas recess last night. Mr. Robbie has led the classes a number of times, and had no difficulty in carrying the work on.

Funeral of Abram Q. Fine.

The funeral of Abram Q. Fine was held yesterday at Runyon's undertaking parlors. It was in charge of Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck and was attended by a gathering of friends. The interment was made at Hillside cemetery.

Theodore Shortman, of Newark, has returned home after a visit to friends in the West End.

President Fisk Says That It Is Up to the Common Council to Remedy Conditions.

MATTERS NEGLECTED

Annual Report of Health Board Makes It the Chief Feature—Other Matters of Prime Importance.

Following is the report of President Charles J. Fisk, of the Board of Health, which has been submitted to the Common Council:

The Board of Health of the city of Plainfield, in submitting herewith their seventeenth annual report, would respectfully call your attention to the following very important matters:

"First, the general condition of our city.

"A careful reading of the health officer's report will show the sanitary conditions very greatly improved in every way over previous years; the general health better than the average for several years in the past. The report shows that during the year 1906 only five deaths from communicable disease, excepting tuberculosis, occurred; many nuisances have been abated; privy vaults and cesspools abolished and filled; defective plumbing systems corrected; the various owners and tenants forced to generally clean up and comply with our ordinances so far as practicable and the money at the disposal of the board would permit.

Garbage.

"The importance of a proper and sanitary system for the collection and disposal of garbage cannot be too forcibly brought to the attention of the public and before your honorable body. The Board of Health is doing everything in its power that can be done to remedy and bring about some improvement and do away with the great menace to the health of the city now existing, due to present unsanitary methods. The matter, however, is entirely in your hands, your body has the power to act. The importance of this matter has been called repeatedly to the attention of the Mayor and your honorable body. Now we ask that you either do something to abate this trouble or give the Health Board the power and money to act. Every day this matter becomes more and more serious and a greater menace to the health of the city.

House to House Inspection.

"The results of the inspections of the last two years show very plainly the necessity for this branch of the work. Violations of all kinds are constantly occurring and only the untiring work of our officers and inspectors in following up and looking after these matters will keep our city in a good, sanitary condition.

Milk and Food Inspection.

"The report of the health officer is very full on this subject. More and better work has been done than ever before. There is no question but that Plainfield is supplied with as good, and in many cases better, average of milk than any city in the State. Great attention is paid to this important part of the work, but only constant care and vigilance on the part of the inspectors will insure the continuance of the present conditions.

Financial.

"For the report of the finances of the board we would refer you to the treasurer's report, which shows in detail all receipts and expenditures. The total amount of fees collected and turned over to the city treasurer was $882.

"It is estimated that the amount of money required for health purposes for the year 1906 will be $5,000, and we trust your honorable body will be able to make this appropriation as requested in the formal petition from the Board.

"In conclusion we wish to thank you for your attention and co-operation in the work of this important department of the city government.

"Respectfully submitted,

"CHAS. J. FISK,

"President,

"B. VanD. HEDGES, M. D.,

"Secretary."

Fast Five Coming.

The first team of the Y. M. C. A. will play Maxwell House basketball five Saturday night, here. Maxwell House is a crack five, so a rattling game is on the cards. Dr. Browning is confident his team will win, although Maxwell House defeated Newark, who didn't have very much trouble in winning from Plainfield.

STREET DEP'T SPENT $32,298 DURING 1905

Thoroughfares Generally Improved Throughout the City Under Direction of Retiring Committee of Common Council.

FAVOR BRICK PAVING

Suggest Competition in Bidding for Street Work—Censure Contractor Meeker—2,352 Buildings Connected With Sewer System.

In return for the $32,298.12 expended for streets during 1905, the Councilmanic committee in charge of that department makes an excellent showing in its annual report submitted to the city fathers Friday. Numerous thoroughfares have been macadamized and many others have been graded. Culverts, flagging and cross-walks have been laid and the Richmond street sewer has been gotten well underway. The disposal beds have been improved and enlarged and many other things have been done to better conditions.

The committee makes several valuable suggestions for the incoming committee's use, among which are the extension of the present sewage system by a gravity process for a distance of four and a half miles; the substitution of brick or other hard substance for paving Park avenue in the business section, and competition in bidding on all street contracts.

The report follows:

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 29, 1905.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

We submit herewith our annual report of work done and moneys received and expended on streets and sewers during the year 1905:

Permanent Pavement.

The brick pavement on concrete foundation laid last year on Watchung avenue has given very general satisfaction, though some would prefer one less noisy.

It became necessary to make an opening in the pavement this season to remove some builder's rubbish from a house connection, but the work of filling the hole and replacing the concrete brick was done so thoroughly that there is practically no evidence of the hole.

In case Park avenue is widened from the railroad to Second street, the question of laying a more durable pavement than macadam will have to be decided. Probably the only pavements which need be seriously considered for this city are brick, treated wood block and bituminous macadam. All of these pavements seem to have proved their merit, and either of them would no doubt be satisfactory. Brick would probably cost $2.25 per square yard, bituminous macadam $2.50 and treated wood $2.75 to $3.00.

If the cost of street sprinkling could be provided for in some other way than by taking it out of the street repair appropriation, and if all requests for grading streets should be refused unless accompanied by a subscription from the property owners, the committee could afford each year to lay a section of permanent pavement, which, in the course of a few years, would give the business centre a greatly improved appearance.

New Macadamizing.

The contract let to Charles M. Meeker, late in 1904, for macadamizing, has dragged along in a most unsatisfactory manner. Excuse is made for the contractor that he was delayed by failure to secure slag for foundation rapidly enough to permit him to finish the work within a reasonable time, but the fact remains that the street with slag foundation was completed in a satisfactory manner some time before those constructed entirely of stone were in a presentable condition. It is probable that more competition for such work would be of decided benefit to the city, and we are informed that other contractors will enter the field in 1906.

This work has now been completed and application should be made early in 1906 for the appointment of commissioners to assess the cost.

The sum of $3,014.14 was paid this year as a part of the city's proportion of the cost of the previous macadamizing work; this is in addition to $2,380 paid on the same account in 1903.

Considerable work was done by the city force on the streets included in the macadamizing contract, in order to expedite the work and finish it in a satisfactory manner, and the city steam roller was used by the contractor. The cost of all this work, and rent for the roller at $10 per day, was paid by the contractor, but on the schedule the items are charged against the different streets where the work was done.

Sherman avenue, running west from Grant avenue, was macadamized twelve feet wide and four inches deep, the property owners contributing $198.38.

The amounts paid to the collector as the city's proportion for macadamizing streets are included in those shown in the schedule, and are in addition to those paid from the 1904 appropriation.

Macadam Streets Repaired.

Watchung avenue, parts; East Second street, East Third street, East Fifth street, Evergreen avenue, Belleview avenue, Hillside avenue, Putnam avenue, Belvidere avenue, Berkeley avenue, Charlotte road, South avenue, Woodland avenue, Central avenue, Plainfield avenue, Madison avenue, South Second street, Grant avenue, West Front street, Evona avenue.

Belleview avenue was thoroughly overhauled this season and the Hillside Cemetery Association paid by agreement $792.02, being one-half the total cost of the improvement.

On Charlotte road the property owners voluntarily set curb on both sides of the street and flagging where not already laid. This required correcting the line of the street, and repairing the gutters, which was done in a substantial manner.

General Repair Work.

North avenue, east of Richmond street, needed, as usual, a large amount of work after the freshet of September 3d. This street receives such a flood of water, including a large quantity from the Fanwood cut, that two large storm sewers will be needed eventually to carry off the water without injury to the street.

The overflowing of Green brook in September caused much damage to East Front, East Second, East Third, Berckman and Richmond streets, and this periodical loss must be endured until some improvements are made in the dams and bed of Green brook.

On Evona avenue some additional slag has been placed, but as all the available material at the Pond Tool Works was required on the macadamizing contract, not much progress was made. We recommend that all the slag produced at the works be utilized on the west end streets, so that the washing away of the sand may be prevented.

Grading.

In pursuance of the recommendation of the Committee of 1904, the roadway of Myrtle avenue, extending from Dunellen avenue to Green brook, was excavated through the high ground, and the material removed was used to start the embankment.

Additional filling has since been done by ash-carters, and it is desirable that the work of extending the street be continued as rapidly as possible, so as to be ready for a bridge when the improvements on the North Plainfield side are completed. We suggest that the sidewalks be excavated early next year, and that the material be used for further filling.

Hillside avenue, from Martine avenue to Randolph road, has been almost completely graded, opening up, practically, a new street, which has proved a great convenience for those driving to the hospital from the Netherwood district.

Much needed work has also been done this year on Central street, from East Seventh street to Woodland avenue. The importance of making this street passable for travel has been urged upon the committee for several years, and the result accomplished this season has been highly appreciated. Considerable work still remains to be done on the easterly half of the street, which, we think, should be attended to during the coming year.

East Seventh street, east of Leland avenue, was partly graded on the south side, and more work should be done at this point.

Randolph road, between Arlington avenue and Cedar brook, was not included in the macadamizing ordinance, as a short storm sewer is needed before the street can be permanently improved, but this part of the street has been filled to grade with gravel excavated from the part of the street which was macadamized.

Flagging and Curbing.

Owing to the large expense for macadamizing incurred by property owners on many streets this year, your committee has not felt that it could consistently order flagging in front of the same properties, though it is desirable that many of these walks should be flagged as soon as the property owners can afford it.

No curbing has been ordered except to close gaps on streets nearly completed. The total for the year is:

3,113 lineal feet of flagging.
3,172 lineal feet of curbing.

Culverts.

Considerable work has been done repairing and rebuilding culverts and replacing broken stone covers.

We think that the stone covers now in use should be replaced, as fast as possible, by iron covers. Some progress has been made in this direction, and the benefit of the change may already be noted. When the culverts become filled with ice, it is impossible to raise the stone covers, and this fact caused serious inconvenience last winter in a number of places, the culverts remaining choked until thawed out by warmer weather.

The cast iron pipe at Belvidere avenue and Charlotte road, and the old culverts at West Seventh street and Plainfield avenue, were replaced by culverts with iron covers. Culverts were rebuilt at Woodland and Prospect avenues, at Putnam avenue and Richmond street and at Grant avenue and West Seventh street.

Cross-walks.

Many old and broken cross-walks have been relaid with new stone this year, and the use of high grade, thick, square-edged stones has been extended. The higher cost of this material seems to be entirely justified by its much greater durability and fine appearance, and we recommend its exclusive use in the future.

New cross-walks have been provided at Prospect and Hillside avenues, West Fifth street and Lee place (two), Central avenue and Randolph road, Albert street and Dunellen avenue, Mariners place and Dunellen avenue.

Storm Sewers.

Work has at last been started on the long talked of storm sewer in Richmond street, and fair progress is being made, considering the unfavorable time of year in which it was started. The contractor, Stacy B. Opdyke, Jr., seems to be efficient and conscientious in his work, and when the sewer is extended to East Second street, Richmond street will be freed from the annoying floods to which it has been subject in the past, except during brook overflows. The trouble from this cause, as explained in previous reports of your committee, will have to be dealt with separately.

The Rock avenue storm sewer again caused trouble by a break in the quicksand, which was repaired by relaying a section in concrete. This work was done under the direction of Manager Peterson, of the disposal works.

Street Widenings and Extensions.

Ordinances were adopted and commissioners were appointed for the widening of Park avenue on the westerly side, from West Second street to the railroad, of Sycamore street at East Fifth street, and for the extension of Stebbins place to West Fourth street. The work of the commissioners on these three improvements has been done with great care, and we hope that their reports will be approved by the Common Council, so that the work on the ground may begin early in the year.

Miscellaneous.

Two unusually heavy items of expense this year have been the repair of the steam roller and the cost of removing snow. Last winter the roller was sent to the Pond Tool Works and thoroughly overhauled, with the exception of the boiler, which now needs attention. The repair work at Pond's cost $1,194.00 and supplies and other work have brought the total cost of maintenance up to $1,327.60.

The severe winter caused the expenditure of $1,721.00 for removing snow, of which the street railway company paid $866.57.

While the money paid for removing snow seems to be almost wasted, it is considered a necessity that part of the snow should be removed from the centre of the city, in order that business may not be interfered with.

The street railway company has paid for removal of snow and for work repairing streets, $1,484.70, $92.65 of which was paid for work in October and December, 1904.

The company also paid $1,065.83, assessment for the macadamizing of Woodland avenue.

We are informed that the company proposes to use a large quantity of trap rock for ballasting track in this city during 1906, and we hope this may be done, as the track, in many streets, is in such condition that it is impossible to keep the macadam in repair.

The following streets are in need of repair, some of them seriously so:

Park avenue; South avenue; West Seventh street; West Third street; East and West Fourth streets; Richmond street; parts of West Fifth and West Sixth streets.

Sewers—Disposal Works.

In carrying out the recommendations of the committee of 1904, a contract was let to Richards & Gaston for enlarging the sewage disposal works, and the contract is nearing completion. The work is being well done and the plant, when finished, will be one of the best in the country.

The committee desires to express its indebtedness to Mr. Joseph O. Osgood, who has advised with the committee as consulting engineer, making no charge for his services.

Sewers—Pipe System.

The total number of buildings now connected to the sewerage system is 2,352, 247 of the connections having been made since the last annual report.

An ordinance providing for sewers in several streets, mostly at the east end of the city, was adopted in November, and it is proposed, when advertising for bids, to include several other sewers called for in previous ordinances.

An ordinance has been introduced for a sewer main and three pumping stations to serve the southerly part of the city, which cannot be drained into the present sanitary sewers, and the incoming Council will no doubt take the matter up for further consideration early in 1906.

There has been much complaint from residents and property owners in this district, that they are deprived of drainage facilities although they pay as large taxes as those in other sections which are provided with sewers. They claim, not only that they are greatly inconvenienced, but that the development of property is seriously retarded by the lack of sewers. They are also put to large expense for the maintenance and cleaning of cesspools.

The problem was first considered in 1896, when most of the present sewers were constructed, and a plan was drawn, for future use, with sewers draining to a pumping station at the southerly end of Plainfield avenue. A few years ago the subject was again brought before the public in connection with the proposed development of the Leonard tract and adjoining properties on Plainfield avenue opposite Randolph road. The scheme was then increased to include the whole area which could not be served by the gravity sewers. This plan developed considerable opposition, on account of the cost and because much of the work would have been done through streets on which there were very few houses. It would have been necessary by this plan, to have had cast iron sewers about twenty feet deep for much of the distance, and in quicksand, and also to have other sewers in the same streets to receive the house connections.

The present plans call for sewers of moderate depth, suitable for direct connection with buildings, these sewers to drain to several pumps or lifts, which would raise the sewage to the nearest gravity sewers. The lifts or pumps would be in concrete chambers under the streets, similar to the one at West Orange. It is estimated that the cost of the work proposed in the last ordinance would be about $57,000, this sum including the city's proportion (about $11,000) of the cost of the 4½ miles of sewers proposed.

The need of Muhlenberg Hospital for a sewer outlet, the fact that many houses are now being built in these sections of the city, and that a large number of buildings have been erected since the first sewers were constructed in the city, indicate the desirability of providing sewers and lifts for these sections as soon as possible.

It has been suggested that the ordinance be amended so as to include a section which would drain to Plainfield avenue near the city line, as the ordinance would then provide for practically all the area outside the gravity district as far west as Rushmore avenue.

While the present ordinance calls for only 4½ miles of sewers, being those thought necessary at the present time, many other sewers may be drained to those now under consideration. As the future sewers will be mainly 8 inch laterals, of moderate depth, their cost will be largely paid for by abutting property, and it has not been thought necessary to include them in the estimate.

Mr. Joseph O. Osgood is consulting engineer on this proposed south side sewerage system.

GIRL CLAUDE DUVAL PUZZLES POLICE.

Held Up Woman, Stole Her Purse and Then Made Escape from Pursuers.

"Look out for a girl, not more than sixteen years old, medium height, slim but well shaped, dark eyes and hair, and dressed in brown coat and skirt that just reaches her shoe-tops."

This was the order issued yesterday by Chief of Police Adams, of Newark, to each of his precinct captains, and in turn transmitting them to their respective squads.

Chief Adams is desirous of making the personal acquaintance of this girl, who bears the distinction of being the first juvenile highway robber of her sex with whom the Newark police department has ever had experience.

At various times recently stories have reached the ears of the police of a girl Claude Duval operating in the dark streets at night. The first tangible information came to Capt. Vogel, of the Fourth precinct, Tuesday night.

Miss Elizabeth Schwartz, of 380 Littleton avenue, was awlking leisurely along William street, when suddenly there loomed up before her, obstructing her way, the figure of a girl. Miss Schwartz was puzzled, but not alarmed. The thought of a robber did not enter her mind.

"I want that," the girl said, and with a quick movement she reached out and seized Mrs. Schwartz's purse. Then the girl was running like the wind in the direction of High street.

"Stop, thief!" cried Mrs. Schwartz as she started in pursuit. In her haste and excitement Mrs. Schwartz tripped and fell to the pavement. She tried to arise, but a terrible pain in her right arm caused her to faint. She had sustained a broken wrist.

Charles Botterwich, of 173 William street, saw the holdup from his window. When he recovered from his amazement at the boldness of the robbery, he started in pursuit. He called out to two men to stop the robber, but only seeing a fleeing girl, the men failed to understand him. When Botterwich reached High street the girl had disappeared.

In her flight the highway girl dropped Mrs. Schwartz's purse and its contents. She also dropped another purse, probably secured in a similar exploit.

MURRAY WILL RESIGN IF JENNINGS IS NAMED.

Second Assistant Chief to be Promoted Soon.

"I would not resign that office in a thousand years unless I knew that Jennings would be my successor," declared First Assistant Chief J. W. Murray, Jr., of the fire department, today. "He's the only man for the place and I feel sure Mayor Buckle thinks so too," he continuted.

Mayor Buckle has not signified what his action will be in the matter. No resignation has been presented to him by Mr. Murray and not until one is will the city's chief executive say who will be the next first assistant to Chief Doane. Second Assistant Chief Andrew Jennings will be the man—that's quite certain.

John Lyness, of West Second street, has been visiting his mother at Glen Gardner.

KIELY WANTS MORE MEN

In His Annual Report Police Chief Says He's Glad the Year is Over

BEATS ARE TOO LONG

"Doings of Past Few Weeks Shall Remain a Closed Book," He Declares — Arrests and Their Results.

Chief of Police Kiely in his annual report filed with the Common Council Friday asks for an increase of four men on the department's force, giving as his reason for the desired addition the well-known fact that the beats of the policemen are all too big to be covered in a satisfactory manner. In his report, the chief declares that the year has been the most unpleasant for him during all the time he has been connected with the department and that his troubles during the last few weeks will remain "a closed book" so far as he is concerned.

The chief's report follows:

Plainfield, N. J., Dec. 29, 1905.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the city of Plainfield:

Gentlemen: I have the honor to submit herewith the following as my sixth annual report, for the year 1905:

Number of arrests during the year, 618; composed of: Males, 568; females, 50; composed as to color: White, 492; negro, 126.

Composed as to nationality: American, 301; Afro-American, 126; Assyrian, 2; Austrian, 10; Canadian, 1; Danish, 8; English, 12; French, 3; German, 16; Hungarian, 6; Irish, 52; Italian, 39; Pole, 17; Russian, 13; Scotch, 9; Swiss, 3; total, 618.

Results of arrests.—Number arrested, 618; fined, 118; sentence suspended, 341; committed, 71; dismissed, 28; held for Juvenile Court, 7; committed to asylum for insane, 1; turned over to other departments, 12; held in bond, 1; held for the Grand Jury, 38; cases pending, 1; total, 618; amount of fines collected, $575.00.

Arrested for the following offenses: Assault, 12; violating automobile law, 4; violating bicycle ordinance, 4; breaking and entering, 2; disorderly conduct, 158; drunkenness, 128; drunk and disorderly, 148; embezzlement, 1; excise violations, 5; forgery, 1; gambling, 26; violating hack ordinance, 17; incorrigable, 3; violating junk ordinance, 2; larceny, 25; malicious mischief, 6; murder, 2; non-support, 5; peddling ordinance, 17; reckless driving, 3; trespassing on cars, 17; vagrancy, 16; miscellaneous, 16; total, 618.

Number of reports and complaints of citizens investigated, 691; number of doors or windows of business houses found open, 79; number of dogs or other animals shot, 68; number of stray horses and other animals found, cared for, and restored to owners, 31; number of bicycles found, cared for and restored to owners, 40; number of injured persons cared for, 35; number of lost children found and restored to parents, 31; number of houses looked after in absence of occupants, 110; number of truants looked after by truant officer, 263; number of street lights reported out by the department, 1,720; number of fire alarms sent in by the department, 13.

Number of reports recorded by the Gamewell system at headquarters by officers during their tours of duty during the year 1905: Number of wagon calls, 402; total, 40,350.

The expenditures per month of the department have been as follows: January, $1,322.23; February, $1,657.69; March, $1,401.60; April, $1,356.92; May, $1,692.98; June, $1,640.74; July, $1,409.30; August, $1,642.04; September, $1,908.79; October, $1,470.66; November, $1,699.46; December, $1,615.82; total, $18,818.24. The above does not include bill of Frank Stillwell for November and December, at $60—$120.00.

The expenditures of the department during the year have been as follows: Regular policemen, $16,439.08; special policemen, $111.00; headquarters supplies, $201.15; keep of horse, $143.43; N. Y. and N. J. Tel. Co., $128.95; rent of station house, $758.34; hack hire, $15.50; Y. M. C. A., $80.00; ammunition, $105.00; bicycle repairs, $168.20; care of Gamewell alarm system, $400.00; police equipments, $20.40; miscellaneous, $247.19; total, $18,818.24.

It is needless to say, gentlemen, that the year now drawing to a close has been the most unpleasant one I have ever experienced since my connection with the police force, and I am heartily glad it is over.

I beg to assure your honorable body, however, that the doings of the past few weeks shall remain a closed book so far as I am concerned, and that my only and constant endeavor shall be to fulfil the duties of my position without fear or favor, and in a manner to merit the trust and confidence of the entire community.

The officers and patrolmen under my charge, with very few exceptions, have performed the work assigned to them with absolute fidelity and zeal, and I desire to make public mention of my appreciation. As an instance of the faithful work done, I would cite the case of Patrolman Andrew Saffron, who, at the imminent risk of his life, endeavored to capture a burglar, and only desisted in his efforts after he had been shot twice. I am glad to say that my belief is that almost every man on the force, under like circumstances, would have proven himself of equal mettle and calibre.

There is, nevertheless, great need of an increase in the force, and I am convinced that four new men at least should be appointed. The size of the beats as now constituted, with the limited number of men at my disposal, makes it impossible for the patrolmen to do justice, either to themselves or the community, and in no way except by augmenting the force, can this evil be remedied.

So far as equipment goes, the police department is in satisfactory shape and the wisdom of expending considerable sums of money in the past for such acquirements, has been fully justified.

With kindest New Year's wishes to every one of your honorable body, I remain, Yours respectfully,
P. S. KIELY, Chief of Police.

PERSONAL.

William Heath, of the borough, has returned from a visit with relatives in Boston. Mr. Heath will leave today for Bodentown Military Institute to resume his studies.

Mrs. George Whitely, of West Fifth street, is slowly recovering from an operation performed at the hospital recently.

Mrs. DeWitt Flanagan has issued invitations for "at homes" on Thursday afternoons in January at her home in Lexington avenue, New York. Mrs. Flanagan is the wife of the former candidate for Congress, and both are well-known here.

Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Whittingham, of Baltimore, are visiting Mrs. Whittingham's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Augustus VanDeventer, of Washington avenue.

Henry H. Hellman, of Johannesburg, South Africa, is the guest of former Mayor and Mrs. W. L. Saunders, of the borough.

Miss Madeline Reed, of Myrtle avenue, and Miss May Batchelor, of West Seventh street, students at Wellesley College, will return to their studies this week.

F. W. Runyon, of Madison avenue, is able to be out again after a severe illness.

Mr. and Mrs. H. M. Durkee, of Doylestown, Pa., have returned home after a visit with Mrs. Durkee's sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Aaron, of East Fifth street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. F. Garretson, of West Fourth street, had a family reunion at their home yesterday, their children and grandchildren all being home for the festive occasion.

VanWyck Brooks, who has been spending the holiday season at his home here, will return to Havard this week.

James Beisel, the well known baseball player, who resides on Somerset street, and is employed by the Equitable Life Assurance Company, is thinking about returning to his former home at Lehighton, Pa., where he has been offered a good position in a bank.

Francis W. Frost, of Watchung avenue, who was a member of the Roosevelt-Taft party, is now at Saigon, Cochin, China. From there he will go to Singapore, Ragoon, Burmah, and then overland to Calcutta.

Miss Emma L. Adams, librarian at the Plainfield Public Library, has been detained at home by illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Mundy, of Bevenely, Mass., who have been visiting their parents here during the holidays, have returned home.

John Utzinger, of Elizabeth, who has been spending several days with his parents in Grandview avenue, has returned.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Watt, former residents of this city, but now of Far Hills, were guests over Sunday and New Year's of Mr. and Mrs. William Ashton, of East Sixth street.

Thomas Buckley, of Watchung avenue, has returned home from Washington, D. C., where he has been on business for the past two months in the interests of the Potter press works.

Miss Mary Thompson, of Yonkers, is spending the holidays at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. David Thompson, of Rockview terrace.

Scott Foster and his daughter, Miss Foster, of New York, were guests on New Year's day of their relatives, the family of D. N. Groendyke, of Mercer avenue.

Miss Conant, a student at Abbott Academy, Andover, Mass., is spending the holiday vacation at her home on West Fifth street.

William T. Law, formerly of the Plainfield Trust Company, who has taken a position in the Union Exchange Bank, New York, has left Truell Court to spend the winter in New York.

Miss Kathryne Gallaher, of Warrensburg, Missouri, is spending the holidays with Miss Annis Louise Kinsman, of Sherman avenue.

Robert Adams Suffern and A. C. Dale and family, of this city, are registered at the Chalfonte, Atlantic City.

KIELY'S BILL IN DOUBT

His Friends in Common Council Withold Resolution Putting Expense in City.

SIDETRACK IN RECESS

Mr. Gloak Was Ready to Bring the Question Up, But Opposition Checked Him—Communication from the Chief.

Chief Kiely's friends in the Council did not present a resolution binding the city to take over the expense of the chief's defense of the trial on the charges at the special meeting Friday night. Some such resolution was expected before the meeting, but the things that transpired in the committee room during a recess sidetracked the proposed plan, so far as this Council is concerned.

The chief's friends declare that he should not be compelled to bear the heavy expense of proving himself innocent. Councilman Gloak came to the meeting prepared to present a resolution on the matter.

He called for a recess to discuss the question. It was his opinion, he said, that the present Council should take up the matter and dispose of it. Mr. Gloak carried into the recess with him a communication from Chief Kiely to the Council.

Chief Kiely presented a communication to the Common Council, which was not read, but was given to Mr. Gloak. In this communication the chief set forth the facts regarding his recent trial and its result. He stated that as he had been found technically guilty of certain charges he was willing to deduct $50 from his bill of $845, and it was his request that the city pay the balance, $795. Of this amount $750 is Mr. Reed's bill as counsel fees, and the balance is for the expense of serving subpoenas and other incidentals.

Before he left the committee room Mr. Gloak had changed his mind about presenting his resolution and the chief's communication. From what can be learned of the recess debate there was considerable opposition on the part of some members to the city paying the bill.

After the members returned to their seats Mr. Wilson arose to ask if the Kiely bill was to be brought up at the meeting. Mr. Gloak was on his feet almost before Mr. Wilson finished.

"It is not going to be brought up tonight," he said.

A few minutes after that Mr. Wilson and Mr. Tyler withdrew to go to the charity ball.

When the adoption of the minutes was under consideration President Daniel asked whether Mr. Wilson's query belonged on the record. He was under the impression that the question had not been addressed to the chair. Councilmen Hibbard, Higham and Bullock had understood the question to be so directed, but Mr. Gloak and Mr. Tolles were equally positive the query was directed to Mr. Gloak. The debate waxed lively and Mr. Daniel called for a vote as to the entry.

Councilmen Hibbard, Higham and Bullock voted to put the question on the records, and Councilmen Gloak, Tolles and Frank Randolph voted in the negative. Mr. Daniel decided the tie with an affirmative vote.

COLLECTOR LEE'S LAST DELINQUENT TAX SALE.

Properties Disposed of and the Names of the Purchasers.

Tax Collector Robert L. Lee held his last sale of delinquent property for the year yesterday, when the 1904 list was cleaned up. This was one of the lat duties of Mr. Lee before retiring from office, to be succeded by Collector-elect J. W. Murray, Jr.

The properties sold and the purchasers are as follows: Hattie L. Gibbons, two properties, Westervelt avenue; E. M. French, Evergreen avenue; George H. Moore, West Fourth street; John Hoofnagle, two properties, were purchased by the city; Plainfield Foundry Company, East Seventh street, purchased by Samuel T. Sarson; twenty-two properties in the name of Charles L. Moffett, were purchased by Mrs. Katherine Embury, of Summit, who holds the mortgage; Jesse G. Burdick, Woodbine avenue, was purchased by Jonathan Clawson.

Miss Ball's Whist Party.

A very delightful bridge party was given yesterday afternoon by Miss Adelaide G. Ball, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. F. H. Ball, at the home on Rockview avenue. Nine tables were arranged through the rooms, which were tastefully decorated for the Christmas season with holly and poinsetta. The prizes, which hung on a pretty Christmas tree, were won by Miss Mabel Van Deventer, Mrs. Whittingham, of Baltimore, and Mrs. Weaver. Refreshments followed the game.

B. & L.'s New Secretary.

Arthur E. Crone, teller at the City National Bank, has been elected secretary of the Home Building and Loan Association, in place of S. R. Struthers, who has resigned. Mr. Crone's experience in matters of finance makes him especially valuable to the successful management of the association.

TAKEN BY STORM

"I do not believe it is love," said she.

"If it is not love, what is it?"

"Oh, sympathy—attraction—perhaps you mesmerize me—or I mesmerize you—who knows?"

"I do, I love you,"

"Three days ago you did not know me."

"The plant can spring in a night."

"But it does not always come to flower."

"In this case it is flowering already."

As his eyes met hers they smiled, and his broad shoulders took a positive set.

She looked at him disdainfully—this big, handsome, brainy man.

"But a few short hours and we shall have forgotten one another," she remarked.

"Don't think that, I tell you that I love you. And you—why will you not acknowledge—the truth?"

His eyes were tender, and as if compelled, she answered.

"What can I acknowledge? How do I know what this—"

She hesitated.

"This is love?" he concluded.

A mighty green wave capped with foam thundered by, almost splitting over the deck.

"Let me assist you out of the seadust," said the sailor.

"Go to your watch," she said; "I can assist myself."

Miss Nolan had enjoyed the trip up the coast, starting at Portsmouth, stopping at Plymouth, and now on to Glasgow. Life at sea, even at a season when most women are glad to be safe on land, had a fascination for this girl, bred among thinkers and scholars, cultivated women and professional men. A man who was all action was an interesting study to her. That was how she put it to herself when her ears inclined to the first officer's impulsive wooing. She did not take him seriously then. She had read about sailors and had theories concerning them. The second day out she wrote in her diary:

"A sailor's life is so filled with perils and hardships that I can hardly blame him if he fills up his breathing spaces with whatever sport comes his way—even if that sport sometimes means playing at love. Any other man I should despise for making a jest of such a serious matter, but, considering all things, I think Jack can be forgiven for having a sweetheart in every port."

Miss Nolan, like many an inexperienced girl, prided herself upon being liberal and broad-minded.

The fourth day her diary recorded:

"I believe he thinks he is in love with me, but that's absurd. How can he possibly care for me whom he does not know? He has the audacity, also, to tell me that he is sure that I love him. Why, Dr. Gibson, who, father says, is both morally and intellectually one of the finest men on earth, and who has been paying me attentions for two years, would not presume to hint at such a thing. I think I will marry Dr. Gibson after all. He has such good, kind eyes. They never make me feel—uncomfortable.

"I wonder why I am so attracted to him—this sailor man? Even before we had spoken to one another, before the vessel left port, when he was superintending the stowing of the hold, I was drawn to watch him and listen to his masterful voice. I never saw a man work like a king before. How the men under him obeyed his orders. His strength was greater than any of theirs. I don't believe they could have hoisted those bales without his aid.

"Then he moved with such freedom and fearlessness, scording the gangplank and passing from steamer to dock and back again so quickly and carelessly. How alert he was to catch the captain's commands, and what a responsibility he bears. Last night, as I lay awake, I thought of him keeping watch above with all our lives, as it were, in his hands.

"Then, when the second mate came to take his place, I heard him pass my cabin whistling cheerily, even amid the storm and darkness. What a life his is—ever contending with perils and hardships! While Dr. Gibson is warm and safely housed my sailor keeps his watch, with gales howling and waves seeking to devour. Great courage and iron will must undoubtedly be his. Yes! He lives a man's life. He is a man. But as to love! Oh, that is absurd!

It was about 3:30 in the afternoon. The sea was rolling high; but Miss Nolan, rocked by wind and wave, slept the sleep of the sea sleeper, and it was not until a great shout went up from some men on deck that she became conscious of peril. What was that cry she heard? There it was again——

"Heywood is overboard!"

She started to her feet, but fell almost immediately. She crawled to the cabin door and tried to push it open. As she did so a sea mightier that had been felt before struck the ship and capsized her.

The girl realized that something terrible had happened; that death was waiting near; yet, in this awful situation, closed in alone under the deck of the steamer, no sign of human life around her, only the warring elements of her ears, the only clear thought in her mind was that the man she loved had gone to his death. She realized now that she loved him, else why this pain at her heart—this indiffence to her own fate?

The sound of sharp blows on the planking above her head aroused her from the stupor into which she had fallen. A face she know looked down.

"I have come for you," said Mark Heywood.

Then Edna Nolan lost consciousness.

The steamer had capsized with that side of her deck uppermost under which was Miss Nolan's berth. The capsizing was an unexpected happening, for, although the sea had been rolling for hours, yet before the catastrophe the storm had apparently abated, and even the captain had retired with confidence for a little rest, he and the mate having been up nearly all the previous night.

The second officer had been swept overboard just before the coming of the mighty comber which had destroyed the vessel; but Mark Heywood, the first officer, with whirlwind around him and whirlpool beneath, kept his clutch on life. How he did it was a miracle. Every man on deck, including the three male passengers, was swept away. Even the two lifeboats had been wrenched from their fastenings and smashed to atoms as they went over the bulwarks.

The storm subsided almost as quickly as it had risen, but the ship was slowly sinking, and Heywood's only chance lay in swimming to shore, which was about a mile off. He would take the chance if some one else would take it with him.

The opening to the aft companionway was near him. He forced himself down, and there, under two feet of water, found a hatchet, with which he crawled to the deck and set to work with desperate energy.

When Miss Nolan opened her eyes Heywood was tying a rope which bound them together.

"Then it was not you who were swept overboard?" she cried, in great joy, forgetting present peril.

"No; that was a mistake the men made. It was poor Brown," he replied. Then, looking straight into her eyes he said: "There's to be a desperate struggle. Tell me that you love me."

"I love you," she answered him, "so well that I am glad to die with you."

The endurance and courage of the man were put to the severest test, but the shore was reached in safety.

* * * * * * *

Three months afterward they stood in their own home, side by side, hand in hand. The bridal party had just left, and Jack took her in his loving arms.

"I gave in to you, after all," she said, softly.

"Not so," he replied, "you were taken by storm."—Philadelphia Bulletin.

WHAT WOMEN DO.

Miss Jessie Ackerman, a missionary, recently put on a diver's suit in Ceylon, and brought up from the paars, or pearl oyster beds, seven valuable pearls.

Mrs. Peary, during the several Arctic expeditions whereon she accompanied her husband, became an expert and fearless walrus hunter.

The Marchioness of Tweeddale is a good locomotive engineer. She it was who ran the first train over the Forth Bridge.

Joanna Maestrich, of Berlin, was for eight years Oporto's champion bull-fighter. The young woman, furthermore, was beautiful. In 1903 she won the first prize at the Libson beauty show.

Jenny Carey, of Muckford, Ind., saved from wreck a train containing a party of distinguished Frenchmen, and received from the President of France the medal of the Legion of Honor.

Women disguised as men have often served as soldiers. The following inscription is on a tombstone in the English town of Brighton: "In memory of Phoebe Hassel, born 1713, died 1821, aged 108 years. She served for many years as a private soldier in many parts of Europe, and at the battle of Fontenoy, fighting bravely, she received a bayonet wound in the left arm."

Miss Marion Herr, of Flemington, has been visiting her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Edgar, of West Front street.

Gray Bros. have entered some of their prize winning stock in the Poultry Show to be held at Madison Square Garden in January.

Mr. and Mrs. A. D. Thompson, of Belvidere avenue, have returned from a visit with their daughter, Mrs. Meyers Hodge, of Somerville.

Louis E. Eaton, formerly of this city, but now of New York, where he was engaged in the printing business, has sold out his share in the business to the other members of the company. His plans for the future are not matured as yet. Mr. Eaton was the guest of friends in town yesterday.

BECAUSE SHE LOVED HIM.

London Police Court Incident Shows Woman's Nature.

Here is a bit of real life from a London police court, says the Chicago News. The prisoner, Albert Williams, was described as a rawboned young fellow of the usual coster type. He was charged with disorderly conduct, the policeman who had made the arrest testifying that he had found Williams quarreling with a young woman. The young woman had gone away when the officer had requested her to go, whereupon, according to the testimony, the prisoner had rushed after the girl and given he a kick that brought her to the ground. At this point in the trial the young woman herself came forward. She carried her basket of flowers, the contents of which it was her business to sell upon the streets.

"What is the prisoner to you?" asked the magistrate. "Well," replied the young woman, "we keeps each other company. 'E's fond of me, he is." "But does he usually display his affection by kicking you?" inquired the magistrate. "'Yer see, sir, 'twas all my fault," said the young woman earnestly. "Bert ain't ter blime—not a little bit. 'E thort I ought ter carry one basket of flowers, an' I wouldn't. Course, 'e was right, an' I'm to blime." "Why do you go with him if he acts in this way?" asked the stipendiary. The coster's sweetheart looked surprised at the question. "Because I loves 'im," she answered simply. "Don't do anything to 'im, sir; please don't."

So Williams was released, the magistrate telling him he was fortunate in his sweetheart and ought to be kind to her. The sweethearts left the court together, each apparently well pleased with the situation. But the girl carried the basket of flowers.

PERSONAL NOTES.

John Hawkes, a Cincinnati lumberman, has just returned from Europe after crossing and recrossing 228 times. He is known among travelers as "the old man of the sea."

Andrew Carnegie has offered $100,000 to equip an engineering department of Union College, Schenectady, provided the alumni will secure the same amount to endow the department.

A. N. Johnson, highway engineer of the Department of Agriculture, will resign about the first of the year to accept a position in the road department of the State University of Illinois.

The moose and bear killed by Theodore Roosevelt, Jr., while hunting in New Hampshire recently, has reached the White House. The skins of the two animals will be preserved.

For the third time, the Rev. Arthur S. Lloyd has declined a bishopric. Dr. Lloyd was elected recently bishop of the Diocese of Southern Virginia, but has decided to put aside the honor and continue his work in the cause of missions.

Prof. A. V. Stuberrouch, of the University of California Agricultural Department, has accepted a position in the division of pomology in the Bureau of Plant Industry of the United States Department of Agriculture.

Henry S. Pritchett, president of the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, has resigned to devote his entire time to the Carnegie Foundation, of which he is president, and which was endowed with a fund of $10,000,000 by Andrew Carnegie about a year ago.

Rev. William Howe, founder of the Tremont Temple, Boston, and said to be the oldest Baptist clergyman living, will be 100 years old on May 26, 1906. He lives at Cambridge, Mass., and voted the Republican ticket, as he has always done, at the mayoralty election on Tuesday.

Edwin H. Anderson, who has just been appointed New York State Librarian, was at one time librarian to the Braddock Library, Pennsylvania, and for ten years was at the head of the Carnegie Library, Pittsburg. He is one of the best known among the young men in the library field of the United States.

Prof. E. W. Clark, of Ripon College, Wisconsin, has been honored by the Bureau of University Travel in Rome in a manner which will make it possible for him to go abroad each summer and secure a new stock of material for the lectures he is delivering. He has been engaged to conduct the teachers' excursions to the homes of the ancients, and will spend the next few years in this manner.

Police Judge's Report.

City Judge William N. Runyon presented his annual report at the Common Council meeting last night, as follows: Cases considered, 568; fined, 123; sentence suspended, 366; committed to jail, 67; dismissed, 10; sent to the juvenile court, 2. The receipts from fines, etc., were $575, and, deducting expenses, there was turned over to the city treasurer $466.06.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss May Frances Hand, of West Hoboken, to Joseph Maher, of Westervelt avenue. The wedding will be celebrated at the former's home on January 18.

Miss Bertha Mitchell, of Grant avenue, has been removed to the hospital, where she will be operated upon for appendicitis.

THE SALAD BOWL.

Odd Bits of

Brandied cherries, nuts, citron, orange peel, little dabs of cocoanut, and shredded candy are good in classical Nesselrode puddings because their flavors are blended. Thrown haphazard into wine jelly or on top of puddings or into the meringue of pies they represent the decadent in cookery, says the Philadelphia Telegraph.

In Salads and Desserts

Particular generic dishes are becoming a lost art. Cocoanut and oranges are an ideal combination, which may be improved by having wine added to it, for the reason that it may need more juice and that it blends with the flavor. Whipped cream answers the same purpose in making more liquid. But when bananas and bits of jelly are put in the dish becomes a mongrel. Pineapple, anything but the juice, is equally out of place on account of being a meaty fruit, too much like the cocatnut.

Many Fastidious Families

Have lately deserted the caterer for their smaller affairs, and are employing a woman, whose dishes are beautiful and delicious, a result which she gets through making an art of simplicity in such things and not overloading.

"No, Indeed, I Do Not Put

Two or three kinds of nuts in my chicken salad," said the woman, "and it is doubtful if I add them at all. They are good with apples, but should be used scantily or not at all in a Waldorf salad, where the combination of celery and apples is sufficient. A salad of halved white grapes and tiny lecture hearts, if dressed with a white mayonnaise of oil and cream, is not only sufficient unto itself but is impaired by having nuts, cherries, and any other 'happen to haves' added to it. Such a combination is not good cooking."

SHE OPENED THE WRONG LETTER.

It Told a Wife That the Man Who Wooed Her Had Abandoned His Suit.

Mrs. Lena Peshanik, of No. 9 Newark street, Newark, N. J., was defendant Wednesday before United States Commissioner S. Howell Jones, charged by her neighbor, Mrs. Emma Dietrich, of the same address, with having wilfully opened a letter addressed to her.

While the Commissioner decided eventually that the evidence was not strong enough to indicate that Mrs. Peshanik was guilty of a deliberate violation of the postal laws, the testimony furnished by Mrs. Dietrich and her husband showed how a romance had been nipped in the bud.

Mrs. Dietrich told how she had advertised for work as a housekeeper. One man who answered her advertisement became so deeply impressed with Mrs. Dietrich's appearance that he then and there proposed marriage to her. As Mrs. Dietrich already had a husband, she felt constrained, she told the Commissioner, to refuse the proposal. The letter that was opened by Mrs. Peshanik, it was disclosed, had been written by Mrs. Dietrich's admirer, in which he announced that as there was already one husband who claimed her, she should consider the writer's proposal as having been recalled.

The postman gave the letter to Mrs. Peshanik in the absence from home of Mrs. Dietrich, and the recipient, attracted by the robin's egg blue envelope, did not take sufficient notice of the address to discover that the letter was not intended for her. After she read it she turned it over to Mrs. Dietrich.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 7.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—How finding Christ changes the life.—Matt. xiii, 44-46. (Consecration meeting.)

The supreme mission of every human life should be to find God in our Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ. The greatest desire of the wisest men that have ever lived in this world has been to find God. When the wise men of the east realized that the Redeemer of the world had been born they came hundreds of miles under the most difficult circumstances in order that they might find Him and pay to Him the honor and worship of their hearts and present to Him the most valuable gifts. The desire of every human soul has been to find God, and it should be a matter of great thanksgiving and gratitude to us that He has been so clearly and freely offered to us in the gospel and that the promise has been given by the Master Himself that those who seek shall find.

That the finding of Christ should naturally and necessarily change the life cannot be doubted or disputed, and we may well ask ourselves the question of the topic, What change should finding Christ make in our lives?

1. Finding Christ should change the inward life. Without such a change it is absolutely proved that Christ has not been found. Christianity is a life. It is the life of the Lord Jesus Christ in the human heart. No man can become a Christian without having a change of heart. Christ Himself said to Nicodemus, "Ye must be born again." The inward motives and principles of our lives must be completely changed by our becoming Christians.

2. Finding Christ changes the outward life. "As a man thinketh in his heart, so is he." The outward life, if a man be honest, is simply a reproduction of the thoughts of his heart. His conduct is inspired by the motives and the principles which govern him within. Before we have found Christ we may live for self or for the world or for many other things, but when once we have found Him our lives, inwardly and outwardly, must absolutely be consecrated to Him. He is the pearl of great price which when the man found be sold all other gems in order that he might have this one. He is the hidden treasure which when a man found he gave his all that it might be his. Christ demands entire consecration, and nothing short of that will be satisfactory to Him.

Have we found Christ? If so, do our lives show it? As we look into our inward lives, consider our thoughts and desires and ambitions, can we truthfully say that our inward lives are consecrated to Him? As those about us look upon our outward lives can they say of us that we show by our acts that we have been with Jesus and have consecrated our lives to Him? These two things are the tests as to whether or not we have really found Christ.

The British National President.

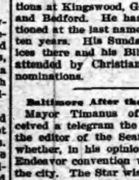
Rev. Evelyn R. Hasse has recently been chosen president of the British National Council of Christian Endeavor. Bishop Hasse is a son of the late Bishop A. C. Hasse, and was educated in Fulneck school. After studying at the Moravian college in England and in Germany, he served for several years as a master in Gracehill school, near Ballymena, and for a short time assisted the late Rev. H. E. Shawe at the mission office in London. He was ordained in 1883, and has ministered to the congregations at Kingswood, Gracehill, Mirfield and Bedford. He has now been stationed at the last named place for over ten years. His Sunday evening services there and his Bible readings are attended by Christians of many denominations.



BISHOP HASSE OF BEDFORD.
[British National C. E. president.]

Baltimore After the Convention.

Mayor Timanus of Baltimore received a telegram the other day from the editor of the Seattle Star asking whether, in his opinion, the Christian Endeavor convention was a benefit to the city. The Star wished to print the reply as bearing upon the invitation for the 1907 convention that Seattle was extending.

The following reply, sent by Mayor Timanus, we reprint from the Baltimore American. It is indicative of the results of a Christian Endeavor convention when it is properly managed, as this certainly was:

W. P. Stranborg, Editor Seattle Star, Seattle, Wash.:

Replying to your request for an expression of opinion as to the effect of the holding of the Christian Endeavor convention in this city during the summer of this year, I would say that from a moral, religious and commercial standpoint the convention was of decided benefit to Baltimore. The delegates not only spent freely of their means, thus benefiting us financially, but by their Christian example and religious enthusiasm caused our people to think deeply on those subjects which form the basis of all success. On behalf of our citizens I desire to express to all Christian Endeavorers our appreciation of the honor of having had them with us, and we sincerely trust that they will repeat their visit in the very near future.

E. CLAY TIMANUS,
Mayor of Baltimore.

A Society In a High School.

Crete, Neb., has a new Christian Endeavor society in the high school, says the Nebraska Endeavor News. We might have an Endeavor society in every high school, with great profit and pleasure to all.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 7: "Laying Foundations For 1906"—Isa. xxviii, 16; I Pet. ii, 4-7; I Cor. iii, 11; Eph. ii, 19, 20; II Tim. ii, 19; Luke vi, 46-49. Morning Watch Enrollment.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

"Other foundation can no man lay than that which is laid, which is Jesus Christ."

We enter a new year with new prospects and responsibilities as individuals and as chapters. It is vastly wise to spend some time in forecasting one's future course of action. What spiritual profit can we make 1906 yield us which no previous year has borne? What loftier height in Christian character may we reach which has been previously unattained? What greater helpfulness to the cause of our Christ can we exert than we have been permitted to do in the past?

If any advance is made by us it must be by building wisely on the sure foundations laid in Christ Jesus.

So our first care should be the settlement of the base on which we build. If we have in time past settled irrevocably that we will serve Christ, it is still a wise act to examine ourselves occasionally, especially at the beginning of the new year, and see if all our building has been upon the foundation we have chosen or if some things in our doings have not been outside. To make all secure we must keep the center of gravity within the base.

Some Christians look like the leaning tower of Pisa. They never entirely topple over, but they make all who look at them nervous because they are so far out of the perpendicular. They are saved from collapse probably because the upper stories are of lighter material than the lower courses. Curiosities they may be, but not admirable models for practical purposes.

If you would build like Bunker Hill monument or the shaft of the Washington monument, use the plumb line and obey its mandate.

If you are to be strong spiritually, you must begin the day, every day, rightly. You will be greatly assisted in this by joining the "morning watch."

Do you know about it?

Does your chapter know of it?

Send to the Book Concern of the Methodist Episcopal church nearest to you—Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Chicago, Kansas City or San Francisco—for specimen copies of the "Morning Watch Leaflet," at 15 cents per hundred, and for the tract by John R. Mott on "The Morning Watch." Distribute to all your members and spend the first meeting of the new year in explanation, discussion and enrollment. Begin the year with the definite plan to begin every day with Christ. Enroll with all others of the "morning watch."

Many cast contempt upon New Year resolutions, professedly because some are so soon broken. The fault is not in the forming the resolutions, but in the forgetfulness of them and the failure to adopt a scheme of daily routine which will provide time and place for carrying out the good intentions. If you would have helpful habits of daily devotion, you must form them by persistent practice and correction of them when a failure is found. You cannot create character by wishing merely. Nor is good foundation enough. You must have appropriate building in the superstructure.

If you are built on Christ as your foundation, see to it that your building corresponds adequately with what He has laid.

Take the Days as They Come.

The Master will mix the hours as it pleases Him, and so you should accept them with a murmurless spirit, if you are expecting Him to work out His own purpose in and through you. Bright and dark days will often stand close together, but each shall come to declare His message. In painting china the artist outlines the piece of work in a dull black and then "fires and burnishes" it, and, lo! it comes forth in the beautiful color of gold. God has a golden thought and purpose back of each dark experience, and when He has tried us He will bring us forth as gold. Yes, to take life as it comes; not to be so anxious about the form of the day as the life of the spirit it should enshrine—this is the secret of unfolding God's noble thought in terms of generous and Christlike living. The crown of the morrow lies in that approach to the Christ character which a life of faithfulness today makes real and abiding.—Rev. I. Mench Chambers.

Our Sun.

Some years ago at Freshwater I visited for the first time one of Tennyson's favorite seats and saw the massive obelisk on the downs above Totland bay which his neighbors and admirers erected to his memory. I sat down under its shadow with great delight and recalled many of his beautiful sayings. It was at Farringford, close by, that one day, walking and conversing with some friends, he was asked by one of them, "What is Jesus Christ to you?" And, pointing to a clump of violets that bloomed by the pathside, the laureate answered, "What the sun is to these violets, Jesus Christ is to my life." And there was a deep and holy silence.—Rev. A. Averell Ramsey.

True Gladness.

Be glad when the flowers have faded?
Be glad when the trees are bare?
When the fog lies thick on the field and moors
And the frost is in the air?
When all around is a desert
And the clouds obscure the light,
When there are no songs for the darkest days,
No stars for the longest nights?

Ah, yes, for the truest gladness
Is not in ease or mirth;
It has its home in the heart of God,
Not in the loves of the earth.
God's love is the same forever,
If the skies are bright or dim,
And the joy of the morning lasts all day
When the heart is glad in Him.
—Christian Work and Evangelist.

PARK AVE. WIDENING WILL COST $2,483

WIDENING SYCAMORE AVENUE $748; OPENING STEBBINS PLACE $378.

Elliott T. Barrows, Evarts Tracy and L. G. Timpson, commissioners appointed by the Common Council to treat with the property-owners in the matter of widening Park avenue, between Second street and the railroad; Sycamore avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, and the opening of Stebbins place, submitted their report at the special meeting of the Common Council, last night.

In each case the commissioners reported their inability to agree with the property-owners affected and were obliged to make assessments for benefits and damages on as equitable basis as possible.

The commissioners reported that the cost of the Park avenue widening would be $2,483, that of widening Sycamore street, $748, and for the opening of Stebbins place, $348. Resolutions were offered by Mr. Wilson, chairman of the street committee, confirming the work of the commissioners and the same were adopted.

Not one of the affected property-owners appeared to speak for or against the proposed improvements.

SOMEWHAT PERSONAL.

Mr. "Bob" Davis, of Hudson county, is another one of those bosses who refuse to stay dead.

Admiral Rojestvensky has reached home in time to wish he hadn't.

Before District Attorney Moran, of Boston, started in to imitate Jerome he should have borrowed a little common sense somewhere.

It seems that Odell hasn't yet received permission to know that he's licked.

Perhaps they arrested that New York bank teller for stealing two $5 gold pieces in order to examine into his mental condition.

Those anti-foreign rioters are liable to be Shanhaied if the American and British marines get at 'em.

So the rumor that a wealthy candy manufacturer was to be appointed Police Commissioner of New York was only "taffy" after all.

The United States weather forecaster at Baker City, Ore., has been declared insane because he made some "queer predictions." If this were taken as precedent what a clearing out of prophets there would be!

Behind the Scenes of Newspaperdom.

Readers of daily newspapers seldom realize the arduous work that has been put into every issue of their favorite sheet. Arduous, when everything is running smoothly, but when in the systematic chain there is a weak link, then indeed the difficulties to be overcome are stupendous. No man likes to be kept waiting for his morning news—and no newspaper likes to keep him waiting. So in the smallest fraction of time the link must be renewed and the paper must go to press if everybody belonging to it, from editor to office boy, drops in his tracks. A very real incident is related by Caroline A. Huling in her story in the January Lippincott's called "The Strike in the Clarion Office." It is written from the inside, for Miss Huling is herself an editor, and it shows how a strike was averted and the paper printed on time, all through the coolheadedness of its society editor. Sympathy is never wasted when offered to the newsgatherers who turn night into day to feed a voracious public.

URGES HIS CLERGY TO AID BREWERS.

Bishop McFaul Commends Col. Collins' Resolution.

Bishop James A. McFaul, of the Trenton Roman Catholic Diocese, in a letter to the papers in that city, urges the clergy to aid the brewers in enforcing Col. D. F. Collins' resolution to drive depraved men out of the saloon business, and says that if the increase in the consumption of beer has a tendency to decrease the use of stronger beverages, then the brewers are doing beneficial work.

In reference to the resolutions introduced at the State Brewers' Association, Bishop McFaul says:

"There can, however, be no ground for disputing the position assumed by the State Brewers' Association. If the resolution introduced by Colonel Dennis F. Collins, representing the Peter Breidt Brewing Company, of Elizabeth, which was unanimously adopted by the convention, be reduced to practice, many of the crying evils existing, especially in our large cities, will be abolished.

"I have been informed that several resorts of vice, in Trenton, could not exist, except for the power of the breweries. If this is true, consistently with the above resolution, they owe it to themselves to see that no house, which is now law-abiding and respectable shall be permitted to dispose of their goods. In other words, they should employ all their influence to drive the lawless and depraved out of the saloon business.

"In this work, I am sure, the clergy, irrespective of creed, the police, and every respectable citizen, will cheerfully lend assistance."

THURSDAY, JAN. 4, 1906.

McCarter brothers, Bob and Tom, do depose and say "Perish the thought."

James Hazen Hyde has set sail for "Gay Paree." The policyholders of the Equitable should certainly be willing to pay his passage.

The wrecked "machine" of Philadelphia will agree that the name John Weaver for the city's new ice boat is quite appropriate, considering the mayor's recent attitude.

Because the local option people plan to introduce some bills in the coming Legislature an exchange says there promises to be a merry war over the liquor license problem. In other words the temperance people have decided to fight fire with fire.

Congressman Brownlow, of Tennessee, is credited with having introduced 347 bills in Congress already. If he can get them all passed there is nothing his constitutents won't do for him.—Elizabeth Journal.

And what is Congressman Fowler's record?

We laugh at the Frenchman's code of honor, but give little thought to the barbaric customs in vogue at the U. S. Naval Academy, in just the same way that we seem amused at the Chinese woman's habit of pinching her feet and think nothing of the American woman's way of crowding her body into a tight corset.

COCK FIGHT IN A LANE ON WASHINGTON STREET

DARING YOUNG SPORTSMEN CAME NEAR BEING ARRESTED—MAY BE YET.

Two well known young men started the New Year in a decidedly sporty way. They held a cock-fight in a lane on Washington street early yesterday afternoon.

The fight was between a bantam owned by one of the young men and a game cock belonging to a Washington street man. The bantam's owner brought the bird to the other man's house and challenged him to let the fighters come together. The man was as game as his feathered fighter and brought the cock out. The main was marked out in the lane beside the house, almost on the street.

The birds fought well, cheered on by their owners. They were not shod and the contest ended in a draw. Although the young men did not know it they came very near being arrested, and may be yet. An indignant woman watched the fight from the rear window of a neighboring house, and she was on the point of telephoning to the police when her husband interfered. She knows all the men connected with the affair, and is spunky enough to make a complaint and appear in prosecution of it.

GESANG AND TURN VEREIN HAS JOLLY GOOD TIME.

Entertainment Followed by a Dance at Saengerbund.

With one of the largest crowds in attendance the society has yet entertained, the Gesang and Turn Verein conducted its annual New Year's reception in Saengerbund Hall Sunday night.

In the early part of the evening an entertainment was given which comprised the following numbers: Selections by the Singing Section; monologues by August Wolf and Frank Neidig; vocal selections, Alexander Dresselt and Joseph Laible; violin selections, B. A. Paroubek; violin and piano selections, Frank and Otto Linke; zither and violin selections, Frank Jellig and Hugo Maul; zither selections, the Misses Jellig.

The leader of the singing section, Herman Eichorn, was presented with a parlor clock, the presentation speech being made by William Gardner, president of the society. Following the entertainment, which concluded at midnight, the singers ushered in the New Year with song and dancing was taken up, continuing to an early hour yesterday morning.

The committee which had the affair in charge consisted of August Wolf, chairman; Charles Meyer, Jr., John Retzer and Max Mothus.

In Honor of Her Son.

In honor of his return from college for the holidays, Mrs. Stevens gave her son, Raymond Stevens, a card party at his home on Saturday night. There were ten guests, intimate friends of Mr. Stevens and there were many features to make the affair a highly enjoyable one.

Booker—Johnson.

James G. Booker and Frances Johnson, colored, were married at the Mt. Zion M. E. church parsonage on December 20, by Rev. H. C. Ashton, the pastor. They are living here.

AMUSEMENTS.

A host of special attractions have been secured for the Eden Musee of New York City, and during the season the Musee will be replete with novel and amusing features. A new figure of President Roosevelt has been added to the famous group of Rulers of the World. It is the most characteristic figure in the whole group, and represents the President just about to deliver a speech. Another addition to this famous group is a figure of the new King of Norway in full court costume. Many other additions have been made to the wax groups, and there are almost daily rearrangements and alterations. In the Winter Garden an elaborate entertainment is taking place practically throughout the day and evening. A large collection of new moving pictures are shown hourly with a change of pictures each hour. These pictures are the most elaborate ever displayed, and are shown at no other places except the Musee until after the Musee has discarded them. Each afternoon and evening the new Hungarian orchestra renders an appropriate concert of classical and popular music. Each member of the orchestra is an artist, and the combined talent represents the most perfect Hungarian orchestra in the country. Many interesting stage features in the shape of special attractions are shown each evening.

In "As Ye Sow," the new play by the Rev. Dr. John Snyder, of Boston, which had its premier at the Garden theatre, New York, Christmas, William A. Brady and Joseph R. Grimser believe they have another popular success of the type of the "Old Homestead," "Way Down East" and "Shore Acres." It will be recalled that the last named plays gradually grew to great popularity after having been at first received with some skepticism by the more severe critics, and that they still—years after their initial presentations—are potent and profitable attractions throughout the country. That "As Ye Sow" has many of the qualities which made famous "Way Down East" is conceded and its reception in New York is much the same as that which characterized the advent of that immensely successful play here some nine years ago. "As Ye Sow" will not satisfy those who revel in the risque or who rejoice in the unclean in the drama. It is a play built on simple and altogether wholesome lines, but withal intensely interesting throughout, with strong love interest, pathos, and comedy situations blended. It is a play which appeals to the "average citizen" and is not intended for the edification of those who seek only the frivolous things which the stage offers. The success with which the piece met in Boston and Chicago was indeed phenomenal, but ere the engagement terminates at the Garden Messrs. Brady and Grimser expect to see the records in those two cities duplicated in New York. In addition to the interest aroused among the regular patrons of the theatre much attention has been given "As Ye Sow" among those who seldom are seen in places of amusement. The fact that the piece was written by a minister has brought many church folk to the Garden theatre during the present week and it is likely that the work of the Rev. Dr. Snyder as author will receive formal recognition by the clergy of New York during the engagement. A special matinee of "As Ye Sow" will be given New Year's Day and regular matinees will be given on Wednesday and Saturday during the engagement.

The final performances, at least for the time being, of "The Walls of Jericho," the great Alfred Sutro play, with James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering, which has been for four months the leading attraction in New York, at the Savoy theatre, are announced, as Mr. Hackett, in conjunction with Miss Mannering, will be seen in another new play at the Savoy theatre, on Monday, January 22. This new play, called "The House of Silence," is by Herman K. Viele. At the time that Mr. Hackett took the Savoy theatre last spring, it was his intention to produce, along with "The Walls of Jericho," several other plays, and with that end in view made arrangements with his authors in accordance. "The Walls of Jericho," however, found such great success that Mr. Hackett, not wishing to interefere with its run, succeeded in the postponement from time to time of the production of these other plays. He now finds further delay of "The House of Silence" cannot be made, hence the announcement of its production on January 22. It is Mr. Hackett's intention, however, to retire only for a time "The Walls of Jericho," as immediately after the run of "The House of Silence" the Sutro play is to be again restored. Another interesting announcement is that the limited co-star arrangement between Mr. and Mrs. Hackett (Mary Mannering) is to be continued further and Miss Mannering, in addition to appearing in "The House of Silence," will be seen in her present role in "The Walls of Jericho" when that play is again resumed.

Exciting the wonder and delight of great throngs at each of the two daily performance, "A Society Circus," the New York Hippodrome's newest and grandest production has proved to be, as foretold, the greatest success in theatrical annals. During Christmas week not less than 75,000 persons, an unprecedented record, visited the national playhouse. In "A Society Circus" is witnessed, as never before in the world, such a beautiful example of stage pageantry, gorgeous costumes, dazzling ensembles, bewildering ballet and circus, the whole culminating in the beautiful tableau, "The Court of the Golden Fountains." The acts in the circus are the best ever shown in this gigantic place of amusement. Claire Heliot and her marvelous lion act; Miss Marquis and her ponies; Marguerite and Hanley, in wonderful acrobatics; the Sisters O'Meers, in their beautiful high-wire specialty; the Sisters Powell and Robert Cottrell in bareback feats; the Four Marnos, clever acrobats; Albert Crandall and his trick mule; the Meras Family, skillful acrobats, Barlow's elephants and the remarkable juggling specialty offered by the August family constitutes a catalogue of interesting and skillful numbers hard to beat. Matinees are given daily.

LITERARY.

Pearson's Magazine for January contains eight unusually bright and sparkling short stories and no less than six special articles, among which is the inside story of the recent famous Jerome campaign. This article, anecdotal, and written in an inimitable style, is the work of Robert Adamson, who was at the elbow of Jerome from first to last throughout the memorable contest. "The National Ravages of Alcohol is an astounding article which every person—be he teetotaler, or temperate or excessive in the use of alcoholic beverages—should read. This article, based on Government statistics, is far from being a tract. "A Sailor of Fortune," with Farragut on the eve of running the forts, is highly interesting. "Shark Hunting" is entertaining, while "The Power of the Press" and "A Day in a Premier's Life" are of the light, instructive sort, fit for the log-fire and the long winter evenings. Among the stories is an extremely funny one, "The Senorita and the Great Goat Syndicate." But, most important of these tales is "The Scar," which is the first of a series of absolutely true experiences taken from the diary of Monsieur Goron, until recently the chief of the Paris Detective Bureau—the most famous body of sleuths in the world.

There are several matters in the January issue of Good Housekeeping of such live and immediate interest as to attract the attention of every American family. For example, the article on Fire, with which the magazine opens, and which everyone should read; the article on The Cost of Lighting, by Prof. Edward W. Bemis, author of Municipal Monopolies; Dr. G. Stanley Hall's paper on Children and the Theatre; the Talk on Legal Matters, in the new department of First Aid to Brides, by Caroline J. Cook, lecturer on law at Wellesley College; the illustrated Story of a Woman's Wonderful Achievements with Flowers; Linda Hull Larned's Talk on Linens; the Pure Food Assurance department, with its list of foods recommended; the illustrated pages for apartment dwellers, etc., etc. A new department for thinking women, The Philanderer, is introduced in this issue, which is alotgether a remarkably strong one. Fifteen cents a copy, one dollar a year. The Phelps Publishing Co., Springfield, Mass., New York, Chicago.

The leading article in the January issue of Suggestion, a journal of the New Psychology (Chicago), gives practical instructions for acquiring the art of conversing by means of auto-suggestion; other articles relate to psychic research, drugless healing, the power of mind, will power, life essentials, rational hygiene, everyday psychology, advanced thought, mental poise, health, happiness and success through the application of inherent mental and psychic powers. Suggestion Publishing Co., 4020 Drexel Building, Chicago. $1.00 per year.

Union County Courts Open.

The Union County Courts opened at Elizabeth yesterday with Judge Fort on the bench. His address was very brief, saying that there are now no matters of importance to which he desired to call the attention of the Grand Jury. He intimated that he might call the jurors back later to speak to them about a matter of great concern. The list of causes were read and the dates fixed for trial. Yesterday the Union County Bar Association met and re-elected all of the old officers. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city, was re-elected president for the coming year.

Theodore Starrett, president of the largest building construction company in America, is the author of the striking story about the new Washington Railroad Terminal in the December Architectural Record. "The Chateau de Vaux-le-Viscomte," by Frederic Lees, and "A Pleasure Resort Near Berlin" are other star contributions in the same number. The illustrations are numerous.

G. H. Bellis, of Elmwood place, who has been quite ill with pneumonia, is slowly recovering.

Robert Crane, Yale '07, has been spending a week with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Crane.

Miss Nellie Clarkson, of East Second street, is entertaining Miss Frances Cline, of Bound Brook.

BALL A GREAT SUCCESS

All Society at the Casino Last Night, For Charity's Sake.

NET PROCEEDS, $1,500

Ball Room Prettily Decorated in Green and Red—Bowling Alleys Converted Into a Charming Supper Room.

The second annual charity ball for the benefit of Muhlenberg Hospital, held at the Casino Friday, was a brilliant success. The ballroom was crowded, and every feature of the affair was perfect. The financial success was as distinct as the social. Not less than $1,500 will go into the hospital treasury as a result of the ball.

The guests numbered over 300. This is more than 100 short of the number of tickets sold, because a good many people who don't dance at Casino functions, but do appreciate what the hospital is doing, cheerfully gave up $5 apiece; some of the people who were there took more tickets than they needed. Very nearly all society was there, and some of the plain people. The spirit of Sweet Charity brooded over the ballroom and the p. p. were not unduly chilled.

The Casino has rarely looked as pretty as it did last night, and never prettier. The ballroom was decorated in evergreens, smilax, California pepper and holly. Red shades over the lights lent a warm touch to the ensemble. The stage was a bower of greens, with a heavy bank of potted plants just in front of the musicians, Austin, of New York, had two bands of seven pieces each playing in the bower. Manager Maze Edwards planned the stage decorations.

Every arrangement was made for the comfort of the guests. All the porches were enclosed and the additional space that resulted was divided into a promenade and separate cloak rooms for men and women. The parlors, decorated like the ballroom, gave the dancers pleasant corners of retreat. The Eureka Quartette, of New York, entertained the loungers with a programme of vaudeville music.

Supper was served between 10:45 and 1 o'clock. The bowling alley was converted into a most attractive supper room. Accommodations for 120 guests at one time were arranged at small tables, and a supper crush was avoided by a system of telephones that enabled a policeman at the entrance to shut out guests when the tables were full. The supper room was under the direction of T. R. Van Boskerck.

The ball ended at 3 o'clock.

Among those present were Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Barrows, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Beaton, Mr. and Mrs. Paul Taylor Brown, Mr. and Mrs. W. G. Besler, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Beard, Mr. and Mrs. J. J. Blackmore, Mr. and Mrs. John Bushnell, Mr. and Mrs. E. V. Cox, Mr. and Mrs. B. H. Combe, Mr. and Mrs. James W. DeGraff, Mr. and Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Erickson, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Depew, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Detwiller, Mr. and Mrs. Robert H. Fairbairn, Mr. and Mrs. George H. Goddard, Mr. and Mrs. John Grierson, Mr. and Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Huntington, Mr. and Mrs. Frank DeLacy Hyde, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Hall, Mr. and Mrs. John F. Harman, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Hatch, Mr. and Mrs. W. C. Kinney, Mr. and Mrs. August Kleinecke, Mr. and Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Lowe, Mr. and Mrs. Robert E. Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. G. P. Mellick, Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Murray, Mr. and Mrs. F. S. Martin, Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Otterson, Mr. and Mrs. S. H. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Reed, Mr. and Mrs. C. W. McGee, Mr. and Mrs. G. S. Ring, Mr. and Mrs. D. H. Rowland, Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Stevens, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Stewart, Mr. and Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, Mr. and Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Tyler, Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Townsend, Mr. and Mrs. G. Wright, Mr. and Mrs. F. W. Wallace, Mr. and Mrs. L. E. Waring, Mr. and Mrs. E. T. Wilson, Mr. and Mrs. Clifton Wharton, Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Sydney Williams, the Misses Cock, Davis, Rowland, Waring, Otterson, Holly, Murray, Collings, Kaufman, Fisk, Martin, Hyatt, Wadsworth, Howell, Mumford, W. R. Cock, D. T. Kinney, Harold Hall, Charles Lyman, Carroll T. Runyon, George Schoonmaker, Ralph Schoonmaker, Charles Fisk, Jr., Elston M. French, James Dodd, Owen Fleming, Dudley Barrows, Gordon Abbott, Dr. B. VanD. Hedges, A. L. C. Marsh, Willard Wadsworth, Henry McGee, B. A. Mumford, George Van Boskerck, Howard Huntington.

The committee announced after the dance the names of the persons and firms who materially assisted in making the affair a success.

The general committee was made up of F. C. Ard, chairman; W. C. Kinney, treasurer; H. V. Borden, C. J. Fisk, E. T. Barrows, H. R. Stockton, G. S. Reed, F. DeL. Hyde, W. H. Murray, T. D. G. Timpson. Ball Committee—L. G. Timpson, chairman; E. T. Barrows, H. L. Hall, L. E. Waring, T. R. Van Boskerck, T. D. Wilson.

The patronesses were Mesdames E. M. Rodman, J. M. Whiton, J. F. Buckle, D. C. Ivins, W. L. Saunders, G. P. Mellick, C. E. Brooks, C. J. Fisk, P. T. Brown, J. E. Erickson, H. L. Hall, G. H. Goddard, Samuel Huntington, Samuel Townsend, H. P. Reynolds, B. A. Hegeman, J. E. Tracy, W. C. Kinney, E. H. Ladd and Miss Elizabeth Cock.

UNION CO. PLEASED WITH CO. K'S SHOWING

PLAINFIELD COMPANY MADE BEST SHOWING IN REGIMENT.

General Breintnall says in his annual report: "The improvement in the status in the Second and Third regiments, in the respect of percentage of yearly duty and present at muster, has so brought up their figures of general merit that now the Third Regiment ranks the highest in general average of all the regiments, and the second is only 4-10 per cent. behind it."

Of the companies in the Second Regiment which show 85 per cent. or better in general merit, Company K, of Plainfield, commanded by Captain William B. Martin, of Elizabeth, has the highest record, 87 2-10 per cent. The people of Union county will be pleased with this excellent showing of their local guardsmen, and Gen. Breintnall's comment is indeed high praise and reflects credit upon the officers and upon the men for their appreciation of their responsibility to strive for soliderly efficiency.—Elizabeth Journal.

NEW TAX COLLECTOR ASSUMES HIS DUTIES.

John W. Murray, Jr., Gathering City's Revenue.

Tax Collector John W. Murray, Jr., assumed the duties of his office this morning, succeeding Robert L. Lee, whose term expired yesterday. Mr. Murray was occupied most of the day in becoming acquainted with the duties of his new position. A few delinquents dropped in to settle their taxes. Many of his friends happened in and extended congratulations. Mr. Murray seems perfectly at home in his new office and anticipates no trouble.

Mr. Lee will remain at the office for at least a week, as it will require that much time for him to finish up the business left over from last year.

T. A. B. Annual Masquerade.

St. Mary's T. A. B. Society gave its annual masquerade ball in T. A. B. Hall, last night. The affair was largely attended and was one of the most successful the organization has yet conducted. The committee that had charge was composed of Miles Wilson, chairman; David Doyle, Michael Higgins, Thomas McInerney, Joseph Kennedy, Clarence Waldron and Thomas Hines.

Holiday Offering a Hit.

A. J. Spencer's melodrama, "At the World's Mercy," pleased a capacity audience at the New Plainfield theatre last night. It was presented by a superior cast while the scenic mounting was the heaviest and most elaborate carried by any similar production that has yet appeared at the local playhouse. A waterfall shown in one act was produced with such natural effect that the spectators applauded tumultuously. The audience at the matinee yesterday afternoon was also very large.

Entertained at Whist.

Mr. and Mrs. William Tallamy, of West Front street, entertained the Dunellen Whist Club, of which they are members, at their home last night. There were three tables. After the play refreshments were served and the rest of the evening was spent in a social manner.

PLAINFIELD MOTORMAN HELD FOR MANSLAUGHTER

HIS CAR STRUCK AND KILLED SMALL BOY AT NEWARK.

A main line Elizabeth-Plainfield trolley car, in charge of Motorman Frederick G. Freshett, of West Fourth street, this city, and Conductor Robert Winans, of Cranford, struck and killed a small boy at Clinton avenue and Broad street, Newark, Saturday night. The victim was Theodore Debus, twelve years old, of Newark, who attempted to steal a ride on the back platform of a Clinton avenue car and jumped off directly in front of the main line car. His skull was fractured and he lived but a few minntes afterward.

A patrolman placed Freshett under arrest and took him to the William street station, where he was paroled for the night. Afterward a formal charge of manslaughter was preferred against him and he was held in $1,000 bail, the amount being furnished by Dr. Charles F. Un*derwood, sargeon of the Public* Service Corporation.

Freshett admitted to the police that he had been driving his car pretty fast but claimed he did not see the boy until he jumped directly in front of the dashboard and that it was impossible to escape hitting him.

MAYOR SMALLEY SITS AS BOROUGH JUDGE

THOMAS DOUD'S TERM AS RECORDER EXPIRED YESTERDAY.

Recorder Doud's term as borough magistrate expired at noon Monday and from now on Mayor Smalley will meet out punishment to offenders. He had his first chance this morning when three colored men were ar*raigned before him for reckless driv*ing on Somerset street yesterday. The names and the verdict were George Randolph, $3 or five days, paid; Charles Harrison, $5 or seven days, paid; Charles Scott, $5 or seven days, waiting for friends to get the money.

Newspapermen who were in court were impressed with His Honor's magisterial dignity and the way he conducted the cases showed that he has mastered all the details necessary to fill the office. The prisoners were arrested by Marshals Weiss, Flack and Emmons.

COUNTRY CLUB HOLDS DINNER AND DANCE.

One Hundred and Sixty Present at Affair at Casino Last Night.

The third of the series of dinner-dances under the auspices of the Plainfield Country Club was held at the Casino last night, being postponed from Saturday night so as not to conflict with the dance at the Park Club. The affair was even a greater success than the preceding two, there being about eighty couples present to enjoy the attractive programme of dances by Wetton's orchestra.

The elaborate decorations used during the holidays and for the charity ball remained and added to the brilliancy of the occasion. Many patrons of the dance had dinner at the Casino turougout the day and evening and much praise was given Mrs. Lena Hellstrom for the excellent menu and service.

Wedding Reception.

A wedding reception was given to Mr. and Mrs. William Hearn at the home of the bride's sister, Mrs. Leonard Bunn, of West Third street, last night. There was about fifty friends in attendance. Supper was served. Vocal and instrumental music were provided. The feature of the evening was a duet by Mrs. Katherine Bowers and Louis Sutline and the dancing of Fred Stillger, of Dunellen.

Hairpins Reveal Woman Burglar.

The Jersey City police are looking for a woman burglar and her man companion in crime. It transpired yesterday that the home of Mrs. Sarah Nathan in Mercer street, Jersey City, had been entered early on Sunday. An overcoat and a set of furs were stolen. The evidence that a woman was implicated was the finding of several hairpins in the rear parlor, the room from which the furs were taken, and the fact that a man and woman were seen loitering in front of the house late at night. Entrance was effected by raising a front parlor window.

Preparatory services will be held at the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church on Friday night and the Lord's Supper will be observed on Sunday morning, when it is expected that several new members will be received.

Freeholder William A. Westphal, who has been quite ill at his home in the Jackson building, is slightly improved.

CITY'S HEALTH IN 1905

Death Rate Low But Increase of Tuberculosis Calls for Attention.

SANITARY INSPECTION

Births and Marriages — House-to-House Examination Milk and Water Investigations.

The annual report of the Board of Health presented at the first meeting of the 1906 Common Council, last night, by Health Officer L. R. Thurlow, supplemented with a summary of the work by President C. J. Fisk, shows that Plainfield's health condition was never better and that during the past year a great amount of work has been accomplished by the board and its assistants. The salient features of the report are as follows:

Finances.

Receipts—Balance January 1, 1905, $82.01; appropriation from Common Council, $4,500; fees collected, $882; total, $5,464.01; disbursements—General expenses, $4,-546.45; fees paid to city treasurer, $880; annual report to State Board of Health, $2; balance January 1, 1906, $35.56; total, $5.464.01.

General Outline.

The following detailed report will show a marked improvements in the sanitary condition of the city. The general health for the past year, so far as it may be judged by the total mortality and communicable diseases, has been better than the average for many years. The milk supply has shown an improvement as may be seen by referring to the table of milk analysis.

The one great need of the city at the present time is: Some proper collection and disposal of the garbage and ashes under municipal control. A glance at the results of the house-to-house inspections will show the great need of having the garbage removed. I would strongly recommend, both from a sanitary and economical standpoint, the adoption of some proper collection and disposal system before the summer of 1906. Our population for 1905 as given by the census reports is 18,478. Of this number 16,628 are white and 1,850 colored.

Deaths.

The total number of deaths recorded in 1905 was the same as in the previous year. There were 286. This represents a death rate of 15.48 per thousand population. Ninety-six of the total number of deaths were among persons over sixty years of age; this is about thirty-three and one-third per cent.

There were 367 births reported in 1905, representing a rate of 19:32 per thousand population. Births by sexes—Male, 175; female, 182; total, 357; births by color—White, 307; colored, 50; total, 357.

One hundred and forty-four marriages were reported during the year, giving a rate of 7.79 per thousand population. Of the 144 marriages, 125 were white and 19 colored.

The folowing is a summary of the returns made to this office during 1905: Marriages, 144; births, 357; still-births, 24; deaths, 286; total, 811.

Communicable Disease.

Plainfield was particularly fortunate in 1905 in having but few cases of communicable disease. There were 360 cases reported, 40 of which resulted in death.

| Diseases. | Cases. | Deaths. |
|---|---|---|
| Scarlet fever | 47 | 0 |
| Diphtheria | 23 | 1 |
| Tuberculosis | 23 | 35 |
| Chicken pox | 15 | 0 |
| Measles | 215 | 1 |
| Typhoid fever | 22 | 2 |
| Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis | 1 | 1 |
| Whooping cough | 14 | 0 |
| Totals | 360 | 40 |

This dreaded disease—tuberculosis—the chief cause of death—was not properly reported during the year by the physicians. Only 23 cases were reported and there were 35 deaths.

We are endeavoring in every way to prevent the spread of this disease. Disinfection was made compulsory after deaths from tuberculosis and steps were taken to enforce our ordinance against spitting in public places.

During this coming year we hope to more fully control the spread of tuberculosis.

Cerebro-Spinal Meningitis.

On September 5, 1905, cerebro-spinal meningitis was declared by the Board of Health to be contagious and dangerous to the public health, and physicians were required to report cases within twenty-four hours.

Inspection of Bakeries.

A thorough inspection of all the bakeries in Plainfield was made this past year. Very few violations of the laws of the State and those of this Board were found.

Ice Supply.

The ice supplied in Plainfield during 1905 came exclusively from Watchung Lake and was of good quality.

House-to-house Inspection.

The survey commenced about the middle of May and brought to a close the first of September. In this time 1,638 houses were inspected, which, with the inspections made a year ago, cover a section of the city bounded by Green brook, Clinton avenue, West Sixth street, Park avenue, Prospect avenue, Woodland avenue, South avenue and Berckman street.

Diseased Meat and Butcher Shop Inspection.

A thorough inspection of every butcher shop in the city was started, special attention being paid to the pork then in stock and the general sanitary condition of the shop. No *meat was found which seemed dis*eased and the shops themselves were in fair condition.

Nuisances.

The total number of nuisances investigated during the year was 203; of these 164 were abated and in the remaining cases either there was no cause for complaint or no action could be taken by the Board.

Garbage.

To a person considering making Plainfield their place of residence, one of the most noticeable features of the manner in which our city is cared for is the system, or rather lack of system, of garbage collection. Hundreds of cities and towns of the size of Plainfield, and in many cases much smaller, have a municipal system of collection and disposal of garbage and ashes. Why the present method used in our city is unsatisfactory, unsanitary and expensive has been thoroughly discussed in previous reports. We urged then the great need of establishing some system whereby the garbage could be removed frequently from every house in the city and disposed of in a sanitary manner.

Such a system could be installed in Plainfield under municipal control and maintained at a less cost than is now being paid private collectors for removing the garbage and ashes from only a part of the houses; and the citizens would no longer be subjected many times a day to the sight of broken down garbage wagons and the odors emanating from them. The city already owns the land and a building in which a crematory could be installed. I would strongly recommend and urge the adoption in Plainfield of some municipal collection and disposal of the garbage and ashes before the summer of 1906.

Disinfection.

Disinfection has become an important branch of the work of the board. During this past year more disinfection has been done than in any former year. Householders, realizing the necessity of disinfection, now ask for it, even in cases where we do not require it. Two hundred and fifty-six permits to do plumbing work were granted.

Milk Supply.

About 8,000 quarts of milk are sold in the city by seventy-two retailers. This milk comes from 119 dairies situated in all directions from Plainfield, from within the limits of the city itself to a distance of over fifty miles.

During the year many changes were made in the source of supply, which were, in the majority of cases, a decided improvement. Some of the men whose dairies were of the poorer class went out of business, as it was easier to do this than to comply with the rules of ordinary cleanliness required by this board; others who showed no intention of improving their dairies so that they would complay with our ordinances, were refused a permit to sell milk in the city.

Water Analysis.

The water supply of Plainfield has maintained, during the past year, its excellent quality. During the coming year I am in hopes of having the public supply analyzed periodically.

The water of numerous wells was analyzed and *in some cases condemn*ed and the wells ordered closed.

AND DID YOU GET ONE OF THESE CARDS?

P. R. R. Sends Facetious Cards to Those Formerly Favored.

Instead of their annual passes on the Pennsylvania Railroad, those who have long enjoyed these favors received the following cards today:

> The Scripture Versus Passes:
> "Thou shalt not pass."—Numbers xx., 18.
> "Suffered not a man to pass."—Judges iii., 28.
> "The wicked shall no more pass."—Nahum i., 15.
> "Though they roar, yet can they not pass."—Jer. v., 22.
> "He paid the fare and went."—Jonah i., 3.

A politician who is a trifle provoked over the anti-pass order, suggested that the Pennsylvania's New Year cards be returned with this indorsement:

"It will be remembered that Shylock draws upon Holy Writ to make a point in 'The Merchant of Venice,' and that Bassanio retorts that 'The Devil can quote scripture to his purpose.'"—New York Sun.

To be Paid by Property Owners.

In the report of the committee on streets and sewers, published on Sat- connection with the estimated cost of the proposed South side sewer, should appear as the portion of the cost to be paid by abutting property owners for the 4½ miles of sewers.

CONVULSIONS END LIFE OF WM. R. STANBERY

FANWOOD MAN PASSES AWAY AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

From the effects of epileptic convulsions that seized him a week ago William Runyon Stanbery died at his home in Fanwood at 4:30 Sunday afternoon. His condition had been alarming from early Friday morning and his death had been expected mo*mentarily.*

When first taken ill Stanbery was advised by his physician, Dr. F. W. Westcott, to remain in bed. He did so until Thursday, when he dressed and left the house despite the protests of his attendant. He went to Newark on business and then returned to this city, spending a short time calling on friends. Feeling ill, he started for home, and while on the way was again seized with convulsions. One succeeded another and he had difficulty in reaching the house. Dr. Westcott was again summoned and remained with him almost constantly, while Dr. Zeglio was called in consultation. Nothing could be done for the patient, although the physicians resorted to every method to relieve his sufferings.

Stanbery was forty-eight years old and was born at Scotch Plains, always living in the village or at Fanwood. He was educated at Rutgers College and engaged in various business pursuits in this city and Newark. He was one of the organizers of the Watchung Silk Company, which has a factory on Chatham street, and was its manager until a short time ago. He was also assessor for Fanwood borough for many years, holding the office at the time of his death. He was a member of Fanwood Council, Royal Arcanum, and other fraternal organizations.

Surviving him are is father, William C. Stanbery, of Scotch Plains, and a son, William R. Stanbery, Jr., now living with his grandfather. Mrs. Stanbery took her life two months ago by drinking carbolic acid while in a fit of melancholia.

LOST THEIR MONEY 3 WOMEN MAROONED

PLAINFIELDERS BORROW FARES IN NEW YORK POLICE STATION.

"We've lost our money and can't get home," said one of three fashionably frocked women who entered the East Fifty-first street police station, New York, Sunday afternoon in quest of advice. "I carried the money for all of us in my purse, and I either left it in church or it was stolen from me."

"Are you New Yorkers?" asked Sergeant Bingham, interestedly.

"No," said the spokeswoman; "we're from Plainfield. We came in this morning to attend service in the Broadway Tabernacle."

"And you have no return tickets?"

"They were in the purse with the money. Can't you telephone to our friends in Plainfield to send us money?"

"Entirely unnecessary, madam," returned the sergeant, gallantly. "I have $2 in my pocket, and I'll lend it to you with pleasure."

The ready aid so affected all the women that their eyes filled and one of them sobbed half-hysterically. Evidently they had been distressed by their predicament and had not known how to get to their homes without risking placing themselves in a false light. It was 2 o'clock when they appeared in the station. The church service had been over at least an hour and a half.

"Let me leave you this as security," said the woman who cried, as she started to take off her wedding ring. But Bingham wouldn't hear of it, although the $2 he had given her chanced to be the last he had at the time, and when the women had gone he had to borrow money for his luncheon.

SOME COUNTY LIQUOR LICENSES GRANTED.

Judge Vail Reviews Permits to Inns and Taverns.

In the Court of Common Pleas this morning, presided over by Judge Vail, applications for inn and tavern licenses throughout the townships and boroughs were considered and the following renewals granted:

Charles Warner, Union township; Edward Hand, Fanwood township; Daniel Galbraith, Fanwood township; Mary Doyle, Cranford township; Henry Schulties, Gustav Deinlein, Linden township; Andrew Bertram, Roselle Park; William Morrison, Garwood; Bertha Hergert, Linden township; Fred Correl, New Providence borough; Paul Britz, Garwood; Gaspar Buhler, Garwood; George V. Andelfinger, Clark township; James Loughlin, Fanwood.

Miss Wheeler, Miss Shaw and Miss Phillips, from out of town, are guests at the home of Joseph Phillips, of Netherwood.

Mr. and Mrs. Irving Wayne Clark, of Webster place, have been spending the New Year holidays with relatives in Conshohocken, Pa.

NO BOUQUETS FOR THEM

Vote of Thanks For President Daniel Only Complimentary Act of Dying Common Council

MUCH ROUTINE WORK

New Tax Collector's Bonds Filed—Buildings Inspector's Report—Lights Committee's Report.

Excepting a vote of thanks tendered the retiring president, Leslie M. Daniel, on a motion offered by Mr. Gloak, there was a notable absence of exchange of compliments at the special and final meeting of the Common Council for the year held last night. Mr. Wilson was anxious to conclude his committee work before retiring, while Mr. Tyler did not appear until later in the evening. Mr. Murphy, another retiring member, was absent, and during the session Charles C. Randolph was excused.

In concluding the business for the year, there seemed to be no end to it, as so many matters had to be acted upon before closing accounts for 1905. The chairman of each committee referred the various petitions in his hands to the 1906 body, and they will all be reported on later.

A fire department note of $4,000, due January 8, 1906, was paid, as were also street improvement bonds aggregating $9,000, with interest, dated November 9, 1903, and issued for three years. A poor fund note of $1,000, due January 8, 1906, was also paid.

The bill of expenses incident to the trial of Chief of Police Kiely was held over for the incoming Common Council, as was also the claim of Patrolman Frank Stillwell for salary, there being some misunderstanding regarding it.

The payment of sewer extension notes aggregating $14,900 was ratified. There are in all about fifteen notes.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported that six permits were granted during the past month and a total of 245 for the year. The annual reports of Chief of Police Kiely, Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, the streets and sewers committee, and that of the committee on fire and buildings are all printed in another part of The Daily Press. All of the reports were filed.

Mr. Murphy, through Mr. Gloak, reported that twenty-three additional incandescent lights were erected during the year, and Mr. Gloak, as chairman of the alms committee, presented his report.

Mr. Tolles offered the bonds of John W. Murray, Jr., tax collector-elect, and they were received and filed. The bonds are in the sum of $25,000 and are furnished by the United States Fidelity and Guaranty Company of Maryland.

Mr. Tolles also offered a resolution appropriating $100 to verify the de*linquent tax list and provide for the* expense of reaching those by bills who have not yet paid their taxes. The resolution was adopted.

Mr. Higham presented a request from the New York & New Jersey Telephone Company for the right to open certain streets to continue its work of laying conduits. The streets mentioned in the petition include East Front street, East Fifth street, Park avenue, South Watchung avenue and Crescent avenue. On Mr. Higham's motion the petition was granted.

Mr. Bullock reported back the proposed amendments to the building ordinance for further consideration, and he also moved that $35 be appropriated for the purpose of having 250 copies of Chief Doane's report printed for exchange with various chiefs of fire departments. The motion was adopted.

Among matters referred to the 1906 Common Council by Mr. Higham were those relative to the garbage disposal question, city park commissioners and the question of municipal water works. As to the water question, he stated that Corporation Counsel Marsh has the data on the subject and no doubt will instruct the incoming body regarding it.

After the business of the meeting was concluded time was allowed to prepare and adopt the minutes of the meeting. These were read by City Stenographer George B. Wean and adopted. Just before adjournment Mr. Gloak made a pleasant reference to President Daniel's efficient work in the chair and on his motion a vote of thanks was extended. Mr. Daniel expressed his appreciation in a few words.

Miss Reinhart's Wedding Date.

Announcement is made of the approaching marriage of Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, to Matthew Maury Corbin, of Cincinnati. The ceremony will take place at Grace church on Wednesday evening, January 31, at 8:30 o'clock, to be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents.

From Our Society Correspondent.

Mr. Ike Cinch, of this city, better known in the world of art as "Citizen Fixit," is reported as being deeply interested in one of Cincinnati's fairest daughters. We have so far been unable to confirm this rumor, but no doubt will soon hear the merry tinkle of wedding bells.

MR. AND MRS. KARMER MARRIED 50 YEARS

VENERABLE COUPLE HOLD AN INFORMAL RECEPTION NEW YEAR'S DAY.

The fiftieth anniversary of the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Karner was celebrated New Year's Day at their home on Bradford avenue, near Clinton avenue. The rooms of the house were prettily decorated. The color effect in the dining room was yellow and white and in the parlor and library red and green.

At 2 o'clock a good old-fashioned dinner was served, of which friends and relatives from Nutley and Brooklyn partook. Among the guests were Rev. and Mrs. W. C. Nelson, of Nutley; Rev. and Mrs. Geo. N. Karner, of Brooklyn, with their four children, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cadmus and Mrs. Lizzie Osborn, of Brooklyn.

The gathering was not large on account of the illness of Mrs. Karner, who had a stroke of paralysis some months ago and has not since left her bed.

A. B. Karner was born in Berkshire County, Mass., February 8, 1825. Mrs. Karner is a native of the same county and is ten years younger than her husband. The venerable couple were married at Pittsfield, Mass., in 1856, and that same year came to New Jersey.

Mr. Karner was a public school teacher for twenty-five years, teaching at Allentown, Heightstown, Kingston, Rocky Hill, Ten-Mile-Run and Sayerville, New Jersey, and for the last twenty years have been a resident of Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. Karner have three children living, Rev. Geo. N. Karner, of Brooklyn; Miss Clara I. Karner, the trained nurse, and Miss M. Lou Karner, teacher at Elizabeth, New Jersey. They are members of the First Presbyterian church and until recent years have always been active in church work.

During the afternoon and evening several neighbors and friends called to congratulate the aged couple. Among the numbers were Rev. and Mrs. Goodrich, Mr. and Mrs. William Shotwell and Mrs. Alvin Hoagland.

The gifts were suggestive and useful, a golden cake by William H. Shotwell and nearly seventy-five dollars in gold coin, besides letters of congratulation and flowers being conspicuous.

EDGAR B. WARD RESIGNS.

Will Retire from Second Vice-Presidency of Prudential.

Edgar B. Ward, second vice-president of the Prudential Insurance Company, who has been in continuous service as an officer of that institution for more than thirty years, yesterday announced his determination to decline a re-election at the annual meeting of the company next week. Mr. Ward has had his retirement in contemplation for some time, in fact had decided upon it a year ago, but it met at that time with so much opposition on the part of his associates that it was postponed. Now, however, Mr. Ward has made his decision final.

"It is all my own choice," Mr. Ward said today. "A considerable absence, especially during the winter, is imperative. I cannot believe a divided attention to the business to be fair to the company or to the other officers. Therefore, I take the course of retiring altogether.

"There are no differences between the other officers and me. Indeed, it would be strange if there were—when we remember that the other senior officers—Senator Dryden and Dr. Ward—and I have been together in the company since its organization in 1875 and all the time in perfect harmony. The worst of it all is now the severing of these relations."

Mr. Ward organized and has been at the head of the Prudential's legal department from the first, and the investment of the company's funds has also been largely in his charge. His advice has always been sought in making loans on real estate and collateral security, and his judgment has been relied upon in the purchase of bonds.

The vacancy in the list of officers will be filled at the annual meeting, but it has not yet been announced who will take Mr. Ward's place.

DEEDS ON RECORD.

Transfers of Property in Plainfield Recently.

The following transfers of Plainfield property have been recorded in the office of Registrar Smith at Elizabeth:

John Ross et ux. to Nicholas V. Cadmus, westerly corner North avenue and Watchung avenue..$13,500

Marion A. Muth to Catherine P. Hahr, northeasterly side Woodland avenue, 125 feet of South avenue. $1

B. Frank Coriell, sheriff, to Emma Bachman, southeasterly side Third street, 95 feet northeasterly of Prescott place ................$1.500

Miss Maizie Gray, of Elmwood place, who has been detained at home by illness, is much improved and hopes to be out again soon.

Three best bets: Ezra Kendall, James O'Neill and "Little Johnny Jones." All under the wire at the New Plainfield theatre within two weeks.

NEW YEAR'S DAY AT THE PARK CLUB

RECEPTION AND DANCE WERE TWO OF THE FEATURES.

The annual New Year's Day reception yesterday afternoon at the Park Club was the most successful in the history of the organization. Throughout the afternoon the clubhouse was thronged with members and friends and the affair was a brilliant social function. The tea and reception was from 3 to 6 o'clock, those in charge being Mrs. Henry C. Irons, Mrs. E. H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows and Mrs. Frederick G. Mead.

The clubhouse was prettily decorated in holiday fashion and especially attractive were the tea tables. Mrs. James R. Joy and Mrs. Henry A. McGee poured at one table and Mrs. A. V. Heely and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore at the other, while a bevy of young women assisted in serving.

A feature of the afternoon reception was the presentation of Jerome K. Jerome's comedy, "Sunset." The characters were taken by Miss Louise Saunders, Mrs. S. Fullerton Weaver, Miss Van Deventer, Walter H. McGee, Clifford W. McGee, and Morgan T. Townsend. Generous praise was bestowed upon the participants for the successful production.

Last night the annual Junior dance was held, the children being allowed the privileges of the floor from 7:30 to 9 o'clock, when supper was served. From that hour until 1:30 this morning the older members enjoyed the dance. The patronesses for this dance were Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Henry C. White, Miss Munger, Mrs. Townsend Rushmore, Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. A. W. Kleinecke and Mrs. Charles A. Reed.

The informal dance at the club on Saturday night was largely attended and proved to be a delightful affair.

QUIET NEW YEAR'S EVE.

Sunday Spirit Hushed the Greeting of Plainfield's Public to 1906.

Hushed by the Sabbath spirit, New Year's eve was a quiet affair in this city. Church bells rang a decorously joyous greeting, but the public, unable to shake the Sunday calm from their spirits, watched 1905 go out in silence. In Newark, New York, and other places big enough to disregard the Sunday idea, had noise and joyousness aplenty, but Plainfield's usual Sunday night quiet was scarcely ruffled.

One or two sporadic shots sounded on the still air, but the noise died away quickly, as though abashed by the surrounding silence. There were few people on the streets, and most of those came from the congregations in churches where watch-night services were held. New Year's Day itself was very quiet as holidays go. There was no disorder, and tipsy youths and men were no more numerous than in past years.

CHIEF DOANE URGES EAST END FIRE HOUSE

More Hydrants in the Business Section and Five Additional Men Wanted For Better Service in the Fire Department.

MANY OTHER NEEDS

More Pressure on Fire Mains or Another Engine—A Pair of Horses Also—His Annual Report.

"Every little bit helps," according to the annual report of Fire Chief T. O. Doane, who gives a detailed list of the department's needs and makes several suggestions for the improvement of the service. A fire house for the East End, higher pressure on the water mains or a new engine, a pair of horses, five more men, a rearrangement of the alarm system, and more hydrants in the business section are some of the more important suggestions made by the chief.

His report in the main follows:

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

Gentlemen:

I herewith submit to your honorable body my eighteenth annual report as chief of fire department under your contract for the year ending December 27, 1905, with a record of the number of fires and alarms, the amount of insurance and losses, as near as could be ascertained.

The manual force is divided into two classes—permanent and call men.

There are three engine houses occupied by the department and owned by the city—headquarters, located at Nos. 145, 147 and 149 East Second street; No. 1 engine house, located at Nos. 206 and 208 West Second street, and No. 3 engine house, located at Nos. 730 and 732 West Fourth street. The East Second and West Fourth street houses are in good repair. Considerable repairs have been made to these houses by the members of the department, and the roofs of both buildings have been painted. No. 1 engine has had a new gravel roof this fall. I stated in my report of 1904 that this house needed new front doors, but will now probably need new floors also, and as this is a valuable property and a splendid location for an engine house, I would urge upon your honorable body to give the matter your attention next year.

In my 1904 report I recommended that the aerial truck be repaired and the steel tires be replaced with rubber. I now think that this apparatus will need new wheels, as the present wheels are in a bad condition. This apparatus also needs painting very badly. All the other apparatus, except the spare truck, is in fair condition. But all iron tires should be replaced with rubber, as we have to drive over hose at a fire. For this reason alone it would pay, and they are a great saving of horses, harness and apparatus. They soon pay for themselves.

Hose—The amount at present on hand is 6,500 feet; 4,000 feet are good. The rest should be sold as old hose. At least 2,000 feet of good hose should be purchased immediately.

Fourteen horses are in use in the department, twelve of which are owned by the city. The steamer team is hired by the city and is on call. At night they are stabled in the engine house and the driver sleeps there. This team should be owned by the city, and should be on duty permanently.

About four miles of old wire have been taken out this year and replaced with new wire. For several years I have called the attention of your honorable body to the fact that we need a repeater. Our fire alarm should be divided in six circuits, with a six circuit repeater and a switch board. At present, with nearly 25 miles of wire and 40 fire alarm boxes, we have virtually but one circuit, and in case of trouble on any part of the line, our whole system is out of service until the trouble can be located and repairs made. The fire alarm system is in charge of the N. Y. & N. J. Telephone Company, under the management of C. W. Runyon, and has had the best of care during the year.

There are 320 hydrants throughout the city, an addition of eight this year, with a water pressure of about 75 lbs., except those at Netherwood Heights, where the minimum pressure is about 40 lbs. The superintendent of the Water Company, A. Andrews, has done all that can be done to give us good service. Several miles of pipe have been laid where new hydrants were needed, some of which will be of very little profit to the company for several years to come, especially in the case of about 3,000 feet of 8-inch pipe laid in South Second street from Clinton to Rock avenues, to cover a large section of the city which was almost totally unprotected in case of fire. If we are to depend on hydrant pressure in the future, we must either have more pressure or buy at least one more steamer. I would suggest that a committee from your honorable body meet with the Water Company officials to take this matter up, as I have always found the Water Company willing to make any improvements in their power.

There have been 106 alarms during the year, an increase of five over last year. Box alarms, 41; telephone, 48; verbal, 17.

Loss and Insurance to December .., 1905, 8 a. m.—Loss on buildings, $18,487.50; insurance on buildings, $177,325; loss on contents, $21,891.72; insurance on contents, $144,570; total amount of insurance, $321,895; total amount collected, $39,024.22; loss not insured—personal, $837; real estate, $18; property value—real estate, $212,300; personal, $217,650.

Causes of Fires—Chimneys and defective flues, 26; unknown, 20; grass, wood and trees, 18; gasolene, 5; locomotive sparks, 5; debris, 4; gas and gas stoves, 4; stoves and defective stove pipes, 4; ashes, 3; matches, 3; lightning, 3; children and matches, 2; spontaneous combustion, 2; smoking in bed, 1; lamp, 1; smoke, 1; steam, 1 ; electric light wires, 1; out of city, 1; false alarm, 1. Total, 106.

Recommendations — For several years I have asked that more hydrants be placed in the business section of the city, and have given my reasons why they are needed. I again renew that request, and hope your honorable body will give the matter the attention it, in my opinion, deserves. There should be an engine house built in the east end of the city and equipped with a combination hose wagon and chemical engine, with room for a steamer, if it is needed. Netherwood, as the eastern end of this city, is rapidly filling with very costly buildings and should have better fire protection. A steam heater for our steamer should be placed in No. 1 engine house, and a small pressure of steam be kept on the engine night and day, so that the engine could be used at any time at a moment's notice. We need about five more permanent men, as we receive so many telephone alarms that we work very often at a great disadvantage, especially if an alarm comes (as they very often do) during the meal hours. The electric light wiring in the headquarters building is in a bad condition, and I understand that it has been condemned by the Underwriter's inspector. This matter should be given immediate attention.

I thank his Honor the Mayor and your honorable body for the interest you have taken in the department during the year, and hope for a con*tinuance of the same*.

To Chief of Police P. S. Kiely and the men under his control I tender the thanks of this department for the prompt help they have given during the year.

To my assistants, J. W. Murray and A. D. Jennings, and all other officers and men I tender my sincere thanks for the prompt and efficient manner in which they have answered all alarms, and worked shoulder to shoulder for the best interests of the city.

Respectfully,
T. O. DOANE,
Chief Engineer.

PERSEVERANCE CELEBRATES.

Local Lodge of Pythias Has Its Annual Christmas Jollification.

Pereseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., enjoyed its annual jollification in its rooms in the Babcock building last night. The programme was made up of professional and amateur numbers and was enjoyed by 100 Knights and friends from out of town.

Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., presided as chairman and the numbers were given as follows: Sketch, "The Stupid Servant," William Firstbrook and Joseph Sweeney; humorous stories and impersonations, John Dillon, of New York; musical act, Winans and Cassler, of New York; illustrated songs, Elmer D. Cutting, assisted by Clifford Braider at the piano ,and William Schorb operating the slides.

Afterward presents "hitting off" the members were distributed by Chairman Hetfield and a social time followed.

The committee in charge consisted of Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., Philip Jahn, Elmer D. Cutting, George Clark and J. E. Flannery.

Sewer Ordinance Adopted.

At the Common Council meeting last night Mr. Wilson called up on third reading the south-side sewer ordinance for third reading, and it was adopted. Councilmen Gloak, Frank Randolph, Tolles and Daniel voted against it, while Councilmen Wilson, Higham, Hibbard, Charles C. Randolph, Tyler and Bullock voted in the affirmative. There was no debate on the subject, and immediately after the adoption of the ordinance the Common Council took a recess on a motion offered by Mr. Gloak.

Court Plainfield's Activity.

Court Plainfield, Independent Order Foresters, closed the past year with a membership of 360, fourteen being initiated at the meeting on Friday. The newly-elected officers will be installed on Friday night, January 12, by High Chief Ranger David T. Howell, of Newark, and staff. The court's annual entertainment and dance will be held in Saengerbund Hall on Friday night, January 19.

YOUNG SOCIETY FOLK MEET MISS MURRAY

RECEPTION GIVEN BY MR. AND MRS. ROGER F. MURRAY IN NIECE'S HONOR.

A brilliant society event of last Wednesday was the reception given at the Casino by Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray for their niece, Miss May E. Murray, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John W. Murray, Jr., of West Fourth street. It was the occasion of Miss Murray's formal introduction to society and it also brought together her former schoolmates, many of whom are now in college and are home for the holidays.

Miss Murray received with her parents and Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray. The early part of the evening was devoted to sociability and at 9:30 o'clock the dancing began. Music was furnished by Austin's orchestra and an attractive programme was rendered. Each number received an encore and it was nearly 2 o'clock next morning when the dancers wended their way homeward. At midnight supper was served by Mrs. Lena Hellstrom.

There were about 250 guests, including a majority of those socially prominent in the younger set. Miss Murray carried a handsome bouquet of American beauty roses and she gracefully bore the honors bestowed upon her by her many friends.

The Casino was attractively decorated for the occasion, the Christmas colors, red and green, prevailing. There was a profusion of green rop*ing and southern* smilax, while about the stage there was banked palms and potted plants. Behind this foliage the orchestra was seated.

Every detail of the affair was carried out in pleasing fashion. The dance cards were unique. On the cover was the initials of the debutante in monogram.

DINNER PARTY GIVEN FOR MISS BATCHELOR

TWENTY-TWO ATTEND PLEASANT [illegible]TION AT THE CASINO.

Previous to the reception held at the Casino Wednesday for Miss May Murray by Mr. and Mrs. Roger F. Murray, a delightful dinner party was given for Miss May Batchelor, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George H. Batchelor, of West Seventh street, who is home from Wellesley College for the holiday season. The party was chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Detwiller. Covers were laid for twenty-two.

The dinner was served in the Casino parlors by Mrs. Lena Hellstrom. The decorations were appropriate to the season, there being an attractive arrangement of holly, Christmas bells and flowers. After the dinner the young people attended the reception and dance for Miss Murray.

C. J. ACKERMAN, JR., DEAD.

Passed Away At His Home Yesterday After a Long Illness.

Following an illness of many weeks from a pulmonary complaint, Cornelius J. Ackerman, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. Cornelius J. Ackerman, of Clinton avenue, died at his home on Monroe avenue, Wednesday. He was in his fortieth year and was employed for many years as a grocery clerk by local firms. A widow and three children survive him.

The funeral was held from Hope chapel, of which he was a member, Saturday afternoon at 3 o'clock.

Golf at Baltusrol.

At the Baltusrol Golf Club the course was fairly crowded all day on Christmas, some fifty players driving off from the first tee. At Englewood, North Jersey, Roseville, Plainfield and Forest Hill there was no lack of enthusiasts out. Tournament committees are now regretting that they had not extended their competitions up to the first of the year instead of ending with Thanksgiving Day. They based their actions on past experiences, taught by the severity of the last three winters. A year ago the country was buried beneath a foot of snow, and every golfer that could possibly get away was heading for the South. The open winter has induced golfers to remain North, and many are here who for years have spent the Christmas holidays in warmer climes.

Building Italian Boarding House.

Aleck Kane is building a house on North and Watson avenues, to be used as an Italian boarding house. The cellar has already been dug, and the rest of the work will be rushed. Mr. Kane recently purchased several lots in that locality.

High School Reception Date.

The Plainfield High School Alumni Association will hold its reception in the new High School building on February 22, Washington's birthday. It is understood that possession of the new building will be taken about February 1.

Mr. Guinn Engaged.

The engagement of Chester Guinn, formerly of Carlton avenue, but now of Newark, to Miss Cora Crosby, of that city, has been announced.

LITERARY NOTES.

Lippincott's Magazine sends hearty New Year's Greetings to its readers all over the world. And may they be happier for reading twelve numbers of the magazine during the year 1906. The January issue contains Marie Van Vorst's new novelette, "The Master of Craven." This tremendously strong tale is bound to excite—and abundantly satisfy—a wide interest wherever the name of Van Vorst is known among all classes. The author is American through and through, though she spends much time in Paris, whose atmosphere is productive of the good fiction that comes straight to the hearts of her own countrymen. Of the half-dozen short stories which follow "The Master of Craven," each one possesses a delightfully distinct significance and individualism. "The Door to the Right," by Baroness von Hutten (the creator of "Pam"), is a clever social problem storry; "Jack's Bill-Board Girl," by Norval Richardson, is a humorous theatrical story; "The House on Fayette Street," by a new writer of considerable originality, Jane Belfield, is about "Fancies, a Dragon, a Lover, Goldfish, and a Rose;" "A Missionary Appropriation," by Edith Morgan Willett, is a burglar story, concerning a portentiously funny merchant and his wife; "The Atonement," by Luellen Cass Teters, is a humorous story of love and superstition; and "The Strike in the Clarion Office," by Carloine A. Huling, is a striking "strike" story connected with a newspaper office. "Is a Surplus More of a Menace than a Surety?" by a financier who calls himself simply "W. L.," is likel yto provoke no little argument by readers in the business world. "W. L." contends that "A moderate surplus may be allowed as a wise provision to meet some unusual percentage of loss without impairment of capital, but the only other good excuse for a surplus is that in some States the capital only is taxed, and in the form of a surplus additional capital is secured free from taxation." The verse of the month is attuned to the spirit of "a sunbeam in a winter's day;" and the "Walnuts and Wine" department makes its bow to its many friends—and a Happy New Year!

The new volume of The Popular Science Monthly, which begins with the January number, opens with an illustrated article on the recent visit of the British Association to Africa, by Professor E. W. Brown, of Haverford College, who was one of the guests from the United States invited to accompany the association. The article gives an interesting account of a trip, quite unique in the history of scientific societies, some four hundred members having gone from Great Britain to South Africa for this meeting. Dr. Oscar Veblen, of Princeton University, contributes an article on the foundations of geometry, in which he explains the relations of the geometry of Euclid to a development which for the first time threatens to supersede the principles laid down two thousand years ago. Dr. Charles Keiser Edmunds, professor in the Canton Christian College, describes the content of Chinese education and the examination system which, after such a long history, was abolished in September last. A. H. Brooks, well known for his explorations in Alaska, gives an account of what has been accomplished by the United States Geological Survey in that territory. A very fully illustrated article, by E. G. Montgomery, of the University of Nebraska, describes the origin and growth of an ear of corn. T. D. A. Cockrell, of the University of Colorado, contributes a sketch of Spencer Fullerton Bairdl the grandfather of American zoology. Professor J. J. Stevenson, of New York University, discusses intercollegiate athletics from the point of view of an experienced university professor. There are shorter articles on the convocation week meetings of scientific societies, the Nobel prizes and the determination of sex.

In Success Magazine for January, Cleveland Moffett begins the second series of his powerful articles on "The Shameful Misuse of Wealth." He devotes his attention this month to the great and increasing concentration of riches in the hands of a few wealthy families, and shows how these immense fortunes are rapidly becoming so colossal as to baffle the *imagination and defy the utmost ef*forts of the owners to spend even the income. A man of towering intellect, he says, springing up in the next generation, backed by the accumulating billions of some great family, might wield a power greater than that of emperors and potentates and sway nations at his will. This second series promises to be of even greater interest than the first, which attracted so much attention a year ago. Juliet Wilbor Tompkins con*tributes* the second of her series of studies on child labor, entitled "Turning Children Into Dollars," depicting the hardships and the impositions endured by the million and a half of children who are stunting their lives by long hours of labor in the factories of this county. "Hughes—the Great Modern Inquisitor" is a character study, by J. Herbert Welch, of the man who is pursuing the insurance investigation with so much vigor. In "Ben Franklin—America's First Self-Made Man," by Hosmer Whitfield, the bi-centenary of Franklin, which occurs on January 17, is noted with a study of the character of the great patriot and the inestimable services which he rendered this country. A short resume of the progress of the present theatrical season in New York is illustrated by special photographs of a number of the leading actresses.

BEQUESTS ARE VOID BUT HEIRS WILL PAY

MUHLENBERG HOSPITAL AND CHILDREN'S *HOME GET $25,000.

Notwithstanding that the Court of Chancery has rendered a decision declaring the late Mrs. Catherine Hegeman's bequest of $25,000 to Muhlenberg Hospital and the Children's Home Association to be void, the heirs will pay over the money to the institutions. The court ruled that the clause in the will should be annulled and that the relatives should receive the property.

Mrs. Hegemen died several years ago and a provision in her will left the interest on the remainder of her estate, $25,000, to her husband on condition that at his death, he should distribute it to such charitable, benevolent or religious objects as he might select. When he died he provided that any portion of his wife's estate that came to him by virtue of the clause in her will should be divided equally between Muhlenberg Hospital and the Chidren's Home.

It was contended that this provision was probably void, and the Court of Chancery was appealed to to construe the will in that respect. The court has decreed that the provision is void, because of the incompleteness of the clause, it not being possible for Mrs. Hegeman to delegate by will the power to make the selections of the objects.

P. F. D. EXPENSES CUT DOWN $2,776 THIS YEAR

CHAIRMAN BULLOCK'S REPORT SHOWING ECONOMICAL ADMINISTRATION.

Councilman William S. Bullock, chairman of the fire and buildings committee, submitted a report at the final meeting of the Common Council Friday night showing that strict economy has been adhered to throughout the year in the fire department. The fire department expenses for 1904 were $27,233.57, and for this year $24,457.43.

These figures from the reports of City Treasurer William F. Arnold show that $2,776.14 less money for fire department purposes was spent during the current year than during 1904.

The receipts for the past year were $29,227.30, and several notes were paid off. As far as the committee is able to learn from fire department statistics the financial record for 1905 has not been equaled within the last twelve years. This report states that owing to the policy of retrenchment it has been impossible to undertake certain improvements in the department, the apparatus and equipment. The committee's recommendations are practically the same as those of Chief Doane, which have been before the Common Council before. In conclusion the report is as follows:

"When it is considered that the average expenses of Plainfield's fire department for the year 1905 were but $2,000 per month, and that $1,083 of this was for salaries, leaving $917 for the maintenance of three fire houses, with their dormitories, the care and keep of fourteen horses, the annual hydrant rental of $4,713.14, and the necessary repairs to eleven pieces of apparatus, it will be found that the cost of fire protection for our city compares most favorably with that of other municipalities of our class throughout the country."

John Wenzel, of South Second street, who has been detained at home by illness, is convalescing.

Augustus R. Fisk, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, has returned to Boston, after spending the holiday season in town.

Edward B. Rynder, of the F. L. C. Martin Automobile Company, has returned from a southern business trip in an auto.

The New York Tribune Farmer.

The Tribune Farmer has no superior anywhere in this wild world as a publication for farmers and their families. It does not, to be sure, tell how to extract green cheese from the moon, but everything worth knowing about the theory or practice of farming is treated by men recognized as experts in their various lines. But The Tribune Farmer does more than supply such valuable information. It keeps the farmer in touch with all the latest improvements by text and pictures, and pays special attention to the work being done at agricultural colleges all over the country. Besides all this it has features to interest the women folk. The price is $1 a year. For a free sample copy send a postal card to The New York Tribune, New York.

Held in New Brunswick.

Bertha Keller, arrested by the police here on a warrant issued in New Brunswick, is being held in the Middlesex county jail for robbery. She stole a watch, it is alleged, from a New Brunswick man.

CHRISTMAS TREE AT THE CHILDREN'S HOME

MANY VISITORS WITNESS THE DISTRIBUTION OF GIFTS.

The annual Christmas festivities at the Children's Home was held Wednesday at 4 o'clock p. m., when the tree was lighted and the children had their usual good time. There were many visitors and they enjoyed the occasion fully as much as the little ones. Mrs. M. E. Kimball, president of the Children's Home Association, was in charge, assisted by Mrs. Hendrickson, the matron, and other members of the association.

Promptly at 4 o'clock, when the tree was lighted, the children marched into the room singing a Christmas carol. Miss Winifred Carroll presided at the piano. The tree was generously filled with useful gifts to delight the heart of every one of the twenty-two children. There were books, toys, games, stockings, handkerchiefs and each child received an envelope containing two five-cent pieces, together with oranges, candy and other good things.

A pleasant feature was the presence of several children who during the past few months went out from the Home and who returned for the festivities.

Among those who assisted in making the affair a success were Mrs. W. E. Dunn, Mrs. E. P. Williams, Mrs. Martin I. Cooley, Mrs. J. C. Peck, Mrs. O. B. Leonard, Mrs. Francis de Lacy Hyde and Miss Serrell.

At Christmas time there were some special gifts to the Home which will help very much in carrying this worthy charitable work on to further success and the association has much cause for thankfulness for the kindly way in which the Home has been remembered.

SUNDAY-SCHOOL OFFICERS OF TRINITY

F. E. SMITH IS AGAIN CHOSEN AS SUPERINTENDENT.

Officers for the ensuing year were elected at the regular meeting of the officers and teachers of Trinity Reformed church Sunday school last night. Superintendent F. E. Smith was in the chair and conducted the business of the evening. These officers were elected:

Superintendent, F. E. Smith; assistant superintendent, Horace J. Martin, Sr.; superintendent primary department, Mrs. J. M. Tier; superintendent junior department, Mrs. L. R. Schofield; superintendent beginners' department, Mrs. Mary Beekaw; superintendent home department, Mrs. Charles E. Ball; secretary home department, Mrs. Louis M. Dunavan; secretary Sunday school, Elias H. Bird; assistant secretary, Chauncey F. Colthar; treasurer, H. E. Gayle; librarian, H. C. Van Emburgh; assistants, Fred Dunavan, Will F. Williams, Charles Zimmer and Clarence Rittenhouse; pianist, Miss Lillian A. Force; assistant, Miss Hazel Martin; executive committee, W. F. Oliver, chairman; J. P. Laire, Miss Mabel Wilson; library committee, Charles M. Dolliver, chairman; H. F. Crawford, Mrs. William G. Tunison; music committee, Miss Lillian A. Force, chairman; Miss May Randolph, Horace J. Martin, Sr., E. P. Wheeler, W. C. Leek; teachers' committee, Mrs. Cornelius Schenck, chairman; G. L. Van Emburgh, Miss Mabel Wilson.

SUFFRAGE LEAGUE FINDS A MODEL LAW

PLAINFIELD WOMEN ENDORSE A PROPOSED CHILD LABOR ACT.

The Equal Suffrage League of Plainfield and North Plainfield, at its meeting at the home of Mrs. David L. Thompson, of Rockview avenue, adopted a resolution authorizing the secretary to write to the Senator and Congressmen urging the passage of a model Child Labor Law proposed for the District of Columbia. The friends of child labor legislation hope to see the bill passed by the present Congress when it reconvenes.

A copy of the law was read by Mrs. William H. Riley and it was considered to be an excellent one and of a pattern that will meet the present-day needs in solving the question of child labor.

Mrs. Charles E. Ryder presided at the meeting in the absence of the president, Mrs. David P. Hall. Much interest was shown in the current topics' discussion that followed the business meeting, when the child labor law was introduced.

Y. M. C. A. Meet.

A committee is arranging the details of an athletic and gymnastic meet for Y. M. C. A. members, to be held the latter part of next month or early in February. Entries for the event will close January 15. There will be a gold medal for the high man in the competition and a silver medal for the second man. Silver pins will be given to the winners in the separate events.

INDICTED FOR MURDER

Rev. J. A. Watson, Negro Preacher, to be Placed on Trial For His Life.

KILLED J. CHRISTOPHER

Colored Minister Slashed Victim, Severing Two Arteries—Defendant to be Tried at January Term.

Rev. James Allen Watson, the itinerant negro minister, was indicted for murder by the Somerset County Grand Jury Wednesday for the killing of James Christopher, another negro, in North Plainfield, October 28. He will be arraigned for trial during the January term of court.

Watson and his alleged victim occupied the same house on Warren street and quarrelled over their right to use a stove in the kitchen. Christopher's wife joined in the quarrel and a rough and tumble fight followed in the kitchen, finally shifting to the front part of the house, the combatants tumbling out on the porch.

Max Michaelson, a neighbor, swore before the Grand Jury that he had separated the negroes and that Christopher walked down the street. Michaelson held the preacher who drew a razor from his pocket and exclaimed: "I've got a razor and I am going to cut that nigger." When Michaelson saw the weapon he released his hold. Watson ran after Christopher, he said, and slashed him on both arms. Both cuts severed large arteries and Christopher died as he was being taken to Muhlenberg Hospital.

In his plea before the jury, Watson claimed self defense.

It is reported that Alvah A. Clark will be assigned by the court as counsel for Watson. Until the appointment is made no date will be set for the prisoner's arraignment.

BANK'S ARRANGEMENT MADE WORK FOR CARRIERS

SPECIAL ARRANGEMENTS HAD TO BE MADE TO CANCEL THE 4,000 STAMPS.

One of the biggest batches of mail matter handled at the postoffice in the Christmas rush came from the City National Bank. The institution sent out 4,000 combination pencil and penholders as its concrete Christmas greeting to depositors and friends.

Special arrangements had to be made to handle the batch because the bank wanted the gifts delivered on Christmas day. They were sent out in ordinary letter envelopes at letter rates.

In order to facilitate the disposition of the holders, the 4,000 envelopes, stamped and addressed, but minus the contents, passed through the cancellers' hands two nights before Christmas. They were then returned to the bank and the clerks there enclosed the holders and sealed the flaps. They were all delivered on time Christmas Day, but they added noticeably to the work of the carriers. The latter will make faces yet if the City Bank's Christmas souvenir is made a subject of conversation in their hearing.

Grand Chaplain, I. O. O. F.

By a process very unusual in the proceedings of New Jersey Odd Fellows, Rev. Benjamin C. Lippincott, of North Long Branch, is to be made grand chaplain of the order. He was the choice for that position of Grand Master Wesley B. Stout at the late session of the grand lodge, but at that time he was not a past grand, and on that account was not eligible to grand lodge office. He was, however, the noble grand of a lodge in his home city and this afforded a solution of the problem. By a special dispensation of the grand lodge he is to be permitted to resign from the place of noble grand, with past master honors. Then, about January 15, he will be appointed as grand chaplain. He will succeed Rev. Dr. J. K. Manning, of Trenton.

W. E. Stininger Marries.

Wilson E. Stininger, of 476 West Front street, this city, and Miss Catherine O'Brien, of Elizabeth, were married yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Stella C. Hartley, of West Front street. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. C. McCrea, pastor of the First M. E. church in the presence of the family and a few friends. The couple will reside in this city, where the groom is employed as a clerk in one of the stores.

erville; Miss Louise Taylor, Miss Marguerite Pierson, Dr. H. Morton Pierson and William Stout, of Ro*selle; Miss Edith Cairns, Miss Grace* Wilcox, Miss Helen Hassel, Miss May Batchelor, Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Detwiller, Louis I. Wightman, Archibald Brakeley, Harry Slausson, William Hobby, of Plainfield, and Albert L. Kennelly, of Jersey City.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Edith Cairns, of West Fifth street, and Lucius I. Wightman, of Carlton avenue.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVALS

Sunday-Schools Entertainments in Many Instances More Elaborate Than Ever Before.

CAROLS AND GIFTS

Addresses, Recitations and Readings on the Programmes—Xmas Trees at Several Celebrations.

(From The Daily Press of Dec. 29.)

Christmas festivals were held in was arraigned in court last Friday beard, Adam Beek appeared Thursjunior departments in one or two instances having their celebration in the day time. Following are brief accounts of these exercises:

Park Avenue Baptist.

The Sunday-school room of the Park Avenue Baptist church was crowded to overflowing last night, when members of the school presented a Christmas cantata entitled "Santa Claus' Defenders." The music was catchy, the characters amusing and everyone had a good time. Miss Florence G. Hawkins, superintendent of the school, was in charge. Miss Mary Clark presided at the piano. After the cantata, candy was distributed to the school and presents to the primary department.

The characters for the cantata were as follows:

"Mr. Discontent," Joseph M. Hawkins; "Harry," Herbert Brokaw; "Herman," Albert Hardcastle; "Grimmy," newsboy, Martin Stutsman; "Amos," Will Doane; "Baker," Augustus Nash; "Edith," Arline Brown; "Maggie," waif, Mary Hale; "Nita," Elinore Stutsman; "Peace," Nettie Stillman; "Amelia," Miss Florence Smalley; "Good-Will," Miss Anna Clark; "Love," Miss Alice Brown; spinsters, "Martha," Miss Violet VanWinkle; "Ann," Miss Elma Runyon; "Jane," Mrs. Charles Steiner; "Sue," Miss Cora Brokaw; old ladies, the Misses Bessie Giles, Emily Runyon, Olive DeLany, Elmira Runyon, Louise Harral, Georgie Chamberlin, May Kelly, Mrs. Mary Mawhinney; "fairy sylph," Miss Mabel Stutsman; "magic dolls," the Misses Isabel von Brakle, Mary Hale, Jessie Hale, Florence Moffett; "queen of sprites," Miss Arline Brown; chorus of winter sprites; "sailor boys," Will Boys, Harry Thompson, Augustus Nash, Albert Hardcastle, Edmund Templin, Harry Douglas, Stuart Freeman and Howard Freeman.

Joseph C. Martin was Santa Claus, and distributed gifts. During the entertainment a chorus comprising eighteen girls, sang several selections.

Congregational.

A long and varied programme, amid decorations unusually striking, marked the entertainment of the Congregational Sunday-school last night. In addition to carols and the primary exercises there was a medley by four of the advanced classes, who presented programmes of their own arrangement for the honor of having been the most entertaining. The decorations were very striking, a noticeable feature being a profusion of Southern smilax.

The carols and the primary class exercises were first. In the exercises Russell Tomlinson, Wesley Barrett, Harold Tomlinson, Donald Updike, and Carter Goodrich took part; Esther Hellstrom and Helen Weseman sang the solo parts in a slumber song.

The competitive medley opened with "A Giving Cantata," by Mrs. Phillip Suffern's class. The cast represented sorts of givers—Red Cross nurses, grocerymen and the like—and each brought in some useful article, which will be sent to the Italian mission in New York in which the church is interested. Those who took part in the cantata were: Martine Weeks, Emma VanAlstyne, May Mattison, Marguerite Fischer, Mabel Runyon, Amy Winant, Katherine Day, Harold Tomlinson, Phillip Phillips, and Wesley Barrett.

The second offering in the competition came from the classes of Miss Fuller and R. D. Rice in combination. Frank O. Bristol, a clever entertainer, appeared for them in impersonations.

Mrs. Updike's class presented "The Toys' Rebellion," the scene of which was laid in Kris Kringle's workshop. Those who took part were: Harold Millar, Marjory Phillips, Ethel VanZandt, Myra Emmons, Lillian Cronkite, Ethel Noe, Maud Emmons, Vreeland VanAlstyne, Helen Palmer, Marion Winant, Roy Fuller, Lloyd Fischer, Holmes Clawson, Helen Weseman, Ethel Hellstrom and Ruth Fuller.

Gifts for the pupils were presented by Rev. C. L. Goodrich, the pastor. Prizes for perfect attendance during the year were given to Nettie Steiner, Myra Emmons, Emma VanAlstyne, George Dean, Stanley Bates. George Dean, who is sexton of the church, was presented with $10 in gold by the school.

A collection for the Italian mission was taken, and this will go with a lot of useful things contributed by the school and church members.

First Baptist.

The members of the primary and junior departments of the First Baptist church Sunday-school had their Christmas entertainment yesterday afternoon. A programme of recitations and songs by the little ones helped to pass an enjoyable time. Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent, assisted by Miss Edith Cairns, superintendent of the junior department, and the other teachers of the school were in charge. A feature was a Christmas tree which was lighted after the entertainment when gifts were distributed to the children.

This programme was presented:

Opening address, Edith Rickert; song by the primary department; recitation, "Days We Love Best," Edna White, Dorothy Lunger, Elmer Rickert, Harold Martin, Elsie Moore and Elma Coons; recitation, "Christmas Greeting," Florence Coons; "A Question," Dorothy Hall; song, primary class; piano duett, Lawrence and Elmer French; recitation, girls from the junior department; recitation, Gertrude King; song, May VanCamp and Loraina Dunn; song, junior department; song, Mildred Weiss, Dorothy Lee, Anna Sherwin, Erma Dobbins, Caroline Gernert, Mary Buchanan, Helen Vanderhoef and Catherine Endress; piano solo, Elmer French; recitations, Junior VanDeventer, Edith Rickert, Florence Neal; song, primary class; recitations, "Kris Kringle," Lawrence French, Herbert Hillman and Emma Mantz; song, "Happy New Year to You," school.

Then followed the distribution of dolls to the girls and hockey sticks to the boys.

The entertainment for the main school was given in the evening, when under the direction of William Holmes, members of the Sunday-school presented a Christmas cantata entitled "The Old Fashioned Santa Claus." It told of the perplexities of Santa Claus in deciding upon how he should make his annual visit. Whether he should use an auto, bicycle or reindeer and sleigh, much to the delight of the children.

The various parts were exceptionally well taken, the characters being as follows:

Santa Claus, William Holmes; Annabel, Miss Josephine Serrell; Jack Frost, Elmer D. Cutting; Alfred Tennyson Longfellow Jones, Stanley Robins; Sammy Slim, Lawrence French; Silas Stout, Ernest Conover; Amy, Miss Violet VanWinkle; Ethel, Miss Beulah VanWinkle; elfs, Elmer French, Harold Martin, Ralph Smalley; flower girls, the Misses Elizabeth McGee, Marion Rocap, Carrie Demler, Alice Drake, Julia Marx and Helen Pierce; fairies, Emeline Manning, Lillian VanWinkle, Mabel Douglass, Loraine Dunn, Lillian Fountain, Florence Neal and Elizabeth Winn; bootblacks, Russel Miller, Herbert Hillman, Malcomb Krewson, Egbert Fountain. Besides those mentioned there was a large number of children from the primary department who took a general part and helped to make the cantata a success. The music was very attractive and the solo parts taken by the leading characters as well as the chorus won much applause.

After the entertainment there was distribution of candy under the direction of the assistant superintendent, Frank Jones, assisted by Harold Serrell.

Trinity Reformed.

The little folks of the primary department of Trinity Reformed church Sunday-school fully enjoyed their Christmas exercises held in the lecture room of the church yesterday afternoon. The affair, which was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier, superintendent, assisted by the teachers, was very informal.

The programme comprised recitations by Jack Rogers, Raymond Stevens, Harold and Alfred Willett, Theodosia Vail, Louise Seader, Grace Vail, Ella Porter, Lillian Schleif, Clara Lee, Vivian Dunn, Madeline Blair, Margaret Hope and Beatrice Tier. There were also piano solos by Ernest Stevens and Elsie Tier.

After the entertainment there was a general good time and distribution of gifts. The girls received sets of glass dishes and the boys received games. After the serving of refreshments the happy affair terminated.

In the evening the main school and its friends gathered in the lecture room and were entertained by clever musical artists and an impersonator from New York. Superintendent F. E. Smith was in charge of the affair.

The first part of the evening was occupied by Haley and Bond, who gave a programme of music on the banjo, bottles, etc. They concluded their portion of the programme with an amusing sketch in which one was endeavoring to engage the other to take the leading part in a drama. There were many ludicrous incidents and the audience was continually kept in good humor.

Frank Sherman entertained during the latter part of the programme with songs and impersonations, all of which were greatly enjoyed. Miss Hazel Martin accompanied on the piano in a very satisfactory manner. The artists for the entertainment were furnished by Harvey R. Thorn.

Following the programme, there was a distribution of candy to every member of the school and home department.

Monroe Avenue.

A large gathering of pupils and parents at the Monroe Avenue church witnessed the presentation of an elaborate cantata, "Santa Claus in Japan." As the title suggests, it depicted the trials and tribulations of the good old fellow in his effort to please the little brown children in the Flowery Kingdom and permitted the introduction of numerous pretty costumes. There were several individual solos and the chorus singing showed careful training.

The characters were taken as follows: Two Americans, Robert Booth and Cora Kennedy; Japanese schoolmates, the Misses Carrie and Sadie Brouwer and Dorothy Manning, Archie Thompson, Jack Gray and Edward Tovell; broomstick fairies, Violet Lindaberry, Ruth Lynn, Otto Moore and Albert Rowe; "Santa Claus," Mr. Dodd; "The Song of the Screen," Ada Thompson, Cora Lee, Bessie Gunzelman, Rhoda Gray, Edith Gray, Maude Mundy and Marion Thompson; "The Lantern Bearers," Florence Brown, Agnes Brown, Mary Matthews, Stella Rink, Eleanor and Ruth Thompson, Minnie Gunzelman, Sadie and Carrie Brouwer and Avis Aldrich; flower girls, Ethel Gerhole, Mabel Lant, Edith Jeffery, Elizabeth Seal, Adeline and Margaret Miner, May Reynolds, Violat Mundy and Ethel Hall.

Theentire school sang carols and at the close of the entertainment candy and oranges were distributed.

The committee which arranged had charge of the affair comprised Rev. George Mooney, Mrs. N. Mansfield Smith, Miss Charlotte Aldrich and Mr. Dodd.

First M. E.

There were two entertainments at the First M. E. school, the primary and junior departments meeting in Vincent chapel in the afternoon and the seniors at night. For the former the programme was as follows:

Song, "Away in the Manger," by the Little Beginners' class; recitations, Caryl Dunavan and Elizabeth Hicks; song, "Twinkle, Twinkle, Little Star," Frank Rowley and Charlotte Skiff; recitation, Norman McGee; song, Edward Crone; Bible verses, Blanche McVoy, Edith Little, Russel Beekman and Hoyt Tomkinson; recitation, Elton Greenleaf; song, "Once a Golden Star," primary class; exercises by Charles McCrea, Edith Little, Russel Beekman and Ruth Lynn. The entertainment was concluded by the children gathering in the center of the room and playing games.

At night the senior department enjoyed moving pictures in charge of W. S. Miller, of New York. Among the films shown were "The Ice Cream Eater," "Drama in the Air," "Indians and Cowboys," "Around Port Arthur," "Fighting the Flames" and "the Great Bank Robbery." In the presentation of gifts Sexton Isaac Kennedy received a $10 gold piece and Miss Gertrude Sharp, the pianist, a handsome chair.

Superintendent James R. Joy was in charge of the programme.

Bethel Chapel.

The Christmas entertainment at Bethel chapel last night consisted of recitations by the Misses Anna and Madeline Fisher and Miss Mabel Potter, songs by a chorus of boys, and the appearance of Santa Claus down the chimney. Upon his arrival he was welcomed with a song by the primary department. Santa distributed useful gifts to all the pupils of the school, while the teachers were not forgotten. A. W. Duxbury, superintendent, was in charge. Ice cream and cake were also served.

Mt. Olive Church.

The Christmas programme at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last night comprised recitations and the singing of carols by the Sunday school. There was a tree and Santa Claus generously distributed presents to the children. Rev. Dr. E. E. Jackson, pastor, and Nathan J. Pollard, superintendent of the school, had charge of the exercises.

Holy Cross Church.

Gifts for the Children's Home were piled at the foot of the Christmas tree of Holy Cross P. E. church Sunday-school, last night. The gifts, in the form of pound packages of various edibles, were brought by the pupils. They were impressed with the beatitude that it is more blessed to give than to receive and they brought the gifts for the Home in place of getting things themselves.

The school held a carol service, which attracted a large congregation. Rev. George A. Warner, the rector, delivered a brief sermon on the Christmas spirit. Boxes of candy were distributed, so that the pupils had a little of the minor blessedness as well as the other kind.

Warren Chapel.

Moving pictures by the Kinetograph Company, of New York, constituted the entertainment at Warren chapel both afternoon and evening. A variety of scenes and actions were shown and both young and old were delighted. One picture, "A Disaster at Sea," was especially good. Refreshments were served at the close.

The committee which had the affair in charge consisted of Mrs. George Demarest, chairman; Mrs. William Demarest, Mrs. Gibson Smith, Mrs. Benjamin Moore, Mrs. Newmiller, Mrs. Reynolds, Mrs. Taynor, Mrs. Hansen and Mrs. Wakefield.

Friends.

The First-day school of the Friends meeting held its annual Christmas entertainment at the meeting-house on Watchung avenue, when the usual interesting programme of recitations and readings was given under the direction of Margaret Vail, superintendent. There was a large gatherings of members of the school and friends.

The programme included recitations by Carlton Vail, Alice Vail, Halbert Hutchinson, Elsie Naylor, Mildred Poole, Helen Poole, Charles Kiederling and Hattie Nischwitz. There were also readings by Margaret Vail, Marjorie Cooley, Mabel Vail, Alveretta Vail.

After the rendition of the programme all adjourned to the upper room where ice cream and cake were served. The members of the school then returned to their accustomed places and received boxes of candy and oranges. An unusual feature this year was a "bag of mysteries." Each member of the school was given an opportunity to pull one of the many strings leading to the large bag, and to their surprise received a present.

The entertainment committee comprised Mrs. Harry G. Adams, Mrs. Elizabeth Ogden, Mrs. Sarah Hutchinson, Miss Margaret Vail, while those in charge of the refreshments were Mrs. Clara Rushmore, Mrs. Cornelia Gavett and Clarence B. Vail.

St. Stephen's P. E.

A carol and prayer service in observance of Christmastide was held by the children of St. Stephen's P. E. church, Netherwood, yesterday afternoon. Rev. A. S. Peck, the rector, delivered a brief address, and distributed boxes of candy to all the children. Every child present, whether a regular attendant or not, received a box. The feature of the unusually pretty decorations was a giant Christmas tree; it was as big a tree as could be gotten into the church.

Grace P. E. Church.

The Sunday-school of Grace P. E. church had a supper last night to mark its observance of Yuletide. The tables were spread in two rooms of the parish house, and covers were laid for 100.

Before the supper, the school held a carol service in the assembly room, led by the rector, Rev. E. V. Stevenson. Books and other gifts were distributed by Mr. Stevenson and Mr. Fleming.

After the supper, which was served by a committee of the teachers, an hour of informal sport was enjoyed, with games and other forms of jollity. The affair lasted from 5 to 8 o'clock.

First Presbyterian.

The primary department of the First Presbyterian church Sunday school held its Christmas entertainment yesterday afternoon in the chapel. There was a programme of recitations and the singing of carols, after which the children received gifts from the Christmas tree. The affair was informal and the little ones had a jolly time of it.

The entertainment for the main school was held in the evening. The chief attraction was H. Warren Rankin, prestidigitator, of Sandford avenue. He is very clever as a sleight-of-hand artist. He mystified and amused his audience for over an hour. A feature of the programme was the singing of F. C. Iglehart, Jr., bass of the church choir. He was accompanied by Clifford A. Braider on the piano. In the afternoon the children received candy and books and in the evening each member of the school received boxes of candy. Superintendent I. B. Hill was in charge.

Grace M. E. Church.

Grace M. E. church had two entertainments, one in the afternoon for the primary department and the other in the evening for the main school. In the afternoon Miss Belle Lunger had charge and a programme of songs and recitations was given. Santa Claus, in the person, of Andrew Wilson, distributed gifts.

At night there was a futher programme of carol singing, recitations and exercises, following a short address of welcome by Rev. Dr. Persons. Santa Claus in this instance was impersonated by Benjamin Schuck, who made plenty of fun with his clever antics. Beside the giving of candy and oranges, teachers and classes exchanged presents.

The committee in charge at night was Miss Mabel Stevens, chairman; Miss Winifred Carroll and Mrs. Giddes.

Crescent Avenue Church.

A professional sleight-of-hand performer furnished the entertainment both afternoon and evening at the Crescent Avenue church. Superintendent William D. Murray had charge of the primary department and which met in the afternoon.

Following the completion of the night programme, refreshments were served by a committee of which Mrs. John G. Foster was chairman.

JOKERS REMOVED HIS BEARD WHILE HE SLEPT.

Now Adam Beek Has to Prove His Identity to His Best Friends.

After hiding his features for three months behind an unusually bushy beard, Adam Beek appeared yesterday afternoon minus his hirsute adornment. It was not his wish that it should be removed, but when he fell asleep in a North avenue place the "fir," as it is called in street parlance, offered too tempting a bait for several jokers.

A pair of shears was hastily secured and sufficient vigorous snips had been given to remove one side of Adam's disguise before he awoke. When he recoverd from his surprise and excitement there was nothing for him to do but visit a barber and have the remnants properly eradicated. Today his friends pass him by without a sign of recognition, and when he does make himself known he has to spend several minutes in denying that he had the beard shaved in order to have the fashionable smooth face.

PAINTING HIDES STRANGE DRAMA

GREAT WORK OF ART ALMOST LEADS TO TRAGEDY.

BATTLE BESIDE DEATHBED

Celebrated Canvas Results in Present of Sword from Mikado Which Nearly Causes Destruction of Two Men.

Chicago.—In the soft tones and mellow shadings of a painting just hung at the Art Institute lies concealed a tragedy as strange as fiction. In creating the painting—its formal title is "Niko Gate to the Royal Tombs"—the artist, not unlike Frankenstein, brought into being a thing that almost led to his own destruction.

The first act of the weird drama was laid in Japan, where the mikado, as an evidence of his appreciation of the work of John Devereux York, of Chicago, who painted the "Niko Gate," presented the artist with a sword which for centuries had been an heirloom of the imperial family. Next the scene shifted to Chicago, where the artist attempted to kill himself at the bedside of his dying mother with the selfsame blade. In a struggle to disarm him his uncle was wounded almost to death.

The curtain scene was in St. Luke's hospital, where York, no longer in a suicidal mood, spent night and day at the bedside of the wounded uncle. By tender nursing the patient was saved. The uncle is Holger de Roode, a well-known insurance man.

The revelation of the tragedy did not become known until the other night, though the action was several weeks ago. The occasion was when Mr. York's mother, Mrs. E. J. T. Brooke, lay dying at her home. Physicians said she could not recover. Mr. York, a son by a former marriage, had watched at her bedside constantly for a week, and when the doctors announced that she must die, he determined to die with her.

In the room where his mother lay unconscious was a case containing bric-a-brac which Mr. York had gathered in his travels through Europe and the orient. Among the articles was the treasured sword given him by the mikado.

Mr. de Roode, a brother of Mrs. Brooke, was bending over his dying sister when he saw his nephew take the sword from the case.

The artist made an attempt to thrust the blade into his body, and Mr. de Roode sprang at him and grasped the keen-edged weapon. In the struggle to wrest it from the man so intent on committing suicide the weapon was plunged into Mr. de Roode's body, perforating the abdomen.

Mr. de Roode fell to the floor. Blood streamed from the wound in a torrent. Mr. York suddenly regained his senses and ran to a telephone. He called a physician, and the injured man was taken at once to the hospital, where he lay four weeks hovering between life and death. He recovered, and is now able to attend to his business, although still suffering from the wound.

Mrs. Brooke, mother of Artist York, never regained consciousness, and died without knowing of her son's attempt to kill himself, which nearly cost the life of her brother.

Mr. de Roode's wife is an invalid, and until his complete recovery the unfortunate affair was kept from her for fear the news would cause her death.

During the time he was in the hospital a story was invented that he was called to New York on business for the firm.

Mr. York is 40 years old and was born in Nashville, Tenn. He studied at the Ecole des Beaux Arts, the Julian academy and with Raphael Collin, Paris. He received honorable mention for work exhibited in the Ecole des Beaux Arts, 1892, and in Tokio, Japan, 1901.

"My nephew was beside himself when the doctors told him his mother could not live," Mr. de Roode told a friend, "and he thought there was nothing left for him in life. Fortunately I was in the room and grasped the sword from his hands. When he saw what had been done he recovered his reason immediately and did all in his power to relieve me. He deplored the accident more than anybody else, I think, and my love for him was only strengthened."

WOULD WIPE OUT NOOSE; ELECTROCUTION FAVORED.

Senator Wakelee May Introduce Bill and So May Also Assemblyman Berg.

It seems doubtful just what sort of legislation is to be attempted at the opening of the session regarding the death sentence in this State. The alleged brutal failure to hang a criminal promptly in Hudson county the other day and the desire to prevent the same sort of sentence being executed upon the convicted women murderers in Bergen county have apparently aroused considerable feeling all over the State, as well as in the localities where the crimes were committed. The Bergen county idea, as represented by Senator Wakelee, seems to be the immediate passage of a measure to insure the abolition of hanging. The aim of Mr. Wakelee does not seem to include the abolition of capital punishment, although he is understood to favor that.

It is understood that nearly every response was in favor of electricity. William P. Martin, Assemblyman-elect from Essex, for instance, replied that as a member of the New York bar he had given the subject considerable study, and was satisfied that electricity was much preferable to the hangman's noose in executions. It would look, therefore, as though there would be little difficulty in the speedy passage of a measure favoring the adoption of executions by electricity. Yet several things should be borne in mind in that connection, it is pointed out. Execution by electricity is much more expensive than hanging, and the apparatus for such a form of execution could not be placed in every county jail. All executions, if the electric process was adopted, would have to take place in oraround the State Prison, at Trenton, just as in New York State they only take place at the State prisons at Ossining and Auburn.

The first cost would be considerable, and might be objected to by the amateur economists who are so thick around the State House. While the sheriffs would probably be relieved to have the danger attendant on hanging removed from among the duties of their office, the State Prison authorities might strenuously object, and Trentonians might not care to have their city the center of executions. If some one wants to object seriously to the passage of a bill such as Mr. Wakelee proposes the delay might be serious to the woman whose death is due three days after the Legislature convenes.

As to the abolition of capital punishment, it will be fought very hard, unless there has been a big change in public sentiment within recent ears. Yet Assemblyman-elect Herman A. Berg, of Hudson county, purposes to make the attempt. He intends to introduce a bill on the opening day providing that imprisonment for life or a long term of years shall take the place of hanging.

NEGRO PREACHER PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO MURDER.

Watson to Be Tried for his Life on February 13.

Rev. James Watson, the colored preacher from North Plainfield, who was indicted by the Somerset County Grand Jury on a charge of murder, was arraigned in court this morning and entered a plea of not guilty. It was announced that his trial would begin on Tuesday, February 13.

The Grand Jury completed its labors at noon and seventeen indictments were returned to the court. The jurors were then discharged.

Judge Schenck granted a liquor license to Frank and Fred Ballentine for a new forty-room hotel which has just been completed at Bernardsville.

E. S. Hunt Promoted.

The Waterbury (Conn.) American, under date of December 22, contains an excellent picture of Edwin S. Hunt, together, with an interesting account of his life, with a reference to his recent promotion to the position of assistant treasurer of the Waterbury Savings Bank. Mr. Hunt was born in Charleston, N. H., and was graduated from Amherst College with the class of 1890. For three years Mr. Hunt was a teacher in the Plainfield High School and was graduated from the Columbia University Law School in the class of 1895. He practiced law in New York for six years, after which he went to Waterbury.

Daughters of America Elect.

Martha Washington Council, Daughters of Amercia, has elected these officers for the coming year: Councillor, Mrs. Mary Hoffman; vice-councillor, Charles Taynor; associate councillor, Miss Florence Walsh; associate vice-councillor, Mrs. Hannah Thompson; conductor, Miss Daisy Gary; warden, Miss Ethel Bush; inside sentinel, Miss Florence Moorehouse; outside sentinel, W. F. Walsh; representative to Funeral Benefit Association, Mrs. Mary Niles. The officers will be installed on Saturday night, January 13.

Fractured Her Leg.

Mrs. David Anguerbauer, of Liberty street, is confined to her home with a fractured leg, the result of falling off the back porch at her home Wednesday night. A dog had left a bone on the porch and Mrs. Anguerbauer accidently walked on it and was thrown the full length of the steps. She was assisted to the house. Drs. Pettis and Clawson were summoned and set the bones, which were found to be fractured in two places. Mrs. Anguerbauer will be kept at home for several weeks.

LIBEL TRIAL OF EDITOR

One of the Pleas of Cranford Man's Defense is Stricken Out of Court.

CHARGES PRIVILEGED

Accusations Had Been Made Against School Principal Thomas—Decision of Justice Fort an Important One.

In the case of Wendell M. Thomas vs. John A. Potter, editor of the Cranford Chronicle, an action for libel, Attorney Connolly, of Elizabeth, as counsel for the defendant, has received notice that Supreme Court Justice Fort, sitting in Newark, had rendered a decision granting a motion of the counsel for plaintiff that one of two pleas entered by the defendant be stricken out, on the ground that it was frivolous. The decision is an important one, as it deals with the question as to how far a newspaper may go in the publication of charges against a public official.

The proceedings against Editor Potter were begun about three years ago, and the matter has been fought in the courts ever since. In a brief in support of the plea in question Lawyer Connolly set forth that the plaintiff, at the time of the publication of the alleged libel, was the supervising principal of the Cranford public school, and was under the jurisdiction of the Board of Education of Cranford. On May 31, 1902, a complaint, in the form of a petition to the board, was made by citizens, charging the plaintiff with offenses in the management of the school system which the complainants regarded as sufficient for the board to annul the contract with the principal. On June 3 following, the Cranford Chronicle published the charges against the principal, with letters presented to the board in favor of and against him, without comment. The charges and letters were published in full as they were presented to the board.

Counsel for the defense cited the following rules from the American and English Encyclopaedia of Law as governing the case: "While it has been held that the publication of matter defamatory of an individual is not privileged merely because the libel is contained in a fair report of what occurred at a meeting held for public purposes, yet it seems to be the prevailing rule that proceedings of public interest need not be those of a judicial or legislative body to render a fair report thereof privileged.

"A communication in regard to the character or conduct of a public official is privileged if addressed to a functionary having the authority to redress grievances or remove the official from office."

Counsel for the defense also urged that the question before the court had been settled in our own State by the Court of Errors, which laid down the law as follows:

"Memorials to officers of State respecting the conduct of magistrates and officers, comments by electors upon the character of candidates for office, communications in matters of public interest in which the public generally is concerned, communications in the interest of third persons, or for the protection of the parties' own interest, communications respecting the character of servants, or the credit and responsibility of tradesmen, or made in the performance of social, moral or legal duties, come within the class of privileged communications. A criticism of the public acts of a candidate for office may be inserted in a public newspaper or be proclaimed by circular, but such publicity given to comments derogatory to the character of a servant, or to the financial standing of a trader would be illegal."

Justice Lippincott's opinion of the duties of the press was also cited, as follows:

"In these days and under our civilization it is the duty of a publisher of a newspaper, mindful of his high trust as the manager of a vast power for good or evil, doing it with no evil intent, but with good motives, to at all times publish the truth in relation to public concerns, to publish proceedings and official acts and public conduct of officials, and it is not libelous at any time to publish a fair comment upon persons who submit tameselves to public criticism as public speakers and teachers, and all those who come within the range of public characters of this class."

The decision of Justice Fort ends the matter as far as the Supreme Court is concerned, for the present. The case will now come up for trial before a jury at the next term of court.

New Money Order System.

The new money order system will not go into effect here until February 1. It was expected that the new system would go into effect January 1, but it has been put off until the old blanks run out. The new money order blanks will be somewhat different from the old ones, and it will be impossible for swindlers to raise the amount, as has been done extensively throughout the country. The amount of money will be written in full and not in figures as heretofore. The new system has been in effect in Elizabeth, Plainfield, Newark and other places for some time.—New Brunswick Home News.

ORGANIZATION'S FORCES ARE AGAIN IN CONTROL

Presiding Officers and Heads of Street and Fire Committees the same as in 1904.

ALMOST IGNORE TYLER

MacMurray Unanimously Reappointed City Clerk—Daniel Chairman of Finance Committee.

Without any unnecessary delay the 1906 Common Council met promptly Monday to organize for the year. All of the new members were present. The only absent councilmen being W. S. Tyler and Leslie M. Daniel. Many friends of the new body occupied seats in the lobby and watched the opening proceedings with considerable interest. Aside from perfecting an organization and referring matters left over from last year to the new committees, little else was done.

The first business was that of electing a president. Ralph I. Tolles was chosen and Councilmen Daniel F. Ginna and Herbert Buxton were appointed to escort the new presiding officer to the chair. Upon his arrival there a handsome basket of roses awaited him. It was the gift of the genial president's First ward friends, and a hearty handclapping was accorded Mr. Tolles upon its presentation. The president thanked his friends for the remembrance.

Mr. Gloak introduced several resolutions, the first of which was that appointing James T. MacMurray city clerk for a term of three years. He received the unanimous vote of the Common Council, as did also Jacob T. Dunham, who was appointed janitor for the coming year. Mr. Gloak gave notice that at the next regular meeting he would move that the rules of order for 1905 be the by-laws of the Common Council for 1906, with a few amendments where repetition occurred and which were unimportant except in the case where the license and police committees were separated, the former being composed of three members and the latter of five members.

George B. Wean was appointed stenographer and copyist for the coming year at a salary of $400, and the city clerk was authorized to secure the committee cards and other supplies for the year. On Mr. Gloak's resolution The Daily Press and the the Courier-News were made the official newspapers of the city for the coming year.

President Tolles announced the committees for the years as follows:

Finance—Leslie M. Daniel, chairman; Henry D. Hibbard, Herbert Buxton, Charles C. Randolph.

Streets and Sewers—William L. Gloak, chairman; Leslie M. Daniel, Daniel F. Ginna, Charles C. Randolph, Herbert Buxton.

Fire and Buildings—George P. Mellick, chairman; Frank D. Randolph, Francis L. Montgomery, Herbert Buxton, William L. Gloak.

Public Affairs—Herbert Buxton, chairman; Leslie M. Daniel, George P. Mellick, William L. Gloak, Frank D. Randolph.

Lights and Trees—Henry D. Hibbard, chairman; Francis L. Montgomery, William S. Tyler.

Alms—Charles C. Randolph, chairman, Francis L. Montgomery, William S. Tyler.

License—Francis L. Montgomery, chairman; William S. Tyler, Daniel F. Ginna.

Auditing—William S. Tyler, chairman; Charles C. Randolph, Henry D. Hibbard.

Mr. Gloak offered a resolution appropriating $3,000 for the use of the streets and sewers committee, until the regular appropriations are fixed for the year. This was adopted.

A lengthy communication was received from Mrs. Mary M. Lane regarding a former petition presented by her to the Common Council to change the name of Lane avenue to Laing avenue, in honor of a relative, Captain Benjamin Laing, who performed conspicuous service in the Revolutionary War. She urged that the change be made and offered to stand any expense that might be incurred thereby. Mrs. Lane is the widow of W. B. T. Lane, and in her communication she gave a brief historical sketch of her ancestors showing her reasons for her request. The matter was referred to the street committee.

George H. Goddard, on behalf of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital, petitioned the Common Council to lay a stone walk on Park avenue, near Randolph road. This was referred to the street committee. P. J. Reville objected to an assessment for a dog tax, claiming that he never owned a dog, and he also protested against a tax levied on his mother for cleaning the sidewalk of ice and snow, claiming that the city never performed such work for her.

R. I. TOLLES,
President Common Council.

The matters were referred to the proper committee.

Mayor James F. Buckle appointed Dr. T. S. Davis and F. W. Dunn for full terms of two years to succeed themselves as members of the Board of Health, and Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow for full term of three years as city physician, to succeed himself. The appointments were confirmed.

The Mayor also returned with his veto the southside sanitary sewer ordinance adopted on third reading by the last Common Council, giving as his reasons therefor that Joseph O. Osgood, the consulting engineer, is new engaged on certain plans for this improvement and that an important legal point had been raised which might necessitate a considerable change.

Mr. Mellick wanted to know if the matter could not be laid on the table until another meeting, and the president suggested that the ordinance and veto be received and filed. It will be disposed of later.

The Board of Health, through its president, Charles J. Fisk, asked for an appropriation of $5,000 for the coming year and also that $1,000 be set aside for its use until such appropriation is made. The matters were referred to the finance commitee.

This finished the business and an adjournment was taken to Monday night, January 8.

ANNUAL PROMOTIONS AT TRINITY REFORMED CHURCH.

Interesting Exercises Mark the Year-ly Advancement of Pupils.

The annual promotion of children in Trinity Reformed church Sunday school took place Sunday afternoon. Superintendent F. E. Smith was in charge of the interesting exercises, which were attended by many parents and friends of the school. During the exercises each boy and girl took an individual part, and at the close the pastor, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, presented a diploma to each child promoted and congratulated the children in a pleasing address. The graduation took place after the regular Sunday school session. Mrs. J. M. Tier is superintendent of the primary department, Miss Mary Berkaw has charge of the beginners' department and Mrs. L. R. Schofield that of the junior department.

From Primary to Junior Department—Della Lillian Smith, Lulu Tunison Trewin, Florence Alma Kersting, Helen Augusta Hummell, Ida Marie Hummell, Gretchen Van Zandt, Alice Cross Thatcher, Irene Samuels, Margaret Stevens Neal, Henrietta Hilda Enander, Agnes McNeil Brown, Elsa Hille, Helen Smith, Horace Melvin Van Arsdale, Howard Van Arsdale, William LeRoy, Theodore Layton.

From Junior to Intermediate Department—Ida Van Arsdale, Gertrude Schleif, Cora Gray, Ethel Vail, Agnes Mantz, Jessie Smith, Ruth Van Sickle, Milward Dennis, Annette Wilson, Sadie Dufficy, Edna Stillwell, David Scribner, Harold Schenck, Russell Vail, Howard Debele, Edward Schorb.

Repeated Christmas Music.

The choir of the First Baptist church repeated its Christmas music on Sunday night before a large congregation. The entire programme was rendered, including the various anthems and these with the solo parts were greatly enjoyed. Miss Florence Wohlfert assisted on the violin, besides playing the prelude, with organ accompaniment. The pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, preached an impressive sermon, appropriate to the occasion, and at the close he wished everyone present a Happy New Year.

A Family Reunion.

Among the family reunions held on New Year's Day was one at the home of Mr. and Mrs. James R. Blair, of Duer street, who entertained twenty-four members of the family, including Mr. and Mrs. Ramsey Blair, Recorder and Mrs. Thomas Doud, teir children and grandchildren. The occasion was attended by many enjoyable features.

GREET THE NEW YEAR SINGING DOXOLOGY.

Monroe Avenue Church Bell Peals Forth As 1906 Appears.

The closing day of 1905, which marked the ninth anniversary of the history of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, was fittingly celebrated on Sunday by the members and friends of that organization. In the morning the Rev. George Mooney, pastor of the church, preached an appropriate sermon. In the evening, beginning at 9 o'clock, the services continued until midnight.

Walter M. McGee conducted the early service at night for the Epworth League, using as his subject the regular Epworth League topic, "What Have You Learned During the Past Year?" He closed the meeting by reading an interesting historical sketch that had been prepared by N. M. Smith. At 10 o'clock Mr. Mooney received the following persons on probation: Mary Matthews, Carrie Brower, Sadie Brower, Mrs. Aaron Brower, Mrs. Thomas McNeill, Ethel May Bush, Chauncey Lant, John Gray, Victor Houston, Clarence Heaume, John W. Daub. In addition to these the following united with the church by letter: Daniel Heaume, Mrs. Daniel Heaume, Mrs. Arthur S. Mosher. The celebration of the Lord's Supper followed, after which a covenant meeting was held, lasting until 12 o'clock, when the congregation joined heartily in singing "Praise God From Whom All Bless*ings Flow," while* the church bell pealed out its welcome to the new year.

PRETTY SERVANT GIRL ACCUSED OF JEWEL THEFT.

Eighteen-year-old Amy Morcom Arrested on Complaint of Ex-Employer.

Amy Morcom, a pretty domestic, 18 years old, was arrested this morning, charged with the theft of $300 worth of jewelry, by Townsend Dickenson, of Central avenue. She will be arraigned before Justice Mosher this afternoon.

The girl was in the employ of Dickenson until two week ago, when she changed her position. After she left, Mr. Dickenson alleges, the jewelry was missed and suspicion fell on her. A warrant was sworn out yesterday. Officer Kelly arrested the girl at her new place of employment on East Front street this morning. She took her arrest quietly.

PRESIDENT RANDOLPH ON COUNTRY'S FUTURE.

Refers to General Prosperity and Tells How to Maintain It.

In the annual financial and commercial review of the New York Herold yesterday, former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, president of the Consolidater Stock Exchange, points the way to maintain the country's prosperity. He says:

"Peace, freedom, ingenuity, education, good crops, unequalled enterprise and unsurpassed industry have combined to produce in our country at the close of the year 1905 a prosperity of which our fathers would hardly have ventured to dream. Gold money and paper money have stimulated the enormous development of American resources.

"We would do well to remember that the use of stimulants is attended with danger. Overcapitalization there has been. Overtrading may come. Extravagance and waste are widely prevalent, as is also that unconscionable rapacity for wealth which is ever the most serious danger to a nation.

"If our citizens could but experience what Mr. Charles E. Hughes has recently and aptly termed "a new baptism of self-respect and manhood" then our prosperity would indeed have an added charm and a value inestimable."

CELEBRATORS SEPARATED.

Washington Left His Companions by Falling Out of Carriage.

John Meehan, driver for a wealthy New Yorker, who has a summer place near Bound Brook, drove into town yesterday with a friend in one of his employer's very swell rigs. John made friends with Edward Washington, colored, and the trio had a real good time until fate and booze separated them. Meehan and Washington were reunited in the city jail, but the reunion was not joyful.

Meehan and his friend dropped *into Washington's house in the after*noon, and they struck up a friendship right away. After a graphophone and mixed ale party they drove away in Milhau's rig.

At Watchung and North avenues, near 6:30 o'clock, Washington withdrew from the party by falling out of the carriage. He was arrested a few minutes later by Patrolman Overbaugh.

Further along in the evening Patrolman Higgins observed Meehan, alone, steering a devious and uncertain course in the carriage on Watchung avenue. What became of the friend no one knows. Higgins took Meehan in to keep him safe.

In court this morning Judge Runyon pieced the tale together from the parts furnished by the prisoners. He was in an indulgent mood and suspended sentence.

The First National Bank has sent out to its depositors and friends a neat little New Year's gift in the form of a memorandum book.

NEW YEAR'S USHERED IN ACTIVELY AT Y. M. C. A.

BOYS' EXHIBIT, ENTERTAINMENT, BASKETBALL, TUMBLING AND STAR COURSE

Open house was observed at the Y. M. C. A. Monday, in accordance with an annual New Year's Day custom. A large number of visitors were entertained throughout the day from 10 o'clock in the morning until 5:30 o'clock in the afternoon with a varied programme of sports and music.

An exhibition of gymnasium work by the boys' department was the initial feature of the day, beginning shortly after 10 o'clock. The exhibition included wand drill, led by Charles Line; dumbell drill, led by Donald Mortimer, Albert Miller, Charles Line and Clarence Steiner; pyramids, and a basketball game between pick-up fives.

At 2:30 o'clock in the afternoon *visitors were entertained in the up*per hall by the Musical Stewarts. The entertainers rendered a thoroughly enjoyable bill of musical spec*ialties and melodious nonsense.*

A lively game of basketball was played at 4 o'clock by the ex-High School five and the P. H. S Scrubs. The Scrubs worked hard, but the young men with the basketball past were a little too much for them. That this is letting the Scrubs down is evident from a glance at the score—40 to 18. Scull, ex-High School, was the villain who chiefly pursued the innocent Scrubs. Line-up and summary:

| High School. | Ex-High School. |
| --- | --- |
| Smith | Gavett |
| Collier | Neal |
| Leggett | Scull |
| Gavett | Browning |
| Caldwell | Letson |

Goals from field—Scull, 15; Browning, Gavett, 3; Neal, Doane, 3; Collier, Caldwell. Goals from foul—Browning, Neal.

Walter McNaughton, champion amateur high diver of the State, was to have given an exhibition between halves, but he was not in condition to appear. His place was taken by Bert Hanson, who proved entertaining as a substitute with a string of tumbling moves.

The Lotus Glee Club, in the star course, at night, rounded off the day at the association admirably. With Mrs. Minnie Marshall Smith, with whose work as a dramatic reciter Plainfield is familiar, the well known quartette presented a programme that delighted a full house.

The singing was unusually good, and the numbers were all most enjoyable. "An Act of Up-to-date Opera," written by George Ade, with the music arranged by F. J. Smith, the Glee Club conductor, was particularly delightful. C. L. Lewis, of this city, is still with the quartette, and his bass is a decided factor in the finished volume of sound that rolls from it. The other members of the club are H. W. Hindmeyer, G. Morgan Stricklett, tenors, and E. V. Goodwin, bass.

Mrs. Margaret Powers Dead.

Mrs. Margaret Powers, for many years a resident of this city, died Sunday night at the home of her son-in-law, Edward C. Searing, on Park avenue, following an illness of five weeks. She underwent an operation on the foot, and owing to her advanced age she did not improve. Death was due to acute Bright's disease. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Searing. The funeral services were held this morning at 9:30 o'clock from St. Mary's church and the interment was in St. Mary's cemetery. The pall bearers were F. S. Moore, William Waglow, Hugh Reilly, Fred Shepherd, Louis Feiring and Thomas Buckley.

Honor for Dr. Browning.

Dr. W. Kempton Browning, of Park avenue, received a professional New Year's honor in the shape of an appointment as assistant gynaecologist at the New York Polyclinic Hospital, under Dr. J. Riddle Goffe, surgeon. Dr. Browning is specializing on women's diseases, and his postgraduate studies in New York won him the appointment. He will continue his practice here, his duties at the hospital calling him into the city twice a week.

Gathered About the Fireplace.

The annual New Year's eve log-fire sociable of the Y. M. C. A. was enjoyed by fifty or more young men Saturday night in the spacious parlor of the association. With big logs roaring and crackling in the great fireplace, the young men spent a delightfully informal evening. Martin B. Stutsman recited; Walter Sampson played flute and piano solos; and Otto Meuck and P. R. Collier played piano selections.

Cornelius Ackerman Buried.

Funeral services over Cornelius Ackerman, Jr., were held at Hope chapel, Saturday afternoon, with a gathering of relatives and friends in attendance. Rev. L. R. Howard, assisted by Rev. George Mooney, officiated. The floral tributes were numerous. Interment was made in the Methodist cemetery.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Minnie Helen Meyer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs H. C. Meyer, of Scotch Plains, to Alexander Muir, of Essex street. No date has been set for the wedding.

SENATOR KEAN HOLDS ANNUAL RECEPTION

CONGRESSMAN FOWLER ALSO ENTERTAINS—PLAINFIELD REPRESENTED.

Politicians of all degrees journeyed held "open house," Monday, for the attend the annual New Year's Day receptions held by United States Senator John Kean and Congressman Charles N. Fowler. These receptions are the two social functions of the year of politicians in Union county.

Among those who were unable to attend Senator Kean's reception at Ursino were Governor Stokes, Senator-elect Everett Colby, Mayor Fagan and George L. Record. Before the reception there was a conference between the Senator and his brother, Hamilton, Gen. P. Farmer Wanser and Samuel Dickinson, Secretary of State and Republican leader in Hudson county. It is believed that this had in view a possible adjustment of the Dickinson-Record fight in the county.

Among the Plainfielders in the gathering of 300 attending the reception of the Senator were Mayor J. F. Buckle, State Factory Inspector Andrew McCardell, County Registrar F. H. Smith, Charles W. Runyon, Councilmen W. L. Gloak, and Herbert Buxton, Postmaster E. H. Bird, James Stewart, Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur, Sandford G. Robinson, Official Stenographer George B. Wean, City Clerk J. T. MacMurray, Joseph Noonan, John Bowman, J. J. Kenney, Charles H. Dunham, T. C. Smith, J. P. Mosher, Edward T. VanWinkle, former Police Commissioner Amos Andrews, Harry P. Dumont, E. C. Westcott and President of the Board of Trade L. B. Woolston. Most of them also visited Congressman Fowler.

FIRST SUNDAY COURT.

Larry Wallace Calls Judge Out for First Hearing Under New Ruling.

Lawrence Wallace, whose record at police headquarters is nearly as long as that of Charley Williams, dean of the drunk corps, was arrested again Saturday for soliciting money. City Judge Runyon was surprised to see Larry in court Sunday morning, because he signed the pledge for a year a month ago, and, as Larry himself acknowledged, he wouldn't have asked for money on the streets if he "hadn't had the stuff in him." The judge was surprised because Larry is something of a thoroughbred and usually keeps his pledges.

"A christening in Brooklyn started me," explained Larry, simply. "I was godfather and they gave something to drink the kid's health. I was off after that."

"I've got faith in you yet," said the judge. "I'll give you another chance; try and keep that pledge without denting it again."

The hearing is worthy of particular note, because it was the first Sunday court held since Chief Kiely's conviction on Counts One, Two and Three, which compels the judge to hold Sunday hearings to save prisoners arrested for minor offenses on Saturday, and who haven't the means to secure $100 bail, from staying in jail until Monday. Sunday hearings will be regular city court features now.

TE DEUM GREETED 1906.

Solemn Watch Night Communion Service at Grace P. E. Church.

A large congregation attended a watch-night service at Grace P. E. church. The service began at 11 o'clock and ended shortly after the new year came in.

The ante-communion service was the form used. Just as midnight struck the choir and congregation sang the Te Deum. The service ended with communion.

Rev. E. V. Stevenson, the rector, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. M. Rodman, rector-emeritus, and Rev. Mr. Miller, the colored curate. The rector delivered a brief new year's sermon. His theme was the greater value of looking to the future rather than dwelling on the past.

Goes to Soldiers' Home.

Through the efforts of Deputy Sheriff Peter V. Weaver and Dr. Charles B. Lufburrow, city physician, a permit has been secured for the admission of Jacob Manning, an old Civil War veteran, to the Soldiers' Home at Kearny, N. J. Mr. Manning, who is a resident of this city, was a member of Co. H, Thirtieth N. J. Vols., of which the late James Franklin Hubbard was captain.

Broken Resolutions.

James F. Parker, of this city, spoke on "Broken Resolutions" at the Y. M. C. A. weekly meeting Sunday afternoon. He urged his hearers to cultivate moral and physical courage, simply to fit themselves for keeping good resolutions. Otto Muller played 'cello solos, accompanied by E. H. Guest, cornetist. W. C. Leek led the singing and rendered a baritone solo.

On the Grand Jury.

The Plainfielders chosen to serve on the Grand Jury for the January term of the Union County Court are Ralph I. Tolles, from the First ward; Charles H. Hand, from the Second ward; B. Frank Coriell, from the Third ward, and Dr. Ambrose K. Brennan, from the Fourth ward.

PARK AVE. BAPTIST S. S. HOLDS SPECIAL EXERCISES.

Review of the Year's Work a Feature of the Programme.

Under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the Park Avenue Baptist church a special programme was rendered Sunday afternoon, including music, review of the past year's work, greetings from friends and selections by the Sunday-school orchestra. Miss Florence G. Hawkins, the superintendent, presided.

The opening exercises comprised singing, responsive reading and Scripture references by individual classes, followed with a vocal selection, "Song of the Angels," by Miss Cora Brokaw, Miss Lyons, Roland Treadwell and Charles VanWinkle.

Review of the year's work as seen by the secretary, treasurer and librarian, was then given, to which was added remarks by the superintendent and the pastor, Rev. A. E. Finn. The superintendent then read greetings from friends, including Mrs. David M. Runyon, of this city; Mrs. Isaac Dunn, of Stelton, and Rev. J. W. Richardson, of Stamford, Conn.

"What do we want for the year 1906?" was an interesting subject discussed by Nelson Runyon, Mrs. W. S. Lowry and George E. Hall. This was followed with sentence and silent prayers. On behalf of the school, George E. Hall read and presented to the retiring superintendent, Miss Hawkins, a letter expressing its appreciation of her services.

The orchestra, which is now a fix*ture of the Sunday-school, assisting* in the rendition of music, is comprised of G. W. V. Moy, violin; Martin Stutsman, mandolin; Miss Arline Brown and Miss Marjorie Brown, violin; Miss Mary Clark, piano, and Whitney Frazee, cornet. Throughout the service the school sang appropriate hymns and carols.

Lincoln Steffens Upon Mayor Fagan.

Lincoln Steffens has an article in McClure's Magazine for January, which is just out, describing the career of Mayor Mark Fagan, of Jersey City, in terms of high praise and narrating many incidents in the Mayor's fights with the corporations and with Boss Dickinson. Frequent allusions are made to "Tom" McCarter and to the operations *of the Pub*lic Service Company in politics, and it is alleged Thomas N. McCarter made threats, in which he claimed that his brother, Attorney General Robert H. McCarter, would not do certain things which he opposed in connection with legislation desired by Jersey City. The charges against the McCarters and against those connected with the Public Service are of a grave character, and it was said that they might be brought before the Legislature for investigation.

Frank Bonner Dead.

Frank Bonner, one of the old Crescent League baseball players, who made an enviable record here in the game several years ago, died in a hospital in Kansas City Sunday night from blood poisoning brought on by quinsy. He was forty-one years old and for twenty years was a professional ball player. He played with the Baltimore Orioles when that team won the pennant three years in succession, played for Louisville before being transferred to Kansas City, and last season was considered one of the best second basemen in the American Association. His nearest relative is a brother at Worcester, Mass.

OBSERVANCE OF WEDDING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Kalman Rothberg and Son Celebrate Together.

Louis Rottberg, son of Mr. and Mrs. Kalman Rottberg, was confirmed at the synagogue, Congregation of the Children of Israel, on Saturday, the young man having attained his thirteenth year.

Sunday afternoon he was given a reception at Vardon's Hall on West Front street, and the occasion was of unusual interest because with it was combined the twentieth anniversary of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kalman Rottberg. This was a surprise to many of the guests. They were married in New York twenty years ago and moved to Plainfield a year later, where they have continued to reside. At the celebration a supper was served, speeches were made and Naylor's orchestra played for dancing. Mr. and Mrs. Rottberg received many handsome gifts, including a diamond ring and a pair of gold cuff buttons from their sons Samuel and Harry. The other son, Louis, also received many gifts.

Mrs. Arnold's Mother Dead.

Mrs. Ellen B. Hunt, widow of the late George W. Hunt, and mother of Mrs. William F. Arnold, of Third place, died Thursday, December 29, at her home in Gates avenue, Brooklyn, in her 83d year. She was one of the oldest and most prominent members of the Nostrand Avenue M. E. church, Brooklyn, and a faithful Christian. Besides Mrs. Arnold, she is survived by two other daughters, Dr. Ida B. Hunt and Mrs B. J. Beel, and one son, George W. Hunt, of Brooklyn. The funeral services were held from the late home Sunday, December 31.

Supper for Choir.

The members of Grace P. E. church choir who sang at the watch night service were entertained at supper in the parish-house after the evening service, by the parish, Sunday night.

LEE COUNCILMANIC HEAD

Borough Fathers Organize and Mayor Smalley Announces Appointments.

MR. REED TO GET $500

Corporation Counsel's Salary Increased—Mr. Smalley to Act as Recorder—New Members of Health Board.

The terms of Borough Councilmen James K. Arnold and Joseph P. Humble expired at noon Monday, and five minutes afterward their successors, Clifford McGee and Edward P. T. Smith, were in session with the other members of the organization of the 1906 body. The proceedings were brief and resulted as follows:

Council president, Charles A. Lee; committees—streets, Messrs, Lee, Van Arsdale and Krewson; fire and water and lamps, Messrs. Smith, Lee and Van Winkle; auditing and finance, Messrs. McGee, Krewson and Van Arsdale; license and marshals, Van Arsdale, Lee and Van Winkle; laws, ordinance and taxation, Van Winkle, McGee and Smith; stationery and supplies, Krewson, McGee and Smith. The committees of which the new members were made chairmen will give them practical experience, but call for work in which both are experienced.

Following the organization, Mayor Smalley made the annual appointments, practically keeping the same officials. The office of recorder, from which Thomas Doud resigned, was left vacant and Mayor Smalley will preside indefinitely. Charles A. Reed *was reappointed counsel with an in*crease of salary from $300 a year to $500.

The full list of appointments follows: Borough clerk, Frank Rowley; counsel, Charles A. Reed; physician, Dr. A. H. Dundon; engineers, Frank J. Hubbard and H. C. Van Emburgh; *overseer of poor, Fred Becker; elec*trician, A. Y. Searing, Jr.; members of Board of Health, for five years, to succeed Andrew Love, Sr., and John McLaughlin, Thomas Doud and Andrew Kenney; chief marshal, George Weiss; regular marshals, Joseph Flack, Lemuel Pope and Fred Em*mons; chief of fire department,* Howard F. Woolston; engineer, Frank Schuck; captain of Company No. 1, to succeed Edward P. T. Smith, Edward Terry, formerly captain of Company No. 2; lieutenant and driver, William C. Campbell; tillerman, Ambrose Campbell; call men, Com*pany No. 1, Harry* Dunham, William McCullough, John Mowrey, Walter Emmons, John Doud, Albert Tranchard; captain of Company No. 2, Walter Kettenring; call men, Patrick McDonough, James De Camp, Ferdinand Rockfellow, Frank Hull, Spencer Scribner, George Wyckoff and Lafayette Rosenstiehl.

HOPE CHAPEL SOCIETY HOLDS RECEPTION.

Members of Congregation Meet to Exchange New Year's Greetings.

Observing the annual custom, the Ladies' Aid Society of Hope chapel held "open house," last night, for the purpose of greeting members of the congregation and exchanging New Year's greetings. The reception was held in the Sunday-school rooms and the attendance was large throughout.

During the evening an informal programme was given, among the contributions being piano selections by Miss Mary Radford; vocal solos by Mrs. J. M. Millar; violin selections by Miss Agnes McInness, accompanied by Miss Mary McInness, and selections by a quartette composed of Mrs. Millar, Miss Edna Eckert, Thomas Hendry and James McKnight. Rev. L. R. Howard made an appropriate address. Refreshments were served by members of the Young Women's Bible class.

The committee which arranged and had charge of the affair consisted of Charles Vincent, Mrs. William Gray, Mrs. Clark and Mrs. Harry Corlies.

Funeral of Mrs. A. P. Smith.

The funeral services of Mrs. Ann Palmer Smith, mother of William Palmer Smith, were held this morning from her late home in East Seventh street. Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church, of which Mrs. Smith was an active member for many years, officiated. Mrs. Smith was eighty-seven years old and was a resident of Plainfield for over thirty-seven years. The services were largely attended. Interment was at White Plains, N. Y., today.

Wedded at Parsonage.

Robert M. Morley, of South Second street, and Miss Josephine Madden, of Muhlenberg place, were quietly married Saturday afternoon. The ceremony was performed by Rev. L. R. Howard at his home on West Fifth street, and was witnessed only by several friends. Mr. and Mrs. Morley will make their home on South Second street.

New Year's Bride.

Miss Henrietta Walsh, daughter of G. D. Walsh, of North Front street, and Percy Terry, of Rahway road, were married at Faith chapel, yesterday afternoon. Rev. J. W. Musson performed the ceremony. A reception was held at the bride's home.

New York Commercial Pays Tribute to Stock Exchange President and Prints Interview.

In its annual review of the financial condition, the New York Commercial yesterday devoted much space to the Consolidated Stock and Petroleum Exchange, incidently making this reference to one of Plainfield's leading citizens:

"L. V. F. Randolph, formerly treasurer of the Illinois Central Railroad and later president of the Atlantic Trust Co., has been president of the exchange for about two years, and under his regime the institution has made excellent progress."

In the same issue is published this statement of former Mayor Randolph:

"Human activity was never in evidence as it is today. At Port Arthur the activity is destructive. Almost everywhere else it is constructive. The world's assets are greater than ever before, not only in its present population of 1,600,000,000 of souls, but in farms and factories, in developed mines of silver and gold and copper, in towns and cities, in railroads, in scientific advance and in literary, ethical and aesthetic culture; in short, in everything that can contribute to the enrichment of a race.

"Of this wealth America has a hugely generous share; and America is at peace, and is producing wealth daily, and is advancing by great strides along all lines of progress.

"The year 1905 opens for our country most auspiciously. We are enjoying our splendid crops and our magnificent industrial production, and these we share with other nations for various valuable considerations. The argosies of the world sail into our ports and their cargoes are distributed among our thrifty citizens. Our banking is done by trained and competent men. Our merchants are in the van of all commercial progress.

"Among our statesmen are some at least worthy to be called great in the administration of important affairs. Our mechanics are the best educated and happiest of any on earth. Even our servants are by their savings and thrift independent capitalists. Perhaps on some counts it might be said that we are progressing too rapidly. But surely at the beginning of the new year 1905 the people of America have no cause to complain of lack of any of the blessings or favors of Providence."

The New York Herald on Sunday contained the following interview from Former Mayor L. V. F. Randolph, of this city: "The year 1905 will open for America under excellent auspices. We are happier than other nations in being not only at peace, but relieved of the necessity of supporting a great military establishment. The building up of the American navy has been wise and necessary. Farmers everywhere are prosperous. When the nation's farmers prosper all industries do well. Money is in abundant supply. Our trade with all the world is rapidly increasing. Our government is in strong hands and has the popular confidence, and at present there is no menace of any sort to the good cheer and progress of the American people."

Miss Titus Married.

Miss Elizabeth J. Titus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel M. Titus, of Jefferson avenue, and Charles W. Smith, of West Front street, were married Monday afternoon at the bride's home by Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of the Dunellen Methodist church. Miss Florence Titus, the bride's sister, was maid of honor. The best man was Bruce Morecraft, of Bound Brook. The Misses Ethel and Helen Smith, sisters of the groom, were flower girls. Miss Mary Edgerton, of Bound Brook, played the wedding march from Lohengrin. Directly following the reception Mr. and Mrs. Smith left for Washington, D. C., where they will spend their honeymoon. When they return to this city they will make their home on Jefferson avenue.

Borough Street Work.

A stone culvert, three feet wide, will be constructed across Park place on the north side of Duer street, as soon as the weather permits. The small iron pipe now doing duty there will be removed to Park place and Vine street. Mr. Arnold, chairman of the street committee, hopes thus to relieve the flood conditions formerly existing at the two points indicated.

Miss Mary Helton, of Grove street, leaves today for Florida, where she will remain for several weeks.

MRS. PERCY H. STEWART HOLDS A RECEPTION

SOCIETY ATTEND IN LARGE NUMBERS DESPITE STORM.

Mrs. Percy H. Stewart, of 563 West Eighth street, gave a charming "at home," yesterday afternoon from 4 to 7, and despite the severe storm there was a large gathering of society women, making it one of the events of the winter season. The decorations were appropriate to the holiday season. A feature of the affair was the singing of Edward Strong, tenor at the Fifth Avenue Presbyterian church, New York.

Assisting Mrs. Stewart in receiving were Mrs. Francis deLacey Hyde, Mrs. Edward H. Ladd, Jr., Mrs. Elliot T. Barrows, Mrs. Juline Erickson, Mrs. Alfred H. Streuli, Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hegeman, Mrs. Daniel F. Ginna, Mrs. Robert Rushmore, Mrs. Ernest R. Ackerman, Miss Virginia Hegeman, Miss Fisk, Mrs. Walter Stewart, Miss Stewart, Miss Ida Stewart, of this city; Mrs. William F. Cochran, mother of Mrs. Stewart, and Miss Cochran, of Yonkers, N. Y., Mrs. Erickson Perkins, of Rochester, N. Y., and Mrs. Eugene Moore, of Los Angeles, Cal.

MISS EDITH MELLICK'S DANCE A CHARMING ONE

FORMER COUNCILMAN GIVES DELIGHTFUL FUNCTION IN DAUGHTER'S HONOR.

Plainfield's young society set was treated to a rare pleasure last night at the occasion of the dance given by Mr. and Mrs. George P. Mellick, of East Seventh street, in honor of their daughter, Edith Mellick, and their niece, Elizabeth Tweedy, to about seventy-five of their young friends.

Mr. Mellick's handsome residence on East Seventh street presented an allurring appearance at the cotillion, the parlor and drawing room being beautifully decorated in honor of the occasion. The Christmas season was appropriately observed in the decorative scheme, red and green being the predominating colors. Cut flowers, combined with evergreens and potted plants, made the rooms attractive beyond description. It was one of the smartest affairs of the kind given in this city in some time and the young people thoroughly enjoyed theselves from 8 to 12, the hours of the dance.

There were many out-of-town friends of the young women, who were guests at the Mellick house for the night, and in addition over fifty of Miss Mellick's Plainfield associates were included among those invited. The music was furnished by Pound, who formerly played for the assemblies in the city. Refreshments were served in the latter part of the evening, Marie, of New York, being the caterer.

[U]NION COUNTY BAR ASSOCIATION MEETS

PLAN TO HOLD A DINNER AT MARTIN'S THIS MONTH.

Immediately following the adjournment of court yesterday a meeting of the Union County Bar Association was held. Saturday, January 28, was chosen as the date for the annual dinner of the association. It will be held at Martin's, New York.

In past years the expense of the dinner has sometimes exceeded the amounts of the subscriptions. There was quite a discussion over a motion to take $150 from the treasury to pay for the next dinner. It was finally carried by a majority of one.

All the old officers of the association were re-elected without opposition.

The officers are: President, Craig A. Marsh; vice president, N. C. J. English; treasurer, Nathan R. Leavitt; secretary, Fred C. Hyer; trustees, Frank Bergen; N. C. J. English, Edward S. Atwater, P. H. Gilhooly, James C. Connolly, George T. Parrot, Craig A. Marsh.

Installed Post's Officers.

Past Department Commander William C. Smith, of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., accompanied by several members of Winfield Scott Post, went to Elizabeth last night, where he installed the officers-elect of Ulric Dahlgren Post, G. A. R. After the installation the visitors were entertained at a banquet.

HIGH LICENSE AGITATION

North Plainfield, New Brunswick and Elizabeth in Line.

ARGUMENTS ADVANCED

Newark Evening News Editorially Reviews the Liquor Situation in Several Communities.

In reference to the agitation for higher license fees in various municipalities, since Plainfield took the initiative, the Newark Evening News said last night:

"In his first annual message to the City Council of the city of Elizabeth, Mayor Berry last night urged that body to take such steps as would increase the license fee from $350 to $500. The manifest purpose is not only to reduce the number of saloons in the city, but to increase the revenues to meet the expenses caused by the liquor traffic. In Elizabeth, as in all other cities, the most prolific cause of crimes of all kinds is liquor, and liquor should be made to pay for its work of devastation.

"In the city of New Brunswick last night a mass meeting was held in the First Methodist church. The edifice was packed to the doors. The Mayor, the members of the City Council and the sheriff of the county were invited and were present, and were given a fair idea of what the people of New Brunswick desired of them. Ringing speeches were made and resolutions were adopted petitioning the council to reduce the number of saloons by at least one-third, there being now over a hundred places in which intoxicating liquors are sold, in a city of about 22,000 inhabitants. This is one saloon for each 200 people; or one for every fifty voters. Little wonder that the speakers declared there were 'more than the citizens demanded, wanted or asked for.'

"A higher license fee was not definitely advised at the New Brunswick mass meeting, but that will doubtless be incorporated in any plan to reduce the number of saloons, for the reason that higher license has been advocated in that city for some time past. One of the suggestions was that the names of all applicants with the signers thereto be published in the papers at least a month prior to final action thereon by the Excise Board. This is a severe recommendation, yet there is nothing unjust in such a regulation. A property owner who is willing to sign for a saloon ought not to be unwilling to have his name published in such connection.

"In the borough of North Plainfield the question of higher license will undoubtedly come up in the near future. It came up last year in a bitter factional fight. The outgoing council voted to ask the county court to raise the fee from $350 to $600. The incoming council did the same, but the court refused. On Christmas eve a gang of half-drunken negroes left Plainfield when the saloons were closed at 11 p. m., went over to North Plainfield to finish their drinking orgies, and there murderously attacked the borough police, injuring three men and nearly killing one. They were arrested, the grand jury indicted them, and with the indictments recommended to the court that the license fee in North Plainfield be made $10,00, the same as in Plainfield.

"Here are three noteworthy attempts to raise the license fees in three different places, with a view to holding the saloons in check and decreasing the crime of which they are the most fruitful source. High license under an excise system is not a perfect regulation of the liquor traffic, but high license is better than low license in that it reduces the number of drinking places, makes the proprietors of saloons more careful lest their license may be taken from them, and turns into the city treasury some of the money necessary to be expended each year in the care of the paupers, habitual drunkards and criminals that become such through the liquor traffic. If the new Mayor of Elizabeth, the citizens of New Brunswick and the grand jury of Somerset County accomplish their purposes they will begin the new year well."

Board of Health Met.

Owing to the voluminous annual report of the Board of Health, there was but little business to consider at the January meeting of the Board yesterday afternoon. The monthly reports were filed and a petition from residents of the West End received, asking that some action be taken to abate the smoke nuisance caused by the various factories. The matter was referred to President C. J. Fisk, who will confer with the heads of the different manufacturing concerns.

TO PUSH POSTOFFICE BILL

Senator Kean Anxious to Get Federal Bldg. for Plainfield.

CHANCES OF SUCCESS

Congressman Fowler, However, is Not so Optimistic—Interviews on the Subject.

Notwithstanding the advices given out from Washington that a policy of retrenchment would be pursued by Congress during the present session and that therefore all appropriations would be cut down, including those for postal affairs, there is a chance of the bill for a new postoffice building here being shoved through the Senate before adjournment. This bill was introduced at the last session by Senator Kean and was an agreeable surprise to Plainfield, which had long needed such a structure.

When asked by a representative of The Daily Press what the prospects were, the senior senator said without hesitation that he hopes to have the measure passed by the upper house of Congress during the present session. "There's no buncome about me," declared the sage of Ursino, "and when I introduced that measure I meant to work for its passage. It may be that I will be unable to get it through this time, but I hope to and surely will sooner or later."

Congressman Fowler is not so optimistic. To The Daily Press representative he spoke of the struggle he had in getting a postoffice appropriation for Elizabeth and cited the fact that the close proximity of Plainfield to Elizabeth might be used as an argument against erecting a Federal building here.

HOWARD TURRILL WEDS MARYLAND GIRL

MISS IDA R. SIMPSON BRIDE OF PLAINFIELDER.

Howard Turrill, of Grove street, was married today at 12 o'clock noon to Miss Ida R. Simpson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Simpson, of Federick, Maryland, the ceremony being performed in the Episcopal church in that city in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends of the couple from Frederick, Baltimore, New York and this city.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Simpson, as maid-of-honor, while Robert Turrill, brother of the groom, was best man. Charles L. Turrill, another brother, was head usher.

BAD CHECK MAN CROOK IS CAUGHT IN NEWARK

MAN WHO POSED AS AN ELK AND GOT MONEY HERE IS CAPTURED.

J. F. Brewer, who, as F. E. Wade, jolly good fellow, Elk and handler of checks not quite as good as they look, wore out his welcome in Plainfield a few weeks ago, fell into the hands of the Newark police last night as a result of trying his game once too often.

Chief Hopper, of the Newark department, sent word to Chief Kiely notifying him of the capture and he, accompanied by George O. Stevens, went to Newark this afternoon to look the prisoner over.

While in this city a short time ago, Brewer fleeced George O. Stevens, A. D. Findlay and Thomas Timbo by means of worthless checks.

Got Damages for Injury.

The case of Alexander Kuzzie, a miner, against the Somerville Woolen Mills, in tort, was tried yesterday in the Somerset County Court, before Judge W. S. Gummere and a jury. The plaintiff recovered a verdict of $550. Isaac P. Runyon, Esq., represented the plaintiff and Lindabury, Depue and Faulks, the defendants.

Borough Health Board Meets.

Samuel S. Swackhamer was reappointed counsel to the North Plainfield Board of Health at its meeting last night. The secretary, Rev. W. R. Honeyman, reported that the borough is free from contagious disease. Several nuisances have been suppressed during the month.

TO FACE MURDER CHARGE

Legal Aspect of Willcox's Act Explained to Grand Jury.

KILLED A LITTLE BOY

Justice Fort Declared That There Are No Facts Before Court to Justify or Excuse Shooting.

The shooting of John Darling, fifteen years old, by Harold L. Willcox, at Westfield, last Hallowe'en, was the subject yesterday of an elaborate charge by Justice J. Franklin Fort to the Grand Jury at Elizabeth. He said:

"On Monday night last, Oct. 31, John Darling came to his death at Westfield, in this county, as the result of a shotgun wound, caused by the discharge of a revolver in the hand of one Harold L. Willcox. Darling was about fifteen years old and was playing with other children upon the premises of Willcox. It was Hallowe'en, and the young folk had been amusing themselves in the innocent amusements usually incident to that night.

"Some thirty minutes before the shooting the children had been at the Willcox house and had gone away, and had returned just before the shooting. John Darling appears by the proof before the Coroner's Court to have gone to a shutter on the house of the defendant, and opened it, or attempted to do so. Willcox suddenly appeared from behind a bush. Upon this Darling either ran or started to run, whereupon Willcox is said to have said, 'Stand still or I will shoot!' and almost immediately fired.

"The ball entered the body at the hinder edge of the armpit, penetrated the chest at the lower edge of the sixth rib, passed through the lower lobe of the lung, wounding the larger vessels at the root of the lung, and opening the bronchial tubes. The ball was not found, and death resulted shortly after the shooting. Willcox surrendered himself to the authorities and is now upon bail awaiting action of the Grand Jury.

"The proof before the Coroner would seem to make it clear that Willcox had taken his loaded revolver and gone out into his yard, and was standing there behind a bush, when the children came up, or had come out with the revolver unseen after the children came up; that he threatened that in case Darling did not stand still he would shoot; that he did shoot and the result of that shot was the death of Darling.

"Persons who use deadly weapons are presumed to intend the consequences which naturally result from their use. One will not be permitted to excuse his act of shooting at another with a deadly weapon by saying 'I did not intend to kill,' the law presumes from the use of the weapon that he did.

"The shooting in this case was not done, under provocation or in a transport of passion; it was clearly willful.

"Did Willcox go out of his house intending to shoot some one, and did he say before shooting, 'Stand still or I will shoot?' And did he then fire deliberately at Darling? If so, that is murder, and he should be indicted for that offense.

"The testimony taken before the Coroner of at least two of the girls who were near him when he fired would seem to indicate that he shot straight at the deceased, and the course of the ball as it entered the body would seem to confirm their statements.

"If you find these facts under the proof to be such as I have indicated, your duty to return an indictment for murder would seem to be plain. The offense can only be reduced to manslaughter in case you conclude that the shooting was the result of carelessness, practically an involuntary killing. Unless the proof is different before you from what it was at the inquest this theory has no support in the testimony.

"If there shall be proof before you showing that the killing was involuntary, and resulted solely from the careless use of the revolver, your indictment may be for manslaughter.

"But there are no facts before the court which upon any phase of the testimony will justify or excuse the shooting as a case of manslaughter."

Fell in Raceway.

Among the eight seers at the rear of French's Mill Sunday morning after the fire was little Julia Leahy, of New York, eight-year-old niece of Joseph Harrigan, of East Fourth street, whom she is visiting. While trying to cross the raceway she broke through the ice, and after getting a thorough ducking was hauled out and taken home.

COMPANY K MAY ATTEND STOKES' INAUGURATION

THOUGH AS YET NO ORDERS HAVE BEED ISSUED TO NATIONAL GUARD.

It is not yet known positively whether the local company of the National Guards will attend the inauguration of Governor-elect Stokes at Trenton, on January 21. As yet the members of Company K have received no orders commanding them to attend, and it has not yet been announced whether or not the entire National Guard will attend the inauguration. This was done at the inauguration of Governor Murphy, and the local company was represented.

The local soldier boys are expecting to hear in the near future whether they are to attend, and it will probably be definitely known before the next drill, which will be on January 9. As the head of the State Guards after this inauguration, it has been considered appropriate in past years that the Guards be present in parade. This was attempted in 1901, and the success was somewhat marred by the fact that a pouring rain greeted the soldiers at Trenton.

Y. M. C. A. TEAM MAY WIN GYMNASTIC CONTEST

M'NAUGHTON'S PHENOMINAL HIGH DIVE POINTS TO SUCCESS.

The Physical Directors' Society, of the Y. M. C. A. of Northern New Jersey, has decided to hold the annual inter-association gymnastic championship contest in this city sometime in February, and as the appearances at the present time would indicate, the local gymnasts will be by no means out of the contest.

With the record breaking high dive which Walter McNaughton made at the Y. M. C. A. recently, the Plainfield team has renewed confidence in its ability to overcome the other teams in the State. McNaughton is sure to win this feature of the contest, and has more than a passing chance in the high jump and other events. Six feet and one inch is the highest which the champion high diver has gone over, and it is several inches beyond the nearest competitor in the State. McNaughton first distinguished himself in his specialty in high diving last year, when, in an inter-association contest, he captured first place for the Plainfield team with a height of five feet, eight inches. This won for him the State championship, and shortly afterward in another contest, McNaughton took the National championship with five feet, eleven inches. His high dive of six feet, one inch, which was made in an exhibition, cannot count as a record but it is pretty sure sign that the present holder of the high diving record will not be easily beaten for some time.

Among those who will compete for representation on the team from this city are Cahoone, Smith, Neal, Long, McNaughton, Bentliff and Hand. There will be others who may be included in the squad from the local gym.

AIM TO STOP SPREAD OF VARIOUS DISEASES

BOARD OF HEALTH PLANS TO MAKE DISINFECTION COMPULSORY.

An important announcement is made by the Board of Health in its annual report to the effect that during the present year it hopes to make disinfection compulsory after deaths from tuberculosis. This will mean an increased amount of disinfection, but it is believed that it will help to check any spread of that dreaded disease.

The Board of Health states that it is with gratification that it finds so many householders seeking disinfectants for their homes, the practice now being quite general where before it was a rare thing. At present it is not compulsory to disinfect after tuberculosis, typhoid fever, chickenpox and measles, but as a rule householders prefer to have their homes purified after the presence of these diseases.

Last Christmas Celebration.

The members of the Loyal Temperance Legion met yesterday in the W. C. T. U. rooms to complete the arrangements for the Christmas tree celebration to be held in the rooms Saturday night.

SUPREME COURT'S LIST

Large Number of Cases of Local Interest to be Tried.

APPEAL CAUSES

Complete List Giving Names of Litigants and the Counsel in Each Instance.

Among the list of causes in the Union County Courts for trial at the January term now in session are several of interest to Plainfielders. The Supreme Court cases and the counsel represented are as follows:

Margaret LaRue against Catherine Sebring, et als, in tort, George W. V. Moy and Codington & Swackhamer; George W. Bird against James K. Tilloteon, on contract, George W. V. Moy and Codington & Swackhamer; John Ward against Public Service Corporation, in tort, George W. V. Moy, and John A. Bernhard; Mary A. Stein against the New Jersey Central, et al, in tort, George W. V. Moy and George Holmes; William H. Addis against Samuel W. Rushmore, in tort, Reed & Coddington and Craig A. Marsh; Timothy Glynn against the Public Service Corporation, in tort, John P. Owens and John A. Bernhard; Martin McDermott against the Public Service Corporation, in tort, John P. Owens and John A. Bernhard; Max Kahn against Herzig & Kapp, partners, etc., on contract, William Newcorn and Reed & Coddington; Mildred C. Currier, et al. against Mary J. Shoemaker, et al, in tort, William Newcorn and James C. Connolly; Jacob Steinberg against the Public Service Corporation, in tort, William Newcorn and John A. Bernhard; William G. Fairbank against the Public Service Corporation, in tort, Craig A. Marsh and John A. Bernhard; George A. Bauer, by next friend, against Roth & Co., in tort, Isaac P. Runyon and James McC. Morrow; Edward L. Adams against Public Service Corporation, in tort, Craig A. Marsh and John A. Bernhard; Horace R. Benedict against the Public Service Corporation, in tort, Craig A. Marsh and John A. Bernhard; Sarah Abrams, et al, against Matilde Silbert, et al, in tort, William Newcorn and Harry C. Runyon; Sarah Abrams, et als, against Annie Silbert, et al, in tort, William Newcorn and Harry C. Runyon; Frank Mobus, et al, partners, etc., against Charles W. Noyes, et al, on contract, mechanics' lien, P. H. Gilhooly and W. R. Wilson; Arthur Brennan, et al, against Samuel Rosenbaum, in tort, Edward Nugent and Wm. Newcorn.

In the justice jury appeal causes these cases are listed: Frederick W. Yates, trustee, etc., appellant, against George B. Staats, appellee; Charles H. Hand and Frank H. Smith, appellants, against George D. Herring, appellee; Samuel W. Rushmore, trading, etc., appellant, against Rossiter, McGovern & Co., appellee; Morris Abrams, appellant, against Lizzie Riley, appellee; William P. VanEps, appellant, against William Newcorn, assignee, etc., appellee.

Gymnastics at Y. M. C. A.

New Year's at the Y. M. C. A. was appropriately observed by "open house" throughout the entire day, and an exhibition in the gymnasium. The boys' classes were on the floor in the morning, and did much credit to the instruction of the physical director by their drills and individual work. An entertaining programme of gymnastics was arranged for both the morning and the afternoon exhibitions. In the afternoon the evening class had the floor. The programme of the men's class consisted of apparatus work, several drills and special features by Herbert Hanson, tumbling, and Walter McNaughton, high dive champion. The work of Walter Cahoone on the high bar and of Ray Smith in the potato race was commendable.

In the City Court.

Eight prisoners appeared in the city court yesterday, all but one of these charged with drunkenness, and some with disorderly conduct as well. Patrick Purcell, a vagrant, was released by Judge Runyon, advised him to obtain admission to the Industrial Home. The others were Walter Johnston, colored, who got sixty days; John Callahan, fined $10; Annie Morando, sixty days; George Fisher and Martin Duffy, suspended sentence; Michael Motley, two months and Patrick Motley, whose case was adjourned until tomorrow at the request of his counsel, Winfield S. Angleman, Esq.

Public Schools Reopen.

The public schools of the borough reopened yesterday after the Christmas and New Year's vacation. The city schools reopened this morning.

BOTH SEEK FREEDOM.

MOTHER AND SON GET A DIVORCE ON SAME DAY.

An Unusual Occurrence Which Caused Surprise Even in the Crowded Divorce Court of the Windy City.

Mother and son appearing at the same time in the same court, and with the same attorney, one asking a divorce from her husband and the father of her son, and the son asking a like judgment against his wife, is an unusual occurrence, even in the crowded divorce courts of Chicago.

Mrs. Frances Elmina Day and her only child, Theron W. Day, had their petitions prepared and filed simultaneously. Both charge desertion, and both ask for absolute divorce with the right to mary again. The mother after nearly 20 years of wedded life accuses her husband, Herbert Johnson Day, of cruelly maltreating her for all of ten years preceding his final desertion. He beat and kicked her, according to the allegations, and tormented her for hours by slapping pinching and choking her.

According to the woman's story, as told by the Chicago Tribune, she endured all of this uncomplainingly, and at last it was her husband, and not she, who abandoned their home, and refused thereafter to resume the unhappy life that had already lasted 17 years. Meanwhile, at Herkimer, N. Y., her son, a boy of 18, wedded a girl of about his own age. Married in haste, they hardly took time to repent at leisure. The wedding occurred June 27, 1900, and, if the young husband speaks truly, the bride left his house two months later, never to return.

After the desertion of his mother at New Hartford, N. Y., the son made his home with her for a time, and both the woman and her boy continued to plead with their absent partners to return. Their efforts to reestablish their broken homes were not successful, and, although the young man joined his mother in urging his father to come home and the mother added her prayers to those which her boy sent to his absent bride, there was no response from either of the recreant ones, and hopes of a happier reunion and of a new start in domestic life were at last abandoned.

Neither of the deserted pair had at that time any thought of divorce. They grieved together, or tried to comfort one another, and at first hoped to build one new home on the ruins of the two destroyed. In this they were not successful. Prying, unkind neighbors, the sense of disappointment in the old scenes of their happiness, the irresistible hope that in new scenes and new environment they could forget their sorrows and live in peace and mutual pride prompted them to come to Chicago.

Here for more than a year they have been happy and prosperous, but both their business and social achievements since coming to Chicago have conspired to put a new meaning and add unforseen difficulties to their condition. They began to see that if they were to begin freely as at the beginning they must be absolved from entanglements or from any claims that the sad past and its legal consequences might entail. And to this end they discussed every phase and angle of their mutual predicament, and at length determined to bring action simultaneously and to fight side by side for what they believe their rights, even as they had endured together what they believe to have been their wrongs.

The son's complaint against his wife goes no farther than the charge of desertion and absolute refusal to return. The burden of the mother's charges against her husband includes habitual drunkenness, brutality, and an attempt upon her life in April, 1901, a year before he deserted her.

Hair Came Out Beautifully.

There is still hope for baldheaded men. A Michigan philanthropist advertises a preparation of kerosene oil which will certainly bring out the hair. A middle-aged gentleman of Detroit, whose pate has become rather shiny, tried it. While reading beside a low gaslight, he arose, struck the burner with his head, and there was a sudden illumination. The hair came out beautifully. He is now as bald as a shaved big.

Good Thing for Large Feet.

A Chicago girl, whose feet are a little too large to suit her ideas of beauty, wrote to a local paper and bluntly asked: "What is good for big feet?" The wise editor promptly answered: "Big shoes."

MORE HUMANE WARFARE.

The Percentage of Deaths Steadily Diminishes as Weapons Grow More Deadly.

It is only a few years ago that M. Bloch wrote his book, "The War." This book is alleged to have moved the czar to proclaim his great message of peace. M. Bloch gave terribly realistic pictures of modern war, and prophesied that it would be impossible in the near future for nations to engage in deadly struggle. War was to cost millions of pounds sterling a day, and men were to die like flies, says the Atlanta Constitution.

But what are the facts? Two great wars have broken out in the small space of time since M. Bloch gave his opinions to the world, and in every case his deductions, with the exception of cost, have proved to be false.

The fact is that while war is becoming more humane, the risk of being killed or dying of disease is very much minimized. Less than 100 years ago it was no uncommon thing for 50,000 or 60,000 men to be knocked hors de combat in a single day. In modern warfare, despite the mathematical precision of death-dealing weapons, these figures could not possibly be approached.

And there are reasons which are not apparent at first sight. In the first place, the trajectory—the height a bullet rises from the ground—of a modern rifle is only five feet in the first 500 yards, if the rifle be aimed point blank at advancing troops.

In olden days a bullet soared high in the air, particularly at the longer ranges, but in the olden days men advanced shoulder to shoulder to the attack. A regiment marched forward en masse, but nowadays all that is changed. In an attack men rush forward, at many paces interval, and the risk of their being shot is thus much lessened.

In short, while the manufacture of lethel weapons has advanced by leaps and bounds, the science of warfare has kept pace with that advance. And, further, the science of surgery has outstripped both the cunning of the warrior and the maker of the guns.

The modern bullet is not a man-stopper. The old Schneider bullet put the strongest man out of action, and occasioned a terrible pain, if the man were not struck in a vital part.

The Martini bullet followed. It was not so heavy nor so clumsily shaped as the Schneider, and an energetic man could struggle along although wounded.

Later came the Lee-Metford bullet, with its elongated body, and unless it strikes a man on the heart or brain it does not knock him hors de combat. In fact, several men shot through the brain in China and South Africa are serving in the army to-day.

Roughly speaking, during the past 100 years the percentage of killed and wounded in battle has fallen from 23 per 100 to somewhere about ten. That was the average of casualties in South Africa.

Perhaps the most deadly engagement in the history of international war was that of Borodino, between the French and Russians. The Russians lost some 40,000 men—the loss is occasionally put at 50,000—out of an army of 121,000; while the French lost 70,000 men out of 125,000. In comparison with the casualties in modern battle, the figures are appalling.

LACE MAKING IN BELGIUM.

A Thousand Schools Impart Instruction to Women and Children Workers.

Belgium has indeed become the great lace-making center of the world. With its 1,000 lace schools and 150,000 workers—chiefly women, though tiny children and even grown-up boys are by no means exempt from this dainty duty—it is turning out millions of dollars' worth of hand-made lace each year. The women lace makers are called dentellieres, says Woman's Home Companion.

Though the shop in the Belgian city is the mecca of the fair purchaser, it is the little town with its horde of lace makers that also interests the tourist. It is common all over Belgium, in fact, to see the humble lace maker working away in front of her cottage door. Usually there is a row of them—probably a score—who have gathered from one street before one particular house, where all day long "the needle plies its busy task." Between turns of the needle or twists of the bobbin the worker sings a song commending Saint Anne, patron saint of the dentelliers, which concludes, after declaring work a burden, with the wish that "every day was the fete of Saint Anne." It is as natural for these poorer women in Belgium to make lace as to eat, and even the babies are brought up on the bobbin, as it were. The little ones are placed in a low chair at one end of the row of lace makers, and given a simple pattern to do, that perhaps another franc may be secured for the family pocketbook.

There they work, day after day, at exceedingly low pay. From seven in the morning until seven at night, the toiler bends over the pattern, usually receiving daily one franc and 25 centimes—the whole amount equal to about 25 cents in American money—or even less, only 50 centimes a day, or ten cents, being not uncommon remuneration.

World's Wheat Crop.

A summary of a review of the world's wheat crop for the present year is as follows: United States, no probable increase in acreage or improvement condition; Canada, increased area; Russia, small sowing; France, smaller area, but better average crops; Austria-Hungary, favorable prospects; Germany, appreciable improvement; Italy, not so favorable; United Kingdom, smallest area on record; Australasia, double surplus of last year; Argentina, very large crop.

PUBLIC GAME PRESERVES.

Places Established by State and Private Capital Enough for All to Hunt.

It is many years since complaints first began to be made about the private game preserve. Americans had always been free to hunt where they pleased, to fish in any waters that they could reach, and when far-sighted people saw that the game and fish must go and began to buy fishing rights or to lease shooting lands for their own private uses and to keep the public off, there was much bitter grumbling. There is complaint still, and we have lately heard much of it about the huge preserves of the Adirondacks, yet this establishment of private preserves is confined to one section of the land, says Forest and Stream.

Rivers, lakes and square miles of territory by the hundred are leased in Canada, while in the south the marshes of the sea coast are taken up from Maryland to Florida; farther inland count grounds are leased in blocks of 20,000 or 30,000 acres by single associations. What, then, is the American citizen to do, provided circumstances do not admit of his belonging to some club which owns a preserve? Obviously he must turn to free land for his game supply, and this free land must be controlled by state or federal government.

This precise point was made by the president of the United States a year or two since, when he declared that in this democracy it was the part of the government to set aside tracts where the game should be absolutely protected in order that it might overflow into unprotected territory, and so might furnish hunting and shooting to the people who otherwise could have none.

Some states have offered fine examples of what might be done in setting aside these refuges, but there are many where the drive and rush of business have been too great for them as yet to give attention to this matter. An interesting example of how the importance of such reservations is coming to be understood has been recently given by Joseph Batten, of Middlebury, Vt. Mr. Battell has lately bought Ellen mountain, which rises 4,000 feet above the town of Warren, Vt., with the purpose of converting this mountain into a park for the benefit of the citizens of his state.

The act is an interesting one and shows not only originality, but foresight. It means far more to the state than any gift that could be made. Library or public building is not to be compared with it, for libraries can be had from many men and in the far future, but the time is coming when wild land and wild creatures to stock that land cannot be had.

In an adjacent state the late Austin Corbin established his famous Blue mountain park as a hunting preserve, in which, however, so little hunting was done as hardly to interfere with the rapid increase of the wild animals there. Mount Ellen may become a lesser Blue mountain park. Let us hope that in many another state men will be found who will purchase for the benefit of their fellows large tracts of land to be used as parks or game refuges, free—under proper limitations—to the whole public.

EARLY RISING DANGEROUS.

According to a New York Medical Specialist It Is Conducive to Madness

All the spiritual descendants of Sancho Panza, that finest eulogist of slumber, should bless the name of Dr. Selden Talcott, of New York, says the Hospital. Dr. Talcott is a specialist in mental diseases, and he declares that the habit of early rising conduces to madness. "The free and lazy savage," he says, "gets up when he feels ready and rarely or never becomes insane." Dr. Talcott's protest should be considered carefully by his fellow countrymen, who, even more than the British, pride themselves on their active habits. Recently, we believe, there has been founded in New York a society whose members pledge themselves not to take more than four hours' sleep in the 24. It would be interesting to follow the health and life histories of those who keep this pledge. For we do not suppose that there is anything dangerous in early rising in itself, but only in the combination therewith of going to bed late.

On the whole, it is better to obey the old proverb and "go to bed with the lamb and get up with the lark." But it is a different thing when one combines the attempt to fulfill the latter part of the advice with a habit of going to bed with the nightingale. Yet the increasing strain of business compels early rising in those who would succeed, while if they want to combine pleasure with business they will find it impossible to get to bed before midnight or even then, for our amusements seem to begin and end later every year. The energetic people who go in for this fashion of life are apt to assure others, and themselves also, that they do not require much sleep, and undoubtedly it is possible with practice to do with much less than the normal amount of rest. It is important, however, to remember that such a habit cannot be indulged in without a corresponding sacrifice of health.

A Doubtful Compliment.

Caleb Allen, candidate for assessor of Wolfe county, was in town Friday fixing up his fences to keep out any stray candidate that might be brousing on his grazing, and so far has the field to himself. Indeed, he is running like a jack rabbit, and is so far ahead that no opponent can come in speaking distance. He is the only man, so far as the Herald konws, who wants the office.—Hazel Green Herald.

RELICS OF THE WAR.

ARMCHAIR OF GEN. LEE NOW OWNED BY OHIO VETERAN.

Plain Piece of Furniture Was Used by Confederate Chieftain All Through the War—Zollikofer's Sleeve Buttons.

Cincinnati (O.) Special.

A priceless relic of the war between the states, and one that is almost sacred in the eyes of the southern people, is in possession of J. M. Barnes, a veteran of the Union army, living on Station avenue, Winton place.

The Commercial Tribune states that it is the great armchair Gen. Robert E. Lee used in all of his campaigns from '61 to '65, and in which he sat when he surrendered the army of Northern Virginia to Gen. Grant at Appomattox courthouse.

Effort after effort has been made by former governors of Virginia, by confederate generals who fought under "Marse Bob," and who loved him well, and even by curiosity hunters, to secure the hallowed relic of the Lost Cause, but to all of them Mr. Barnes has given the same answer—that he, too, admired the great southern chieftain and intended to keep the chair as long as he lived.

Many years ago Former Gov. Wise of Virginia urgently pleaded with the owner of the chair to sell it to him in order that it might be placed in the Confederate museum, at Richmond.

Gen. Fitzhugh Lee, when governor of the Old Dominion, wrote in a similar strain.

Gen. Hawley, one of Lee's cavalry commanders, would buy it whether or no, and went so far as to send his son from Virginia to Winton Place to argue the matter with Mr. Barnes.

Colonel, now Judge, Albert S. Berry, of Newport, Ky., sent his friend, William Glenn, with an offer of purchase and a local dime museum sent a tempting offer.

At the time of the surrender at Appomattox Gen. Grant's orderly, and of whom he thought much, was J. M.

GEN. LEE'S ARMCHAIR.
(Used by Confederate Chieftain in All His Campaigns.)

Patterson, of Delaware, O., and a half-brother of Barnes. Patterson made the special request of Grant that he be allowed to keep the "Bob Lee rocker," as it was called in the confederate army. The request was granted, and the relic was shipped to the orderly's mother, Mrs. Belinda Patterson, at Delaware, who retained it until 25 years ago, when she gave it to Barnes.

The chair is a great massive piece of furniture. It is built of gum and has a cane seat and cane back. It is immensely heavy and cumbersome, but withal is comfortable and restful.

When it was captured it was in the natural wood, but a few years ago the veteran's young daughter Etha, decided that it was neither pretty nor ornamental, and taking it out in the backyard painted it a bright red and put a coat of gilt on the head piece.

Miss Etha had an unpleasant half hour when her father learned of what she had done.

Prior to that Mr. Barnes himself removed the great branching rockers and they now repose on a pile of rubbish in his cellar.

Seventeen years ago, when the National encampment of the Grand Army of the Republic met at Columbus, O., Mr. Barnes, who was then a member of Reno Post, No. 279, Williamsport, Pa., allowed the post to take the old relic to the great gathering.

There it was an object of the deepest veneration to the veterans who once hated Lee. It was surrounded by a great crowd all the time, and the old fellows considered it an honor and a privilege to sit in it.

Mr. Barnes has another relic which he prizes highly. It is a sleeve button that he took from the dead body of the confederate Gen. Zollikofer, after that officer had been shot to death by his West Point friend, Gen. Richard Frey, of the union army.

It is a cheap, gold-plated affair, and on it is enameled the head of a dragon.

"The death of Gen. Zollikofer was very dramatic," said Barnes. "It was at the battle of Mill Springs, Ky., and Zollikofer and Frey came face to face in the heat of the fight. The confederate leader smiled pleasantly at his former West Point comrade, and called out: 'How are you, Dick?'

"'Surrender!' said Frey in reply, and instantly the two men drew their revolvers. Zollikofer wore a long rain coat and this got in his way, so Frey had the draw on him first and shot him through the breast, killing him instantly."

Good Moral Prescription.

A good conscience is to the soul what health is to the body.

LEPROSY NOT DUE TO FISH

So Declares English Physician Who Has Made a Study of the Disease.

Leprosy must now be added to the other scourges which afflict South Africa. Until recently the extent to which this disease was prevalent in South Africa was little known. The fact that it existed in the Transvaal was practically quite unknown, says a London report, yet Dr. Turner, the health officer of the Transvaal, reports that whereas there were 109 cases in his charge in 1895, there are now over 200. Dr. Turner adds the remarkable fact that no one knows how many lepers there are in the Transvaal. He says that a medical officer who had been in charge of the lepers and had taken much interest in the matter asserted that there were at least 3,000 in 1899.

The disease is defying the most heroic efforts at its extermination in Cape Colon, while it is also spreading in Basutoland and elsewhere. The worst afflicted are the Hottentots; the Kaffirs, with the exception of the Europeans, being the least affected.

Prof. Jonathan Hutchinson's theory that eating fish, especially cured, is the chief cause of the disease has been fully set forth in the Sun. His arguments and statistics are expert, but hitherto have found little support. Dr. Turner, as the result of most careful investigation, differs absolutely from Dr. Hutchinson.

Official returns show that 70 per cent. of the total amount of fish entering the Transvaal goes to Johannesburg. Nearly all of this is eaten by whites, but until December there was not a single European in the Johannesburg leper hospital. Then a man who was born in Europe was admitted. He was a member of a large family, all of whom are living in the Transvaal. None of the others is a leper. In Dr. Turner's opinion, his disease was clearly the result of contagion, as he habitually associated with a leper.

Of Dr. Turner's 210 patients, 44 per cent. had eaten fish, only 17 per cent. of which was cured fish. Among the white lepers 95 per cent. had eaten fish, 45 per cent. of which was cured fish. Among the colored patients, who made up four-fifths of the total, only 20 per cent. ever tasted fish, and only ten had eaten cured fish.

Dr. Turner is convinced that contagion is the most usual means of the spread of leprosy. He treated a few cases in which it was possible to assert that its origin was hereditary, but practically none in which contagion could be excluded and several in which contagion was the sole explanation. He believes it will eventually be proved that some vermin is the cause of the infection.

INSPIRED HIM TO PREACH.

Threat That Aroused the Eloquence of a Young Circuit Rider.

In the early days of Methodism in the west, a circuit rider, if he had a large field to cover, was sometimes permitted to have a colleague just beginning to preach. Rev. John Thompson was a circuit rider in a somewhat thinly settled part of central Illinois more than 50 years ago. The colleague assigned to him was Brother James Smith, an excellent young man, but with very little experience as a preacher, says Youth's Companion.

One Sunday Mr. Thompson had an appointment at a small meeting house in the country; but having a severe cold, he asked his young assistant to go along with him and preach the sermon; and the latter, as in duty bound, obeyed orders.

Brother Smith had never undertaken to preach in the presence of his more experienced colaborer, and when, after the opening services, he arose and gave out his text he was visibly embarrassed.

He stammered through a few sentences, hesitated, made another attempt and came to a dead stop.

"What's the use, brethren," he said, sitting down. "I can't preach!"

Brother Thompson saw that the case was one in which heroic measures were necessary.

"Young man," he whispered, sternly in his ear, "you get up again and preach that sermon or I'll take you out in the grove after this meeting and give you a hard spanking, as sure as your name is Smith."

An electric shock could not have operated quicker. Brother Smith rose to his feet again, his hesitation all gone, and in ringing tones he preached a sermon that is still remembered by aged survivors of that old time congregation as the most fervid and eloquent discourse they ever heard so young a man deliver.

Proper Way to Treat Carp.

Some people who insist that the carp is an edible fish are publishing instructions for its treatment. The following is the proper one: Immediately on being landed the fish should be thoroughly bled and its veins injected full of embalming fluid to insure it from putrefaction before the hook can be taken from its mouth. It should then be rubbed thoroughly with a mixture of salt and iodoform, care being taken not to touch it with the hands, and given an air-tight coating of paraffin. It may then be turned over to a scavenger for burial with comparatively little danger of its infecting anyone with blood poison.—Peoria Herald-Transcript.

Sorry He Spoke.

The young man in the extraordinary waistcoat was fond of making up jokes.

"Did you ever hear the story of my pocketbook?" he giggled, soon after he had seated himself on the sofa.

"No," retorted the beautiful girl, "and I don't care to."

"Why, don't you think it's a good story?"

"No; there's nothing in it."—Chicago Daily News.

CARPET BED GARDENING.

Beautiful Effects of Color and Design Produced with Non-Blossoming Plants.

Everybody who passes the Jersey City hall this summer has something pleasant to say about the large flower beds which were laid out in the surrounding park, says a letter to the New York Sun. They were laid out upon an unusual plan, and in their quaint formality of design and subdued richness of color they are peculiarly grateful to the eye.

They are examples of what is known among gardeners as carpet bedding. The plot is marked off in convenient designs, exactly like a rug. Scrolls are traced on it, hearts, diamonds, and the figures that carpet weavers and wall paper designers delight in are marked out and then the entire ground is hidden with plants, generally of small leaf and close foliage, so that at a short distance the effect of a complete carpet is secured.

No blossoming plants are used for this style of gardening. Everything depends on foliage color. Masses of brown purple achyranthes form body color; sandoline is used for scroll patterns in green gray; altematteras give a deeper purple, and coleus in various shades is much used. For borders and for outlining elaborate patterns the various sorts of house leek or "hen and chickens" are specially available, and dracaenas and other thick leafing plants of low stature give variety to the effects.

The Jersey City beds were designed by a Greenville gardener who learned his art in the old country. Carpet bedding, he told a Sun man a day or two ago, is the favorite method of laying out grounds in Germany, France and Austria, but is not much used elsewhere. It has been introduced in some of the cemeteries here, but has found little favor in private gardens.

"One reason why it is not taken up," said he, "is that it is expensive in the first outlay. A circular bed, say 20 feet in diameter, will take from 7,000 to 8,000 plants to fill it. Then it has to be watched all the time. It takes the most careful weeding, and the foliage must be kept close trimmed. The minute you allow anything like luxuriance of growth your pattern is gone. So, a bed of carpet work will take as much of a man's time as a quarter of an acre of ordinary garden.

"But, on the other hand, it is one of the most satisfactory ways of laying out a garden, for the further along in summer you get the better your bed looks. There is no replanting, no withering. The plants grow closer and closer, the pattern is better and better designed; the colors deepen, and the effect is always artistic, neat, completely satisfying to the eye.

"It is a great art, one of the most beautiful forms of gardening, and I think as the love of fine garden work develops in this country, it will be exceedingly popular."

QUEER NOTION OF SERVANTS

Most of Them Prefer Employment in Hotels to Serving in Private Houses.

"Wouldn't you think a domestic servant would rather work in a private house than in a hotel?" asked the hotel manager, according to the New York Sun.

"Well, if you do think so, you are mistaken. I had such an idea until recently. I've got a pretty large family, and my wife grew tired of having the children cooped up in my hotel. So we took a house on the West side. We needed three servants, and we set out to get them.

"We thought it would be easy, for I never have any trouble in getting women to do hotel work. They come to me in droves when I need help, which is not often. Somehow a woman who gets a job in a hotel sticks to it.

"We furnished our home quickly, but started to get our servants before we moved in. I let it be known among the women employes of my hotel that I wanted three good servants. Dozens called on me. They were all willing to work in the hotel, but do you suppose they would work in my house? No, sir. They stuck up their noses at the job.

"Many of them acted as if they were insulted when I made the offer. I wanted a cook, a laundress and a chambermaid. I offered more money than I am paying to the same class of workers in my hotel, and they would not have to work nearly as hard as they would in the hotel.

"Then, again, they would have the comforts of a home, but they couldn't see it that way. They seemed to look upon a hotel job as far above a similar place in a private house.

"Of course I can see why a chambermaid would rather work in a hotel than in a private house, but I can't understand the attitude of the cooks and the laundresses. The chambermaid gets in on the tip graft in the hotel, but the cook and laundress don't.

"My folks are still living in the hotel, and it looks as if they might continue to live there. Meantime we are keeping up the search for the kind of servants we need. If we don't get them soon there will be a furnished house to lease on the upper West side."

Too Much Music.

A Chinese servant employed in a New York family who lived next door to a famous woman pianist left suddenly after only a few days' service. His knowledge of the English language was limited, and the letter which he left behind him notifying the family of his departure was written in Chinese. With the aid of an interpreter the gist of the communication was made out: "I do not mind your heathen parrot," said the letter; "I do not mind your barbarous customs of dressing and eating; but the lady next door who sits on the musical instrument every day is too much."—N. # DIPLOMAT BY TRADE.

KOGORO TAKAHIRA, JAPANESE MINISTER AT WASHINGTON.

He Is a Man Who Does His Own Thinking and Indulges in Very Little Talking—Has Had Active Career.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

A Yankee of the orient and looks like Rudyard Kipling; this is Kogoro Takahira, the Japanese minister at Washington. This description may not appear complimentary, but first observation would suggest it. In progress, pluck and energy the Yankee predominates in the Japanese's character. The stocky frame, well-knit figure, strong, black eyebrows at first glance are reminiscent of the English author and poet. A close analysis of the minister's features, however, will not sustain the comparison.

As punctilious as the strictest rules of diplomacy require, the Japanese minister at the same time is the typical, common-sense, twentieth century business man in his legation home. He goes about the modern American house in a business sack coat and striped trousers; runs up and down stairs in the most unconventional way and interests himself with every detail of legation work.

"What's the news this morning?" is his first inquiry as he reaches the breakfast table.

At his plate he finds the Washington and Baltimore morning papers, and an hour or two later he receives those of Philadelphia and New York. He is an omniverous newspaper reader. He skims through dozens every day. Every "extra" cried on the streets must be bought and brought to him. He catches at a glance the most important items, and he runs through the papers with the instinct and trained sight of a veteran exchange editor. He studies them with especial view to catch public sentiment, especially that on the eastern situation. He believes in the newspaper as the popular educator of the day and as a diplomatist he recognizes its value in disseminating his side of any issue. Newspaper correspondents are welcomed at his legation.

Minister Takahira and his staff have not abandoned all their oriental customs, but retain with great reverence some of the ceremonies so popular in their fatherland. On the emperor's birthday pictures of the emperor and empress of Japan are placed in a conspicuous manner in the parlor and the minister, his household and suite pass before them, bowing low and according them the same courtesy and reverence they would were their sovereigns there in person. This custom having been observed, a legation dinner follows, in which Japanese dishes predominate, and the emperor and empress are toasted and patriotic speeches and sentiments are indulged.

The Japanese minister is a diplomat by profession, having entered the imperial service in 1876. He was trained in the foreign office at home and his career illustrates the success of his teaching. During the 28 years he has been in the diplomatic service he has held posts of high honor in China, Korea, Holland, Italy, Austria and the United States. He is a graduate of the best Japanese colleges at Tokio, and is a man of intellectuality and culture. He is learned in Chinese philosophy and language, as well as in that of his own country. He speaks and writes fluently in several European languages and is an able English scholar.

The Washington Star says that this is not his first service in Washington, as he was appointed attache to the Japanese legation in this country in 1879 and became its secretary in 1881. A brief review of his career illustrates the success that he has met with in the diplomatic service. He became secretary of the foreign office in 1883; was made charge d'affaires in Korea in 1885; acting consul general of Shanghai in 1887; chief of the political bureau of the foreign office in 1890; consul general at New York in 1891; minister resident to Holland in 1892; envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Italy in 1894; envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to Austria in 1896; vice minister for foreign affairs in 1899, and appointed envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary to the United States in 1900.

Bicycle Does Family Washing.

A bicycle is used to do the family washing for the family of H. G. Hitner, of Edinburg, Va. His wife has a rotary washing machine, and to this his bicycle is ingeniously attached. The clothes and soap and water having been put in the machine, Hitner mounts his stationary wheel, puffs on a cigar and pedals for about an hour. At the end of that time the washing is done.

The dress pictured is a charming creation in dark brown cloth. The skirt is made to simulate an overskirt cut at the bottom in undulations, which hang over a petticoat of brown velvet trimmed with brown taffeta silk braid. About the waist the skirt is laid in plaits. The bodice is draped crosswise around the figure, and a surplliced band of braid trimmed velvet fits about a chemisette of yellow chiffon and lace. The sleeves are formed at the wrist of puffed yellow chiffon and at the elbow are banded with velvet. Braid ornaments catch the wrinkled upper sleeve.

Costumes For Small Girls—Modern Jewelry Barbaric In Design.

"Buster Brown" costumes for very little girls are among the newest things in children's fashions. The suits are of dark wool in different shades of red, blue or brown, with just a touch of trimming in the form of a gay belt or possibly a few buttons. In their very plainness lies their smartness.

Barbaric splendor reigns in the jewelry modes. The Chinese clasp, with its huge matrix of colored stones, has taken the place occupied so long by the turquoise matrix.

Some beautiful petticoats are of brown taffeta with printed flower design in delicate tones of pink and blue,

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

Miss May Sutton, the remarkable young tennis player who holds the Pacific coast and national championship titles, has acquired the title of western champion at the recent tournament at Chicago. After easily winning her way to the finals, she obtained the title by default, as the former holder, Miss Myrtle McAleer, of Pittsburg, was prevented by illness from defending it. Although only 17 years of age, Miss Sutton is a remarkable player. She has all the characteristics of a man in her play, and hits the ball even better than did Miss Pound, a former western champion, noted for her strong strokes, but instead of throwing the force and weight of her whole body into the stroke, as Miss Pound did, Miss Sutton uses only the swing of her arm to give the ball momentum In this way she never loses control of her foot-work and is always to be found wherever the ball is. Her ability to follow the ball around and get into the right place to return it, is the best feature to her playing, critics declare. She is always ready to meet the ball and she generally gets in position with very little effort. Her drives are strong and decidedly accurate, and it is seldom that she makes a "double." At the net she has developed a phenomenal smash, which she uses with manlike strength. All of her strokes are as strong as most men players'. In comparison with her rivals, she far outshines them in the strength of her strokes. She is much stronger physically. Though decidedly fast on her feet and a quick thinker, Miss Sutton is a calm, cool, deliberate and steady player throughout. Miss Sutton does not wear spiked shoes, as is customary among all the other players in the west. Instead, she plays in common, every-day, rubber-soled tennis slippers. She says she has always been used to them and that she likes them far better than the spiked shoes. Tennis is Miss Sutton's favorite sport. She is, however, an excellent golf player, proficient in basketball and a good swimmer. She is, in fact, one of the best all-around woman athletes in the country. This is her sixth year at tennis. She began playing when she was 11 years old. Her improvement was so rapid in this one season, however, that she induced her parents to permit her to enter tournament competition the following year. She won smash after smash and finally the championship of the Pacific coast. Since then her game has become better year after year. She is to-day without a peer in the country among the women players.

A. H. Parker, of Bedford, Mass., who recently paid $32,000 for Bingen, 2:06¾, one of the most sensational racing and breeding stallions of the age, invested a larger sum in one piece of horseflesh than anyone had done in 12 years. Bingen will head the stud of what promises to rank with the greatest stock farms of the United States. This splendid horse is 11 years old, and he was bred at Lexington, Ky. In New England he is regarded as one of the greatest speed sires in the world. Only two or three times in the history of horse breeding has a trotting sire brought as much as Bingen under the hammer. In 1889 the young stallion Bell Boy, 2:19¾, was sold at Lexington, Ky., for $51,000, and shortly afterward Anteeo, 2:16¼, brought $55,000 at the same place, but there were doubts about the genuineness of the latter transaction. E. H. Harriman paid $41,000 for Stamboul at the closing-out sale of W. S. Hobart's stud in 1892, since when the price paid by A. H. Parker for Bingen has not been approached at public sale.

Two new bicycle records have been established on the Salt Lake track, Utah, professional, and E. B. Reagren, of California, amateur. Samuelson rode ten miles in a competition race from scratch in 21:29 3-5, lowering the record held by W. A. Vaughn by nine seconds. Reagren established a new amateur record for a two-mile competition race, riding the distance in 4:06 2-5, or 6 2-5 seconds under the former record.

MODISTIC FANCIES.

The Picks Once More a Favorite at Fashion.

Velvet faced cloth and cashmeres are the materials of the season most popular for smart gowns. A pretty idea for trimming these dresses is to thread the cloth or cashmere with velvet ribbon.

A stunning trimming of the winter is to trim a costume with a deep fur band at the hem. Narrow edges are applied about the coat if revers of the fur are not used.

Lace fichus are again in fashion and prove a boon to the thin woman. If made of some kind of lacy net and trimmed with a handsome lace edge a fichu transforms the simplest kind of waist into a dressy bodice. The ends are usually long, falling almost if not quite to the knee.

Blond lace makes an attractive fichu-like cape. A ruffle of the same made double edges the entire fichu. A plain net fichu finished with lace ruffles is equally smart.

There are endless ways of arranging the fichu. It may be doubled and tied around the shoulders like a cape or simply crossed at the waist and held in place by a silk or net chou.

Empire scarfs are dainty little accessories for the evening toilet, and a picturesque girl can use one of these scarfs to telling advantage. They are four yards long and one wide and usually made of painted or embroidered chiffon.

The gown illustrated is of deep purple chiffon velvet. The skirt is perfectly plain and falls in long, graceful lines. The very youngest three-quarter coat is box plaited in the back and held in front with a pointed girdle of the velvet. Handsome buttons trim the coat in front and outline the high cuff at the elbow. The lower part of the sleeve is of white lace tied here and there with narrow velvet ribbon.

HINTS ON NECKWEAR.

The New Turnover Collars Are Dainty and Easy to Make.

Quite the newest and smartest of the many neck ruches worn is that of plaited lisse edged with a bright silk tartan plaid. This finish is very becoming and so narrow as not to be in the least clumsy.

Other neck trimmings have several rows of Scotch bias silk mounted on a tape ready to be sewed in a dress neck at a moment's notice.

Dainty and expensive are the collar and cuff sets of embroidered chiffon and the India mull sets exquisitely worked and bordered with a plaiting of the mull.

The newest sleeves for the shirt waist have a slight fullness at the armhole, scarcely any at the cuff and a distinct widening out at the elbow.

A pretty idea is illustrated in the shirt waist seen in the cut. The material is broadcloth in a pastel shade of gray. The fullness hangs in plaits from a shield shaped empiecement of the cloth. A band of strapping neatly stitched on the edges and trimmed with buttons outlines the fronts. About the neck is a square effect in stitched cloth, over which hangs a jabot of lace. The sleeves are full and plaited at the top. The outside fullness is taken in at the wrist in plaits overlaid with mitered straps ornamented with buttons.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

That golfers are expansionists is fully demonstrated by the results of the leading events of the past season and the time does not seem to be far distant when a genuine world's championship will be played. American golfers competed in both the men's and women's British championships, the British woman champion competed in the American championship tournament, and British and American players took part in the German championship. The outcome of the leading tournaments was gratifying as in nearly every instance new champions appeared and the monotony of individual successes or of the division of the spoils amongst a small coterie of experts was broken. First, and most noteworthy, was the winning of the British amateur championship by Walter J. Travis, of the Garden City Golf club, of New York, a performance which electrified the golfing world. Then Jack White snatched the British open championship away from Varden. Braid, Taylor and Herd, and Miss Charlotte Dod annexed the women's championship from such favorites as Miss Adair and Miss Hezlett. Following his wonderful work in England, Travis was generally picked to win the United States championship, but here, again, the critics were at fault, for his hopes were snuffed out in the first round, and H. Chandler Egan, the brilliant young Chicago player, won the highest golfing honors this country affords. Miss Georgeanna Bishop's victory in the women's championship was another surprise, as several others were considered stronger candidates. In the national and western open championships the victories of Willie Anderson were true to form. On her successes of the season Miss J. A. Carpenter was favorite for the women's western event, but here again came an upset, as Miss Everett finished first. Just when H. Chandler Egan was looked upon as a sure winner of the golfing championship, George S. Lyon, the former Canadian champion, loomed up strongly and eventually won. In many of the state and sectional tournaments there was a shifting around of titles. Looked at from a nonpartisan standpoint, the sports of the season were opportune, and cannot fail to benefit the sport in general. As far as this country is concerned, the results indicate that the young native golfer has caught on in his branch of sport as quickly as other youngsters have done in other branches of athletics, and there seems every reason to believe that within a few years this country will be able to send a team to England that will be able to compare with the leading team there.

W. J. Travis.

Alta P. McDonald has driven more sensational miles behind trotters and pacers in 1904 than any reinsman ever did before him in the history of the turf. He is the only driver who ever drove two performers in one year to as sensational world's records as that held by Dariel, 2:02¾, the champion pacing mare, and Major Delmar, 2:01¼, the world's champion trotter, both performances without the wind shield. McDonald virtually developed both Dariel and Major Delmar. He has now had the latter three seasons, while when Dariel came into his care she only had a mark of 2:07½. With the aid of the wind shield he marked Major Delmar and Dariel miles in 1:59¾ and 2:00¾, respectively. McDonald's marvelous record of extreme speed miles behind the cracks he has driven this season stands as a mark not likely to be excelled by any other driver for perhaps years to come. He has driven Major Delmar in 2:01¼, 2:01¾, four times in 2:02¾ (equaling the best previous trotting record without the wind shield), twice in 2:02¾ and again in 2:03, and to the high-wheeled sulky he has marked the great gelding at 2:07, lowering Maud S.'s long-standing record of 2:08¾. As noted above, he has driven Dariel in 2:02⅝ this year, so all told this season he has ridden 11 miles on different occasions in 2:03 or better. Every start of Sweet Marie with McDonald behind her the great mare has won and he gave her the present race record she holds, 2:04¾. He also drove Prince Alert, 1:59¾, to his record at Syracuse, the fastest mile the boppled king ever paced, with a pacemaker at his side. He has also this season marked Albert, 2:04¾, and drove McKinley to victory in 2:06¾, that gelding's best record. In the Transylvania with Sweet Marie he equaled the record of Budd Doble and W. O. Foote by driving two winners of the great classic, he having previously piloted Anzie to victory in that rich event, and he also with Sweet Marie won the most sensational Transylvania ever-trotted, thus atoning for his defeat in that race when behind Major Delmar in 1902. McDonald spent his boyhood days in Glens Falls, N. Y., and for years his stable was conducted at that city. It is odd that the horse which has given him his greatest fame on the turf claims Glens Falls as his birthplace. McDonald has had a number of years in Albany, N. Y., where he owns valuable roadhouse property, and from November until June he is always at home. He is now one of a border of 50 horses and is a good father.

SMART STYLES.

Peacock Feathers a Fashionable Fancy For Millinery.

Peacock feathers are a fashionable trimming for hats and are used in all their natural glory or dyed to match the colorings of the chapeau.

Turnover collars and cravats of silk are very becoming with French knots worked in colors contrasting or harmonizing with the blouse or dress on which they are placed.

Evening gloves are no longer either all white or all black, but are to be had in pale tints exactly matching the dainty shades used for evening gowns. Street gloves are still in the masculine styles of the last few years, but for theater wear gloves are a little heavier, more after the walking type and weight, and fasten with one button. Mousquetaire gloves are worn with elbow sleeves.

Some of the daintiest sleeves on evening dresses are plain and close fitting to the elbow, where they flare out in several full ruffles either of the material or of lace and chiffon.

A neat hat is herewith illustrated. It is something of a three cornered affair of mole colored felt. The brim is bound with a cord of velvet exactly matching the felt. The sole trimming is a chou of violet velvet ribbon, and gray brown bird wings are perched jauntily at one side.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

Materials For Winter Walking and Afternoon Frocks.

There is no doubt that velvet, cloth and cashmere are the three materials that reign supreme in winter fashions. The sporting tailor is running riot in the matter of homespuns, Scotch tweeds and Irish friezes, and in these three latter materials there are some lovely mixtures in rather light shades. Blues and greens blend beautifully, but a warmer note is struck by red and brown mixtures.

At the recent New York horse show these tweed tailor built costumes were much in evidence for morning wear among the sporty set who attended the show in the early hours to worship at the shrine of the noble animal the horse and not to prance about in the dress parade of the afternoon and evening. The gowns were made with short, unlined skirts devoid of trimming except, perhaps, stitching and strappings. The coats were usually of the three-quarter length and loose, without the least suggestion of a fit to be found in their graceful folds. Some of the coats were belted in at the back, and others hung straight and full from the shoulders. A coat of this kind when properly cut rather emphasizes than conceals a graceful figure. Linen collars, smart mannish ties and small hats accompanied these frocks.

The illustration offers a suggestion for a girl's gown carried out in smooth faced green cloth. The skirt, which is fairly full, is trimmed with lines of fine tailor stitching arranged in battlement form around the hem. Bands of stitching appear upon the coat and on the gauntlet cuffs, the latter being finished by dainty little frills of lace. Instead of stitching, the gown would be very stunning trimmed with rows of Russian braid exactly matching the cloth.

IN FASHION'S REALM.

White a Second Color Favorite. Chiffon Capes.

The modish fur neck pieces this season are small scarfs. They are not knotted in fourin-hand style, as they were last year, but are simply looped over, one end hanging down directly in front and the other thrown over the shoulder and adorning the back.

These neck pieces are all made up plain without heads or tails as trimmings. They are lined with satin and are spatulate at the ends.

The muffs belonging to the most expensive sets are plain and smaller than they were last winter. In shape they are oblong and sharply curved at the upper edge.

All white is second favorite this season. Silver gray, mauve, scarlet, rose pink and German blue are the predominating colors.

Panama is a cloth that is meeting with approval for walking gowns. It comes in plain colors and is a desirable substitute for the more expensive broadcloths. The Panama cloth is fifty inches wide and costs $1.50 a yard.

At the opera and theater dainty capes of chiffon are in evidence. These soft and filmy coverings have warmth as well as beauty and are a decided protection from the drafts of the foyer. The smartest capes have hoods which are thrown becomingly over the head.

The frock illustrated is of pastel green cloth. On each side of the front width are panels of white cloth strapped with black braid finished with buttons. The sleeves and jacket are trimmed in the same fashion. About the shoulder cape and vest of white cloth are bands of brown fur.

MODES IN FURS.

Muffs of Many Shapes—Stunning Styles In Fur Lined Coats.

Muffs are many and varied as to shape, though everything is a variation of the flat muff. Square muffs, carriage muffs and "tea cozy" muffs are equally good style. But perhaps the quaintest of them all are the "Peggy from Paris" muffs that pull up on heavy silk cords or ribbons like a bag.

Cloth coats, either made quite to the ground or of the three-quarter length, lined with fur, are taking the world by storm. They are loose, baggy affairs of brown, blue or gray cloth, lined with white squirrel. Their usefulness is of the all round order, reaching from automobiling to evening wear.

Ermine, which has had such a vogue since the coronation, is still as popular as ever. The newest fur fad is for eastern mink, which is of the natural color, rather lighter than the "blend."

In furs children's sets, ranging from those worn by tiny tots up, are of gray or brown squirrel, white or brown fox, Angora and lamb's wool, and a favored few are of ermine. These sets are built after the grown-up shapes and are quite as smart in their way.

Rust red cloth is the material from which the pretty waist herewith illustrated is constructed. The fronts are in a series of tucks scalloped at the bust and trimmed with red silk ornaments. The leg of mutton sleeves have up the center a scalloped piece of cloth adorned with the braid trimming.

FURS OF THE DAY.

Automobile Fur Capes With Hoods Are Becoming.

The furs a la mode for the moment are undoubtedly ermine, white fox and sable. Ermine costs, semititting, are a great deal used for carriage wear. A pretty example has a deep collar of yellow lace and quaint cords and tassels for fastenings. It is lined with a delicate shade of green silk. The toque of ermine to be worn with this wrap has ivy and mistletoe for trimming.

Some charming fur capes especially designed for evening wear have a lining of soft silk or satin in pale shades and a deep capuchin hood lined in the same manner. The cape reaches to the waist, being usually carried out in ermine, chinchilla or sable. The hood is elaborately embroidered around the border in colored silk or in gold or silver with a heavy gold tassel as a finish. Capes of cloth made along these lines and bordered with an edge of some inexpensive fur would be stunning.

The longer fur capes for automobile wear are also treated with fur hoods and prove of the greatest comfort to the chauffeuse during cold winter rides in the evening. Separate fur hoods for automobiling have narrow fur capes attached and are worn with the great coats.

The toque pictured is a most becoming affair made of sable. The new argus quills outline the brim, and three feathers of the same kind are placed in an upright position at the side, finished with a velvet bow. A handsome sable boa is worn with this smart hat.

VOGUE OF THE WAISTCOAT.

Tiny Buttons Used to Outline Seams. A Blouse Novelty.

The vogue for the waistcoat on both coats and gowns is becoming more pronounced than it has ever been before. Some of the new examples are in plain silk, cloth or satin, without any embroidery whatever and buttoned down the front with a row of tiny buttons. A pale gray cloth costume boasts a tight fitting waistcoat of white watered silk piped with pale pink panne and adorned with tiny round opal buttons.

A curious development of the craze for buttons is shown in the case of a gown of rough gray cheviot tweed. It is fashioned with lapped seams on blouse and skirt, each being outlined with a row of tiny gray leather buttons considerably smaller than the top of a hatpin. The gown has no other adornment except a belt of soft gray suede fastened with heavy Egyptian looking clasps of oxidized silver set with imitation scarabs. The sleeves are full to the elbow and tight below.

One of the daintiest blouses seen recently is constructed of alternate bands of black panne ribbon or velvet and white lace insertion. The lace is mounted over ombre ribbon in no less than three shades. The darkest portion of the ribbon is placed at the side seams, and the light ends meet in the center.

An ideal material for a dressing gown is zenana cloth. This material has a silky surface and a woolen back. The charming dressing gown illustrated is carried out in this fabric in a lovely shade of peach pink. It is simply cut and is full enough to wrap around the feet. It is lined with pongee and has a large collar of net and a jabot of lace down the front and around the hood.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Thursday, Jan 5, 1905.

Happy New Year!

As Monday will be a holiday, there will be no issue of The Daily Press.

Thomas Lawson was in the game until he believed that smarter ones were getting the lion's share and now he wishes the dear public to believe that his revelations are published solely in their interest.

Some things we hope for in 1905:

Ordinance to prevent spite houses.

Establishment of municipal collection of garbage.

Federal appropriation for a new postoffice building.

Increase of liquor license fee in North Plainfield.

Considerable addition to the police force.

Coming as a surprise to North Plainfield, which had about abandoned hope of any relief from the court, the action of the Somerset County grand jury yesterday in recommending to Judge Schenck that the excise regulations in North Plainfield be made more compatible with those of this city is, to say the least, very timely. The midnight brawls and hilarious scenes in the borough can be attributed largely to one fact and that is that the saloon men have greater liberties than the same class in Plainfield. Think of the deplorable situation—one from which the court refused relief. Plainfield and North Plainfield—independent municipalities—to the eye but one community; to the law two distinct jurisdictions. Plainfield governs its own saloons, but according to the statutes, North Plainfield must be bound by the decisions of a court miles away. Here the saloons close promptly at 11 o'clock. In North Plainfield they are allowed to keep pouring out rum all night. Plainfield has increased its license fee to $1,000. North Plainfield, or rather the Somerset County court charges for North Plainfield, but $350. Bearing in mind that the two places are separated only by an imaginary geographical line, who, in the name of common sense, in the name of common decency, could refuse to make the excise regulations uniform?

In the annual reports of the various departments submitted to Common Council last night, are many suggestions for improvements in the several branches of municipal work which can not fail to interest those who have the welfare of the city at heart. For this reason we publish today the text of some of the reports and propose to reproduce others in the next issue. Chief Kiely asks for more patrolmen and points out why they are needed. No one will gainsay the fact that the numerical strength of the police department is not what it should be. The department is efficiently conducted and the city fathers will no doubt see the wisdom of following the suggestions made by the head of the force. Interesting throughout is the report of the street committee which shows the vast amount of work accomplished under the direction of the energetic and able commissioner, Andrew J. Gavett, the most modest and hardworking official of the city. Particular attention is called to the committee's reference to the new vitrified brick pavement on Watchung avenue, of the street sprinkling system. Both are regarded as successful experiments. As for the report of Chief Doane, of the fire department, its salient feature is the urgent recommendation for a fire house in the East End. The public will no doubt concur with the Chief that the Netherwood section of the city should be better protected than it is at the present time, and we believe that the Common Council will seriously consider the recommendation made. Unfortunately the report of the Board of Health was not ready for presentation last night. When it does appear we hope to find that the health authorities ask for the immediate establishment of the proposed system of garbage collection and disposal.

Y. M. C. A. Boys' Service.

The annual New Year's boys' service at the Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon, at which Harry G. Thompson presided, was largely attended. The speakers were Harold Robins and William Flanders, both members of the boys' department. There was special music.

Quietly Married.

Miss Lavinia A. McCord and James Walker, both of this city, were quietly married by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck at his home on West Front street, Wednesday evening. Only the necessary witnesses were in attendance. Mr. and Mrs. Walker will make their home in this city.

HISTORIC MILL IN FLAMES

Old Plant on Somerset Street is Partially Destroyed.

MYSTERIOUS BLAZE

Loss is Estimated at $4,000—Much Grain Stored in the Building Totally Lost.

Fire, which broke out probably about midnight on Saturday and was first detected by Albert V. Trotter, of Chatham street, at 1:10 Sunday morning, partially destroyed French's mill on Somerset street and caused the total loss of a large stock of grain, flour, feed and hay owned by Percy S. Dayton, the lessee. Trotter, who is an employe of the N. Y. and N. J. Telephone Co., was passing the mill when he saw smoke and flames at the rear. A second glance sent him to fire alarm box number twelve at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, from which he sent in the alarm.

Chief Doane, on his arrival, found the front of the structure, which is framed of oak and brick filled, filled with a dense smoke, the fire being all in the rear where it was so hot as to make the small space surrounding almost untenable.

Stored in the second floor of the rear portion of the mill was a large quantity of sawdust and some baled shavings. In the Chief's opinion the fire was probably an hour at least in making the headway it had attained when he first saw it.

At the end of ten minutes fierce fighting, the Chief sent a call for the steamer and Hose Company No. 3, thus throwing his whole fighting strength into the task.

The six powerful streams of water slowly but surely made head against the flames and at the end of the first two hours, the firemen began to feel that they were practically in control of the situation, although the flames were not nearly out. For the first half-hour they appear to gain in fact, spreading from the rear extension where they originated, to the main structure, setting the upper stories in flames. In combating this fresh outbreak, Assistant Chief Murray, with Edward Gaston and other firemen took a line of hose into the upper floors by way of the stairs. They met a backdraught which drove them out and they reported the place so hot that the water which dripped down on them fairly scalded their hands.

Finally the floor beams and rafters of the rear part where the fire was hottest gave way and the greater part of the rear fell in on itself and burned merrily for a time despite the firemen's best efforts.

Recovering from this temporary check, the firemen made steady progress, soaking the heap of shattered timbers until the last spark was out. The recall signal was given at 9:10 Sunday morning.

Perhaps the most welcome of the spectators, was Erwin Neighbor, of the borough, who appeared at the fire with a pail of steaming coffee, from Timbo's all-night restaurant. He found the refreshing drink so popular that he made several trips in order that none might be slighted.

While the rear section of the mill is a complete wreck, the front is intact with the exception of damage by smoke and water. The stock of grain and kindred products, however, will be a total loss. The loss on the building is estimated at about $4,000. Strange to say, the machinery of the entire plant escaped injury.

At 3:30 Sunday afternoon the firemen returned and thoroughly "wet down" the debris, turning the smouldering stuff over time after time until there was not a dry particle left. This performance was watched by several hundred sightseers who gathered from all over the city and from near-by towns, the reports of the conflagration having been exaggerated in some quarters.

The plant, a part of which dates back over one hundred years, when it was erected as a saw mill, was operated continuously as a flour mill by P. M. French until his death about four years ago.

In the early days the old mill was the central figure and it is conceded that it was largely instrumental in the building up of Plainfield. It was first built in 1755 and first stood near Tier's dam; but was moved to the present site in 1782. It was owned successively by Samuel Webster, Taylor Webster, David F. Randolph, the three brothers, John, Samuel and William Manning, jointly; Randolph Stelle and Mcurins L. Shepard, jointly; then by Miles Swanney and P. M. French, jointly, and in 1842 Mr. French purchased the half interest owned by Mr. Swanney and continued to operate the mill about up to the time of his death in April, 1901, being the sole owner of what is now the French estate.

In 1853 the mill was rebuilt and in 1870 the raceway was covered with a brick arch. The mill property at one time comprised a flour and grist mill, a saw mill, a cider mill and a distillery and in connection there was a large hog yard occupying the space opposite the mill from the driveway to where the bridge now is, in which several hundred hogs were kept. The original old mill still serves as a barn, its timbers being in good condition, although 140 years old.

W. V. Snyder, of Ohio, operated the mill for a time and he was succeeded by Percy Dayton, who now conducts the business. Mr. Dayton carried $2,000 insurance on the contents, while the French estate carried $5,000 insurance on the mill property. The structure will undoubtedly be rebuilt and Mr. Dayton will continue the business.

AMUSEMENTS.

What all players seek—a season in New York—has been found by the members of Henry W. Savage's "College Widow" company, which continues on its uninterrupted way at the Garden Theatre. As an example of true American comedy, George Ade's satirical play stands by itself and its run in New York will be indefinite. Dorothy Tennant continues her girlish coquetry in the title role, while Amy Ricard, Gertrude Quinlan, Lida McMillan, Frederick Truesdell, Frederick Burton, George E. Bryant, Edgar L. Davenport, Edwin Holt, Stephen Maley, Morgan Coman, Thomas Delmar and the other members of the cast contribute to the success of the play.

The Klaw & Erlanger Comedy Company made an immense hit at the Liberty Theatre last Monday evening in John J. McNally's new musical play, "In Newport." Marked individual successes were scored by Peter F. Dailey, Fay Templeton, Joe Coyne, Virginia Earle and Lee Harrison. The remainder of the organization made a splendid impression. The big chorus of strikingly pretty girls, unquestionably the most attractive now appearing in New York, were enthusiastically applauded in all their specialties and concerted numbers. "In Newport" is not only a success, but it is also a great novelty. The second act, showing the stage of the Casino at Newport, is a travesty on society entertainments and incidentally presents many of the very funny incidents noticed during the rehearsal of a musical production. The curtain rises on a bare stage with all the scenery stacked against the back wall. Choruses and dances are rehearsed as they are for a new piece and a very novel inside view of stage life is presented. In the last act there is another novelty in the form of an actual football game on the stage between two teams of girls, in the costume of the gridiron, who kick and tackle with all the vim of college boys. From the standpoint of scenery and costumes, "In Newport" is superb and is quite the most brilliant musical comedy production now running in New York.

The success of Mrs. Fiske and the Manhattan Company at the Manhattan Theatre, New York, in "Leah Kleschna," C. M. S. McLellan's ingenious and powerful drama, is the greatest yet recorded in New York this season, if not the greatest in several years. The unanimous and enthusiastic verdict of the New York press in favor of this production has been indorsed by a public enthusiasm quite as notable, and the Manhattan Theatre, even in the ante-holiday season—the worst period that the theatre experiences during the year—has been and is crowded nightly. There is no doubt that "Leah Kleschna" will run to full patronage throughout the season at the Manhattan, or that even that the end of the season it will be a play to conjure with. Aside from the prime merits of the play itself—its highly original and dramatic story and its strongly-contrasting array, of characters—"Leah Kleschna" in the acting is the most satisfying drama seen in years.

Mattress Set Afire.

In some unexplained manner a mattress was set on fire at the home of Henry Kingslow, the colored restaurant man, 655 West Third street, shortly after 1 o'clock Sunday afternoon. The fire apparatus was not required. Apparently someone had been enjoying a smoke while in bed, but this was denied by the tenants.

Snatched Her Pocketbook.

Miss Mary McMann, of West Seventh street, had a small purse containing some money snatched from her hand on Friday night, by a young man, of whom she can give but a scanty description, as she was passing along Central avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets.

Now a City Editor.

John Jason McGowan, formerly a reporter for The Daily Press, and since occupying a similar position on The Elizabeth Journal, has been promoted. He succeeds John Keat as city editor on the county seat's leading paper.

Society Dinner Party.

Mr. and Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, of Franklin place, gave a dinner party New Year's night, in honor of some out-of-town friends. Covers were laid for twelve.

SANITARY IMPROVEMENTS

President of Health Board Favors Garbage Collection.

IMPORTANT PROBLEMS

Former Mayor Fisk's Annual Report to Common Council As Head of Health Bureau.

In his annual report to the Common Council, Monday, President Charles J. Fisk advocated the inauguration of a municipal system of garbage collection and disposal and also a house-to-house sanitary inspection system. In his report he stated:

"There are two matters referred to in the report of the health officer that should receive particular attention by the authorities of the city. First, the question of collecting and disposing of the garbage of our city. The Council has already secured the building and land necessary for the erection of a crematory and should take up immediately the equipment of this building with the required apparatus, and make arrangements for a system of collection under the superintendence of the proper city officials.

"Our city is growing rapidly and each year this problem becomes of more and more importance. As stated in the report of the health officer 'the present system is not only most unhealthful and unsanitary but is also expensive' and the work could be done by the city in a systematic way at a much less cost to the various householders.

"The other matter is house-to-house inspection. A glance at the report of the health officer cannot help but convince the most casual reader of the importance of this work. If the nuisances referred to in this report are allowed to remain and the plumbing systems are not properly looked after, the health of the inhabitants of the city is very sure to suffer. While those owning their own houses as a usual thing are particular about the sanitary arrangements, landlords and others renting houses, particularly in the poorer part of the city, seem to think all such precautions are absolutely unnecessary and try to do as little as possible. It is the duty of the Board of Health and city authorities not only to see that the health of the tenants is protected but also that all these places are properly cleaned and that every house is put in a sanitary condition in order to protect the general health of the city.

"As in the past few years, especial attention has been given to the milk supply of the city with very good results, and we can safely say that Plainfield is now being supplied with a good, wholesome product, produced under as sanitary conditions as possible. However, this is a matter that needs constant care and must be given most careful attention."

POLITICIANS' DAY.

Senator Kean and Representative Fowler Hold Receptions.

Plainfield's Republican politicians attended the New Year's receptions held by United States Senator John Kean and County Chairman Hamilton F. Kean, and by Representative Charles Newell Fowler at their homes in Elizabeth Monday. Ursino, the Kean estate, was thronged by a crowd representing every district in the county.

Among the Plainfielders were Elias H. Bird, S. P. T. Wilbur, Charles A. Reed, Charles Foster, Andrew McCardell, Herbert Buxton, George Tobin, J. T. MacMurray, G. L. Jenkins, William L. Glosk, R. I. Tolles, Frank H. Smith, Alexander Ayres, E. T. VanWinkle, Joseph Noonan, Thomas Hanna, Dr. T. S. Davis, Frank W. Randolph, P. S. Kiely and James F. Buckle. At Mr. Fowler's home songs were rendered by Messrs. Foster, Wilbur, Ayres, Glosk, Kiely and McCardell.

JUNIOR DANCE.

Young Folks Enjoy the Annual Event At the Park Club.

The annual Junior dance at the Park Club on Saturday night was one of the most successful ever held and was largely attended by young people from both the city and borough, while there were a few out-of-town guests. Those sixteen years of age and under were given the use of the floor until 9 o'clock, when refreshments were served to them. After that those between sixteen and twenty-one years of age were given the privileges of the floor for dancing until 12 o'clock. The usual Christmas decorations were used on this occasion. The patronesses were the members of the entertainment committee—Mrs. George D. Hallock, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen, Mrs. Walter M. McGee, Mrs. Charles A. Reed and Mrs. Townsend Rushmore.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Mohring, formerly of this city, but now of Brooklyn, spent New Year's with Plainfield relatives.

Work Done by Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow During the Year Just Closed.

Health Officer Leon R. Thurlow presented a voluminous report to the Common Council, Monday, in connection with that of the Board of Health's annual statement.

The report presents two important problems—a sanitary survey of the city and a municipal collection and disposal of the garbage of the city. It is noted that a sanitary survey was started in 1904, but owing to lack of funds was not completed. It is strongly urged that a sufficient sum to complete the survey be appropriated. It is also recommended that some system of garbage collection and disposal be adopted before the coming summer.

There have been 286 deaths recorded, which represents a death rate of 17.07 per thousand population. This is a much higher death rate than usual and is due in a great measure to the large number of deaths of elderly people.

There were 338 births during the year, representing a rate of 20.18 per thousand. There were sixteen stillbirths and 125 marriages.

During the year 1904, 387 cases of communicable diseases were reported, 58 of which resulted in death.

| Disease. | Cases. | Deaths. |
|---|---|---|
| Scarlet fever.......... | 37 | 1 |
| Diphtheria.......... | 53 | 4 |
| Chicken pox.......... | 26 | 0 |
| Measles.......... | 171 | 0 |
| Typhoid fever.......... | 38 | 9 |
| Tuberculosis.......... | 59 | 44 |
| Small pox.......... | 1 | 0 |
| | 387 | 58 |

Free vaccination was offered to the public in view of the widespread exposures from small-pox, but twenty-three persons availed themselves of this privilege. During the past few years there has been a constantly increasing demand for disinfection, due to the fact that the householder is realizing more than ever the necessity for this. During the past year 201 rooms were disinfected.

During the year ice sold in the city came from four different sources, two artificial and two natural, and is of exceptionally good quality.

The list of violations of the city ordinances is as follows:

Defective plumbing systems, 88; ashes mixed with garbage, 27; heaps of garbage, 25; heaps of manure, 10; privy vaults which required cleaning, 19; cesspools which required cleaning, 823; abandoned privy vaults not properly filled, 1; abandoned cesspools not properly filled, 1; abandoned wells not properly filled, 1.

Considerable space is devoted to the question of garbage collection and disposal. It is estimated that over $1,200 is spent yearly for the removal at irregular intervals of the refuse from less than one-third of the houses. The cost as estimated by the joint committee of the collection and disposal of the entire garbage of the city is $6,000 a year. A thorough system would necessitate three single-horse metal carts with six men—two men to each cart.

The report mentions the extensive work performed by the joint committee, including the resolutions that the plant formerly owned by the Plainfield Sanitary Company, be purchased by the city, which was done, and that a municipal system be adopted.

There were filed during the year 143 plumbing plans. There was one prosecution for violation of the plumbing ordinances. Their total number of nuisances investigated during the year was ninety-eight.

Several pages of the report are devoted to the milk supply, giving the names of all dealers doing business in the city and the quality of the milk sold. Mr. Thurlow states that the milk sold in Plainfield today is cleaner and of better quality than ever before and it comes from cleaner and better dairies.

GERMANS CELEBRATE.

Gesang and Turn Vereln Observes New Year's in Saengerbund Hall As Usual.

The New Year's celebration at Saengerbund Hall in the borough Sunday night, was attended by a crowd which expressed great pleasure in the musical numbers rendered under the direction of Herr Hermann Eichborn. Solos by Charles Dressell, baritone; recitations by A. Wolff; selections by the singing section and a couple of one-act sketches, made up the programme.

At midnight Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra struck up a waltz, and dancing commenced.

NEW YEAR'S ASSEMBLY A CHARMING AFFAIR

PLAINFIELD'S SOCIETY LEADERS ENJOY DANCE AT CASINO.

The first of three assemblies, which will be given this season at the Casino by Plainfield society folk, took place Saturday night. The dance included a gathering of about 200 people, and a thoroughly enjoyable evening was the result. The Casino, under the direction of Maze Edwards, presented a charming appearance, beautifully decorated in red and green. On and near the stage, masses of potted plants, palms and greens made an attractive background for the glittering ball room, while festoons and clusters of holly were everywhere in evidence.

The music was furnished by Austin, of Brooklyn. Davis, of Newark, was the caterer, an elaborate supper being served during the evening. These were the patronesses: Mrs. J. Edgar Corliss, Mrs. John B. Dumont, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. C. J. Fisk, Mrs. B. A. Hegeman, Mrs. Frederick T. Mead, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen and Mrs. H. G. Runkle. The second of the assemblies will be given on Washingon's birthday, while the last one of the season will take place on Easter Monday.

Among the out of town guests were Miss Louise Drew, daughter of the celebrated actor, John Drew, and Colonel Joseph S. Frelinghuysen, recently appointed personal aide to Governor-elect E. C. Stokes.

"Hello 500-L! Is this Mack, Scudder & Co.? Well I want two dozen more of those country eggs. And Mr. Daly: The butter and coffee are simply perfect. Count me a steady customer."

Start the new year right by getting one of those up-to-date hats at Bird's millinery store on West Front street. If the ready-to-wear kind does not suit you, one will be made exactly to your liking.

Have you tried any of Warnock's bread, pies or cakes? Warnock's ice cream is famous. Cakes of all kinds are among the features which have made Warnock's bakery establishment one of the best in the city.

Woolston & Buckle's paints as well as their superior grade of wall papers all point to the fact that Woolston & Buckle have catered to Plainfield's best class of people for years, and have the reputation and confidence of all their customers.

—W. H. Lewis and family have changed their residence from Arlington avenue to Richmond street.

E. H. BIRD, P. M.

For anything in dry goods call at Levy Brothers' store on West Front street. Here you will find the very best in the market and at low prices. If you are looking for dress goods the firm can show you the latest fabrics of the best manufacture.

P. S. Dayton & Co., the millers and feed merchants, announce in another column their readiness to fill orders of any size satisfactorily and from fresh stock. They have a large quantity of hay, straw, oats, etc., on hand at present and more in transit.

Harry Werner is Plainfield's stylish tailor and outfitter. All his goods are strictly up-to-date and in every way the latest and most approved. Winter overcoats at Werner's are nobby looking garments. They mark the wearer as a person of taste and style.

Rubbers, rubber boots, artics, sandals, or anything in rubber goods, which are so much needed in the present wet weather, are for sale at VanArsdale's shoe store. Don't run the risk of catching cold through unwisely neglecting to keep the feet dry.

Cigar smokers who like the real thing at a low price should try Kirch's Secundas or the Opia, Magi or Omar. Material and handiwork beyond reproach. In the higher priced goods, Kirch has the Jules Verne in various sizes, and the Regensberg goods.

There will be plenty of cold weather before spring and you will need warm cloaks and furs. This is an excellent time to purchase these garments at the Paris Cloak and Fur Store at low prices. You will also find an attractive line of women's suits and separate skirts and waists.

CELEBRATIONS CONTINUE

Christmas Appropriately Observed by Sunday-Schools.

LITTLE ONES HAPPY

Exercises at Trinity Reformed, First Baptist, First M. E. and Other Churches in City.

Characterized by the usual successful features, the Christmas festivals of the Trinity Reformed Sunday-school Thursday afternoon and evening were attractive and entertaining. In the afternoon the celebration of the primary department took place. Mrs. Jessie M. Tier was in charge of this feature. This was the programme of events:

Piano selection by Ernest Stevens; recitation, "Santa Claus," by Helen Woolley; informal recitations by Elsie Tier, Gretchen VanZandt, Helen Leitheusser, Adelaide Cole, Ralph Martin and Harold Leech, comprised the programme. At the conclusion of this part of the entertainment, the Christmas presents were distributed and each person received a gift. There was no tree this year. The affair was in charge of Mrs. J. M. Tier, assisted by teachers in the primary and junior departments.

In the evening a large crowd which filled the Sunday-school room to the doors, gave a hearty welcome to the Sagamore Musical Club, of this city, and to Loraine, an able entertainer from New York. The club played several selections in its usual apt style. The rendition of four popular airs brought an encore each time, to which the club responded generously. The following are the members of the club: Mandolins, Chester Briggs, leader, Monroe Long and Theodore Gavett; banjos, William Briggs and Gurth Williams; violins, William Gaston and Herbert Smith.

Mr. Loraine, as an entertainer, was a whole show in himself. His impersonations of animals, humorous recitations and dialogue songs kept the audience in constant laughter. He was also well received in his whistling solos and hand bell exhibitions. Mr. Loraine's song accompanied on the banjo "If I Only Had a Dollar of My Own" was one of the best numbers on the programme.

The entertainment was in charge of a committee composed of U. M. Dalliver, chairman, Mrs. H. F. Crawford, Miss Anna Searing, W. F. Oliver and Edgar F. Sheppard.

An entertainment, which delighted an audience of colored children, was given at the Grace church in the afternoon under the auspices of the Colored Mission of the church. The entertainment was in the interest of the Colored Industrial School which the church supports, and was in every respect a success. Games of all kinds kept the children busy, and every effort was extended to make the affair one of pleasure and help to those who attended it.

The Christmas season was observed by a tree, handsomely decorated, from which gifts were distributed among the children. The affair was under the direct control of Mrs. J. Gilmore Drayton, who is at the head of the Industrial School, and under her management the entertainment yesterday was made a great success.

Recitations, singing and an address by the pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, were some of the features of the Christmas entertainment given for the primary department of the First Baptist church Sunday-school, in the afternoon. Mrs. J. A. Powlison, superintendent, was in charge of the exercises.

The programme opened with a piano solo by Miriam Hall, singing by the school, prayer, responsive reading, a Christmas carol, Scripture reading by Mrs. Dudley Miller, a welcome address by Elmer French, and after another carol, Dr. Chambliss gave the little folks a pleasing talk, relating several appropriate stories.

A novel feature was the singing of the cradle song and welcoming of "Little Mary," an infant child of Mah Myah, a native of Burmah, who is supported by the Sunday-school.

Then followed a recitation by Lawrence French, a song by Dorothy Hall, Emeline Manning and Elsie Moore, a song by the school and the distribution of gifts to members of the department including the cradle roll.

"Santa Claus' Visit to Mother Goose," was the name of a Christmas exercise given under the auspices of the Sunday-school of the First M. E. church in Vincent chapel, at 8 p. m., The affair was an arrangement by Miss Addie Parker Jackson, of this city, and it introduced some of the familiar characters of Mother Goose. Most of the exercises were of are citative character and there were some dialogues. All were in costume and the entertainment was a delight to all. James B. Joy, as superintendent of the Sunday-school, was in charge.

The participants in the exercise and the characters they represented were as follows: "Little Bo-Peep," Catherine Bingaman; Addison, Eddie Bingaman, Walter Kennedy and Frank Sharp; "Mother Goose," Dorothy Welsh; "Jack and Gill," Leslie Leland and Helen Joy; "Old King Cole," Eldon Miller; "Santa Claus," George Rittenhouse, Jr.; "Little Boy Blue," Arthur Slade; "Jack Horner," Harold Willard; "Red Riding Hood," Nellie Creager.

An amusing part was after the entertainment when Santa Claus displayed a huge stocking ten feet long and several feet around. Into this was placed a large number of useful articles of clothing, shoes, hats and dresses which will be sent to poor families in the East Side of New York. These articles were contributed by the various classes of the school, each class being called upon to provide for at least one family. There was a generous response from all.

This way of giving was adopted this year instead of presenting gifts to the pupils, although each one received the usual box of candy.

Councilman Clarence L. Murphy in the afternoon appeared at the Christmas festival in Vincent chapel and entertained the little folks in the primary department of the Sunday-school. He made his entrance to the main room from the gallery, attired in genuine Santa Claus fashion and for nearly an hour had the little children in a high statement of excitement as he distributed gifts to them.

The first part of the entertainment was devoted to a short programme, including the singing of Christmas carols, recitations by Carol Dunavan, Cora Bender, John Beisterle, Alice Joy, Douglass Stewart, Ruth Lacas, Howard Hills and songs by Manilla Symons, Blanche McVoy, Edward Crone, Ruth Lynn and Ruth Carver.

After the programme the pupils were feasted on ice cream, cake and candy. The beginners' class was seated at one table, while the older members of the primary department occupied another class-room. Hot chocolate was served to the visitors present. Those in charge of the affair were Miss Elsie Horne, Mrs. Arthur Crone and Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, assisted by other teachers in the primary department.

Nelson A. Miller led the singing and Miss Gertrude Sharp accompanied on the piano, while Robert W. Davis assisted with cornet. In addition to the regular programme, Carolyn Lambert recited and Mrs. S. H. Tugwell contributed a vocal solo.

The superintendent announced the gifts of the Sunday-school: A handsome desk of oak for Miss Gertrude Sharp and a sum of money to Isaac Kennedy, the sexton. Instead of the senior members of the school receiving boxes of candy, they received souvenir cards, bearing a beautifully illuminated passage from the writings of Bishop John H. Vincent.

The committee in charge composed of S. H. Tugwell, chairman; Miss Elsie Horne, Mrs. S. H. Tugwell, Mrs. Stewart, H. F. Fenno, Miss French, entertainment; L. V. Wilson, Mr. Dodge, Mr. Symons, Mr. Steiner, Mr. Schutt, decorations; Nelson A. Miller, Miss Gertrude Sharp, music; Mrs. Work, Miss Geiswein, Mrs. Thomas MacDonald and Mrs. Arthur Crone, Sunday programme.

Among the gifts sent to New York were coats, cloaks, jackets, shawls and overcoats, underwear, stockings, shoes, mittens, hats and caps, waists, skirts, suit of clothes, dresses, rubbers, baby clothes, a strip of bacon, towels, bedding, ties and ribbons, an ear trumpet, to which was added nearly $40 in cash to be spent for shoes, coal and food. The aggregate value of the gifts was not less than $300.

The annual Christmas entertainment at the First Baptist church Sunday-school at night was a little different from those in previous years. Several professional entertainers were engaged and for nearly two hours they delighted both young and old. Harold Serrell was chairman of the committee in charge, and after a short address by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, the pastor, in which he spoke of the significance of the occasion and referred to the gifts of the members of the school who brought potatoes and apples for the Children's Home, the programme opened with humorous stories by J. W. Armour. He also sang a popular selection. Winans and Cassler, musical artists, then entertained with selections on various kinds of instruments, interspersing them with witticisms.

Prof. C. Howard Schock was introduced as "The man who mystified Kellar," and he performed a number of clever tricks. He was followed by George H. Rowe, who gave several excellent dialect stories. The programme concluded with additional musical numbers by Winans and Cassler, after which there was a distribution of candy to members of the Sunday-school.

There were several barrels of potatoes and apples received for the Children's Home and they were delivered Friday.

During the performance given by Prof. C. Howard Schock, George H. Batchelder, superintendent of the school, was presented with a pair of gold link cuff buttons.

The First Presbyterian church was well filled last night on the occasion of the annual school entertainment, which was one of the best which the school has had in many years. In the afternoon the primary celebration took place, while for the main school, the entertainment was held in the evening.

The members of the primary department were entertained in the afternoon by an informal programme of music and recitation. Dolls and toys were distributed among the pupils by Santa Claus who was impersonated by Miss Jessie Pruden. The senior department assembled in the evening when an interesting programme of music, recitations and humor pleased a large audience. In addition to an entertainer, Professor Spedan, of New York, several numbers were rendered by the school and Miss Raybert won much applause by two readings. This was the programme: Opening anthem by the school, "The Christ Comes to Earth;" reading, "Signs of Christmas," Miss Etta Raybert; entertainment, Professor Spedan; recitation, "Gee' for Christmas," Miss Raybert; fifteen minutes with Professor Spedan; song by the school, "Sing the Beautiful Christmas Story."

The programme and arrangements for the entertainment at night were in charge of Frank O. Dunning, assisted by a committee.

Christmas at the Church of the Heavenly Rest was appropriately celebrated Wednesday evening by a song service in the early evening, and later by an entertainment in the parish house. A brilliantly lighted Christmas tree occupied a prominent place in the room, and each member of the school was presented with a box of candy and a gift. William Moore, the superintendent of the Sunday-school, had charge of this feature of the programme. He was in charge of the entertainment, assisted by a committee of teachers and young people.

Christmas was celebrated at the Mount Olive Baptist church last night by the Sunday-school. Rev. E. E. Jackson spoke of the part which the white friends of the church have had in assuring the success of the Sunday-school during the last year.

The exercises at Bethel chapel were unusually brief, the distribution of gifts being the only feature. Superintendent S. A. Ginna was in charge and several carols were sung. The Christmas committee was composed of Abraham Brown, chairman, Mr. and Mrs. Mitchell, Benjamin Sutton, Mrs. Nixon and Miss Euphemia Dorsey.

REALTY CONVEYANCES.

Transfers of Plainfield Real Estate as Recorded in the County Clerk's Office at Elizabeth.

The following real estate conveyances have recently been recorded in the Union County Clerk's office at Elizabeth:

Cornelius Smith et ux. to Alfred S. Morton, West Seventh street, southwesterly of Grant avenue, $1; Agnes E. Daly to Central Union Realty Company, lots 1 to 223 inclusive, "map of Central Park," $1; William Lunger et ux. to William Camp, northwesterly side West Fifth street, northeasterly of Prescott place, $1; Frank A. Pope et ux. to Edward G. Pope, southeasterly side New street, northeasterly of Netherwood avenue, $1; Katharine S. Totten et al. to William H. Kirch, northerly side Randolph road, easterly of Arlington avenue, $1; William H. Kirch et ux. to Jacob P. Kirch, same as above, $1.

527 POLICE COURT CASES.

City Judge Runyon's Annual Report Presented.

City Judge William N. Runyon's annual report showed that 527 cases were before him, 114 of which were fined, 330 sentence suspended, fifty-five committed, five held for the juvenile court, twenty-two complaints dismissed.

The city court has received $730, of which amount $135 was given to the Board of Health and $310.05 was the total of Chief Kiely's expenses. There was $519.95 turned over to the city treasurer.

CHURCH ACCESSIONS.

New Members Received at Communion Services on Sunday.

The communion services in several of the local churches on Sunday were marked by the reception of new members. At the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, there were twenty-three persons received by letter and on confession. At the First M. E. church one was received on probation and at the Park Avenue Baptist church two were received on confession and one by letter. Clarence Runyon Steiner was received at the Congregational church on confession. Two were received by letter at the Monroe Avenue church.

The new individual communion service was used at the First Presbyterian church for the first. It consists of silver trays and small glasses. Those uniting with this church were Mr. and Mrs. Peacock, of Rahway; Mrs. VanNest, Mr. Kriney and Dr. Currie, of this city.

CITY FATHERS' REPORTS

Plainfield Council Winds Up Business for 1904.

ONLY ROUTINE WORK

President of the Body Receives Acknowledgment of Valued Service From His Probable Successor.

Routine business including the presentation of annual reports and the winding up of the city's business for the year, occupied the attention of the Common Council at its final meeting for the year held Friday. There was a kindly expression of appreciation of the uniform courtesy and skill of Councilman Ralph I. Tolles, the retiring president, in a few words by Councilman Leslie M. Daniel and a motion to thank him for his services was carried unanimously. Mr. Tolles made brief acknowledgement.

The annual reports of Chief T. O. Doane, of the fire department, the committee on streets and sewers were presented. They are reproduced in this issue of The Daily Press.

Two electric lights petitioned for on Terrill road, between East Front and Second streets, were granted on a motion offered by Mr. Murphy.

Building Inspector T. O. Doane reported the granting of nine permits during December and in his annual report the granting of 188 permits.

Mr. Garrigues, chairman of the alms committee, gave a brief annual report showing the expenditures in the various departments out of the total of $6,632.91 appropriated to the care of the poor. There are now eleven males and seven females in the Industrial Home and during the year 394 persons outside have received assistance.

The reports of the Chief of Police, city treasurer and city judge will be found in other columns of this issue.

Mr. Daniel reported back the bond of Constable John Conroy and moved it be filed in the county clerk's office. Regarding Constable Peter V. Weaver's bond, he moved it be returned for correction. A. H. Lawson's petition for an adjustment of taxes and the communication from the Board of Assessors for an increase in salaries were referred to the 1905 committees on Mr. Daniel's motion.

Mr. Murphy reported favorably on a petition from G. A. Chapman and others for two electric lights on Field avenue, between Eighth street and Stelle avenue, and the same was granted.

Mr. Murphy also presented an annual report as chairman of the committee on lights and trees. This showed the sixteen new lights were located during the year, making a total of 350 for which the city pays $15.50 each a year. He referred to the new arc light granted and which is to be located at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue about January 1. He also mentioned the fact that four incandescent lights near the corner will be cut out, unless good reasons are offered why they should be continued. By discontinuing these four lights the city is saved $68 and the new arc light will cost an additional $32. Reference was made to the poor quality of the street light and it was suggested that the new committee investigate this. The report concluded by expressing appreciation of the fairness of the Public Service Corporation during the year and three light petitions were referred to the new committee.

Mr. Daniel moved that the bill for Mayor Jenkin's' salary be approved and the amount paid, which was so ordered. The Common Council then adjourned sine die.

After the meeting the members held a conference to talk over matters that will come up early in the new year.

To accommodate those who are partial to the use of atomizers in applying liquids into the nasal passages for catarrhal troubles, the proprietors prepare Ely's Liquid Cream Balm. Price including the spraying tube is 75 cents. Druggists or by mail. The liquid embodies the medicinal properties of the solid preparation. Cream Balm is quickly absorbed by the membrane and does not dry up the secretions but changes them to a natural and healthy character. Ely Brothers, 56 Warren St., N. Y.

Watch Night Meetings.

A watch night meeting was held Saturday at the Mt. Olive Baptist church, at which time the pastor, Rev. E. E. Jackson, preached, and the financial reports were received. The treasurer's announcement showed the finances of the church to be good, and Rev. Mr. Jackson referred particularly to this in his sermon. Commencing at 10 o'clock Saturday night, the congregation of the Mt. Zion A. M. E. church held a watch night service and listened to an address by the pastor, Rev. H. C. Ashley.

It is quite likely that the officers-elect of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the Woman's Relief Corps will be installed jointly on Tuesday night, January 17, at G. A. R. headquarters.

TENANTS RECEIVE NOTICE TO VACATE PROPERTY

PRELIMINARY STEPS TAKEN IN IMPROVEMENT ON PARK AVENUE.

Charles W. McCutchen, owner of the business property on Park avenue, extending from the property at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, occupied by Mefford Giles, to the cigar store conducted by M. C. Dobbins, and including these tenants J. William Randolph, barber; Andrew W. Johnson and A. H. Enander, plumber and tinner; Charles Schantz, saloon; Thomas Walsh, fruit dealer, and a colored barber, has given the required three months' notice to the tenants that they must vacate the premises by April 1, 1905, it being the intention of the owner to erect a modern building on this property.

As yet the tenants have no definite plans as to where they will go, although all of them are looking for places. Perhaps the greatest difficulty will be experienced by Charles Schantz, the saloon keeper, although he may be able to locate somewhere near the vicinity of his present place of business. There is at present a scarcity of stores in the business section of the city and for some time the demand has been greater than the supply.

LESLIE M. DANIEL, COUNCILMANIC HEAD

MEMBER FROM THIRD WARD TAKES HIS PLACE AS PRESIDENT.

City Clerk J. T. MacMurray called the new City Council to order Monday and Mr. Tyler nominated Leslie M. Daniel for president. He was chosen by a unanimous vote. Upon his taking his seat he found a handsome basket of roses on the table, from Ernest R. Ackerman.

In taking the chair Mr. Daniel thanked the members for their courtesy. Mr. Tyler moved that the rules for 1904, with the amendments providing for the committee on public affairs and the doing away with the committee on licenses, be adopted.

George B. Wean was reappointed city stenographer and copyist at a salary of $400, and The Daily Press and The Courier-News were named as the official newspapers of the city.

A resolution offered by Mr. Wilson providing for the transfer of $2,000 to the street department fund until the annual appropriations are made for the year was carried. Jacob Dunham was elected janitor of the Common Council rooms at a salary of $300.

After Mr. Tolles moved that when Common Council adjourn it be to meet on Monday, January 9, an adjournment was taken.

POLICE CHIEF SUGGESTS ADDITIONAL PATROLMEN

IN ANNUAL REPORT, HE ASKS FOR A LARGE FORCE OF MEN.

Chief Patrick S. Kiely's annual report presented at the Common Council's meeting last Friday showed 569 arrests during the year, a slight increase over last year. He made special mention of the Gamewell police system in use and the introduction of sleeping apartments at police headquarters, which he said has become now a necessity.

Chief Kiely recommended the appointment of additional patrolmen so that each ward in the city can have a policeman in the day time and the business section three men. With the present force he claimed that the beats are so long it is impossible to cover them properly. He expressed his appreciation for the general help and assistance given by the Mayor and Common Council and every member of the department and in conclusion reported that out of the $18,040 appropriated to the department $6 90 was still in the city treasury.

Stork's New Year Gifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Albert Lederer, of the New Madison, are parents of a bright little girl, the second in the family. Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey F. Cushar, of Duer street, are receiving congratulations on the arrival of another little girl. Two fine girls and three sturdy boys now comprise the family of Mr. and Mrs. John Hummel, of Duer street. The third son was born on Saturday morning last.

DIED.

SMITH—On Thursday, Dec. 29 1904, Jean B., widow of S. Alpheus Smith.

WALLACE—On Monday, January 2, 1905, Mathew Wallace.

WILLIAMS—On Friday, December 30, at San Francisco, Cal., after an illness of seven weeks of typhoid pneumonia, John Joseph Williams, C.P.A., of Chicago.

CITY COUNCIL SHAKEUP

Mr. Tyler Supplants Mr. Randolph as Head of Police Com.

WHERE PLUMS FELL

W. S. Bullock Chairman of Fire and Buildings Committee — Gloak Relegated to Alms Committee.

As was expected and predicted there was a general shakeup in the appointment of committees by President Leslie M. Daniel at the first meeting of the new Common Council, held last Monday. On a motion offered by Mr. Tyler the rules were amended so as to do away with the license committee, whose work will be looked after by the police committee, and providing for a new committee to be known as committee on public affairs.

The "machine" was not recognized to any great extent, although Mr. Tolles was made chairman of the most important committee, that of finance. Mr. Gloak was returned to the chairmanship of the alms committee, while Frank DeWitt Randolph was made chairman of the auditing.

Mr. Gloak as chairman of the streets and sewer committee, is succeeded by Theodore D. Wilson. Mr. Murphy retains the chairmanship of the committee on lights and trees, while Mr. Bullock is made the head of the committee on fire and buildings. Mr. Higham is made chairman of the new committee on public affairs. Mr. Hibbard, while made a member of several important committees, was not honored with a chairmanship.

One of the most important changes is that in reference to the police and license committees. These committees have been combined and W. S. Tyler is the chairman, with W. S. Bullock and W. L. Gloak as the other members. Mayor J. F. Buckle and the president of the Common Council are also members of this committee ex-officio, and it is considered a strong combination.

This is the makeup of the various committees:

Finance—Ralph I. Tolles, Clarence L. Murphy, Henry D. Hibbard, Theodore D. Wilson, William Starr Bullock.

Streets and sewers—Theodore D. Wilson, William L. Gloak, Ralph I. Tolles, William S. Tyler, J. Stephen Higham.

Fire and buildings—William Starr Bullock, Henry D. Hibbard, Ralph I. Tolles, Frank DeWitt Randolph, J. Stephen Higham.

Alms—William L. Gloak, Frank De Witt Randolph, Charles C. Randolph.

Public affairs—J. Stephen Higham, Henry D. Hibbard, William S. Tyler, Theodore D. Wilson, Clarence L. Murphy.

Auditing—Frank DeWitt Randolph, Charles C. Randolph, Henry D. Hibbard.

Euchre to Choir Members.

Father Miller, of St. Joseph's church, tendered a euchre to the retiring members of his choir, Thursday night. At the conclusion of play a social period was enjoyed. Hereafter the choir in St. Joseph's church will be comprised of male voices only, an order from the bishop of the diocese prohibiting women members.

Plans to Build.

A. H. Enander, the plumber, is contemplating the erection of a building on his Watchung avenue property and if he decides to build he will use the first floor for his business. As for the other business men they have no idea just now where they will locate

John Herrmann's mill at the end of the Somerset street trolley line is the place for sash and blinds, complete stairways, etc.

When you get ready to build consult with Titus H. Laury, the contractor, and he will give you an attractive figure and agree to do the work right.

Feristel's Belleview nursery is headquarters for fresh dug nursery stock, full benefit of stock being nurtured in same locality where set out being gained by local customers.

These cold days you want the best anthracite coal if your home or office is to be kept warm. The Keely Coal Company sells only the best quality and at the lowest market prices.

Whether you wish to move your house, or whether you desire a trunk taken to the station, the man to deal with for accurate and prompt obedience of orders is H. J. Wierenga.

What is more convenient to a business man than a drop light in his library. They are reasonable and are the best kind at J. W. Gavett's store. All kinds of fixtures for gas and electric lights at Gavett's are handsome in design and useful.

Mr. and Mrs. Louis Wiltse, of the New Madison, have been entertaining out-of-town friends during the holidays.

PLEA OF SOMERSET'S GRAND JURY TO RAISE BOROUGH'S LICENSE FEE

Recommendation to County Court That Liquor Regulations in North Plainfield Be Made Similar to Those in Plainfield.

SUGGEST THOUSAND DOLLAR LICENSE RATE

REPRESENTATIVE BODY OF MEN COMPOSING GRAND JURY BRING THE PECULIAR EXCISE CONDITIONS TO THE ATTENTION OF JUDGE SCHENCK.

Unanimously Advocate That the Borough Liquor Places Be Compelled to Close at the Same Hour As in This City—Approval of North Plainfield Council's Efforts to Obtain Needed Relief.

Prompted by the riotous scene which occurred in North Plainfield on Saturday night, the Somerset County Grand Jury, composed of representative men, before it concluded its labors Thursday unanimously adopted a recommendation to the county court that the liquor license fee in North Plainfield be made uniform with the rate required in this city and that the saloons and other places where liquor is sold in the borough be compelled to close at the hour required here. The grand jury was a unit in the conviction that the frequent disturbances in the borough are due as a rule to the existing excise conditions. Thomas S. Armstrong, of North Plainfield, presented the resolution adopted and when the grand jury appeared before Judge Schenck in court, the petition or recommendation was handed to his honor by the foreman, Robert Clark, Jr., also of North Plainfield.

This action of the grand jury stamps with approval the efforts of the North Plainfield Council to obtain the needed relief from the Somerset county court. For a long time endeavors have been made to show the court the wisdom of making the excise requirements in North Plainfield similar to those in this city, it being pointed out that the borough and city are practically one community. The state of affairs now existing regarding the liquor traffic and its effects was one of the strong points advanced a short time ago by those who favor the consolidation of city and borough as a means of relief from the unfortunate and peculiar situations brought about by the maintainance of independent municipalities.

It is expected that the Somerset county court will examine the subject more thoroughly now and at an early date carry out the recommendations suggested. This body was composed of a set of men of a calibre seldom serving in that capacity at one time. Robert Clark, Jr., the foreman, is a former councilman and an influential citizen of the borough, who is in the manufacturing business in Newark. William L. Saunders is a former mayor of North Plainfield and has taken more interest probably in its advancement than any other man in the borough with the single exception of the present mayor. He is president of the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company, one of the largest and most widely known manufacturing concerns in the East. Richard Moldenke, of North Plainfield township, is a metallurgist and a man of exceptional ability. Charles F. Squibb is a wealthy medicine man residing in Bernardsville, and Clement Clawson is widely known as the inventor of slot machines. Calvin D. McMurtry and W. H. H. Wyckoff are both former sheriffs and Irving Hoagland is the present assemblyman. The other members are mostly prosperous farmers.

The grand jury's recommendation goes much further than the borough Council dared, the latter only asking that the fee be increased to $600 while the grand jury asks that it be made $1,000, exactly what it is in Plainfield. In full the recommendation made is as follows:

To the Honorable Judges of the Court of Oyer and Terminer:

In connection with the recent disorders in North Plainfield, to which your Honor has specially called attention when instructing this Grand Jury, we desire to say that in addition to the indictments which we have presented, we feel it our duty to call attention to the peculiar condition of affairs in North Plainfield which may have a bearing on the case. The evidence showed that this was a drunken brawl, resulting in bloodshed and narrowly escaping murder; that it occurred after 11 o'clock on Christmas eve, and that the guilty parties live in Plainfield and not North Plainfield. The saloons of Plainfield are required by ordinance to close at 11 o'clock, while those in the borough are not closed until midnight on Saturday nights, and may be open all night on every other night except Sunday.

The license fee in Plainfield is $1,000, while in North Plainfield it is only $350. Now, as the two places are geographically one the result is that disorderly persons seek North Plainfield after 11 o'clock at night, life and property are thereby endangered and this county put to expense. This court fixes the license fee in North Plainfield and as the custom is to take population into consideration when so doing, it would seem reasonable to consider the fact that after 11 o'clock at night the population under saloon influence in the borough is that of Plainfield and North Plainfield combined, and that good would result from the equalization of the license fees. Furthhermore, as this Court grants the licenses, we beg to suggest that as such license is granted—the licensee be required by the Court to incur the obligation to close his place at 11 o'clock at night or at the same time as that fixed by the city of Plainfield.

Respectfully submitted on behalf of the Grand Jury,

Robert Clark, Jr.,
Foreman.

CELEBRATE MARRIAGE OF FIFTY YEARS AGO

MR. AND MRS. C. H. BUCKLELEW HAVE A GOLDEN WEDDING PARTY.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Bucklelew, of West Fifth street, celebrated the fiftieth anniversary of their wedding day Tuesday, Dec. 27. The affair was arranged by the son, Charles W. Bucklelew, and although some friends were unable to attend on account of the weather, the host and hostess received many congratulations and valuable presents.

Thirty years ago Mr. and Mrs. Bucklelew came to this city, where they have since resided in the house they now occupy. Friends from Washington, New York, Brooklyn, Newark, New Haven and points on Long Island were among those present.

Masquerade Party.

In honor of her brother, Arthur L. Denton, who has recently returned from Brown University for the Christmas holidays, Miss Pauline Denton gave a reception and dance Thursday to about thirty of their friends. The affair was a sheet and pillow case masquerade, and the young people spent a pleasant evening dancing in such costumes.

A TOSS OF THE COIN

HAIR-RAISING ADVENTURE IN THE AUSTRALIAN BUSH.

How the Toss of a Shilling Saved the Lives of Two Lost Wanderers —Just a Matter of Luck.

Along the lonely path through the terrible Australian bush jogged a buggy drawn by a pair of bush horses. Seated in it were two Englishmen. They were hoping to reach Southern Cross soon after nightfall.

But now the buggy had drawn up. The men sprang out. Before them the path branched out into two tracks. Down these both gazed long and carefully. Then they looked at each other; baffled and perplexed.

At length one declared that the way lay to the left. His friend looked, then shook his head.

A SMALL GOLD SPARK APPEARED.

"Our path is to the right," he said.

Only a few pints of water remained, and, at the utmost, the animals could only travel 40 miles further.

As neither man would give way, it was agreed to settle which of the tracks they should take by spinning a shilling. "Heads" was to signify that they should go by the road to the right, and "tails" by the road to the left.

Up spun the coin.

The fate of both men and beasts rested on its fall. To take the wrong path might mean 500 miles along the everlasting track to the nearest camp—a certain and horrible death by thirst and starvation.

The coin fell. "Heads" was uppermost. And the buggy rolled down the roadway on the right.

Perhaps it was chance, perhaps it was something else; but whatever it was, the path on the right did lead to the railway.

Night had fallen when the sound of their horses' hoofs striking metal told the wearied travelers that they had reached the line.

Having unharnessed the horses, the two men threw themselves down beside the embankment to await the arrival of a train.

Two hours went by before far away along the metaled bank a small gold spark appeared. Nearer and nearer it approached, growing larger every few minutes.

Now it was only a mile away. Another four minutes and it would pass.

Overjoyed at the sight, both men clambered up the bank on the metals, and, taking matches from their pockets, began to strike and to hold them up.

The sharp grating of the brakes told them that their signal had been seen. The train came to a standstill. A few words explained their plight, and water and provisions were at once supplied to them.

On the next day they drove into Southern Cross. There they learned that had the shilling fallen "tails," they would have undoubtedly lost their lives, for the path to the left stretched for 500 miles in an unbroken and waterless tract until it reached the sea.

DOCTOR A VICTIM OF PLOT TO KILL

COLORED BOY SLEW HIS MASTER BY MISTAKE.

HE WAS EXPECTED TO WATCH FOR BURGLARS

A Missouri Physician Was in Fear of Thieves and Told Boy to Shoot Anyone Approaching a Window.

Webb City, Mo.—Behind the death of Dr. J. P. Willett from a gunshot wound inflicted by Claude Price, a 16-year-old boy, is some mystery.

The peculiar circumstances of his death have led many to believe that the tragedy may have been contemplated. These circumstances are that, within less than five minutes after he had told the boy to watch a certain window and shoot anyone appearing before it, he left the house in his stocking feet and appeared in front of that window.

Coroner Eames, in conversation with Mrs. Willett and the lad who fired the shot, satisfied himself that there was no criminal intent on the part of Price. The widow said:

"I am sure, if my husband could speak, he would hold him innocent."

It was the belief of young Price when he fired the shot that he was shooting at a burglar. He was simply following the command of Dr. Willett, who had told him a short time before to shoot the first man whom he saw around the premises. When he saw some one pass a window that he had been directed to watch the boy took aim and fired. An instant afterward he was horrified when he heard the doctor exclaim:

"My God, Claude, you have shot me."

"Why, is that you, doc.?" responded the lad.

All that Dr. Willett could say in response was the single word, "yes."

Then, staggering from in front of the window to the porch, he fell, and within 20 minutes was dead.

"YOU HAVE KILLED ME!"

The belief is general among the doctor's acquaintances that his almost hysterical belief that burglars were haunting his house was a hallucination. He had just moved into a new house on the outskirts of the city, and young Price was hired to stay with him.

The doctor had for several nights insisted upon both the lad and Mrs. Willett remaining awake at all hours to assist him in watching for thieves.

He had seen midnight marauders, so he said, in the barn, around the house and even in the basement. He told a policeman that a group of them was gathered in the basement, that he shot at them through the kitchen floor and was sure he had wounded one.

These vagaries are believed to have been the result of the use of drugs. For years Dr. Willett, it is alleged, had used drugs and also drank considerable liquor.

Domestic troubles and divorce, with estrangement from his children, followed. But soon after the divorce he reformed and for two years had been leading a different life. He had regained his practice, had married again and was considered as in a fair way of regaining all he had lost. Then a few weeks ago, the police say, he began to fall back to his old habits.

Indian Cocaine Fiends.

Within the last few months it has developed that a great number of full-blood Cherokee Indians are becoming cocaine fiends. A little investigation shows that druggists are disposing of a great deal of this drug, but what is more startling still is that there are a lot of persons who have been going into the country and selling cocaine to the Indians. It is a new vice for the Indians, but it is wonderful how it is taking hold on them. It is said that the drug is being bootlegged, as it has been the custom to bring in liquor. The authorities will start an investigation.

HORSE AND BIRD AID IN SOLVING MYSTERY

Indiana Authorities Find Strange Helpers in Solving a Mysterious Murder Case Which Had Perplexed the Detectives.

Hartford City, Ind.—Has the hand of Providence, guiding the steps of a muskrat to a place of safety, filling a dumb animal with the fear of a remembered danger and directing the flight of a wounded bird, helped in the detection of the murderers of Edward P. Sanderson?

This is a popular question in this county. Some point to the peculiar circumstances as confirmatory of the fact, while others declare that the strange happenings were merely accidental. Certainly the events leading up to the arrest of the suspects stand out as singular in the annals of crime.

Edward P. Sanderson, a large property owner, lived on a farm ten miles from this city. He disappeared, and for a week persistent search was made for him without result.

A boy employed in a factory near here took his lunch basket a week after Sanderson's disappearance and went in the direction of an old gravel pit, which had become filled with water. He sat down to eat his lunch and a muskrat ran past him. He followed it and it disappeared at the edge of the pond. He was about to turn away when he saw the hand of a man above the stagnant water. He called some of the men from the factory. After much difficulty the body was removed. It was found to have been weighted with a 75-pound stone, which was attached to it by a strap.

The body was that of the missing man, and examination showed that two bullets had been fired into the brain before it was placed in the pond, where it was found.

Where had the murder occurred? The gravel pit was some distance from the highway and Sanderson was known not to have been near it the day he disappeared.

Sanderson was at the home of a neighbor late in the evening of the day he disappeared, and drove home along the public road. Search was made for some evidence that the crime had been committed between the neighbor's house and his home, but none could be found.

His horse was hitched to his buggy and a circuitous drive was made to the home of the neighbor. Then the road was followed that Sanderson traveled on the night of his disappearance. At an abrupt turn the horse showed signs of fear. He pricked up his ears, turned to the side of the road and showed unwillingness to proceed.

The spot was examined and in the dust at the side of the road were found several little balls of dust which are believed to have been made by drops of blood which flowed from Sanderson's wounds. These now are in the hands of the officers and are being subjected to analysis. The officers are positive that this will be shown, as there has been no rain in the locality for several weeks.

Four men were hunting later in the neighborhood of the Sanderson home, and one of them shot and wounded a quail. The wounded bird fell in the yard, and when the hunters went in to get it it fluttered under the house. One of the men followed it, and as he crawled through an opening in the foundation he discovered two tin cans filled with dynamite. A fuse led them to another opening in the foundation wall. Each can contained about five pounds of the explosive, and it was plain that it had been placed there with the intention of blowing up the house.

The authorities were notified and started an investigation to find where the explosive and the cans were bought. They are reticent, but believe that the same men who murdered Sanderson placed the heavy dynamite charge under his house.

The theory of the state is that the murderers, knowing Sanderson was away from home, placed the explosive under his house and intended to return that night and light the fuse. But on their way home they met the man at the turn of the road, that they purposely got into an altercation with him and killed him, taking the body from the place in his buggy to the gravel pit pond where it was found.

NEGROES ARE INDICTED

Assault With Intent to Kill, Charge Against Them.

JUSTICE'S REMARKS

Five Men Are Held for Attacking North Plainfield Policemen on Saturday Night.

The negroes who participated in the murderous assault on three policemen on Somerset street Saturday night were indicted for assault with intent to kill by the Somerset County grand jury for the December term Thursday. Justice Garretson, in his charge to the grand jury, said he was informed that the negroes had gone to North Plainfield with the intent of attacking police.

"If this information is correct," said Justice Garretson, "not only the negroes who did the cutting, but those who accompanied them are guilty of attempted murder."

The negroes indicted are "Whit" Tunstall, Thomas C. Henderson, James Tems, Samuel Henderson and Lee Wells. They are represented by William G DeMeza, Esq.

The grand jury returned fourteen true bills of indictment. Jacob Flomerfelt, whose quarrel with his brother-in-law, Constable Frank D. Cramer, of North Branch, resulted in the latetr's death, was indicted for manslaughter.

MISS FRITZ THE BRIDE OF WILLIAM T. JEFFERY, JR.

UNITED BY CEREMONY AT HOME OF FORMER'S PARENTS WEDNESDAY.

Miss Carrie Fritz, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Adam Fritz, of Somerset street, and William T. Jeffery, Jr., formerly of Summit avenue, but now of York, Pa., were married Wednesday afternoon at the home of the bride's parents.

Miss Margaret Fritz was maid of honor and Miss Lucille Fritz acted as flower girl. The former was gowned in white organdie and the latter in white veiling. The bride's gown was of white silk point d'esprit while she carried roses. The wedding march was played by Miss Adelaide Fritz.

Following a brief reception the young couple departed for a wedding trip to Washington, D. C. They will make their home at York, where Mr. Jeffery is employed as a wallpaper designer.

New Year's Boys' Meeting.

The annual New Year's special song service, conducted by the members of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A., will be held on Sunday afternoon at the association and will be one of unusual interest. There will be special music, both vocal and instrumental, and the meeting will be entirely in charge of the boys. Harry Thompson, one of the leaders among the boys will preside at the meeting, which will be addressed by William Flanders and Harold Robins.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Sadie M. Garretson, granddaughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Garretson, of East Millstone, and Peter S. Clark, of Bound Brook. Both are well known here.

Does It Cost You

TIME to read through the daily and weekly newspapers, the magazines and reviews, and the special journals that constantly clamor for attention? Can you find time to read enough of them to keep posted even on the important topics of human interest at home and abroad? Does the time demanded by so many periodicals leave you time enough for books?

DOES IT COST YOU—

MONEY to buy even a fairly representative list of papers and magazines? Can you afford to subscribe for as many as would be necessary to give you a complete survey of the world's politics, art, religion, industrial affairs, literature, etc.? Even if you had the time to read them, would you be able to buy several thousand periodicals, domestic and foreign?

DOES IT COST YOU—

WORRY to sift out the conflicting rumors concerning the Japan-Russia war, and to try to follow its progress? Or to get at the true state of the Presidential campaign, the chances of the several candidates, the tendencies in the various states, and the probabilities as to the platforms? Does it worry or weary you to "keep posted" in this busy, hustling age when there are so few moments for quiet reading and so many demands for your money.

Why Not Take This Tip—

"THE LITERARY DIGEST is a time-saver, a money-saver, and a worry-saver," says Edwin Markham, author of "The Man with the Hoe." It gives you in an hour or two, for ten cents a week, a complete survey of the world. All the leading dailies, weeklies, monthlies and quarterlies of America, Europe, Asia, Africa and Australia contribute their best to its pages. It gives all sides of all questions, and organized information on all topics. At all news stands every week, illustrated, 10 cents.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS WED

Dr. and Mrs. H. M. Maxson Celebrate Anniversary.

GOV. UTTER PRESENT

Superintendent of Public Schools and His Wife Hold Reception Attended by Many Friends.

Dr. and Mrs. Henry M. Maxson, of West Seventh street, gave a reception at their home Thursday, to which were invited a large number of their intimate friends. The affair was in observance of the silver wedding anniversary of Dr. and Mrs. Maxson and was intended as a surprise to their friends. On the contrary their friends surprised them by bringing gifts appropriate to the occasion.

Governor-elect George H. Utter, of Westerly, R. I., who was present with Mrs. Utter, made a few remarks in which he congratulated Dr. and Mrs. Maxson upon the completion of a quarter of a century of married life and wished them many more happy years. A pleasing feature was the presentation of fifty silver dollars to the celebrants. Orra S. Rogers, as superintendent of the Sabbath-school at the Seventh-Day Baptist church, made the presentation and Dr. Maxson responded happily for Mrs. Maxson and himself.

Mr. and Mrs. Utter were best man and bridesmaid, respectively, at the wedding of Dr. and Mrs. Maxson twenty-five years ago at their home in Westerly, R. I., Rev. L. Platts officiating, and there was considerable pleasure in having them present last night.

Mrs. Maxson was formerly Miss Henrietta Lewis, daughter of Dr. Edwin Lewis, of Westerly, R. I., as both she and Dr. Maxson are natives of that place. For several years Prof. Maxson was superintendent of the Public Schools at Pawtucket, R. I., and he came to Plainfield from there about ten years ago to take charge of the Plainfield schools. By their union one daughter was born to them—Miss Ruth Maxson, who is now a senior at Smith College.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Irving Maxson, of Westerly, R. I., the former being a brother of Dr. Maxson, were among those present last night.

PARENTS SEARCHING FOR THEIR MISSING SON

POLICE AIDING IN HUNT FOR ANDREW JACKSON, OF GROVE STREET.

The local police have sent out a general alarm for Andrew Jackson, a twenty-two-year-old young man, who disappeared from this city, Monday afternoon. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Jackson, of Grove street, and came here on a visit from Brooklyn, where he has been working, Christmas. He went out Monday afternoon to visit friends and nothing has been seen or heard of him since. Chief Kiely has received word from the Brooklyn authorities that he has not returned to his boarding place and his employers are also at a loss to account for his absence.

Jackson is described as being of medium height, smooth face and light complexion. He has temperate habits and to all appearances was as well as usual when he left his father's home.

The Lights Went Out.

The Christmas entertainment at Warren chapel, Wednesday evening, took place under rather trying circumstances. It had hardly gotten under way when a fuse located in the electric circuit, blew out, plunging the place into darkness. It was nearly an hour afterward before the trouble could be attended to and during that time lamps and candles were pressed into service to furnish the necessary illumination.

Gave a Doll Party.

Mrs. Lynn, of Grant avenue, gave a dolls' party at her home Wednesday afternoon for her daughters, Dorothy, Marion and Ruth Lynn. During the afternoon a short programme of music and recitations was given after which refreshments were served. Games were also a feature.

Announce Engagement.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Florence Bennett, the well known vocalist, and Edmund D. Young, both of this city. The date for the wedding has not been set.

Getting Ready to Build.

Civil Engineer Frank J. Hubbard began the work of surveying and staking out the property on Park avenue on which VanZandt & Voorhees will erect a large building soon.

Stockholder in Contracting Co.

James P. Northrop, of Central avenue, is named as one of the incorporators of the General Contracting and Engineering Company, of Jersey City, which was incorporated at Trenton, Thursday. The capital is $100,000

WANTS MR. KELLER JAILED

First Wife of Plainfield Man Makes Fight for Alimony.

DIVORCE SECRETS

Proceedings in New York Supreme Court Against Plainfielder, Who Married Co-respondent.

Through proceedings brought in the New York Supreme Court by his divorced wife, Mrs. Annie Louise Keller, the secrets surrounding the separation of Augustus R. Keller, of this city, and the complainant, have just been revealed. A fight is now in progress over the amount of alimony to be paid and the first Mrs. Keller is seeking to have her former husband placed in Ludlow street jail, New York. Keller now lives at 937 West Seventh street with his second wife, who was named as co-respondent in the divorce proceedings and who at the time was employed in his publishing offices.

The divorce was granted in April, 1902, by Judge Fitzgerald, of the New York Supreme Court, who sealed all the papers and threw a veil of secrecy over the proceedings. Keller was ordered to pay alimony of $85 a month and to give a $5,000 bond as guarantee. It appears that he failed to pay, and Justice O'Gorman issued an order adjudging him in contempt. Justice Scott denied a motion to vacate this order and Keller took an appeal. In the meantime he took up his residence in Plainfield, thus freeing himself from the jurisdiction of the New York courts, making it impossible for the sheriff to obey the orders given him to put Keller in Ludlow street jail.

The first Mrs. Keller aliges that her former husband has been guilty of additional contempt of court in having married contrary to the terms of the decree.

The trouble now in progress originally came about through Mrs. Keller securing an increase in her alimony, last May, from $85 to $125, Keller being required to furnish a $5,000 bond. Keller is said to have asserted that he would not pay it and that no court could make him.

SAVINGS INSTITUTION INCREASES INTEREST RATE

FOLLOWS EXAMPLE OF TRUST COMPANY AND FIRST NATIONAL BANK.

The Dime Savings Institution announces today that in the future it will allow three and a half per cent. interest on deposits. Its action is in line with that of the Plainfield Trust Company and the First National Bank, each of which has increased its rate of interest within the past few days.

The Dime Savings Institution is conducted under the stringent laws of the State of New Jersey and is allowed to invest its deposits in bonds and other securities approved by the statutes. It is also permitted to invest in bond and mortgage on improved real estate, not exceeding fifty per cent. of its value. The concern is one of the strongest banking institutions in this section of the State and enjoys the greatest public confidence.

POSITION IN BERLIN.

William McCutchen to Represent Manufacturing Concern Abroad.

William McCutchen, son of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel St. John McCutcehn, of North Plainfield, has just been appointed head manager for the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company's interests in Germany, France and Russia, with offices at Berlin, and the latter part of next week he and Mrs. McCutchen and their son, will sail for Berlin, where they will live.

Mr. McCutchen has been connected with the Ingersoll-Sergeant Drill Company for several years and has thoroughly acquainted himself with various branches of the large industry. The promotion is considered as recognition of his executive ability and a successful business career is predicted for him.

Fowler Tardy.

In Congressman Fowler's district there is a disposition to criticise the representative because he was absent from the House the other day while a debate on the currency was in progress. We must confess to a little sympathy for Mr. Fowler. Probably he preferred to sleep at home.—New Brunswick Home News.

Ballots and Bullets.

The race riot at Plainfield was just a bit more exciting than it was a year ago, when it was confined to the polls and Dr. Anderson was the victim, but it demonstrates that ballots are just as effective as bullets, and a whole lot more refined. — Newark Evening News.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 8: "The Making of a Christian; His Birth"—John iii, 1-8.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

No one has ever become human except by birth since the creation of the first pair. No one knows the things of a man except the spirit of man. There are creatures of different orders from man who may know much that men will never know, but they will never know the things that men know, because these can be realized only by one who has the human faculties.

Men have capacity for moral things which are of the nature of the divine. To know and feel and do these is to have fellowship and sonship with God. Man is made with this end in view. This is his real or normal position in the ranks of creaturehood. Having a physical nature with a spiritual capacity within it, there is the possibility of developing in earthly surroundings the characteristics of holiness and righteousness and being godlike in nature. This would be the kingdom of God in man, the kingdom of heaven in the world.

But, though all men have spiritual capacity, not all have had this power of holy life aroused to activity. As the physical life has no power of individual activity until by birth it is started on a career for itself, so there is no personal spiritual life until these soul powers come to birth in personal exercise of moral choosing, feeling and thinking. "Ye must be born again" is as true of the soul as that one must be born physically to have individual life in the world of material things.

Serious mistake has been made very frequently in supposing that all that was needed in the Christian life was to think rightly about spiritual truth. If one only believed rightly all would be well has been too much taught. Right thinking can hardly be too strongly insisted upon as essential to all development in the things of the soul, but it is only one of the necessary lines of effort. Wrong ideas of God, man and the world and of their relations must inevitably result in false religion, but the most correct ideas are not sufficient alone to shape the soul life rightly. The true must be also the right for action, and he who knows the true must do it and make it turn from the intellectual apprehension of a fact into the practical realization of a deed of righteousness. He must do the truth. But these two are not sufficient to constitute one fully a Christian and a real son of God. There must be the glad consent of the affections to this course of action as the desirable one above all other possible ways of doing. Mind, heart and will must all concur in the work or it is not the action of the whole man, and in so far as it fails to enlist all the moral powers it falls short of the mark.

If one wills to do as God directs he finds his knowledge not only increasing of the things that he ought to do, but he comes to a consciousness that is conviction firm and unmistakable that certain things are right and others are wrong. He comes to a power of discrimination he never before had and which no one ever acquires in any other manner. He also comes to love the truth as never before and in a manner impossible to explain to one who has not gone the same way. New birth is the best term in any language by which to express this awakening of the capabilities of the human soul in the acquisition of the divine characteristics.

No one can neglect this awakening of soul powers without losing all that is most valuable in his nature and missing that which life here is intended to yield to him.

It is the duty of every one to use his faculties in such a way as to bring to birth and then to full growth all these spiritual capacities. They will not cripple the exercise of any other powers, but will aid in their better development.

Divine Love.

Divine love's nature is the nature of God. God is love, we are told. It is His nature, the divine nature. We are not told simply that He loves or has loved as an incidental or accidental act of feeling, but that love is inseparable as a quality from a proper conception of what He is. And so consequently Christ is love and has not merely loved us, but will be and must be forever love, divine love. Now, in the God-man, love, this divine love, has become a quality of humanity also, and he who "puts on Christ" must attain to the same quality of divine love. He must be conscious of it. It must be a sensible and potent factor in his life, one that he cannot fail to distinguish as such upon any intelligent reflective self examination. It is the very breath, the activity of the new life, the spiritual being he has in Christ Jesus.—Lutheran.

Looking Backward.

Looking backward is one of our most dangerous and debilitating sins. Men sometimes say: "Oh, for the days of Whitefield! Oh, for the days of Wesley! Oh, for the days of Luther! Oh, for the days of the apostles!" What we ought to say is, "Oh, for the belief that the same Jesus who ascended into the heavens has come back again and that He is here in His invisible representative, the Holy Spirit, as truly as He was in the city of Jerusalem on the day of Pentecost!"—Rev. Charles E. Jefferson, D. D.

He Leadeth Me.

I cannot always see the way that leads
To heights above;
I sometimes quite forget He leads me on
With hand of love.
But yet I know the path must lead me to Immanuel's land."
And when I reach life's summit I shall know
And understand.

—Grace Benedict Curtis.

CHIEF JUSTICE MAY RESIGN

Rumored That He May Leave Supreme Bench After Roosevelt's Inauguration.

Washington.—Chief Justice Melville W. Fuller, of the supreme court of the United States, plans, it is said, to resign his office on March 5, 1905, the day after he has administered the oath of office to President Theodore Roosevelt. In this event it is conceded that Secretary of War Taft will be appointed by the president to the vacancy on the supreme bench. Chief Justice Fuller will be 72 years old on February 11, 1905, and will then be entitled to retire from the bench and enjoy a salary of $10,500 a year as long as he lives. No chief justice of the supreme court has ever resigned. All have died on the bench. Chief Justice Fuller has administered the oath of office to four presidents, Harrison, Cleveland and McKinley twice. He was appointed April 30, 1888.

CHIEF JUSTICE FULLER.
(He May Resign from the United States Supreme Bench.)

Justice Fuller has been chief justice of the United States since 1888, having been appointed by President Cleveland. During his incumbency of the office he has been called upon to pass judgment upon many of the most important cases that have ever come before the supreme court in the history of the nation, legal tangles that grew out of the expansion of the nation following the war with Spain.

Justice Fuller was born in Augusta, Me., February 11, 1833. After his graduation at Bowdoin college, in 1853, he formed a law partnership in his native town, and also engaged in newspaper work at the same time, being associate editor of The Age, a democratic paper there. In 1856 he sought a new field in the middle west, and settled in Chicago, where he opened a law office. From that time until the date of his appointment to the supreme bench he figured to a considerable extent in Illinois politics. He was a member of the Illinois state constitutional convention in 1862; was elected to the state legislature, and a delegate to the democratic national conventions of 1864, 1872, 1876 and 1880.

In Washington Justice Fuller has been a prominent figure in social life, and has been extremely popular with all classes of officialdom. He is a great admirer of President Roosevelt, and his desire to remain in office long enough to entitle him to administer the oath of office to the president on the 4th of next March is the result of the friendship of the two men.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 8.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—The making of a Christian; his birth.—John iii, 1-8.

"The making of a Christian" is a most important subject. In the making of a tradesman, a business man, a journalist or a statesman much time, money and care are spent. Men are systematically and skillfully prepared for the great professions and positions in life. Much more should all things needed be used in the making of a Christian. Man is the noblest work of God, and the highest type of true manhood is that developed by Christianity. In view of its importance, this subject is to be our topical serial for six months, in which we shall study the various steps in the making of a Christian—(1) his birth; (2) his speech; (3) his food; (4) his exercise; (5) helping one another; (6) his destiny. Such a subject is worthy of our most earnest and careful study, and as we take each step in study we should advance in it experimentally at the same time. Let us grow in grace as we grow in knowledge.

The first step in the making of a Christian is his birth. He cannot be made in a workshop or in an educational institution. He must first of all be born. Naturally a man is not a Christian. "The natural heart is enmity against God." The Christian man possesses the spirit of God and delights to do the will of God. Christianity is first of all an internal life, and then it manifests itself in the outward life. And that we may possess this life the human heart must be changed, and this change is called the new birth, and no one can become a Christian without this new birth. It is a necessity. "Ye must be born again," said Jesus to Nicodemus. A new heart, a changed heart, is essential to Christianity. We do not keep God's commands that we may become Christians, but because we are Christians. A new heart makes a new man. Put a new living principle in a man, and he becomes changed throughout. The sinful man turns from sin, and the neglectful man from his neglectfulness. From sin they turn to God "with new purpose of and endeavor after new obedience."

But how is a Christian born? Evidently not by his own power. No man can make himself a Christian. Nor can any other human power do it for him. God has given man boundless powers, and yet from him has been kept the tremendously responsible power of creating life, either physical or spiritual. The power of God alone can recreate the human soul and make a sinful man a new man in Jesus Christ and a member of the kingdom of God. And this work is the special function of the Holy Ghost, the third person of the Trinity. The work of the Spirit is mysterious.

How these things can be we do not know, but with God all things are possible. The Spirit enlightens our minds in the knowledge of Christ, renews our wills, convinces us of our sin and misery and thereby persuades and enables us to accept Jesus Christ, freely offered to us in the gospel. This is the process, but how it is done we cannot explain. "By their fruits ye shall know them." The new heart produces a new life. The child of the kingdom of Satan who is born into the kingdom of God must lead a different life. Are we doing so, Christian Endeavorers? Have we the virtues of the Spirit within and the testimony of a new life without that we are members of the kingdom of God? Let us examine ourselves and see how we stand on this subject. If not born again we may be. Christ's life and atoning death have made it possible for all to enter the kingdom of God. Do you wish it, pray for it. And let us all pray that God's Spirit may move on all unregenerated hearts to the end that they may be born again and thereby become heirs to God's kingdom.

FIRE IN A CLOSED HOUSE

Residence of Mr. Mygatt West Eighth St., Damaged.

THE LOSS IS $1,200

Family Away at the Time, and Origin of the Fire is a Mystery—Department Worked Hard.

With no one in the house to give an alarm, flames broke out mysteriously in a closet on the first floor at the residence of Frederic E. Mygatt, of 414 West Eighth street, shortly after 6 Wednesday evening, causing nearly $1,000 damage. After spreading some distance about the main hallway the fire found its way up the stairs to the second floor and then by a second flight of stairs to the third floor. Flames were bursting out of a window when they were discovered by Charles T. Kosoad, coachman for W. T. Gough, who turned in the alarm for the West fire on Central avenue last October. He first summoned the fire department by telephone and then pulled box 32.

The blaze had a good start before the arrival of the department and it was twenty-five minutes before it was gotten under control. Despite this fact and also that three lines of hose were laid in the flames were confined to the vicinity of the stairways and but very little damage resulted from water. On the first floor only the hallway and kitchen suffered and above it was only stairways and hallways. Insurance men who have already looked over the premises declare it a remarkable piece of work on the part of the department. It was an hour and a half before the recall was sounded.

Mr. Mygatt, the occupant of the house, has been stopping at Truell Inn, his family being away, and knew nothing of the fire until informed by a neighbor. He was at a loss to explain the origin and an investigation conducted by Chief Doane fails to give any idea. The building, which is a brick structure owned by a Mrs. Green, of Orange, was damaged to the amount of $700, with an additional $250 loss on furniture.

Y.M.C.A. BASEBALL FANS TO MEET NEXT MONTH

FOR THE PURPOSE OF DISCUSSING PLANS FOR NEXT SEASON.

Under the physical directorship of Fred A. Henckel, of the Y. M. C. A., the baseball stock of that organization has gone up fifty per cent. Last year an attempt was made to organize a baseball team, but there were too many managers, and the enterprise fell through. Two years ago the Y. M. C. A. had an amateur baseball team, but they have not had the opportunity or the material since to win another pennant in there had been three leagues.

It is the intention of the management of the Y. M. C. A. baseball affairs to put a team on the diamond next season, if possible, as good as the one which represented it two years ago, but at all events, a strictly nonprofessional organization. The Y. M. C. A.. has stood for the cleanest athletics for many years, and it was when professionalism took a hold on this city last year, that baseball cranks first realized and expressed the fact that the town was better off when there was an amateur league.

As to what sort of a team the Y. M. C. A. will organize, Mr. Henckel is unable to say at present, but a meeting will be held in the interest of baseball some time in January. The opinions of the various Y. M. C. A. ball and bat enthusiasts will be solicited, and the initial plans outlined. There is some possibility that the local Y. M. C. A. may enter a league which is proposed among the Y. M. C. A.s of the northern part of the State. The recently organized Physical Directors' Society has not yet decided upon the advisability of such an inter-association league, but if one is organized the local nine will have a place in the score book.

Drake Land Sold.

The plot of land laid out by the Columbia Realty Co. at Hillcrest, Trenton, was sold Wednesday for $18,050. The building lots were arranged by Silas Dewey Drake, of the Columbia Realty Company. The ground was sold as one plot by Scott Scammell, in a master's sale, at the sheriff's office yesterday. A. W. Packer acted as auctioneer and Mr. Green was the only bidder. The suit was brought by J. Albert Clayton.

Rural Mail Carriers Particular.

It may interest some persons to know that those living along rural free delivery routes will not have their mail delivered if they keep cross dogs; neither is the carrier obliged to deliver mail to the boxes unless the snow is cleared away.

SCHOOLS MAY DEBATE

Move to Introduce Argument in Inter-Academic League.

LEALS NOT FAVORABLE

Local School Not Likely to Vote for Its Adoption—Chess May Also Have a Place.

The New Jersey Academic League, which is conducting amateur athletic contests between the schools in northern New Jersey, has under consideration the advisability of adding to the competitions chess tournaments and debating contests. In this league are represented the following schools: Leal's, Newark Academy, Montclair Military Academy, Carteret and Pingry. So far no relations have existed between the various schools in this league other than in an athletic line. It has been considered wise to extend the contests so as to cover other branches, and the scheme is now in the hands of a committee.

As far as the local end of the affair is concerned it is not likely that Leal's School will vote for the adoption of a chess and debating tournament. Though the local school has been carrying on debates for the last six months, the authorities deem it unwise to devote more time to outside work. Several interesting and well conducted debates have been held at the local private school, and among the pupils are many good speakers and good debaters.

In all of the schools which are represented in this inter-academic league, the game of chess is to a great extent a new one, and this contest is the least probable to meet with favorable consideration. None of the members of the local school play chess, and it would be a fruitless attempt for them to take time which might be put to better use, to compete in a chess tournament.

Among those who have debated at Leal's School this year, and the subjects of the debates are the following:

"Resolved, That the United States Ought to Give Up the Philippines." Junior, affirmative, Hooley and Valiant; negative, Rowland and Glenney; Senior, affirmative, P. Chapman and Wilcox; negative, Curtis and Suffern. "Resolved, That the United States Ought to Build and Maintain a Large Navy." Junior, affirmative, C. Chapman and Wills; negative, Browne and Scott; Senior, affirmative, Jewett and Strong; negative, Millar and Waring. "Resolved, That the Right to Vote Should be Further Restricted by an Educational and Property Qualification." Junior only, affirmative, Lyman and Gutierrez; negative, Vandeveer and L. Smith. "Resolved, That the Right to Vote Should be Given to Women." Junior, affirmative, Bates and Stryker; negative, Gough and Booth Senior, affirmative, Hesse and W. Smith; negative, Wyckoff and Daniel.

DANCE AT PARK CLUB.

Given by Mr. and Mrs. Lowe in Daughter's Honor.

Among the particularly pleasant social events of Christmas week was a dance given at the Park Club, Wednesday by Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lowe, of Park avenue, for their daughter, Miss Margaret Lowe. There were about one hundred guests, comprising many of the young people who are home from school for the holidays. The club house was made attractive with Christmas decorations.

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lowe received the guests. Music for dancing, which was continued until a late hour, was furnished by Austin.

Had a House Party.

Mr. and Mrs. Jules Stephany, of Summit avenue, were given a surprise on Christmas Day by a visit from their life-long friend, David Basch and family, of New York. Their son, Mortimer, having returned from Paris, where he spent two years at the Conservatoire de Music, he played several classical selections on the piano and Henry Stephany entertained with selections on the phonograph, while August Stephany played the mandolin, and Miss Edith Basch sang operatic selections. Following a turkey dinner, the guests returned home.

Gift for Their Pastor.

In appreciation of his services and because of the fact that he will sever his relations as pastor of the church in April, the congregation of the Dunellen M. E. church presented Rev. S. K. Doolittle with a gold watch on Christmas day.

Paul Whitall Engaged.

Mr. and Mrs. Edgar R. Vail, of New York, announce the engagement of their daughter, Rachel Carrie Vail, to Paul Stanley Whitall, of this city, a son of Mrs. Charles Whitall.

A meeting of the McAll Auxiliary will be held at the Public Library on Wednesday morning, January 4, 1905, at 11 o'clock.

DAMAGES AS A BALM

Watson Emery Wins His Suit Against David Taylor.

VERDICT IS $3,000

Trial at Newark in Which Former Plainfielder Obtained Damages From Lincoln Hotelkeeper.

Mrs. Rebecca Emery was called as a witness by the defense in the Supreme Court Circuit at Newark Thursday, in the trial of suit brought by her husband, Watson C. Emery, of Irvington, and formerly of this city, against David Taylor, a saloon-keeper of Lincoln, to recover $10,000 damages for the alleged alienation of his wife's affections, and later $3,000 and costs was awarded her husband.

Mrs. Emery said she first met Taylor in West Dunellen, about eight years ago, when her husband brought him to their house. She declared that when Mrs. Taylor was alive she frequently went to call on her, and when Mrs. Taylor was taken ill witness tended her with the consent of Mr. Emery. Mrs. Taylor died in February, 1901, and in September of 1901 Mrs. Emery declared she left her husband because he confessed to wrong-doing, and said his conscience troubled him. She said he told her she could go away and earn her own living, and she told him she would never forgive him.

"After leaving my husband the first time," added the witness, "I desired a position somewhere and applied to Mr. Taylor for help. He said he needed a housekeeper and I went to his house for $20 a month."

Witness said that during March of 1903 she returned to her husband in Irvington, and stayed there until September. Then she went on a visit to relatives in New York. She stayed longer than she intended, but when she returned found her husband had gone away with his daughter Myrtle. She hunted him up and was told by Emery, she said, that she could never see Myrtle again until she confessed to various offenses. She refused to acknowledge a falsehood, she said.

In 1902, Mrs. Emery asserted, she left her husband because of abuse and went to Newark, where she resided for a time on Clinton place. Taylor came there once, she added.

"Do you remember Mr. Emery making any criminal charge against you and Taylor before Judge Lambert in court?" asked Winfield S. Angleman, of this city, counsel for Taylor.

"Yes," returned Mrs. Emery, "and nothing came of it, for there was no evidence."

Mrs. Emery added that in this city, at a later time, she had her husband bound over to keep the peace. From a letter written, it is alleged, by Emery to his wife after the first separation, her counsel read portions. It was addressed "My own darling lovey," and said in part: "God directs me, my dear, to cling to you. He gives me strength and comfort to write to you. I would give my life for you. O, you have suffered so much for me. Signed by your flesh and blood and your husband."

In another letter offered in evidence Emery wrote that he attributed his bad luck to losing their wedding ring and said he intended to buy another.

On cross-examination Mrs. Emery said her reason for going away was because her husband was overbearing and compelled her to take boarders to get money with which to clothe the children, and she also went out nursing, she said. Twice he choked her, she declared. Mrs. Emery admitted that she was still housekeeper for Taylor. She denied that the latter had ever tried to induce her to leave her home.

To give evidence against their mother the two little sons of Mrs. Emery were called yesterday afternoon.

After Grover Cleveland Emery, aged twelve years, had been sworn, he was asked by Taylor's counsel if he understood the nature of the oath he had just taken.

"Yes, sir," responded the youthful witness. "It means I am to tell the whole truth, and nothing but the truth."

"And what will happen if you do not tell the truth?"

"Why, I shall be punished while I am living and be punished after I am dead."

"Good!" said Robert M. Clark, counsel for Emery, in an undertone.

"Did anybody teach you that answer?" questioned Mr. Angleman.

"My father," answered the boy. "He told me what it meant to say what I have."

"I submit this child is not a proper witness," said Mr. Angleman, addressing the court. "He has plainly been taught by his parents to say these things."

"Who do you think should be a more proper person to teach a child the difference between right and wrong than his parent?" asked the Chief Justice. "Don't you think it right that a parent should morally instruct his own child?"

"Yes; that's good enough," returned Mr. Angleman, "but I think this child should not be allowed to testify in view of the fact that he has been told what to say. It isn't his own testimony."

The court refused to entertain the suggestion and said the point was too fine in distinction to be argued at that time, and directed that the examination of the witness proceed. The boy could not remember what year he had first seen Taylor and Mrs. Emery together, but said it was a long time ago. His mother, he declared, had on various occasions told him and his brother to rake up the lawn and eradicate evidences of Taylor having driven up to the house before Mr. Emery came home.

Clifford Emery, aged fourteen years, said he had seen Taylor at their home about twenty times.

"He used to give me and Grover money," he added, "and we would spend it for candy. He used to stay all day, and when it came toward night he would say, 'Well, I had better go now before Mr. Emery comes.'"

The witness added that sometimes after Taylor had been at the house his mother would shake her fist in his face.

"She would say," he continued, "'If you ever tell your father a word I will kill you.' One time she told us that if we ever told anything she would mash us under her feet.'"

"But you did tell?"

"Oh, yes; we told pop about it afterward," said the boy.

Wesley Blaine, for ten years a resident of Dunellen, and Pauline Hall, of Dunellen, testified to having seen Taylor and Mrs. Emery driving together. Harry H. Leeds, an inspector for the Sate Board of Pharmacy, said that in July last he was engaged by Mr. Emery to get evidence against the latter's wife. He made friends with Taylor, he testified, by pretending he wished to buy land for factory sites, and the hotel-keeper showed him about the place without reserve.

"Once I saw Taylor kiss Mrs. Emery," he said, "and on the second visit I was shown her room which Taylor called 'Mrs. Emery's room.' She came to the door while I was there."

Witness said Taylor had alluded to her on one occasion by saying, "She may be the second Mrs. Taylor." On a third visit, he declared, the couple went out driving and did not return while he was at the hotel. Mr. Leeds said he was paid $5 a day by Emery and all expenses to secure evidence.

NEW YEAR'S DAY EVENT AT THE PARK CLUBHOUSE

CUSTOMARY ANNUAL RECEPTION DREW A LARGE CROWD.

There was a large gathering of society people at the annual New Year's reception at the Park Club. The wives of the Board of Governors received the guests and presiding at the tables were Mrs. Joseph H. Howell, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers and Mrs. Charles W. McCutchen. Assisting them were the Misses Marion McCutchen, Belle Milne, Sopha Barlow, Dorothy Fleming, Virginia Hegeman, Dorothy Howard, Marjorie Howard, Saidee Mae Howell, Ethel Moet and Madeline Reed.

In the evening there were heart and bridge whist games. Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Lyman, Mrs. Ege and Harry Ball won the prizes in the game of hearts, and at bridge Mrs. J. B. Betts, Mrs. F. H. Ball, Mrs. A. N. Salter and Mrs. Gilbert. Both the afternoon and evening affairs were in charge of the entertainment committee.

PETITIONS PRESENTED TO THE COMMON COUNCIL

ROUTINE WORK OF CITY FATHERS AT LAST NIGHT'S MEETING.

In addition to the petitions referred by the 1904 Common Council to that of 1905, Monday, there was one from the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital offering to care for the city's indigent poor in case of illness for one year for $1,500, which was referred to the finance committee. Residents of Spooner avenue, between Seventh and Eighth street, requested the city not to macadamize that thoroughfare at present, giving as a reason that the street is little used.

Brooks Carson, through his counsel, W. S. Angleman, Esq., asked for the return of $70 70, which he paid in a real estate transaction under the Martin Act. He claimed that Frank Huntington is in possession of the property and that the assessor refused to assess the property to the petitioner, after he had paid the amount stated. The matter was referred to the finance committee.

Blanche Huntington, of Raymond street, presented a grievance against the Public Service Corporation, alleging that the conductors on the trolley cars refused to stop the cars at that street, claiming that the city had not improved the same. Mrs. Hewist, of West Front street, protested against paying a poll and dog tax, claiming that her husband was dead when the bill was sent and that she does not own a dog. J. D. Loizeaux and others petitioned the Common Council for more fire protection in the vicinity of Rock avenue, West Second street and Third streets, and there were petitions for electric lights on Dunellen and Hunter avenues.

All petitions were referred to the proper committees.

City Physician Dr. C. B. Lufburrow presented his annual report, showing that he had made 483 visits.

DECISION REVERSED

Victory In Legal Battle For Northern Securities.

ATTACK ON BARGE CANAL ACT.

Plan Agreed on by Directors For Distributing the Company's Assets on Pro Rata Basis May Now Be Carried Out.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—The United States circuit court of appeals has reversed the decision of the United States district court, which granted an injunction to E. H. Harriman preventing the carrying out of the Northern Securities company's plan of distributing its assets.

The decision is a victory for the Hill interests. The plan agreed upon by the Northern Securities directors and provisionally ratified by the stockholders for distributing the company's assets on a pro rata basis may now be carried out.

By a decree of the New Jersey court the Northern Securities company was restrained from disposing of 370,230 shares of the common stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company alleged to have been received from E. H. Harriman and Winslow S. Pierce and of 347,090 shares of the common stock of the Northern Pacific Railway company received by the Northern Securities company from the Northern Pacific company. This latest decision, however, gives the Northern Securities company the right to dispose of the stock.

Harriman and Pierce, when the Northern Securities company had been declared by the United States supreme court to be an illegal combination, demanded the return of the original stock they had contributed at the time of the organization of the combination. The Northern Securities company, it was claimed, intended to make a pro rata distribution of the stock of the contributing company.

PUTER'S STATEMENT.

Says He Gave Senator Mitchell $2,000 as a Bribe.

PORTLAND, Ore., Jan. 4.—S. A. D. Puter, recently convicted in this city with Horace G. McKinley, Daniel T. Tarpley and Mrs. Emma Watson of conspiracy to defraud the United States government of lands, has made a statement in contradiction of statements issued by United States Senator Mitchell, indicted on Saturday last by a federal grand jury on evidence similar to that presented at the criminal trial of the persons recently convicted. "When I said that I gave Senator Mitchell $2,000 to use his influence with Binger Hermann to expedite those claims in 11-7," said Puter, "I told the truth, and Senator Mitchell knows it."

Berth Will Go to R. W. Taylor.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 4.—While no official announcement concerning the president's intention in regard to filling the vacancy on the federal bench caused by the resignation of Judge Francis J. Wing of the northern district of Ohio is obtainable, it seems reasonably certain that Robert W. Taylor will be appointed. Mr. Taylor is the principal attorney for the protestants in the inquiry into the status of Senator Smoot of Utah, now being conducted by the senate. He formerly represented the old McKinley district in the house of representatives and is recognized as a lawyer of fine attainments.

Nine Burned to Death.

ELMIRA, N. Y., Jan. 4.—During the early morning hours fire destroyed the home of Frank Noweski, a miner in Morris Run, Pa., and all the members of the family of ten except the eldest son, aged eighteen, were either burned to death or smothered. The bodies of Noweski, his wife and seven children, one of them a baby in arms, are in the ruins of their home. Noweski was employed by the Morris Run Coal Mining company and, with his fellow miners, had been on a strike since last April.

Military Prisoners Escape.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—During an evidently designed stampede of the officers' horses at Fort Hamilton four prisoners escaped from the guardhouse at the post. One of them was recaptured, but the other three are believed to have perished in the icy waters of the harbor. The recaptured prisoner is Paul Berg, who was taken in custody last night in Manhattan by a detail sent out from the fort.

Sandford to Have Third Trial.

BANGOR, Me., Jan. 4.—Rev. Frank W. Sandford, leader of the Holy Ghost and Us society at Shiloh, will be given a third trial on the charge of manslaughter in causing the death by alleged neglect of Leander Bartlett, aged fourteen, a member of the Shiloh colony. The court has sustained exceptions of the defendant, who was found guilty by jury after a second trial at Farmington.

Mrs. Patrick Campbell's Bad Fall.

PHILADELPHIA, Jan. 4.—Mrs. Patrick Campbell, the English actress, fractured a knee cap last night, the result of a fall while entering a carriage to go to the Broad Street theater. She was removed to the University of Pennsylvania hospital, and it will be two months, the doctors say, before she will be able to walk. The remainder of her American tour will be abandoned.

Irish Land Loan of $30,000,000.

LONDON, Jan. 4.—The Bank of England announces that it is prepared to receive tenders for a new issue of the Irish land loan amounting to $30,000,000.

DIED IN TIBET.

Francis H. Nichols, American Explorer, Buried at Gyantse.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—United States Minister Conger has cabled from Peking confirmation of the death of Francis H. Nichols, the American explorer and correspondent in Tibet. Mr. Conger states that he received the news from the Tibetan city Gyantse, Sunday, announcing that Mr. Nichols died Dec. 29 of pneumonia and was buried there.

Mr. Nichols was a native of Evanston, Ill. He served as a newspaper correspondent in the Spanish-American war, later went to China and then started for Tibet with a few Chinese.

He intended to study the customs of the country and finally penetrate to Lassa, the "Forbidden City." Mr. Nichols left this country March 27, 1903.

SWIFTWING WON.

Feature of Charity Day at New Orleans Was Second Race.

NEW ORLEANS, Jan. 4.—This was charity day at New Orleans. It was one day when the talent did not begrudge giving up a dollar to enter the grounds, knowing that the dollar at least would be diverted to a good purpose.

The course was crowded and the boxes well filled for the first time during the meeting. The receipts for the day will be split up among various institutions in this city.

Monaco Maid was the choice in the opening event, with Jake Sanders and Pawtucket the best played of the others. Monaco Maid gladdened the hearts of the smart players by going to the front at the start and staying there to the end, winning in a drive by a half length from Pawtucket, who finished out strong and beat Flight a length and a half for the place. Summary:

First Race. — Monaco Maid, first; Pawtucket, second; Flight, third.

Second Race.—Swiftwing, first; Cataline, second; Handspinner, third.

Third Race.—Sis Lee, first; Sponge Cake, second; Terns Rod, third.

Fourth Race. — De Reszke, first; Ram's Horn, second; Katie Powers, third.

Fifth Race.—St. Tammany, first; Norwood Ohio, second; Kilts, third.

Sixth Race.—Rian, first; Montebank, second; Knowledge, third.

Young Corbett and Nelson to Fight.

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 4.—Young Corbett and Battling Nelson, the great lightweight fighter, who recently gave Jimmy Britt, the pride of California, such a hard battle in their twenty round bout at Mechanics' pavilion here two weeks ago, have been matched at last. They have been matched for a twenty round battle the latter part of next month. Corbett and Nelson met Nov. 29, and Nelson won in ten rounds, the seconds of the Denverite throwing up the sponge. Corbett claimed he prepared hurriedly and was not in good shape.

Colorado Legislature Opens.

DENVER, Jan. 4.—The legislature which will settle the gubernatorial contest between Governor Peabody and Alva Adams opened here today. It is expected that the day will be taken up with the work of organization and that no action will be taken that has direct bearing on the governorship. It is practically certain that the first thing that will be done by the senate after it is in working order will be the unseating of Senators Robert M. Born of Alamosa and Daniel Healey of Leadville.

Society In Accord With Kaiser.

NEW YORK, Jan. 4.—The publication of a remark by Emperor William of Germany to Ambassador Charlemagne Tower that he hoped an interchange of lectureships on German and American civilization might be arranged between the two countries has elicited the fact that the purpose of the Germanistic Society of America is identical with that of the emperor.

Captain Mulliken on Trial.

CHICAGO, Jan. 4.—Trial by court martial of Captain David B. Mulliken, Twenty-seventh infantry, has opened at Fort Sheridan. Captain Mulliken is charged with having certified on army records that he was single, though he had married a Filipino woman when his regiment was serving in the Philippines, and he is further charged with duplicating his payrolls.

Faribault Bank Failed.

FARIBAULT, Minn., Jan. 4.—The First National bank of Faribault closed its doors after the bank directors had passed a resolution that the lawful reserve fund of the bank had fallen below the limit fixed by law and that much of the bank's securities and other assets could not be converted into money. It is believed the depositors will eventually be paid.

Colored Citizens Invite Roosevelt.

MOBILE, Ala., Jan. 4.—At the emancipation celebration in this city, at which 2,500 negroes were present, A. N. Johnson, colored, was delegated to go to Washington and on behalf of the negro citizens of Mobile invite the president to visit this city. Johnson left last night for Washington.

Incendiary Fire In Tobacco District.

RALEIGH, N. C., Jan. 4.—A fire which broke out in the tobacco district of Greenville destroyed two warehouses, five prizeries and several small buildings, besides a million pounds of tobacco. Losses, $60,000; insurance, $40,000. The fire is believed to have been incendiary.

Dead at Age of 104.

MIDDLETOWN, N. Y., Jan. 4.—Mrs. Ann Hasbrouck is dead here at the age of 104. Three of her sons served in the civil war.

FOR A FOURTH FIRE HOUSE

Chief Doane Recommends Better Protection for East End.

WANTS MORE FIREMEN

Annual Report to Common Council Contains Many Valuable Suggestions.

Chief of the Fire Department T. O. Doane presented his annual report at the adjourned meeting of Common Council Friday. The main features of the report follow:

"To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

"I submit for your attention this my seventeenth annual report of the condition of the fire department under your control with the number of fires and alarms, the cause and the amount of insurance, and losses as near as could be ascertained.

ENGINE HOUSES.

"The engine houses occupied by the department are owned by the city, and are in good order except that a portion of the floor in headquarters may need repairing during the year, and new door places on No. 1 engine house. The apparatus of the department is all in good order with the exception of the hook and ladder truck. The aerial ladder of the apparatus was strained at the Babcock fire a has never been repaired; this should be done, and the iron tires replaced with rubber tires.

CAUSES OF FIRES.

"Chimneys and defective flues, 21; unknown, 18; grass, 8; locomotive sparks, 6; stoves, 6; lamps, 4; fireworks, 3; gas stoves, 3; smoke, 3; ashes, 2; gas jet, 2; lightning, 2; debris in ceiling, 2; oil stove, 1; plumber, 1; smoking in bed, 1; escaping steam, 1; waste, 1; false alarm, 1; out of city, 1; cleaning clothing, 1; gas taper, 1; benzene, 1; woods, 2; oil and rags, 1; bonfire, 1; gasolene explosion, 1; spontaneous combustion, 1; candle, 1; freight car, 1; kerosene engine, 1; Match, 1; boy and match, 1. RECOMMENDATIONS.

"The only improvement made in the department this year was the placing of a new boiler in No. 1 engine house to replace the old one that was worn out; the purchase of 2,000 feet of hose, and the purchase of a team of horses. In my reports of 1902 and 1903 I called your attention to the fact that more hydrants were needed for the central or business portion of the city, and pointed out the places where they should be located. I hope your Honorable Body will take this matter up during the coming year before Front street is paved. The buildings in the section I have indicated are not only high and compact, but are filled with valuable goods, and in case of fire in this district we would need a number of lines of hose, and the shorter the lines the better the service. While our water pressure is all that the water company agreed to give us, and at an ordinary fire, during certain hours of the day, is all that we need, there are times when we need more pressure. I think the matter should be taken up by the Council. I again renew my request of last year that five more permanent men be appointed, they are very much needed. As soon as the financial condition of the city will permit, there should be an engine house built in the eastern end of the city and equipped with a steamer and combination chemical and hose wagon. I recommended that deluge set, and a ladder pipe to equip our aerial ladder as a water tower, be purchased. In conclusion, I tender my thanks to His Honor the Mayor, and to your Honorable Body, for the interest you have taken in the department, and I hope for a continuance of the same. I also wish to thank all the officers and members of the department for their good behavior and the good work they have done during the year."

Charles P. Sebring has commenced work of erecting a building on West Front street, between the properties of Mr. Manning and Frank Neal. W. C. Smith has the contract for the mason work.

ANOTHER BIG BUILDING

Report That Christian Gloekler Will Erect Structure.

FRONT AND SOMERSET

Purchases Present Frame Structure From J. A. Blatz—Consideration $35,000.

Another large and important realty deal in business property is reported in which Christian Gloekler, who conducts a saloon at the corner of West Front and Somerset streets, has purchased that property of Joseph A. Blatz. The consideration is said to be approximately $35,000 and the new owner proposes early next year to tear down the old buildings on the corner and erect in their place a handsome modern structure, the first floor for cafe purposes and the upper floors to be used for flats.

This property has been sought after by several persons. Before the First National Bank built on its present site, an effort was made to get this corner, but the price jumped several times and the plan was given up. At one time the Y. M. C. A. tried to purchase the property before its building was erected at the corner of East Front street and Watchung avenue. Still later The Plainfield Trust Company made an effort to secure the property, but this deal went through. For many years the property has been occupied by a saloon, Charles Smith being the proprietor. He was succeeded by Joseph A. Blatz and then Christian Gloekler obtained possession. If the new building is erected, Toney Lusardi, who, for years has conducted a fruit stand on the corner, will have to move.

REAL ESTATE DEAL CARRIED TO COURT

F. P. AND HORACE CODDINGTON SUE JAMES TRIMMER.

The suit of Franklin P. Codington and Horace Codington against James Trimmer, to recover $178 claimed as rent from the defendant, was tried before Justice Mosher and a jury Friday afternoon. Horace Codington, Esq., represented the plaintiffs, and L. A. Clement, Esq., represented the defendant. Before the case was concluded Mr. Clement raised the question that Justice Mosher had no jurisdiction in the matter which involves a real estate transaction, and the Justice dismissed the proceedings.

The plaintiffs claimed to own property on West Front street formerly occupied by the defendant and they declared they gave the deed for it in exchange for a twelve-acre farm at Washingtonville and demanded $178 as rent. Mr. Trimmer's defence was that the plaintiffs had never given him the deed for the farm, thereby failing in the agreement. These persons served on the jury: George Dean, Thomas Lyon, John Smith, Isaac Shrager, Thomas Gray, Henry Drake, Herbert VanFleet, Charles Case, Frank Dunham, Frank L. Swackhamer, Christopher Huff and John Crouse.

The case will now be taken to the Circuit Court.

DANCE AT SEMINARY.

Given by Miss Kenyon to Graduating Class.

Miss Kenyon gave a delightful dance at the Plainfield Seminary, last Friday, in honor of the graduating class, which is composed of Miss Latourette, Miss Stevens, Miss Hooley, Miss Asten, Miss Titus, Miss Flanders and Miss Saunders. Miss Saunders, the president of the class, was unable to be present.

The school room was decorated with a profusion of holly sent from the South for the occasion by Edwin S. Hooley. There were over 150 young people at the dance which was continued until 1 o'clock. Miss Kenyon received, assisted by the teachers and members of the class.

A Probable Heir.

According to the provisions of the will of Mrs. Mary B. Hentz, who died recently at her home, No. 769 St. Mark's avenue, Brooklyn, her estate, which is estimated at nearly $1,000,000, is to go to Henry Hentz, her husband, and four children. There was a provision in the will that in case Mrs. Hentz survived her husband, one quarter of the estate was to go to Leonard Spangenberg, of this city.

Mayor Bill in New Venture.

Mayor Bill Smith, of New Market, who lately retired as manager of the Plainfield Auto Garage, has gone into the poultry business on a large scale. He is having an immense hennery built on his property at New Market, capable of housing 1,000 fowls, which will contain steam heat and many modern improvements.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

OL. XXXVIII. LAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1905. NO. 2

"Support the Constitution Which is the Cement the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities"—Madison.

MISS C. F. LOWE A BRIDE

Charming Daughter of W. E. Lowe Wedded to Frederick Mead Shepard.

SOCIETY THRONG THERE

Groom a Nephew of the Late Col. Elliot F. Shepard and Son of A. D. Shepard—To Reside in Wisconsin.

Miss Charlotte Frances Lowe, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William E. Lowe, of Park avenue, and Frederick Mead Shepard, son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus D. Shepard, of New York, were married in Grace church at 12:30 o'clock this afternoon. Over 1,500 invitations were issued and the church was thronged with prominent society folk from New York, Philadelphia and this city. The wedding was the most brilliant of the season. Rev. S. DeLancy Townsend, rector of All Angels' church, New York, officiated, assisted by Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, rector of Grace church.

The Misses Mildred and Margaret Miller, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Doull Miller and nieces of the groom, were flower girls. Burritt H. Shepard, brother of the groom, was best man. The ushers were Augustus D. Shepard, Jr., and R. M. Shepard, brothers of the groom; Henry W. Lowe, brother of the bride; H. R. Woodruff, of Brooklyn; S. S. Hutchins, of New Rochelle; T. F. Adams, H. L. Walton and John A. Dix, of New York.

The bride's gown was of white chiffon cloth trimmed with point and duchesse lace. She wore a veil and carried lilies-of-the-valley and orchids. The maid of honor was gowned in white over yellow material. She wore a yellow hat, with white plume and carried daisies. The flower girls were gowned in white and carried yellow daisies.

The church was lavishly decorated, there being a profusion of Easter lilies and white carnations banked about the chancel, while lilies were also arranged at the end of the pews in the main aisle, presenting a scene of beauty.

Mrs. William H. Freeman presided at the organ, and while the guests were arriving she rendered an attractive programme of varied selections.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where the couple received the congratulations of 600 friends. During the reception the wedding breakfast was served by Holland, of Philadelphia. An orchestra seated in the music room furnished a programme. The decorations at the home were similar to those at the church, Easter lilies and white carnations predominating in the arrangement throughout the reception room, parlors and dining room.

The bride received many presents. They were displayed in an upper room.

Mr. and Mrs. Shepard have been social favorites in the younger set both here and in New York. Mr. Shepard is a nephew of the late Col. Elliot F. Shepard, for many years editor and proprietor of The Mail and Express, and has been a prominent figure in many of the leading society events in New York. His home during the summer months has been, until recently, with his parents, at "The Gables," on East Front street.

After an extended tour, Mr. and Mrs. Shepard will reside at Madison, Wisconsin, where Mr. Shepard is engaged in business with the Northern Electric Manufacturing Company.

SOMERSET FREEHOLDERS HAD LITTLE TO DO.

Deeds Executed and a Judgment Ordered to Be Paid.

Very little was doing at the regular monthly meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders in the Court House at Somerville yesterday. Oliver H. Perry, the newly-appointed supervisor of roads, presented his bond for $1,000, with sufficient sureties, and it was accepted.

After straightening the line between the county lands and the First Reformed church in Somerville were executed.

The board decided to pay the judgment of $67.49 obtained against the county in a suit brought by Harry W. Hoffman, of Basking Ridge.

The board will meet at the bridge near Grant B. Schley's, in Bernardsville township, Friday at 10 a. m.

Sunday-school Orchestra.

One of the attractive features of the Sunday-school sessions at the Park Avenue Baptist church is the newly organized orchestra, the members of which are G. W. V. Moy, Miss Arline Brown, Miss Marjorie Brown, violins; Martin Stutsman, Stuart Freeman, mandolins; Whitney C. Frazee, cornet; Miss Mary Clark, piano. Mr. Moy will be pleased to add other members to the orchestra.

HER ANTE-BELLUM DAYS

Plainfield Woman Once a Belle of the South Talks Reminiscently.

NEARLY NINETY NOW

Mrs. Montgomery Was One of a Committee of Three Society Matrons to Receive Gen. Zackary Taylor, Hero of Mexican War.

Time's changes have furnished the theme for many a story, and the point for more than one moral. There is little Miss Minter on West Fourth street, near Liberty, that houses one who has experienced both the harshness and the kindness of the Great Whirligig, and the story in her life is as interesting a one as can be found outside the covers of a romance.

That little house s'eiters a belle of ante bellum days in New Orleans, a leader of society in the brilliant metropolis of the old Southland. And what is almost of as much interest, it shelters her granddaughter, her great-granddaughter and her great grandson.

Mrs. Alison Montgomery is the one-time belle. Verging on her ninety-first year, she is peacefully watching the years glide by, cheerful and placid. She lives in a world of reminiscence, but untinged by vain regrets. There is enough to regret, in all conscience, but she could never have been the sort of woman who repines and live to see a fifth generation playing about her feet.

Mrs. Montgomery came to this country with her husband from Edinburgh, her native city, in 1835. Mr. Montgomery, with a few hundred pounds in his pockets, turned his footsteps to the Western world in search of fortune. He found it fast enough to convince him that his good star had beckoned him to America. What he thought of his guiding star when fate and the fortunes of war swept wealth away—and killed him before they allowed him to escape their power—is a matter to be imagined and not written. But that belongs to a later phase of Alison Montgomery's story.

In 1836 the energetic young seeker of wealth and position was studying finance in the office of Brown Brothers, a New York ante bellum firm of bankers famous and powerful in their day. Ten years later Montgomery, knowing banking and brokerage as well as they should be known, went to New Orleans with his wife, to become a cotton broker. He prospered mightily. He became wealthy, and his wife, charming and attractive, found the highest circles of New Orleans society open to her.

She took a leading place in the social world of the gay court of cotton's kingdom, and had her share of its triumphs. At Pass Christian, Miss., the Newport of those days in the South, she was one of a committee of three women who received General Zachary Taylor, hero of the Mexican War, at a reception given in his honor just after the conflict closed. She was the first woman there to take his hand.

When the Civil War broke out Mrs. Montgomery was still of that fashionable and luxurious world. Her sun was high in the heavens, but an eclipse—in which many another sun was dimmed—spread rapidly across its face. The clouds of the conflict darkened its brightness, and it hasn't shone much since. The gloom came thickly when Ben Butler's troops entered the city. They took all of Montgomery's cotton, molasses and rum, and beggared him.

Montgomery had never taken out citizenship papers, and when the war closed he filed a claim for $60,000 damages—a great sum in those days—in the court of claims at Washington, as a British subject. The claim was never allowed. The fact that his only son had served through the war as a rebel artilleryman may have had something to do with that. Anyway, broken in health and spirits by years of trouble and bootless suing for justice, Montgomery died, in 1882, in Cranford. He came North after the war and never returned to the South to live.

Mrs. Montgomery lived in Cranford after her husband's death, quietly aging, until two years ago. Then she came to 442 West Fourth street, to live with her granddaughter, Mrs. Alice Chandler, and her great-granddaughter, Mrs. Wilson Sherman.

Time has touched Mrs. Montgomery very gently. There, at least, he has treated her with exceeding kindness. Weak, of course, she is, as bodily strength goes, but not as the strength of old people is calculated and her faculties are but little dimmed. Her mind is perfectly clear, and her sight is good. Her hearing is less keen than it once was, but not enough to interfere with conversation. And she is a charming conversationalist. Pleasant and courteously spoken, as only women of the old days can be, she is especially de-

COLLEGE YOUTHS DINE.

Rutgers Sophomores Feast, with Freshmen Prisoners Looking On.

The class of 1908, Rutgers College, held a dinner at the Hotel Kensington last night. It was not remarkable for quiet or dignity. Several unhappy freshmen were compelled to witness it under duress, and with no regard for their comfort or peace of mind.

After the dinner the youths marched around town singing loudly of Rutgers and shouting, not softly, of *the year 1908. People in North av*enue who couldn't get to sleep prayed earnestly that it come soon.

On Monday night, at Truell Inn, the class of 1909 held a dinner. They claimed afterwards that there were humbled sophomores at the feast, but the sophomers scoff at this claim and say it is not even remotely based on fact. What is undoubtedly a fact, however, is that some earnest sophomores were shooed away from in front of Truell Inn by a harsh cop, who refused to let them whoop for 1908 solely to annoy the class of 1909.

$22,000 FOR THE GUINNS

Craig A. Marsh Recovers Big Verdict For His Clients in Damage Suit.

AGAINST THE P. S. C.

Mrs. Guinn Is Given $15,000 And Her Husband $7,000—Jury Out Hour and a Quarter.

The damage suit of Mrs. Anna M. Guinn, of Carlton avenue, against the Public Service Corporation for $25,000, which was started in the Supreme Court before Judge Fort yesterday, went to the jury this morning. The husband's claim was joined with her suit.

The jury was out an hour and a quarter, returning at 12:15. By its verdict Mrs. Guinn was given $15,000 and her husband $7,000. Craig A. Marsh represented the plaintiff, while Alvah A. Clark, of Somerville, assisted by Howard McSherry, of Newark, represented the defendant company.

Many witnesses were called yesterday afternoon by both the plaintiff and defendant, the former trying to prove that her injuries received in the trolley accident are permanent. The Public Service Corporation maintained that Mrs. Guinn's injuries are the result of something foreign to the accident and that she would have suffered from the condition had she not been in the trolley crash. Dr. Mrsving, a witness for the trolley company, even went so far as to intimate that the plaintiff was shamming, although it was shown that he only spent about fifteen minutes in examining Mrs. Guinn.

It is claimed that Mrs. Guinn has lost her senses of smell and taste, yet no tests were made in court. The plaintiff occupied a wheel chair throughout the trial and her general condition appeared to impress the jury.

JURY HEARD ALL ABOUT RIBS IN ROMPT SUIT

THEN THEY DECIDE HE HAD NO CAUSE OF ACTION AGAINST GULICK.

Charles Romph's suit for $2,000 damages against Abram Gulick, of Lincoln, was decided adversely to the plaintiff yesterday, after a trial before Judge Helsley, in New Brunswick. The plaintiff's case was swamped by testimony on the other side.

Romph asked for compensation for three ribs alleged to have been broken by Gulick in a quarrel on the latter's place. The defense brought forward David Taylor, a Lincoln saloon keeper, to prove that Romph, an hour after the alleged encounter, had a drink in his place, and Dr. Lufburrow gave expert testimony to the effect that a man with broken ribs could not have walked to the hotel as Romph did. The defense also brought out the fact that Romph was convicted of assault and battery in Somerville in 1900, and fined. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., counsel for Gulick, asked Dr. Gaston, who was on the stand for Romph, a long string of medical questions touching on and appertaining to ribs.

The jury was out only a half an hour. Their verdict was no cause of action. G. W. V. Moy was the plaintiff's lawyer.

Lawyer Receives Settlement.

Following the termination of the case of Mrs. Anna M. Guinn against the Public Service Corporation, in the Supreme Court, at Elizabeth, this morning, the case of George Ball against the Public Service Corporation, for injuries received in the same trolley accident that prompted Mrs. Guinn's suit, was called, and the jury drawn. Immediately afterward counsel got together and made an amicable settlement. Mr. Ball's suit was for $10,000. He refused to tell the terms of the settlement. Craig A. Marsh, Esq., represented Mr. Ball.

To Erect $7,000 Residence.

William H. Chamberlain, of Westfield, son-in-law of John McIntyre, of North avenue, has filed plans for the erection of a $7,000 residence on Berkley avenue, near Denmark road. William C. Smith will do the mason work and William Brokaw the carpentering. Inspector Doane has also given a permit to the Public Service Corporation for the erection of a shed near the Madison avenue electric light plant.

Vaudeville Entertainment.

Court Plainfield, No. 1145, I. O. F., will give an entertainment and dance in Saengerbund Hall, Friday night, January 19. The entertainment will be furnished by San Howard's Vaudeville Company.

ROBBED BY A FOOTPAD

Mrs. J. P. Burd's Handbag Snatched From Her on Watchung Avenue.

CONTAINED $51 IN BILLS

Crime Committed at 8:30 o'Clock, Near the Business Section. —Futile Pursuit of the Thief.

In the center of town, within two blocks of the business section, at an hour when passersby were still out in early evening numbers, Mrs. J. P. Burd, a milliner, was robbed by a footpad last night. The thief got away with a handbag containing $51.

The robbery occurred at Watchung avenue and Fifth street, at 8:30 o'clock. Mrs. Burd lives at 506 Watchung avenue, and a very few more steps would have carried her into her home in safety. Mrs. Burd's millinery shop is at 153 East Front street. She closed it shortly after 8 o'clock, and started homeward, going down Watchung avenue. Men and women were passing frequently on both sides of the street, and a full moon made the way unusually light, and thoughts of footpads and other night terrors were far from Mrs. Burd's mind. She carried a small, flat leather bag, of the sort women wear strapped to their hands, in which a roll of bills containing $51 reposed.

At the corner of Fifth street a man sprang from behind a tree. Before the startled woman had time to realize fully what was impending he struck at her with one hand and snatched at the bag with the other. Mrs. Burd shrank back but clung to the bag. The blow missed her. The footpad jerked savagely at the bag, and the strap gave way. He turned and fled toward the railroad with bag and money, leaving Mrs. Burd with a convulsive grip on the strap.

Mrs. Burd screamed for help. No one had been very near the scene when the man sprang out from behind the tree, but Mrs. Burd's screams drew a crowd as if the neighborhood had been filled with pedestrians. George Scribner, who keeps a saloon and restaurant on the triangle, opposite the railroad depot, heard the cries and came out on the street just as the fleeing thief started up Fourth street, toward Washington. Scribner gave chase, but the man had a good start and ran about twice as fast as his pursuer. He shook off the pursuit at the east embankment on Washington street.

The police were notified at once, and men were dispatched to the scene. They could got no trace of the thief. Mrs. Burd had no description of him to give beyond the fact that he was of medium height. She didn't know whether he was black or white. Scribner said he was of stocky build, and wore a pea jacket.

The police are stirred over the crime. It is the first one of its kind in some time. Just about the time of the robbery Sergeant Frederickson and Patrolman Myers were in the neighborhood. They heard nothing.

LOCAL AERIE OF EAGLES HOLDS ITS INSTALLATION.

Entertainment Follows Ceremony Attended by Newarkers.

Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Fraternal Order of Eagles, met in its rooms in the New Plainfield theatre building last night for the purpose of installing officers for the coming year. The installation ceremonies were performed by District Deputy State President Thomas C. Hayes, of Newark, and staff, and the following are the officers: Past worthy president, S. C. Terry; worthy president, M. J. Higgins; worthy vice president, Thos. Fay; worthy conductor, Wm. McConnell; worthy chaplain, E. J. McCann; worthy inside guardian, Chas. Rice; worthy outside guardian, J. H. Adams; worthy secretary, H. G. Adams; worthy treasurer, A. G. Adams; worthy physician, A. H. Dunton; trustees, Rudolph Kampf, Hugh Reilly, Thos. Kane.

After the installation an informal entertainment and smoker was given which included monologues by District Deputy Hayes, songs by Thos. Fay, Wm. McConnell, H. G. Adams, Wm. Waglow, Hugh Reilly and James Montague, and a recitation by M. J. Higgins.

During the entertainment District Deputy Hayes took occasion to congratulate Plainfield Aerie on its rapid progress since its institution a little over a year ago, and also remarked on the appearance of its lodge rooms, which he declared was the finest furnished of any aerie in the State.

POST INSTALLS OFFICERS

Annual Ceremony of Local Vets Conducted By Past Department Commander.

WITNESSED BY MANY

Women's Relief Corps' Officers Also Inducted Into Office—Entertainment Follows.

The officers-elect of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the Women's Relief Corps were jointly installed at G. A. R. headquarters, last night. There were a number of veterans and members of the Relief Corps from Elizabeth, Somerville and Trenton, and in addition to the installation there were short speeches, vocal and instrumental music, after which refreshments were served.

The Post officers were installed by Past Department Commander John Lawrence, of New Brunswick, as follows:

Commander, Preston B. Goodfellow; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice commander, Frederick Wenzel; quartermaster, John Naylor; surgeon, Israel Compton; chaplain, N. C. Pennington; officer of the day, J. Worth Coddington; sergeant-major, Joseph Bogert; quartermaster-sergeant, Edward Twomley; color bearer, Henry Fraser; drum major, Joseph Bogert; bugle, Dr. Berg.

The vets then gave way to the women, when Mrs. Jennie B. Atwood, of Trenton, who is the first department president, installed the officers, assisted by Department President Mrs. Mary A. Decker, of Jersey City, who acted as conductor. The officers: President, Mrs. John Stanley; senior vice president, Mrs. Hannah Westphal; junior vice president, Mrs. S. A. Mattox; treasurer, Mrs. Anna Bolsterli; chaplain, Mrs. Ann E. Dobbs; conductor, Mrs. Smith E. Bagley; guard, Mrs. Elizabeth Naylor; secretary, Mrs. Lizzie K. Fox; assistant conductor, Miss May E. Howlett; assistant guard, Mrs. Hattie Gibbons; *patriotic instructor, Mrs. Annie Wen*zel; press correspondent, Miss May Smith; first color bearer, Mrs. Margaret J. Nash; second color bearer, Mrs. Lavina D. Hardy; third color bearer, Miss May Smith; fourth color bearer, Miss Hattie Edgar; musician, Miss Virginia Devine.

After the installation there were remarks by Past Department Commander James Atwood, of Trenton; Charles M. Raybert, Captain William Hazlett, Past Department Commander W. C. Smith, Commander Preston B. Goodfellow, and Department President Mrs. Mary A. Decker, of Jersey City.

There were piano solos by Miss May Smith and violin solos by Clarence Lawrence, accompanied by Miss Smith on the piano. During the musical programme refreshments were served by a committee from the relief corps, assisted by the young women.

SEEING HISTORICAL SPOTS IN GREAT BRITAIN.

Howard G. Lapsley Visits Burns' Birthplace and the Tower of London.

Howard G. Lapsley, a graduate of the high school last June, is enjoying an extended tour through England, Scotland and France, and he has written something of his interesting experiences to his Plainfield schoolmates.

In Scotland he stopped at a hotel opposite the inn at which Bobby Burns' Tam O' Shanter and Souter John had their meetings. He visited Burns' birthplace, and saw Burns relics aplenty. He fell in love with Glasgow's municipal government and left there a champion of municipal ownership.

In York, England, he visited the immense cocoa works of Rowntree & Co., and in London he went through the famous Tower, by special permit from the governor. His description of some of the old dungeons and the torture appliances is exceedingly interesting.

Funeral of John Dunham.

The funeral of John Dunham was held from his late home on Putnam avenue, yesterday afternoon. Rev. A. E. Finn, of the Park Avenue Baptist church, officiated, in the presence of a gathering of relatives and friends. Interment was made in Hillside cemetery, the pall bearers being Thomas H. Cuming, Nelson Runyon, Adam Neuman and John H. Doane.

Stenographic Reports of Trial.

City Clerk James T. MacMurray has received from John P. Dengler, of Orange, who was the official stenographer at the trial of Chief Kiely, two copies of the stenographic reports of the trial. They were furnished at the request of the Common Council.

POST WALKED UNDER A RIVER

First Plainfielders to Make a Trip Through a Hudson Tunnel.

5,7000 FEET IN LENGTH

Work Begun by British Syndicate in 1875 Taken Up By American Company—Two Bores.

Through the courtesy of a resident of this city who is one of the capitalists financing the project, City Judge William N. Runyon, and Thomas M. Muir, of The Daily Press reportorial staff, were permitted to be the first Plainfielders to pass through the Hudson Companies North tunnel under the Hudson river from Jersey City to New York. The trip is one that few men outside of employes have undertaken, the bore not being entirely completed, and the privilege to do so is only accorded after the applicant signs off all right to claim damages in case of accident. Messrs. Runyon and Muir accomplished the feat yesterday afternoon, entering the tunnel at the foot of Fifteenth street, Jersey City, and emerging at Morton street, Manhattan, none the worse for the experience beyond soiled clothing, caused by water dripping down upon them in places where the finishing touches have not been given.

The Hudson Companies is composed of the Hudson and Manhattan R. R. Co., the New York and Jersey R. R. Co., organized to operate trolley cars from northern New Jersey directly to New York. The tunnel is in two parts, a north and south bore, the latter being about half completed. The north tunnel was originally started in 1875 by English capitalists but was abandoned after a section of it caved in, killing twenty men.

Many hundreds of thousands of dollars were lost in the first venture and in after years several attempts were made to complete the bore but with no success. The method of tunneling was crude and costly and so many obstacles were met that could not be overcome that very little was accomplished. With the introduction of hydraulic machinery and its adoption by the Pennsylvania Railroad to build two tubes under the river from New Jersey to Manhattan island, the Hudson Companies was organized to take up the work begun by the Englishmen and finish it. That was over two years ago and inside of another year, a trip beneath the mighty waters of the Hudson in a trolley car will be made a part of the daily routine of a Jersey commuter.

The escort who took the Plainfielders through yesterday, stated that the North bore is 5,700 feet long, the first 800 feet from the Jersey side having been constructed in 1875. It is of cement and brick and easily shows its age in contrast with the newer parts. Water is constantly dripping through and it will have to undergo a thorough overhauling before cars are operated. The new sections are built of steel arches nearly a foot thick, covered over with twenty inches of concrete, former an impenetrable mass. The tunnel is about seventy-five feet below the surface level of the river but as the sightseer stands beneath parts in the center where the full course of concrete has not been put on, the churning of boats on steamers and ferry boats overhead, can be distinctly heard. It requires a half hour's time to make the journey on foot from shore to shore and because of the fetid condition of the air the uninitiated doesn't care a whole lot about remaining any longer.

The North bore is to be continued under ground to Church and Cortland street, where it will be connected with the Subway by a spur running over to Broadway and Fulton street. The South bore will terminate near the Pennsylvania's big depot now being built at Thirty-fourth street.

Will Select Suitable Play.

Miss Louise Kline, Howard Freeman, Miss Gertrude Hunter, Malcomb Davis, and George Rittenhouse, as a committee from the senior class of the Plainfield High School, has been appointed to select the annual play to be given by the seniors. The play will probably be given during the Easter vacation.

Bachelor Dinner.

Frederick Mead Shepard, whose marriage to Miss Charlotte Frances Lowe took place this afternoon at Grace church, gave his bachelor dinner at the Casino last night. Covers were laid for ten, including the best man and ushers.

Joseph Haurand Goes South.

Joseph Haurand, of Manning avenue, left Monday for Virginia, where he will engage in tobacco growing, having purchased a plantation. His family will follow him as soon as he becomes settled.

LAWYERS FAVOR THE ESTABLISHMENT OF A DISTRICT COURT IN THIS CITY WITHOUT DELAY

They See Many and Important Benefits to Litigant and Counsel in the Proposed Tribunal.

OPINIONS AS TO LAW

Disagreement Over Interpretation of the Statute Covering the Creation of the Court.

If the matter were placed in the hands of the lawyers to decide, the proposed district court for this city would speedily become an established fact. Practically every legal luminary of Plainfield is in favor of the court. Daily Press reporters got their views on the subject this morning. They were asked, first if they favored the establishment of the court; second, if the law covering its establishment was mandatory; and, third, what benefits the court would give to lawyers and clients.

There was the time honored disagreement as to the interpretation of the statute, but they were pretty much in accord as to the benefits to be derived. It was the general consensus of opinion that the court would do away with much useless litigation, save litigants expense and save lawyers time and bother. Ex-City Judge W. A. Coddington, of Reed & Coddington, is emphatically in favor of the court.

"Certainly, I would like to see one here," he said. "It is a question in my mind whether the provision governing its establishment is mandatory, but I would most certainly like to see a district court in Plainfield. It would make for speedy trials in small causes, a consummation most devoutly to be desired. It would be a benefit to the people at large, I think. Many cases are taken to Elizabeth now, to insure speedy trials. The court would be of particular benefit to litigants in that their cases would be tried before a judge versed on the law, doing away with much of the appeal evil. It would be satisfying even to the defeated litigant to know that the case was decided by a man who knows the law. The lawyers certainly would not lose anything, and no lawyer who wants to conserve the best interests of his clients would regret the establishment of a court that would do away with the necessity for appeals."

Another former city judge, W. R. Codington, of Codington & Swackhamer, was as decided in his support of the proposition to establish the court as Judge Coddington.

"Most assuredly I think we should have a district court here," he said. "It would be a decided benefit. As to the law covering its establishment, my interpretation of it is that it is mandatory. I base that opinion on a reading of the law of 1900 covering the subject. It should be acted upon without delay. The court's greatest benefit to the community—to the clients in particular, let us say—would lie in the saving of litigation. The judge has got to be a lawyer of standing and ability, a factor that must make for equitable and satisfactory decisions. The justices before whom our small causes must now be brought do not even pretend to be versed in law. Again, there will be a great saving in the costs of actions with a district court in Plainfield. The higher courts have much higher costs. For instance, a judgment of $250 in the Supreme or Circuit Court would cost $30 to $35; in the district court the cost would be between $5 and $6. There is a cogurt argument for the court just on that."

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer, the judge's partner, expressed practically the same views. He read the law over and said he could see no interpretation but a mandatory one.

"The court would certainly tend to cut down litigation," he said, "and that is a very great benefit in its favor. Both sides would take the satisfaction in feeling that the cause had been passed upon or the action controlled by a lawyer of recognized standing and ability. A justice of the peace may be an estimable and eminently sensible man, but still lack the training and practice necessary to bring a proper legal view to bear on the cause and the questions involved. Whether or not the court should be established at once is a question I am reluctant to give a final opinion on at this time. So many things enter into that question that I consider it should be thought over before passing an opinion on it."

City Judge Runyon was somewhat non-committal.

"I thing it might be desirable to establish a district court in Plainfield," he said. "Practically every justice's court case is appealed, I believe, and I guess the district court would do away with much of the 'carry-it-up' evil. As to the question of the interpretation of the law providing for the court, I am not prepared to give an opinion. I have not looked it up and cannot say whether it is mandatory or not. So far as the benefits of such a court for clients and lawyers goes, I suppose it would be a decided benefit to have causes tried before a counsellor of five years' standing. I don't know, but I imagine the court would do away with the tendency to appeal. It might not have that effect on a lawyer who likes to keep his clients in litigation to make all he can out of them."

William G. DeMeza, who has had much experience in handling small cause cases, expressed enthusiastic support of the proposal.

"I certainly do favor the establishment of a district court here," he said emphatically, "and it can't come too soon. I am very glad The Press has taken the matter up. I don't see how the council can avoid creating the court. The law, it seems to me, is undeniably mandatory; I can see nothing else in it. The benefits of such a court here are plain. It would save clients much in money and save lawyers much in time. Moreover, it would have a decided tendency to cut off litigation. As Plainfield is now situated it costs litigants from $30 to $35 to secure a judgment of, say, $250; with a district court here the same judgment could be received in less time at a cost of not more than $10 at the most. I can't see why Plainfield shouldn't have a district court, Perth Amboy and New Brunswick have them, and are we less progressive and prosperous than they are?"

W. L. Hetfield, Jr., one of the busiest young lawyers in the county, who has naturally had much to do with small causes courts, was as emphatic as Mr. DeMeza in speaking in favor of the court, although differing from him as to the provisions of the law governing its establishment. He does not interpret the law as mandatory, but has hopes that such a law will be passed by the present Legislature.

"Very decided benefits would accrue to clients and lawyers from a district of our own," said Mr. Hetfield. "It would eliminate the appeals, for one thing. A case would only be tried once and that, generally speaking, would settle it. Case can only be appealed from a district court on a certiorari or a question of law. Appeals may be taken from justices' courts on a question of fact, per cent. of its expenses, and that is a big guess. And don't worry about the law compelling the city to establish the court. It doesn't. I was reading up on that the other day, and I have a very decided opinion that it is not mandatory in its provisions as regards cities of the size of Plainfield."

Mr. Runyon was the first lawyer the reporter had interviewed who expressed such views, and he was interested. He wanted to hear more about the other side to the proposition.

"How about the standing such a court would give the city, and the consequent advertisement of it?" he suggested.

"It's a very poor advertisement for a city when its Common Council creates a needless office that must receive sixty per cent. of its support from the taxpayers," said Mr. Runyon tersely.

H. C. Runyon is anxious to see a District Court in Plainfield without delay.

"Yes, I certainly am in favor of the change," he said. I think we ought to have the court whether it is mandatory on the Council or not. I which involves all of, and more than, the original expense for witnesses and other things and means simply a retrial of the case. There is much to be said of the fact that the district court would be presided over by a counsellor of five years' standing, a lawyer who would know the law and decide points and cases in accordance with it."

Counsellor I. P. Runyon could see no real reason for having the court established here, and saw one big one, from the taxpayers' viewpoint, why it should not be.

"It would be a nice thing for the lawyers," he said with a laugh, "and I, personally, wouldn't mind seeing one here. But, frankly, it would be an unwise thing for the city. Really, the only benefit would lie in the saving of lawyers' trips to Elizabeth. Litigants can get all a local district court could give them in the court at Elizabeth. It would be a very nice thing for the lawyers, but a sad thing for the taxpayers. Take the Elizabeth court, to cite an example on that point. There is a court in a city at least three times the size of Plainfield, and with all the county to draw from for business, and it doesn't pay expenses. I calculate that a Plainfield court would take in about forty don't think the law is mandatory, but that does not change the fact that the court should be established. It would certainly be a fine thing for lawyers and clients to have a competent jurist pass on the actions. As things are now, clients are mulcted of large sums, in the aggregate, each year through the decisions of ignorant justices. The court would dispose of the cases more rapidly than under the present state of affairs."

Counsellor Francis J. Blatz, who has made a study of justices and their ways, said a District Court couldn't come too quickly for him.

"That I favor the establishment of the court here is well known. I have argued for it before. I think the act covering those courts is mandatory, and expect to see one opened here very soon. The benefits of the change will be many and great. The clients will get more justice and quicker justice at less expense. The lawyers will save lots of valuable time. Much needless and bothersome litigation will be done away with."

FORBIDS "GRAFT" IN EAST ORANGE.

John Winfield Scott, Financier, Demands of Railroad President a "Square Deal."

In an open letter to William H. Truesdale, president of the Lackawanna Railroad, sent simultaneously to the Mayor and Council of East Orange, John Winfield Scott, of No. 107 Beech street, that city, a financier, man of affairs and a member of the New England Society, says:

"Your administration of the Morris and Essex Division of the Lackawanna Railroad, from the standpoint of its patrons, has been admirable. You are about extending your improvements through East Orange. It is to be assumed that such property as your plans require has come within your control; there remain the acquirement of public privileges and the location of stations, etc. You have not disclosed to the citizens of East Orange what your plans involve, nor what policy you intend using in obtaining the desired privileges. It is conceivable that you will resort to one of two methods.

"First—By recognizing the paramount importance of the improvements to every citizen and property owner, and their consequent inalienable right to be honestly and openly consulted and co-operated with, or,

"Second—By the direct or indirect utilization of local public officials and professional men presumed or assumed to be powerful in swaying public opinion, and official action.

"It is no longer possible to acquire public rights in East Orange by secret financial arrangement with politicians. Not one possesses the power to sneak through an enactment betraying the city's rights. Citizens who cannot be bought and who scorn officeholding are friendly to improvement, but are deadly to rascality.

"If you will frankly invite public confidence in a wide open, manly way, telling the plain truth and seeking the best results for the most concerned, you will be met more than half way, without paying a penny of graft to anybody. Should you use citizens in a professional way, make the fact of their financial relationship to your company public knowledge. You will have the most efficient assistance if you invite public confidence and co-operation, but will be met with an impassable wall if you attempt to succeed through the ancient New Jersey railroad methods of political chicanery and graft.

TO ORGANIZE TO FIGHT VOTE-BUYING.

Independent Voters of Monmouth County Will Meet to Plan Crusade Against Bribery.

Independent voters of Monmouth county are lining up for a vigorous campaign against the vote buyer. Corruption at the polls has developed there to such an extent that the better citizenship of the county has decided to make a fight for a pure ballot.

The plan decided on is to hold a mass meeting in the Court House at Freehold Lincoln's birthday, February 12, at which time an organization will be perfected. The call for the meeting is as follows:

"The flagrant and constantly growing disregard of the laws against the purchase of votes, the substitution of money for merit in the selection of candidates, the criminal interference of large moneyed interests and institutions with the free and honest expression of the popular will, have in these last days become not only an invasion of individual rights, but an alarming menace to our national integrity.

"To the end that as citizens we may not be found wanting in the zeal and patriotism to fight another 'Battle of Monmouth' to purify the ballot, the source of all governments, the undersigned call on all good citizens, irrespective of party, to meet at the Court House in Freehold, February 12, at 11 o'clock in the morning, to form such an alliance and to take such action as shall best conserve the public good."

Compliments Chief Doane.

Chief Doane is in receipt of a highly complimentary letter from the National Board of Fire Underwriters acknowledging his annual report of fires and fire losses in this city. The letter states that the report is complete and concise in every detail and in addition is the first to be received out of the thousands prepared all over the country.

Carnival Plans Progressing.

Charles J. Fisk and others interested in the arrangements for the hospital carnival to be held during the summer, are making steady progress with the preliminary details. The fair will be conducted on a larger scale than before and there will be many additional attractions.

CRANFORD'S FIRST TRIP

Sister Boat of the Somerville in R. R.'s Fleet Now in Commission.

VERY NEWEST TYPE

Launched in November—Cranford People Aboard—Description of the Vessel.

The new Central Railroad ferryboat, "Cranford," built by the Harlan & Hollingsworth Corporation, at Wilmington, Del., which was so successfully launched at the shipyards on November 11, 1905, has arrived in New York harbor, and made its initial trip on the Twetny-third street ferry Thursday, connecting with the 7:45 train from Cranford. Members of the Cranford Township Committee, members of the flag committee, Miss Lucile D. Woodling and Miss Gladys Hall, the sponsors for the "Cranford," and many commuters were on the boat.

The "Cranford" and "Somerville" are the last two boats of a fleet of eight built for the Central Railroad to replace the ferryboats formerly in service on the North River. These vessels are of a newer, better and swifter type.

The "Cranford" is 207 feet in length by 65 feet in width and draws eleven feet of water, and has seating accommodations for 600 people, or a total capacity of 1,500 passengers. The hull of the vessel is constructed of the best ship steel, and is divided into five water-tight compartments. Motive power will be furnished by four-cylinder, triple expansion engines, with a stroke of thirty inches. The high pressure and intermediate cylinders are fitted with piston valves, while the low-pressure cylinders have double-posted slide valves. The engine drives a continuous shaft, having an eight-foot propeller at each end. Steam is supplied by three cylindrical boilers of the gunboat type, each being eight feet nine inches in diameter by twenty feet long, and constructed to pass inspection for steam pressure of 170 pounds. The equipment is complete.

There are two cabins on the main deck of the vessel, and from these wide stairways lead to a large saloon on the upper deck, outside of which there is a spacious promenade. The vessel is equipped with four lifeboats, four life-ring buoys and an ample supply of cork life jackets. The main fire-fighting equipment consists of a large fire pump in the engine room, connected to eight lines of hose, located at convenient points on all the decks and in the cabins.

The interior decorations of the new boats are of oak, the floors of hard wod, covered with tiled linoleum. No expense has been spared to make the "Cranford" a fit representative of the ferryboat-makers' art at its best, embodying the three essentials—speed, comfort and safety.

J. O. BAILEY LESSEE OF GLENSIDE PARK.

Former Plainfield Hotel Man to Continue Place As Summer Resort.

John O. Bailey, formerly manager for the Park Avenue Hotel, now Truell Inn, has leased the twelve cottages and 300 acres of land at Glenside Park, in New Providence Township, formerly occupied by Thomas Malloy. The change was made at the sale a few days ago, when Justice Hand, auctioneer, sold the contents and farming implements at the park. The sale realized about $1,600, Mr. Bailey purchasing about one-third of the contents. He intends to farm the land and continue the place as a summer resort, opening June 1 next.

This place was originally known as Feltville, being named after a man named Felt, who operated a mill in that vicinity and erected the cottages for his men. Afterward it was known as the "Deserted Village." Twenty years ago the late Warren Ackerman purchased the property, which comprised about 1,100 acres and it is now a part of the Ackerman Estate. Mr. Malloy and his family have moved to Newark.

Former Plainfielder Engaged.

Mrs. Henrietta Eugenia Hawley, of New York, has issued invitations to the marriage of her daughter, Miss Henrietta Eugenia Hawley, and Joseph Lawrence Myers, also of New York. The wedding will take place Tuesday afternoon, January 23, at 2:30 o'clock at St. Thomas' church, and a reception will follow at the home of the bride's mother. Mr. Myers was a resident of this city for several years and his many friends here will be interested in the above announcement.

Engagement in Burma.

The announcement of the engagement of Miss Julia G. Shinn, of Kemendine, Burma, to Professor Wallace St. John, of Rangoon Baptist College, will interest many Plainfield friends. Miss Shinn was connected with the mission work of the First Baptist church for two years before entering on her work in Burma, where she has been a most successful teacher. She is at present in charge of the large Girls' School in Kemendine.

ADDITION TO N.J. CAPITOL

Will Give Necessary Room For Housing All the State Officers.

IT WILL COST $75,000

Matter to Come Before Legislature—Three Propositions Being Considered—More Space Needed.

It is probable that before the Legislature adjourns definite steps will be taken to provide an addition to the State capitol at Trenton. The present structure, it is claimed, is totally inadequate for the housing of all the State departments, and twice a year, before and at the close of the legislative session, Custodian John W. Weseman is put at his wits' end to find accommodations for all the State officials.

Two State departments, created within the past three years, have absolutely no permanent quarters in the capitol, and none can be provided for them. These are the departments of labor, and charities and corrections. Between sessions of the Legislature they have been occupying Senate committee rooms in the Senate wing of the State house. Then the week before the session opens it has been necessary to move the departments bodily and crowd them into rooms already occupied by other departments, thereby seriously handicapping the latter.

The adjutant general's department has completely outgrown the offices assigned to it, and has also occupied a committee room of the Senate. This necessitates a removal similar to that mentioned.

On the Assembly side of the State House the conditions are no better. The State Board of Agriculture is crowded into an Assembly committee room—has no other home. The State fish and game commission also occupies an Assembly committee room, because there is no other place for it in the building. The department of roads is crowded into offices unfitted for the work of these offices, and under the new school law the duties assigned to the State Board of Education have been so multiplied that more office help was employed and that greatly overcrowds this branch of the State government.

The laboratory of hygiene of the State Board of Health is crowded entirely out of the building. This is charged with chemically testing the food supplies sold under State regulations, and similar operations. This department occupies rented quarters in the Broad Street Bank building, which cost the State $75 per month. This is 5 per cent. on $18,000, a sum more than would be necessary to pay the cost of one proposed addition.

Custodian Weseman will be compelled to make the necessary changes this week to secure the vacation of the committee rooms and get them in readiness for the opening of the Legislature next Tuesday. The departments of labor and charities and corrections will be located in the new court room in the Senate wing, the only division between them being temporary screens. The removal of the heavy filing cases, desks and other furniture from the first to the second floor is no small job. Similar temporary accommodations, inconvenient and ill-adapted for good work, will have to be provided for the other departments mentioned as occupying committee rooms.

Three propositions are being considered for the enlargement of the capitol. State Treasurer Briggs, it is said, is in favor of increasing the accommodations. It is understood that Comptroller Morgan will not oppose the project, and Governor Stokes has consented to give it his attention. These three constitute the State House commission, which has charge of the capitol, and it is thought likely that the matter will be gotten in such shape at this session that an addition will be a reality before the time for the session of 1907.

The proposition which meets with most favor among certain State officials is to rebuild the wing containing the offices of the State Board of Taxation, assessors and custodian on the first floor and the Chancery Court room and ante-rooms on the second floor. If this is done the wing will be practically torn down and extended to Delaware street, giving it a much greater length. It would also be made three stories in height, with a large basement under the whole.

This basement would make an ideal document room, and as Delaware street is low at this point, a door from the room would open directly on the street. This would admit of taking the documents from wagons into the room without transferring them through the main corridors, as at present.

On the first floor would probably be the same offices as at present, but more commodious, and there would be room for additional offices to house another department. On the second floor it is planned to place a new Chancery Court room and offices for the department of the attorney general. This would be a practical change, for it would bring the State's legal department alongside the courts. Then the present offices of the attorney general in the rear of the building could be used for other purposes. The third floor would be divided into offices for which there is need.

It is estimated that this addition would cost $75,000.

Another proposition is to put an additional story over the Assembly chamber. At present there is a loft over the chamber and either side of this the wing is but two stories high. The loft is lost space. By running the whole wing up another story considerable additional space would be provided for offices. This could be done, it is said, for about $12,000.

Still another proposition is to build an entirely separate building across the water power from the main capitol on ground already owned by the State. If this plan was adopted a large and ornamental bridge would be erected over the stream in place of the present foot bridge.

This structure would be devoted to the museum and biological departments, permitting the present museum to be remodeled into offices. The State museum board is at work on plans for this building, but it has not yet progressed far enough to permit of an estimate of the cost.

If this building is erected as proposed, it would occupy a commanding position on the new riverside drive when the latter is completed.

GROWTH OF STATE TRUST COMPANIES.

Success is Shown by Their Greatly Increased Business.

There is a strong sentiment in banking circles in this State favorable to a revision of the laws governing trust companies at the coming session of the Legislature.

The law applying to State and savings banks limits the amount of loans that these institutions can make. The statute says: "The total liabilities to any bank of any person or of any company, corporation or firm, for money borrowed, including in the liabilities of a company or firm the liabilities of the several members thereof, shall at no time exceed ten per centum of the aggregate amount of the capital stock of such bank actually paid in, and of the permanent surplus fund of such bank."

There is no such limitation placed on the trust companies, and the national, State and savings bank people think that a law "considered good" for them should be as good for the trust companies. Attempts have been made in the past looking to the revision of the law along these lines, but the trust companies have been able to prevent the change.

During the past ten years several trust companies and State banks have gone to the wall in New Jersey, to the great distress of their depositors, and investigation has shown a lack of vigilance on the part of directors.

The business of these establishments, it has been shown, is often left almost wholly to some trusted official who has more than once taken advantage of his opportunity to use other peoples money for his personal benefit.

When the crash comes, the directors, to escape the penalty of negligence by making good the deficiency in the treasury of the broken bank or trust company, enter a general denial of negligence of duty, and, in some instances, charge the department of banking and insurance with responsibility for the failure.

"Pictorial Perfection.

The January issue of The Burr McIntosh Monthly, which is now on all news stands, is a remarkable example of "pictorial perfection." It is the only publication of the kind extant and the publishers as well as the public are to be congratulated in being able to obtain such exquisite pictures so attractively presented. The portrait form of the January number contains such eminent stage people as the late Sir Henry Irving, Sarah Bernhardt, Emma Eames, Viola Allen, Mrs. Leslie Carter, Edna May, Fritzi Scheff and Julia Marlowe. The charming holiday story by the well-known writer, Zena Gale, is beautifully illustrated. A liberal space is given to the portraits and brief biographies of such famous people as Thos. A. Edison, Secretary of War Taft, Sir Henry Irving and Chas. E. Hughes, who has been directing the insurance investigation in New York city. The cover is a portrait of Miss Marguerite Clark, the little lady of the stage who has made such a success in the light opera, "Happyland." Miss Clark posed specially for this portrait. With this number the monthly calendar in colors is again introduced, the purpose being each month to show some seasonable pictorial effect in connection with the calendar for the month, the twelve issues making a splendid collection of artistic scenes and coloring well worth the price of the magazine. Burr Publishing Company, 4 West Twenty-second street, New York.

On His Way Home.

Rudolph Bleyer, who has been employed as a salesman at I. H. Boehm's dry goods store for a long time, sailed on Thursday for his former home in Bohemia. Mr. Bleyer made his home with Mr. Boehm and as a mark of appreciation the clerks at the store gave him a farewell reception on Wednesday night. He was also presented with a silver mounted brush.

An Informal Dance.

The next informal dance at the Park Club will be held Saturday night, January 13. The entertainment committee has arranged to hold these affairs every other Saturday night during the winter in addition to the regular scheduled dances.

PUBLIC HEALTH IN DEC.

Six Deaths From Tuberculosis During December According to Board's Report.

24 DEATHS IN ALL

Ten Marriages and Fourteen Births—Milk Analyzed—Sanitary Inspection—Permits Granted.

During December the city continued to be remarkably free from contagious disease, according to the reports for taht month presented at the regular meeting of the Board of Health yesterday. In all only seven cases were reported, six scarlet fever and one diphtheria.

The number of communicable diseases reported during the month is as follows: Chicken pox, 4; scarlet fever, 6; diphtheria, 1; tuberculosis, 6. Total, 17. There were six deaths from tuberculosis.

Considerable work was accomplished in dairy inspection, eighty-two dairies being visited, four of which were new inspections and seventy-eight were reinspections. The general conditions were found to be good. Fifty-two of the dairies complied absolutely with the ordinances and in the remaining thirty only a few minor changes were necessary.

During the month thirty-four samples of milk were analyzed, all found to be of good quality. These general inspections were also made:

Visits to houses with communicable diseases, 24; inspections on complaints, 9; inspections for vaults and cesspools, 2; reinspections for nuisance notices, 47; dairy inspections, 82; plumbing inspections, water tests, 12; smoke tests, 3; sewer connections, 9; cesspool connections, 3; cellar water closets, 13; completed plumbing systems, 4; additions to plumbing systems, 5; alterations to plumbing systems, 4; defective plumbing systems, 2.

Permits to sell milk were granted to Neuman Brothers, P. F. Maguire, R. H. Keenan, James B. Guttridge. The permit of John McCarthy to sell milk was refused.

There was also reported for December ten marriages, fourteen births, two still-births and twenty-four deaths.

LITERARY.

The Forum for January-March leads off with Henry Litchfield West's comprehensive review of "American Politics," treating of the opening of the Fifty-ninth Congress, and such impending issues as tariff revision, the regulation of railroad rates, the admission of new States, one-man power in the House of Representatives, the Congressional campaign of next fall, the question of contributions to political funds, and the recent wave of reform that has swept over municipalities and public offices generally. "Foreign Affairs" in the first lustrum of the twentieth century, just completed, are dealt with by A. Maurice Low in his customary lucid and picturesque manner. "Finance," by Alexander D. Noyes, sums up the ruling conditions in the world's markets at the year-end. "The Educational Outlook" is philosophically scanned by Ossian H. Lang, who devotes thoughtful attention to the ethical standards of manhood which should be required of all teachers and school officers. Russell Strugis writes of "Mural Painting," giving critical descriptions of the principal works of this class which have been executed in public buildings in the United States during the past few years. "Applied Science" in enterprises of modern engineering and technical processes is discussed in its latest manifestations by Henry Harry Harrison Suplee. Professor Trent, of Columbia, reviews "New Editions of Franklin"—a most timely contribution, in view of the approaching two-hundredth anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth. Two Japanese papers of extraordinary interest and value are "Financial Japan After the War," by Baron Shibusawa, and "The New China," by Adachi Kinnosuke. Finally, Wolf von Schierbrand's article on "Russia's Economic Future" is a masterly inquiry into the governmental finance system and condition of the great Empire which seems hurrying toward national bankruptcy.

BROKEN HEART, DOCTORS SAY.

Old Man Could Not Rally After the Death of His Wife.

A broken heart was the cause of the death Thursday of George W. Pinkham, according to the physicians of the Bayonne Hospital, where he died. Pinkham was sixty-seven years old and lived at 62 East Grand street.

His wife was sixty-two years old. Both were taken ill several weeks ago and sent to the hospital. Mrs. Pinkham died two weeks ago. Although her husband was in an adjoining ward he was not informed of her death because his condition was critical and it was feared he would not survive the shock.

When the old man got better he was told of his wife's death. He went to his home and constantly grieved over his affliction. Several days ago he broke down and was returned to the hospital.

METEOROLOGICAL RECORD

John Neagle's Annual Report on Conditions in Plainfield.

125 CLEAR DAYS

Annual Mean Temperature 50 Degrees—Rainfall 50.31—Snowfall 30.2—Rainy Days, 119.

The meteorological record in Plainfield for the past year, which was compiled by Weather Prophet John Neagle, discloses many interesting facts. The report comprises temperature, precipitation, wind, prevailing wind and such remarks as the weather called for. The report is as follows:

January—Temperature, maximum, 52, date 1; minimum, zero, date 26; mean, 25.8. Precipitation—Rainfall, 4.23; snowfall, 18.3; in twenty-four hours, 1.56, date, 6-7. Wind—Number of days, north, 4; northeast, 4; east, 2; southeast, 0; south, 0; southwest, 9; west, 6; northwest, 7; prevailing winds, southwest; number of clear days, 6; partly cloudy, 16; cloudy, 9; rainy days, 10. Maximum temperature, 98, date July 18.

February — Temperature, maximum, 46, date, 21; minimum, 4, date, 5; mean, 22.5. Precipitation—Rainfall, 2.54; snowfall, 7.6; in twenty-four hours, .86; date, 6. John Neagle's report of weather conditions for December shows that the maximum temperature, 60 degrees, was on December 3, and the minimum temperature, 15 degrees, was on the first day of the month. The other statistics for the month are as follows:

Mean temperature, 35.4; mean maximum temperature, 43.7; mean minimum temperature, 27.1; greatest daily range, 33; total rainfall, 3.57 inches; greatest in twenty-four hours, 1.49 inches, December 21; total snowfall, 00.6 inches; number of rainy days, eight; number of clear days, ten; partly cloudy, eleven; cloudy; dates of sleet, 9, 10, 16; mean temperature was 3.2 degrees above normal; precipitation, 0.27 inches below normal. December was the warmest in fourteen years with two exceptions, which were December, 1891, when the mean temperature was 41.5, and the other December, 1895, when the mean temperature was 37.1.

LANDLORD BARS WOMEN RENTERS.

Will Do Business With Men Hereafter Or Not At All.

George M. Gerhard, of East Millstone, who owns several houses, has inserted the following advertisement in the county papers:

"Houses leased only to families where this is attended to by the men. I am tired of petticoat government."

Gerhard says it used to be easy to rent houses, but now the women want so many conveniences and do so much fussing, that he is going to cut them out of his list.

"If I can't rent to men," says Gerhard, "I will let the houses stay empty. Women kick about closets, they don't like the stairs, they want some windows where there are none and don't like them where the carpenter puts them in. They never, never like the wall paper."

Neighbors who know the old gentleman believe he will make good his promise to keep the houses empty rather than to lease them to women.

A DRUNKARD'S LAMENTATIONS.

If I should die tonight
And in my clothes
Should be the goodly sum of Thirty Cents
Left lying there
Unspent,
In sweet repose—
I say
If I should die tonight
And leave
Behind me in those cold,
Prosaic Pants
The price of six large beers,
On Draught,
Unquaffed by me and destined
To remain
Forever on the outside of
My frame
If I should die,
And, from the great beyond
Look back, and see
That Thirty Cents
Taken and spent foolishly
For Bread,
Or clothes,
Or some such thing,
And those six Beers—
Long destined to be bought by me
Now spilled
Down other throats,
Their destiny unfilled:
I say
If I should die tonight
And go
From here to there,
Or where,
It doesn't snow,
And, looking back from there
To here,
Behold
Those Six Large Beers,
So large and O——
So cold,
Go coursing down the throats
Of other men,
'Twould be so sad,
For I would need them,
Then.—Ex.

Women Who Should Not Marry.

The woman who buys for the mere pleasure of buying.

The woman who expects to have "a good,easy time."

The woman who thinks that cook and nurse can keep house.

The woman who would die rather than wear last season's hat.

The woman who expects a declaration of love three times a day.

The woman who marries in order to have some one to pay her bills.

The woman who reads novels and dreams of being a duchess or countess.

The woman who cares more for the style of her winter cloak than she does for the health and comfort of her children.

The woman who proudly declares that she cannot even hem a pocket handkerchief, and never made up a bed in her life.

Watch for Driver.

William McDonough, driver for Adam Blair, received a handsome gold watch from one of the patients at Brookside Sanitarium, as a New Year's gift in recognition of his skill as a driver and a guide.

WOMEN GAMBLERS.

The pages of history tell over and over again the story of great women gamblers. France has furnished the greater number of these, but England has put forth many whose fame has become international.

There seems to be something in the blood of Frenchwomen that makes them gamblers of a high order. Mme. de Montespan won so much at basset, her favorite game, that Louis XIV. was delighted and borrowed some of her winnings. But she lost a great deal at times, and her play grew so furious that in 1682 Louis abolished the game.

It is recorded of madame that she one night, while the King looked on at the play, risked a sum equal to £40,000 on a single card, and that the King grumbled when no one could be found to cover the bet. But madame also lost one New Year's night 700,000 crowns at hocal and on another night almost £200,000 at the same game.

Mme. du Barry was the most famous woman gambler of the time of Louis XV., but with her is was only a pastime. But that other favorite, Mme. de Pompadour, went in with the sole object of winning if she could. It is recorded that her winnings were enormous and that in a single night she eased the pocket of the King of 25,000 louis d'or.

Queen Marie Antoinette, according to history, was a gambler who liked to be surrounded by gamblers. Faro was the popular game, but the stakes got to be so great that many a nobleman had his entire estates wiped out in a single night. Scandal rose high and the game was forbidden. Nevertheless in a short time it was being carried on again, not only in the apartments of the Queen but at the house of the Princess de Lamballe.

At first the queen and those who desired to play with her went to the apartments of Mme. de Guemene, whose house is credited with having been the scene of the highest continued play of any in France. But matters got so bad before the end came that noblemen would no longer play with the Queen, and she admitter to her table many common gamblers. Then the scandal broke in full force, for some were caught cheating and one was arrested for kicking a pocket.

Possibly the most famous woman gambler of English history was Nell Gwynne, who was so great a favorite with Charles II. In that reign the manners were much the same as they were at the French court. Nell Gwynn lost £5,000 to her rival, the Duchess of Cleveland, and in one year lost upward of £60,000, which the King paid. There had never been known so much gambling among women as was carried on in that regime. After the Duchess of Mazarin, niece of the Cardinal, had last £1,000,000 she died in absolute want. The acknowledged queen of American gamblers was Lonna Paquita, who was born in Texas fifty years ago, but early went into Mexico to rule over outlaws and cowboys. The little Lonna was scarcely 12 years old when she fell in with an old-time gambler named Qualetor, who taught her every trick known to the gambler's art. She made her first appearance in Paso del Norte. She was only a child, and the rough gamblers laughed at her.

But they soon found that they were no match for her, and then even her teacher, Qualetor, was a tenderfoot compared with the child. With the passing years Lonna Paquita grew to be a beautiful woman. Her hair was as black as night, she had eyes that confounded those of the gamblers who played with her and a voice as sweet and silvery as a bell. She was as handsome a woman as one could wish to see, but with a heart of ice and nerves of iron. Her small white hands could manipulate the cards with a skill that defied the watchfulness of the keenest gambler.

There were many persons who thought it was merely luck that followed her, but the luck kept up too long, and the gamblers who knew a few tricks themselves understood that it was art. Still no one was ever known to catch her cheating. Before she was 20 Lonna Paquita was in New Mexico, leading a gang of the worst characters of the Southwest.

Her death occurred in 1875 and was tragic. Some lawless acts had been committed by a body of greasers and search was made for them. Lonna Paquita was found to be their leader and was caught. She only laughed when she was taken and proposed that a game of cards be played to see whether she should go free or kil herself. This was agreed to and one of the party, a gambler known to the country around, was selected. The woman lost. Those who looked on had scarcely time to understand this when Lonna Paquita drew a knife from her belt and plunged it into her heart.—Liverpool Mercury.

Oshkosh and Carnival.

The Oshkosh Club has decided that instead of giving an entertainment at the Casino, as last year, to lend its assistance toward the success of the carnival to be held for the benefit of the hospital. A committee has been meeting with the other carnival committees and it is quite likely that the club will arrange to give a big show at the carnival as one of the many attractions to be offered. The entertainment will be similar to those given in the past.

The Newspaper Man.

The newspaper man is lean and lank
And has a long nose—for news,
And often you'll find him to be a crank
Dyspeptic and with the blues.
He sees so much that is ill in life,
So much with a crooked twist,
It is no wonder that in the strife
He becomes a pessimist.

He sees the worst side of many things,
The seamy side, if you please,
And he knows who pulls the moving strings
And all that is false he sees;
He knows how a man is boosted to fame,
How the public is often fooled,
How the very power of sin and shame
By money is overruled.

He sees the falseness behind the scenes;
The hollowness of it all;
He knows what a lot of the boasting means,
How it comes at a beck and a call;
He knows of the trickery and the sham
The politicians use,
But he keeps his mouth shut like a clam
And uses his nose for news.

The newspaper man is lean and lank
And a cynic he often is;
He gives to others degree and rank,
But an humble station is his;
He goes his way with a knowing smile,
Though his way be glad or sad,
With pencil and paper all the while
He mirrors the good and the bad.

HUMAN "HUNGERS."

English Professor Tells of Yearnings from Infancy to Old Age.

Professor Earl Barnes gives the following list of "human hungers" and the ages at which they can first be noticed, say the New York Press.

Hunger for food and drink—Infancy.

Hunger for action—Infancy.

Hunger for knowledge—Infancy.

Hunger for companionship—Six weeks.

Hunger for property—Two years.

Hunger for self-aggrandizement.—Five years.

Hunger for beauty—Two years.

Hunger for reasoning—Seven years.

Hunger for worship—Thirteen years.

Hunger for righteousness.—Fifteen years.

The natural desire for food and drink is strongest, said the professor, at birth. After twenty the appetite should, if not misused, become less and less, till at seventy a man or small meal a day.

woman ought not to require one The "hunger" for property is very strong at about fifteen—the "collecting" age, when boys will amass anything, from stamps to beetles. When all others "hungers" fail, the "property hunger" still exists, and a man is most likely to be a miser when he is nearest his grave.

The "hunger" for beauty—that is, the real "beauty hunger," which means the admiration of art for art's sake—is the most uncommon of all.

No child can be said to have the "reason hunger" still he or she asks how it is that Santa Claus manages to get down a narrow chimney with a bag of toys. Then "reason" is beginning to dawn. This is quite different from the "hunger" for knowledge, which is mere curiosity.

"Hungers" must be kept as necessities, or they will become vices. The "action hunger" is liable to develop into globe-trotting, the "property hunger" into meanness, and the "food and drink" hunger into gluttony and drunkenness.

On the other hand, "hungers" must be developed sufficiently. If, for example, self-aggrandizement is not advanced enough, it becomes apathy. In short, we must keep our "hungers" at the happy medium.

THE POINT OF VIEW.

They sat before the kitchen range,
The corn was popping in the pan,
She was a sweet and loving lass,
He was a brave but bashful man.

For full a year on her he'd called
And looked the love he bore the maid,
But still it seemed he never would Declare himself without her aid.

So, weary of the long delay,
A hint resolved to give to him,
She said: "Look at the frisky corn!
I do declare it's poppin', Jim!

"It's poppin', poppin', Jim! Dear me!
What is it tellin', don't you know?"
He blushed and rose. "I guess," said he,
"It's tellin' me it's time to go!"
—Henry Waldorf Francis, in Woman's Home Companion, for January.

Don'ts on Names.

Don't name a baby after a hero unless the hero has been dead several years.

Don't hamper a boy with a name that will prove a heavy handicap in life.

Don't name a girl after a flower. Think of an old woman called "Pansy" or "Daisy."

Don't name a girl Violet when her disposition may be that of a tiger lily.

Don't tack a fancy name on a kid. It makes him a target for his companions.

Don't name a child after a relative from whom you have "expectations." The relative may yet marry.

Don't forget that the man with the common name of William is more likely to write checks than one labeled Percy.—Portland Telegram.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 14: "A Love Controlled Life." Deut. x. 12; Mark xii. 29-31; John xiv. 21-23; Rom. xiii. 10; I Cor. v. 14, 15; I John iv. 10-21.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

Some love we have toward Him and some things about His service we like, but when it is the question of His love filling us and actually exercising controlling influence over all our acts and words, well, most Christians will hesitate to say that they have reached that state of development. A still sadder fact is that many of those who profess to be so filled and guided by the love of God do not seem to convince others of their loving disposition so clearly as they succeed in impressing themselves.

To love God with all the heart, mind and strength—that is a great thing to do. Who can do it? And yet, when we stop to consider more fully and soberly, why should it be thought a great or difficult matter? Who is more worthy of our love? What hinders us giving all our hearts' affection fully to Him without reserve? Is it our fear of God because He is so high and awe inspiring, so mighty? If we stop and consider that all His power is not greater than His love and all His love has been poured out and is now flowing in fathomless streams for us, love is awakened by love. If—ours have not been moved toward Him it must be that we have never stopped to think of how God is now regarding us. We have been disregarding Him. But He has been making and preserving a world of beauty, privilege and blessing around us and sustaining us in the midst of opportunities and mercies which if realized must awaken gratitude and answering love in any heart not entirely deadened to all sense of affection and gratitude.

What a world, what a God and what exceeding great and precious promises and what a Holy Spirit and Saviour are given to us! And we not love Him! It is incredible. We do love Him, and we will serve Him and keep His ways.

Let us more and more keep before our minds the love of God and recognise it so displayed in our daily lives. Let us also realize more deeply the exceedingly great privilege we have in being asked to love Him in return and share His fellowship.

But suppose one does not feel that he does deeply and adequately love God. What shall he do in that case? Can any one control his love? Most certainly he can and should. How? By keeping constantly before his attention the things which are worthy his regard and refusing persistently to allow other lower objects to have his thought. Fill the mind full of the good, and the evil will be crowded from the heart. Cultivate wheat, and the weeds will be killed. Think up and not down, and love will follow thought.

Then do the right, and you will love it.

Keep His commandments, and you will love God.

Break them, and you will dread Him and may end by hating Him.

Fill your life with Him, and His love will control you.

Singing to Dispel Our Cares.

We can sing away our cares easier than we can reason them away. The birds are the earliest to sing in the morning; the birds are more without care than anything else I know of. Sing in the evening. Singing is the last thing that robins do. When they have done their daily work, when they have flown their last flight and picked up their last morsel of food and cleansed their bills on a napkin of a bough; then on a top twig they sing one song of praise. I know they sleep sweeter for it. They dream music, for sometimes in the night they break forth in singing and stop suddenly after the first note, startled by their own voice. Oh, that we might sing evening and morning and let song touch song all the way through! Oh, that we could put songs under our burden! Oh, that we could extract the sense of sorrow by song! Then sad things would not poison so much. Sing in the house. Teach your children to sing. When troubles come, go at them with song. When griefs arise, sing them down. Lift the voice of praise against cares. Praise God by singing. That will lift you above trials of every sort. Attempt it. They sing in heaven, and among God's people on earth song is the appropriate language of Christian feeling.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Eternal Life.

He who hath in him the eternal life, though a beggar naked and maimed and blind, before him heaven's gates open of themselves. He is no stranger there, for the life that is in him finds there its true sphere and companionship.—Ephraim Peabody.

Gems In Brief Sermons.

God never calls a man to command until he has learned to obey.

A man is never much nearer heaven than when he makes a child happy.

The fruits of righteousness do not grow upon the flowers of rhetoric.

True spirituality is the ability to see the altar in the washtub and the cook stove.

He who loves men need not to pray for power to love God.

You can tell what a man's fruits will be if you know where he sets his roots.

Take care of your own alleys, and the architecture of heaven will take care of itself.

The song of sympathy never comes until the singer has been to the school of sorrow.

The happy Christian so advertises his religion that the other man will not be happy till he gets it.

There is always [illegible] more charity in withholding [illegible] than in giving [illegible] money.—Henry [illegible]

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 14.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—What Christ taught about money and its uses.—Matt. ii. 11; Mark x. 17-21.

The world today has well been called money mad. No more fully did the Israelites in the wilderness worship the golden calf than thousands of people in the present generation bow down before the power and the desire for money. Nor is this simply a characteristic of the present day. In all times men have appreciated the value of money and have very often been willing to obtain it at the sacrifice of everything that is honorable in life. For money Judas Iscariot betrayed his Saviour; for it Lord Bacon betrayed the great trust of honor that was placed in his hands, and for gold Benedict Arnold betrayed his country. Paul declares that money is the root of all evil, and as we look about us today and see the ruin and destruction that have come into the lives of thousands of men through an effort, even at the sacrifice of honesty and of honor, to lay up great riches we cannot but be appalled at the thought of the power that money wields in the world.

While it would be most interesting to know just what Christ thought about money and its use, yet it must be confessed that there is very little recorded in the gospels so far as He is concerned. He lived a humble and simple life and was seldom brought into close relations with great financial problems. Moreover, His method was not to deal with the social and financial conditions of His day, but to lay down certain divine principles that in time would work out all the problems of human life. We can feel assured, however, that if Christ were living today he would in no way sanction any false or dishonest accumulation of wealth or its use in such a way as to defraud others or deprive them of the rights that belong unto them.

Looking into the life of Christ from the standpoint of the money question, we can feel assured (1) Christ would sanction the consecration of money to God for the extension of His kingdom in the world. When but a child, to Him were offered the gifts of great men, and there is no record that in His after life He in any way condemned the consecration of money to the extension of His kingdom. (2) The value that Christ attached to money in its use in the church depended upon the motive in the heart of the giver rather than the amount that was given. This fact is clearly demonstrated in the incident in which he praised the poor widow in her gifts above the Pharisees, who had given gold where she gave mites, because out of her poverty she gave all, while what the others gave was very small in comparison to what they possessed. The question of the value of the money consecrated for Christian use is one rather of what we have left than what we give. (3) Christ would still preach the doctrine that money must not stand between Him and the salvation of the soul. The rich young ruler who left Christ because he loved his money above his Master had awakened the interests of Christ. He looked upon him with great favor, and yet He demanded that before he could become His follower he must give up his money that there should be nothing to stand between him and his Saviour. Whatever else we may think about money and its use, every one should clearly understand that no man who worships gold can at the same time acceptably worship God, and, moreover, no one who gives money the first place in his heart can give any place to Jesus Christ, for Christ must be all or nothing.

"Our Millions."

The goal toward which Christian Endeavor is striving for the year dating from the international convention last July is one million new churchgoers, one million new church members, one million new Endeavorers and one million new dollars for missions. Recently, writing on this theme, Dr. Clark had this helpful suggestion in the course of his article:

"I wish that we might have very definite records kept by every society of the numbers brought to church, of those brought into the church, of new members, active, associate, co-operating and honorary, and of the amount of money given for missions at home and abroad. To this end I would suggest some such chart as this, to be drawn upon a large scale and hung up in the prayer meeting room, on which the record may be kept and, which will serve as a reminder and a stimulus to all the members of the society to do their part:

"OUR MILLIONS.

| | New church-goers. | New church members. | New Endeavorers. | New dollars for missions. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Jan. | | | | |
| Feb. | | | | |
| Mar. | | | | |
| Apr. | | | | |
| May | | | | |
| June | | | | |
| July | | | | |
| Aug. | | | | |
| Sept. | | | | |
| Oct. | | | | |
| Nov. | | | | |
| Dec. | | | | |

"Doubtless some of my friends who are more skillful than I in this matter can suggest improvements for this chart, but it may serve as a rough outline for you to improve upon. Let the president fill in the record at the end of each month and let us hear occasionally at the United society headquarters, Boston, that we may encourage others to do a like work."

RECIPES FOR APPLES.

Apples and oranges are used more than all other fruits and the preference for either fruit depends a good deal on the locality. In the country apples are chaper and oranges are more of a luxury, but in the city when oranges are selling "sixteen for a quarter" the cook does not hesitate to make free use of them.

The apple contains desirable acids when taken either raw or cooked. Most people can eat a raw apple without disturbing their digestion and they find that a moderately sour apple is best. But if raw apples do not digest easily then can almost always be taken when cooked. If baked or stewed an apple should not be smothered in too much sugar. Peel a raw apple before eating, but when cooked it is better left unpared, for a good flavor comes from cooking the peel.

Raw apples and cream are sometimes eaten together, but the apples must be mellow and sweet. Pare and slice them, sprinkle with a little sugar and then pour sweet cream over. In the same way some people like raw sweet apples sliced into a bowl of bread and milk. It is however, much better to bake apples to eat with milk.

Do not bake apples in tin, but use either agate or enamelled ware or an earthen dish. Sweet apples need only to be washed, but sour apples may be cored and the centers filled with sugar and then a little water poured round. Or fill the centers with seeded raisins, sugar and a little grated lemon peel. Cream is often served with baked apples, but a perfectly baked apple is excellent eating without any dressing up with garnishes.

When stewing apples it is a good plan to make a syrup of the sugar and water to be used, and when this is boiling to drop in the apples pared and cored or cut into quarters. Cook the apples, a few at a time, until they are tender, but not broken, and lift out with a skimmer. When all are done cook the syrup longer and until thickened slightly, then pour round the apple or add a little soaked gela*tine and let the whole cool* until the syrup has formed a jelly.

Apple Pandowdy.

Line the sides and bottom of a dish with thin slices of apple that have been buttered, fill the dish with thin slices of apple then add a little grated nutmeg. Scatter in sugar as needed, add two or three tablespoons of hot water and cover with buttered bread. Put a plate over the dish and set in the oven to bake slowly for an hour and a half. Serve hot with cream or a liquid pudding sauce.

Baked Apple Sauce.

When there is to be a fire in the range for several hours bake the apple sauce and find out how much richer the flavor will be then when stewed. Use an earthen pot like a bean pot and fill with sweet apples, or medium sour apples, pared, cored and quartered. Add two or three tablespoons of molasses and enough sugar to make sweet. Cover and add one cup of water to a two-quart pot. Cover and bake five hours. The sauce will be of a dark red color.

Apple Dumplings.

Sift four cups of flour with six level teaspoons of baking powder; rub in one-third cup of butter or a little more if liked. Add a pinch of salt and mix with a cup of milk or as much as needed to make a soft dough that can be handled. Roll half an inch thick, cut into circles four inches across and in the centre of each put an apple that has been pared, cored and filled with sugar and two or three seeded raisins. Bring the dough up round the apple and pinch the edges together. But each dumpling into a buttered cup, turning the dough over to bring the rough edges at the bottom. Set the cups in a steamer that has a closely fitting cover and steam three-quarters of an hour without lifting the cover. Serve as soon as done with a liquid or hard sauce; a molasses sauce is often preferred.

Apple Tarts.

Roll a rich paste out thin and cut three times as many circles as the number of tarts to be made. From two-thirds of the circles cut a ring so that there will be two rings for each circle. Wet the under side of each ring as laid on and bake these cases in a hot oven. Fill these tarts with freshly cooked apple sauce, which is cooked without breaking. Put a spoonful of whipped cream on each or a teaspoon of some kind of bright-colored jelly.

Apple Cake.

Sift three level teaspoons of baking powder with two cups of pastry flour; rub in a rounding tablespoon of butter and mix with a half cup or more of milk. Stir in one cup of chopped apple and bake in gem pans.

Apple Cake.

Sift two cups of flour, with four level teaspoons of baking powder and rub in two rounding tablespoons of butter; add one beaten egg and mix with enough milk to make a dough that can be rolled out in a sheet. Lay the cake in a pan and cover the top with rows of sliced apple stuck into the dough with the sharp edges down. Mix one teaspoon of cinnamon with two tablespoons of sugar and sift over the top. Bake and serve with a liquid sauce.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published at

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

S. L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, JAN. 11, 1906.

Some one has figured out that the Osler theory hits thirty-three United States Senators, but did it remain for the famous physician's theory to be expounded to discover their uselessness?

It is estimated that the entire cost of establishing and maintaining a district court here would be $2,500 for the first year. After that the expense would be somewhat reduced. The question, therefore, is whether the taxpayers are willing to have that amount appropriated for trial of minor civil suits by one having a knowledge of the law.

"Houses leased only to families where this is attended to by the men. I am tired of petticoat government." —A real estate man of East Millstone, N. J.

Just one of the ordinary periodical outbursts against the predominant partner, that will have no result one way or another.—New York Evening Sun.

Man making that guess is evidently not married.

If it undertakes the task seriously, the Board of Trade's committee on a district court will find that many sober-minded and thoughtful men favor the establishment of such a tribunal. The defects of the present system are apparent. That much will be conceded. The hitch comes when the question of cost of the new court is considered. Can Plainfield afford to make the improvement? Lawyers and litigants will undoubtedly give an affirmative answer. What will the Board of Trade's committee say?

Members of the bar almost without exception are strongly in favor of the establishment of a District Court in this city. Their views, published in this issue, are based on arguments that will be hard to refute. The present system is antiquated, unsatisfactory and costly. On the other hand, a District court, presided over by one versed in the law, will prove beneficial alike to the lawyer and client. It remains for the Common Council to take the formal steps preliminary to the introduction of the much desired court.

In calling attention to the sentence of a New York druggist for refilling mineral water bottles with other water, the Retail Grocers Advocate says "this should be a warning to the grocers who are in the habit of refilling milk bottles." The druggist in question got three months in the penitentiary, the charge being "selling material under false labels." The punishment meted in his case is none too severe for unscrupulous milkmen who make it a practise to refill the bottles of others engaged in the same trade and there is room for an investigation right here in Plainfield.

On the whole, Mayor Buckle's second annual message to the Common Council can be summed up as an endorsement of the suggestions contained in the yearly reports of the various departmental heads. The only new feature may be said to be his words of commendation for the police department. But the message in its entirety is a good one and one that will appeal to the average thinking man as a businesslike document. The Mayor urges that better fire protection be given in the East End of the city. There can be no dispute that it is a good idea. He also recommends primary school accommodations for the West End, and again there can be no question that there is a real want for one. In this connection he draws attention to the underpaid school teachers—a condition that exists, much to the disgrace of the city, and which should be remedied at the earliest opportunity. Another matter he dwells upon is a municipal system of garbage disposal, as outlined in his former message. The necessity for such a sanitary improvement is clearly set forth, without any mincing of words. Everybody knows it is needed. All in all, it's a good message and is creditable to its author.

BAND CONCERT FAIR.

Ben LaVere Making Arrangements to Give One Week of Feb. 5.

Ben LaVere, the promoter of local band concerts, has decided to present another series the coming summer, and to secure the nucleus of a fund for the purpose will give a fair in Saengerbund Hall the week beginning February 5. He is already making preparations and will appoint committees from among numerous volunteers within a few days. He has been informed by the New York publishing houses that they will give him all the help possible and that they will furnish him the best singers and song slides nightly.

Though his plans for the concerts are not fully complete, Mr. LaVere states that he will have a better band than ever and that he will introduce many new features.

AMUSEMENTS.

Lyric, 42d street, west of Broadway—"The Babes and the Baron." One of the best offerings on the boards. Evenings at 8:15; matinees, Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Casino, Broadway and 39th street—"The Earl and the Girl," with Eddie Foy. Rattling good. Evenings at 8:15; matinees Thursdays and Saturdays.

Princess, Broadway and 29th street—Miss Margaret Anglin in "Zira." Last two weeks of record-breaking run. Evenings at 8:15; matinees Thursdays and Saturdays.

Fields, 42d street, west of Broadway—Louis Mann and Clara Lipman in "Julie Bonbon. "Drew unstinted praise." Evenings at 8:15; matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

No play more pleasing than "Before and After," now running at the Manhattan theatre, has been seen in New York this season. Many who have followed the work of Leo Ditrichstein as a farceur declare that this, his latest laughter play, surpasses any of his former works as an author, while as an actor he is perhaps more clever and pleasing in "Before and After" than ever before. There have been so few comedy offerings in New York this season that "Before and After" comes most opportunely, and that the public appreciate this fact is evidenced by the audiences at the Manhattan. In this representation, too, one may see a really clever play interpreted by an exceptional company. It is safe to say that no better organization of comedians than that which develops the fun in Mr. Ditrichstein's farce has been gathered in New York in years. Fritz Williams, George C. Boniface, Jr., Thomas A. Wise, Mr. Ditrichstein, Roy Fairchild, John Daly Murpay, Katherine Florence, Georgie Lawrence, Kenyon Bishop, Jean Newcombe, Helen Warren and Mabel Findlay indeed make up a fine company, and they have in the play material worthy of their talents. But one matinee a week—on Saturday—is given at the Manhattan.

Amid the successes of the present theatrical year, Alfred Sutro's great play, "The Walls of Jericho," which James K. Hackett and Mary Mannering are presenting at the Savoy theatre, New York, stands most prominent. "The Walls of Jericho" is now in its first month of great success in New York, and all indications point that it could be played there for many more months to come but for the fact that when Mr. Hackett took the Savoy theatre, he had in mind to produce during his season at that playhouse, other plays and with that end in mind, made all his arrangements. Following the arrangement outlined in his original plans, Mr. Hackett now announces a new play called "The House of Silence," by Herman K. Viele, which will be given its first production on Monday, January 22, at the Savoy theatre. During the run of "The House of Silence" Mr. Hackett will give special matinee performances of "The Walls of Jericho," and will again restore it to nightly presentations when the run of the new play is over.

Ethel Barrymore has a genuine triumph in the three-act Barrie comedy, "Alice Sit by the Fire," at the Criterion theatre. J. M. Barrie's wonderful genius for devising play novelties is disclosed fully in the double bill in which Miss Barrymore and her two brothers, Lionel and John, are now appearing at this theatre. The charm of the author's quaint humor prevails throughout the comedy and is exquisitely combined with pathos and with certain light tragic elements in the fifty-minute piece entitled, "Pantaloon," with which the evening bill begins. Miss Barrymore's acting in the "Alice" play and Lionel's clever impersonation of the old man in "Pantaloon," enhance the value of the Barrie inventions, and present his delightful work in a manner that permits it to be heartily enjoyed. The problem-play-deluded young boarding-school girl whose "Stagey" views of life bring about all the delightful complications in the "Alice" comedy is one of the attractive features of this portion of the bill. John Barrymore distinguishes himself by lending able assistance to his sister in the longer play, and gives an unctuous and mirthful impersonation of a clown in the shorter work.

Maude Adams' phenomenal triumph in "Peter Pan," at the Empire theatre, eNw York, is now two months old and there is still a long line of people at the box office buying seats at all hours of the day, as has been the case every day since her engagement began. It is very evident that New York wishes to keep Miss Adams and dear Peter there far into the New Year. They will begin their third month by giving nine performances next week, there being matinees on Monday, Wednesday and Saturdays. These will be the last of the extra matinees. Popular delight in the beautiful and charming production at the Empire is as great as the demand for seats. The audiences are the most enthusiastic to be found in any of the city theatres. Every performance is a genuine ovation for Miss Adams, and a tremendous endorsement of Mr. Barrie's quaint and fantastic humor. The secret of the enormous success of the production is the combined charms of Miss Adams and Barrie that prevail throughout the entertainment. The actress is seen at her very best in the role of "Peter Pan," and she discloses great versatility in the part, singing and dancing and in her capacity of fairy boy flying gracefully about the stage. Those who go to see "Peter Pan" at the Empire feel all the happier and better for it.

Sam H. Harris presents the Yankee Doodle comedian, Geo. M. Cohan, with his singing and dancing company, in his latest musical play, "Little Johnny Jones," at the Grand Opera House, New York. The musical numbers include "The Cecil in London Town," Starter; "They're All My Friends," McGee; "Mam'selle Fanchette," Goldie; "'Op in the 'Ansom," Cabbies and Reformers; "Nesting in a New York Tree," Florabelle; "Yankee Doodle Boy," Jones; "Off to the Derby," Company; "Girls from the U. S. A.," Florabelle; "Sailors of the St. Hurrah," Sailors; "Captain of the Ten-day Boat," Squirry; "Goodbye, Flo," Goldie; "So Long, Sing Song," Company; "Good Old California," Hapgood; "A Girl I Know," Jones and Goldie; "Give My Regards to Broadway," Jones; "March of the 'Frisco Chinks," Company; "Life's a Funny Proposition, After All," Jones; finale, Geo. M. Cohan and Company.

New York was introduced last night at the Majestic theatre to a new style of dramatic production that bids fair to be pointed to later as the real novelty and success of the present dramatic season. The play is called "The Redemption of David Corson" and is a dramatization from the book of the Rev. Charles Frederick Goss by Mrs. Lottie Blair Parker, author of "Way Down East" and "Under Southern Skies." It is another "minister's" play of which there are now three running at the theatres in New York, but it is so different from the others that it stands clearly in a class quite by itself. It does not attack any creed nor appeal to any racial prejudice and it is not "preachy." It is a straight dramatic and essentially American play that goes straight to the heart. It tells the tale of a young Quaker preacher who was a great religious enthusiast and lived in a quiet Ohio valley village far from the influences of the world and was a visionary who believed that his day dreams were religious revelations. William Courtleigh, the New York matinee idol, made an admirable David and carried his audience with him from the rise of the curtain to the fall on the last scene. His work is clean cut, clever and highly artistic. He made of the portrayal of David a character study worthy of every praise. Miss Emma Dunn, who is a new leading woman to New York audiences, proved to be a great surprise to all but her friends and those who had seen her work in the West. She is a little woman much smaller than the average leading woman but what she lacks in size she more than makes up in ability and dramatic intensity. She was called before the curtain time and again to acknowledge New York's approving applause. Taken altogether "The Redemption of David Corson" is a wholesome play that comes to New York as a pleasant relief from the inanity of recent musical frivolities and trashy dramas.

BEAUTIFUL TROUSSEAU OF ALICE ROOSEVELT.

Miss Alice Roosevelt is planning to leave Washington this week for New York to begin the purchasing and completing of her trousseau. All of her gowns and lingerie, it is understood, will be purchased in New York, though the President's daughter is in the habit of patronizing some of the Washington costumers and tailors as need requires. So far, however, they have not been visited, and they do not expect to be, in this case.

As yet no hint has been given as to what the wedding gown will be like, but it is sure to be a gorgeous new one, in spite of the fact that Dame Rumor has suggested dressing her in her grandmother's wedding gown. As Miss Roosevelt is a fine specimen of the athletic American girl, the chances are she could not get her grandmother's gown around her, should she try to wear it, as the waist of the girl of this generation differs by many inches from that of two generations ago.

The most beautiful gown seen at the inaugural ball last spring was that worn by Miss Roosevel, who looked a picture in it as she stood in the President's gallery and looked down on her father and mother in the grand march and at the surging crowd. A petticoat of cloth of gold was surmounted by a Directoire coat of white satin with girdle of cloth of gold. The zouave fronts of the coat, as well as the long tails which extended down to the edge of her train, were lined with crushed pink rose leaf satin.

Miss Alice's wedding gown will certainly be no less handsome. It may be some new creations of the dressmaker's art and will be fashioned from some of the beautiful shimmering silks she has brought from the Orient, with some of the embroideries given her by the Dowager Empress of China or the Mikado of Japan.

This week will be a convenient time for Miss Roosevelt to be absent from Washington, as Mr. Longworth is leaving for Cincinnati, to be gone several days.

Robert W. Crane, of East Second street, has resumed his studies at Yale, after spending three weeks' vacation with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Crane.

FIRMLY AGAINST COURT

Former Sheriff Coriell, Replying to District Court Article, States His Position.

OTHER THINGS FIRST

City Needs a New School, Firehouse, Arclights and Improvements of that Character More than a District Court.

Former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, one of the committee of two appointed by the Board of Trade to investigate the cost of a district court, gave out a statement this morning regarding his estimate of the expenditure at the last Board meeting. The ex-sheriff estimated that $5,000 a year would be the probable cost of the court, and two days later a lawyer, who is interested in the court, showed, through The Daily Press, that the cost would not be likely to go beyond $2,500.

Mr. Coriell's statement in reply to the lawyer's calculations included a vigorous reaffirmation of his opposition to the court. He said he wanted to see a new fire house, a new school, more policemen and arc lights on Front street before a district court.

"It is very seldom that I answer newspaper articles," said Mr. Coriell, "but the one in your paper on the sixth, I presume from some young lawyer who does not make his name known, has attacked me because of some remarks I made at the meeting of the Board of Trade. The question of the district court was brought up at that meeting by the president. None of us at that time had investigated the matter. I merely stated that the Legislative Manual of 1904 gave the salaries of district court judges at from $2,500 to $3,000 a year, and that the expenses of a clerk and the hiring of a proper hall, and furnishing the same, would make the cost of a district court at from $4,000 to $5,000 a year. Mr. Smith and myself were appointed a committee to investigate the matter and report at the next meeting of the Board, and at that time I think we will be prepared to make our report.

"I have no doubt that our young friend is correct in regard to the salary of a judge under the Law of 1905, wherein he states that it would be $1,200 for the judge, and $600 for the clerk; but, even at that, I am satisfied that the expenses of running a district court at Plainfield would still be considerable over $2,500 a year. We all know that under the new law in regard to taxation, the city will be limited to a certain per cent. We have, or are about to bond the city for the new High School building. We shall have to make arrangements for the paying or the interest on the same, and the reducing of those bonds yearly. The Common Council also has received a petition from the residents of the West End part of our city for the location of a new school house in that section. The chief of the fire department, in his annual report, says that we should have a new fire house in the eastern part of the city for the proper protection of property. The chief of police in his annual report has also asked for more men to properly protect our homes. Front street, from Central avenue to Watchung avenue, and Park avenue, from Front street to Fourth street, should be paved with permanent pavement. The business part of our city should be lighted with arc lights, so that any one passing through the streets at night, after the sores are closed, would not have to grope in the dark.

"For my own part, I say, let us maintain the high educational facilities for which Plainfield is known. Let us have good police and fire protection, so that our homes may be protected. Let us have permanent improved, and well lighted streets in the business centre of our city. When these things have been accomplished, then, I think, it will be time to take up the district court matter; for at present, as I have said before, I see no earthly reason for a district court in Plainfield, when the small number of litigants that would use the same can be accommodated at our county seat, where a district court is already established."

Tendered Him a Surprise Party.

Edward Krausse, of Vine street, was tendered a surprise party by twenty-five of his friends Saturday night. Dancing, singing and instrumental music were features of the gathering, and William Newmiller favored with several vocal solos. Guests were present from New York, Newark and Dunellen as well as the city and borough.

Plainfielders Meet in South.

W. R. Sweeney, formerly of this city, now an attache of the Trenton Abbatoir Company, has just returned from a business trip through the South. He met J. D. Loiseaux and J. C. Manning, of this city, in Tallapoosa, Ga. Mr. Sweeney expects to go to South America for the company some time before next month.

Miss Kline is enjoying a week's vacation.

Mrs. William Abbott, who recently recovered from an attack of scarlet fever, will reside with her mother on West Eighth street, this winter.

C. A. LEVERIDGE IS DEAD

Paralysis and Heart Trouble Carry Off a Venerable Citizen After a Long Illness.

A FORMER FREEHOLDER

Member of Asbestos Club—Organizer of the Westfield M. E. Church—Son of Distinguished Lawyer.

Cornelius Alexander Leveridge, a well-known man about the city and a man of means, died Saturday at his home in West Front street. Paralysis, grip and heart trouble were the cause of his end. About a year ago he suffered a stroke of paralysis, and he was attacked again on Thursday.

Mr. Leveridge was born in Cherry street, New York, April 30, 1829. His father, the late John Leveridge, was one of the leading lawyers in New York many years ago, and was one of the founders and a president of the Chatham National Bank in that city. Mr. Leveridge moved to Westfield at the age of nineteen years and resided there for twenty-five years. Then he settled in Cranford. Ten years ago he removed to this city.

Mr. Leveridge was greatly interested in geneology. Among other writings he was the author of a valuable history of Middlesex and Union counties together with sketches of their most prominent citizens. He wrote under the nom de plume of "Historicus." Early in life he became interested in the collection of coins and he secured valuable specimens, which he afterward sold to P. T. Barnum for $3,000.

In 1848, while living at Westfield, Mr. Leveridge joined the First M. E. church, of this city, at that time the nearest church of that denomination to his home. Later he assisted in organizing an M. E. church at Westfield. Rev. Dr. G. H. Whitney, of this city, preached the first sermon to the newly-formed organization.

For a number of years he was a member of the Union County Board of Freeholders and was also a prominent member of the Asbestos Club and attended a session of the latter organization as late as Wednesday last, when he talked over old times and of the many members of the club who have died within the past few years. He was of a social and genial disposition and had the happy faculty of making friends.

He is survived by two brothers, Benjamin C. Leveridge, a New York lawyer, and Albert Leveridge, of Elizabeth; also a sister-in-law, Mrs. Isabelle Miller, with whom he lived. His wife died about three years ago in this city.

Fourth Dinner-Dance.

There was a fair attendance at the fourth of the series of dinner-dances held at the Casino on Saturday night under the auspices of the Plainfield Country Club, and those present had the usual good time. Several had dinner in the restaurant, and the evening was divided up between dancing, bowling, billiards and bridge. The fifth dinner-dance will be held Saturday night, January 20.

Voluntary Bankrupt.

Through his counsel, William Newcorn, Mathan Bergers, of Rahway, has gone into voluntary bankruptcy. His liabilities are $3,500 and his assets $1,350.

PLAINFIELDER SHOOTS AT MEN WHO ATTACKED HIM

AFTERWARD ARRESTED FOR CARRYING PISTOL WITHOUT A LICENSE.

Attacked by two striking ironworkers who had followed him for several blocks, Frank Neal, of West Front street, this city, drew a pistol and fired two shots at his assailants at Third avenue and Thirty-eighth street, New York, Saturday, noon. Neither bullet took effect but the two men beat a hasty retreat. Policeman Landers, who had heard the shots and hurried up, arrested Neal, taking him to the East Twenty-Second station on a charge of carrying a pistol without a license. He gave bail for appearance later.

Neal has been employed for the past few weeks by Post & McCord, a big constructing firm, against which the New York Ironworkers' Union has instituted a strike. He secured the position after the men had gone out and was looked upon by them as a "strike breaker." He left a building in course of erection at Sixth avenue and Twenty-fifth street on his way to lunch, Saturday, when two of the strikers followed him. At Third avenue they sprang upon him and knocked him down but Neal regained his feet and drew his pistol, a small affair which he had carried for years. It probably saved him from a severe beating if not fatal injury.

The new year came in bright and smiling.—Hunterdon County Independent.

Floyd Niece and lady friend enjoyed the holiday sights at Plainfield, Jersey City, and New York.—Hunterdon County Independent.

A squirrel belonging to Dr. Harman escaped from its cage one afternoon last week and gave the boys a lively chase before it was captured. —Hunterdon County Independent.

DEEGAN LOSES HIS HEART TO A SCOTCH PLAINS BELLE.

Plainfield's Twirler to Become a Benedict this Week.

"Willie" Deegan, a baseball idol, will be married sometime this week to Mrs. Emma Coombs, of Scotch Plains. The wedding will take place at St. Joseph's church. Father Miller will perform the ceremony. For reasons known only to "Willie" and his bride-to-be the exact date for the event is kept a secret.

Mr. Deegan attributes the direct cause of losing his heart to Manager Philip Daab, who brought him to Plainfield last season, where he was largely instrumental in winning the Union county championship. The future Mrs. Deegan owns the old Scotch Plains Hotel, where she and her husband will reside. Mrs. Coombs is reputed to be very wealthy.

Her Seventh Anniversary.

Erma Gordon Dobbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, of West End avenue, celebrated the seventh anniversary of her birthday on Saturday and in the afternoon she entertained a number of her young friends. The little folks played games of all kinds, including a peanut hunt which afforded great fun, for all. Later refreshments were served. The young hostess received several pretty and useful gifts as reminders of the happy event.

Mr. and Mrs. Martin J. Cooley, of Rockview terrace, have gone South for a part of the winter.

Dates for Sportsmen's Show.

Announcement was made Saturday of the dates for the twelfth annual Motor Boat and Sportsmen's Show, which will be held in Madison Square Garden, New York, February 20 to March 8. Not the least interesting exhibit this year will be a mounted fish exhibit from New Mexico, in which John W. Gates, Charles G. Gates and M. A. Rice are interested. There will be a special Long Island exhibit in charge of Will Graham, of Blue Point, while the showing from Maine, the Adirondacks and Virginia will occupy considerably more space than last year. The new offices of the show are at 1 Madison avenue, New York.

Peter's Pence, $5,371.62.

Announcement has been made by Bishop O'Connor, of the Catholic Diocese of Newark, that the Peter's pence offerings in the diocese amounted to $5,371.62. The largest contribution was from St. Mary's church, Bayonne, of which Rev. Father Egan, formerly of St. Mary's church, here, is pastor. It gave $425.07. The contribution from St. Mary's church, this city, was $70.

EVANGELISTIC SERVICES ALREADY BEARING FRUIT

Campaign For Souls is Started at Hope Chapel by Rev. G. R. Lunn.

THE INITIAL APPEAL

At Grace M. E. Church, the Rines Brothers Succeed in Convincing Many Which Is the Right Path.

The campaign for souls is on in earnest at several of the local churches and will continue all this week.

With large gatherings in attendance on each occasion, Rev. George R. Lunn, of Schenectady, N. Y., opened his series of evangelistic meetings at Hope chapel, Sunday. He spoke at the morning and night services and also before the Sunday-school and the Christian Endeavor Society. From the interest manifested his work is sure to accomplish good results. He will speak at the chapel every night until Saturday, special music being a feature at each meeting.

At the service Sunday the chapel was filled and the sermon by Mr. Lunn held the close attention of everyone. At its conclusion many stood up and asked for prayers and there was one conversion. His address was as follows:

"I read to you in the scripture reading tonight a verse which I have chosen as my text, the twenty-second verse of the nineteeth chapter of the Gospel according to St. John, the words of Pilate, "What I have written I have written." He said those words in reply to the demand of the Jews that he change the superscription which he had placed above the cross after the crucifixion. You remember that he had placed above the Christ the superscription "Jesus of Nazareth King of the Jews." Now when the Jews read that sign they were highly indignant that Pilate should place above the cross such a statement concerning this man whom they had designated by every vile name possible, an impostor and a blasphemer, a man against whom they had spoken every evil word and thought every bitter thought. Not only that, but to have written it in three languages, Hebrew, Greek and Latin, was enough to arouse all the indignation of those who put our Lord to death. So they went to Pilate and told him it would have to be changed. They asked if he would not change it. They said, "Write not 'Jesus of Nazareth, King' of the Jews," but Pilate said, "What I have written, I have written. I will make no change. What I have done, I have done." Now, I want to give those words a much larger content and larger meaning than they had when they were spoken.

"I have simply chosen that verse as emphatic, 'What I have written, I have written.' I shall use no words as expressive of life's record. 'What I have written, I have written.' They could well be used as applying to the record that Pilate had made. What he had written, he had written. What he had done that day, he had done and made a record. But what a terrible record! With what a sting to his memory would return the words 'No fault.' For in the weak condition of Pilate, a man of his intellectual acuteness, a man of such power, a man who was not easily influenced, a man who was and all the power of judgment, well knew that he had an innocent man before him, as he himself said. Imagine with what remorse he would think of these days, and especially of this particular day. With what sharpness and with what sting there would recur the words, 'no fault.' 'No fault,' yet condemned. Why that sounds to us a terrible thing. 'No fault,' yet persecuted, 'no fault,' yet buffeted and insulted, 'no fault,' yet delivered to be crucified. A man in whom Pilate had found no occasion for crime, no guilt, 'no fault.' That was the record Pilate had written against himself for the pages of all succeeding ages. He was a craven, a coward.

"Now these words apply not only to Pilate, but they also apply to our own life. What I have written, I have written, and what you have written, you have written. We are all making a record, and we are making our own record. No one else is making it for us. The coloring of it is ours, the choosing of it is ours. Whether it will be a record of which we shall be ashamed or proud remains with us, not with anyone else. Never let that sinister thought take control of you, young man, or woman, that someone else or some condition makes you what you are. No one guides the hand but the inner self as you write your record, no one else, no condition forces the writing. It is that inner self that writes and is writing today your record, and has been writing. There will come a time, a time when we will be brought face to face with our record—what we have done, what we have accomplished, it may be in secret places—a time when the secrets of men shall be uncovered, nothing hiding us from the eternal light that penetrates all the darkness of our lives, and they will be brought face to face with our biography, and as we read we will say 'never could I have made such a decision under those circumstances, never could I have acted in that manner, it is a mistake,' and lo and behold, there attached to that self-condemning document is your own signature, for you wrote it. It was not an arbitrary God seated somewhere in the heavens watching you as you did your sin and recording it against you. You are writing, and you are writing what? and I am writing what? My own record, and you see my signature attached, and not someone else's. You are making your own record, my dear friends, and I am making mine. We are writing fidelity or falsehood, honor or shame, nobility or selfishness, thoughts that inspire or thoughts that degrade. We are writing our own record, we are coloring it, choosing to suit ourselves. We are choosing just what we want to put in that picture, and if some of you could see the picture that you are making, with all its blots, with all its scars, you would want someone else to guide you and teach you how, that you might paint a picture of beautiful life, a true life, a higher life.

"Now there are several things that I want to mention, one of them is in regard to this record. It will be complete. In every detail it will be given. Oftentimes we would be glad if we could remember only the good of our lives and put forever behind us the evil days and the evil actions, but not such is the life that we are living. There is no one here tonight, unless it be that innocent little girl yonder, none who have arrived at years of understanding, but can look back to a point in life where there is a 'blot on the escutheon.' Every detail will be given. Deeds of honor, deeds of shame, bright days, but also black days, misspent days, unimproved opportunities, responsibilities that you shunned, the burdens that you would not lift, the mercies that you would not exercise, the kindnesses that you would not show. It is all there. It has been written, not by another, but by yourself in every detail, and if we could but strike out the evil of that record and have it less complete, how much happier we would be. I think—I don't know whether you agree with me, but I think one of the saddest things ever penned was the words of Tennyson in 'Idyls of the King,' the pathetic situation wherein we find Guinever, repentant of her sin, but before her there comes the thought that forever more there can be no rest, and she knows days will grow to weeks, the weeks to months, the months will add themselves and make the years and the years will roll into the centuries, and mine shall ever be a name of shame.' She could only think of the record of her life, the friendship with Launcelot. Know that those black days as well as the bright days, will be recorded, deeds of shame as well as deeds of honor. Complete, it will all be there, and you and I will face it.

"Now, for the most part, our life record is a commonplace one. It is a commonplace record. We are writing every day, the entries are being made, but the entries are commonplace. Days and weeks and months may flow by and nothing very important to be recorded, and then there comes a special crisis moment, a crisis day, a crisis period, in which we are brought face to face with great questions, great problems, great duties, great responsibilities. I do not know that any entry is made when you choose your business that you are to follow. You make an important entry when you choose your friends. Friendship has such a tremendous influence over life that in choosing friends you make an important entry. There comes crises, these great questions, and the decision must be made. We stand face to face with it, the crisis point, we must decide and we do decide, and then, after making the decision we repeat in joy or in sorrow, 'What I have written, I have written.'" Now I know that the most important entry that Pilate ever made in his record was when he stood face to face with Jesus Christ. He recognized the power of that personality. He knew that he looked into eyes that were not only kind but just and pure. He knew he was looking upon a man who had no pretensions to an earthly kingdom. He knew he was looking upon a man seeking to uplift the hearts of men. He makes his excuse that men were clamoring for Christ's death. Evil always hates goodness, darkness always hates the light. They are clamoring for his death. Then comes the insidious suggestion that this man wants to be king and is therefore an enemy to Caesar and to retain his friendship with Caesar, Pilate condemns the Christ. To Pilate a king was a man who had a purple robe and who sat on a magnificent throne, over whom there was a great canopy and in his hands there was an ivory scepter. Thank God, there are ivory scepters and royal robes and great canopies to cover some kings, for you would never suspect they were kings unless you saw them in that situation. But there stood before Pilate the man whom he knew to be a king, a king over the hearts of men, striving to persuade them toward heavenly things.

"And when he stood before that helper, that Christ, he saw the higher life and he refused to follow it, and to see a higher thing and refuse to follow it is sin. It is not simply the commission of some great offense, but it is to see a higher duty and choose a lower. Some of you may never have been guilty of some great and heinous offense. You may have, you may not, but how few of us realize that when once we have seen the higher and choose the lower we ignore thereby the highest principle of our being. We have dishonored ourselves. We have been untrue to God. When Pilate stood face to face with Christ it was the supreme moment and he registered his decision against Him. Here was a man recognized as a prophet and known as a prophet. No one dreamed of the power that that life would exert throughout the ages that were to come. No one dreamed that, no one, not even the disciples could see in that man a reflection of the very heart of God. No one dreamed that there trod upon the earth in that human form the Invisible, the very Infinite One. He stood there as a great prophet, and Pilate knew it, but precedent and custom and friendship and ambition and all things urged him to choose the fleeting, the transitory, the fatal, and he made his decision and chose darkness when the light was visible. He chose falsehood while has was playing with truth, asking the one who was true, what is truth, and he made his record. What I have written I have written.

"Not only will the record be complete, but it will record, dear friends, is inevitable. I know how foolish some of you are. You are so foolish as to imagine that you can dodge a moral issue. Well, you are simply mad if you think you can. You do not dodge, you cannot dodge. When the moral issue is presented the decision is not in your own heart. These decisions are not outward, they are inward and you register your decision, you cannot escape it, and every time this highest is presented and you go on living a life that is less holy than the life that you saw, and you put to follow that light as you can see it, you have registered your decision against the highest and therefore committed a grievous sin. Moral issues cannot be escaped. The writing is inevitable You can choose the manner of your actions, but act you must. You may act out that vestibule, you may go on out into the street, but you act some way. You must and will. In every hour of life we act, we are writing and we are doing things, we must. So it is with the record we write every day, the entries are being made, you cannot escape, it is utterly fatal to attempt to escape. It is inevitable, you must write. What are you writing? You know. I do not know. God knows. And that brings the issue always where it is between friends, between yourself and God, not a church, —I have never tried to persuade men to give themselves to a church. I want a man to give himself to Christ. When once he is thoroughly and fully given himself to Christ then he is what the Christ is. The highest type of heart in the world. When you choose the Highest you are chosing Christ. When you are following the Highest you are following Christ. You must choose constantly, day by day you write, every day. At the close of every day you could write, it is what you and I have done." It is inevitable. You have got to write, but you do not have to write evil. You have the choice in your own power of writing good or writing evil, of being faithful or being false, bowing down before honor and nobility and righteousness or becoming a craven and a coward and entering into shame. It is inevitable. You must write. How are you writing and what are you writing?

"Then another thought. It is unalterable. You think you can change it. You cannot change it. It is unalterable, absolutely. Not only has the record been inevitable, you must make it one way or the other, but to this day and to this hour it is unalterable, it cannot be changed. Cain could not bring back life to Abel, Esau could not recall Naboth. Esau sold his birthright for a morsel of meat and then he could not find repentance though he sought it carefully and with tears. Judas betrayed his Lord and then would have given his right arm if he could have changed it, but he could not. It is unalterable, and he went out and wept bitterly, but his weeping could not atone. All his weeping could not have rescued that Christ from the enemies. Ahab and Cain and Judas and Pilate might weep until their tears would make a river and it would be unavailing, absolutely. They made their record and it was unalterable. Now that is nature. That is like all the laws that you and I know. I want to know where there is any gospel, where there is any hope.

"I want to remind you of the pessimism of the Persian poet when he said 'The moving finger, etc.' That is pessimism, the death dealing pessimism of Omar Khayam. Then as it were, coming fresh from heaven's own throne the words "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow, etc.' I do not know ing any way that I could even suggest an explanation. My brain is not big enough to understand it and there never has been a brain given among men that was big enough and great enough to even enter into the mystery, even enter into the mystery of the power of Christ to cleanse and lift a life and blot out all the past and leave it behind us. 'I have blotted out your sins and your transgressions. I have cut them as far as the east is from the west.' I don't know how, all I know is that it can be done. That Christ comes to us and says 'Come unto me' all ye who are sick with yourselves, sick with your sins, sick with your past 'and I will cast a garment over your iniquities and they shall be remembered no more, no more forever.' I never see. I very seldom use the word atonement for it is too big a word. We know nothing about it. Men formulate opinions about it, and they seem to know very definitely what it is. The lower intellectually they are the more definite and positive. They can tell you how this all comes about. They have a plan of salvation, step by step. I used to think I had a plan but that plan has long been broken up and all I know is—I can think a great deal—but all I know is that 'though my sins as mountains rise, etc.' 'there is a wideness in God's mercy like, etc.' There is something in forgiveness that is past finding out. All I know is that that Christ has done for me and for a multitude of others what He can do for you. It may not strike you. You may not be even serious enough to get a grip on Frank D. Randolph, chairman of the police committee; Frank Day, William Harding, Charles Harris, Henry Pugh, Stevenson H. Hope, Frank Kelso, Isaac Kennedy, Edward Maynard, William Ewens, Edward Martin, Alexander D. Ayers, Robert McCormick, Nathan Pollard, William Forrestel, Thomas O'Gorman, Samuel J. Mrs. Jennie W. Kenyon made application for a permit to erect a two-story and attic dwelling on Williams street, and the matter was referred.

Constables' Bonds.

The bonds of Constables P. V. Weaver and John Manley, approved as to form by the corporation counsel, and those of Constables Amos Moffett and John Conroy, not approved, were presented and referred to the proper committee. Later Mr. Daniel offered the approved bonds for filing, and th others to be filed when approved.

The semi-annual report of the Pension Fund Association of the Fire Department was presented, showing a cash balance of $299.41, and it was filed.

Following the reading of City Treasurer W. F. Arnold's annual report, which was ordered published in the Daily Press and the Courier-News and 200 copies in pamphlet form were authorized in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel.

In response to a petition presented at a previous meeting by Mrs. W. B. T. Lane, in which she asked to have the name of Lane avenue changed to Laing avenue, to perpetuate the name of a Revolutionary ancestor, Chairman Gloak, of the street committee, introduced an ordinance making such a change. It was acted upon on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

Mr. Daniel asked for information as to where the avenue in question begins and ends, thinking it would be better to define it in the ordinance.

He was informed that the corporation counsel drafted the ordinance and it was legally correct.

Firemen's Fund Trustees.

Mr. Mellick, chairman of the fire and buildings committee, presented the names of the trustees of the Pension Fund Association of the Fire Department, recently elected, and asked the Common Council to confirm the same.

The trustees are: T. O. Doane, ex-officio; E. J. McCann, one year; C. C. Graves, two years; J. F. Davis, secretary; Andrew Jennings, treasurer, three years.

Mr. Daniel said that he was under the impression that when the report of this association was presented a year ago the Common Council did not recognize it, but that it was laid on the table for further consideration. He had no recollection of confirmation of the election of trustees last year.

Mr. Hibbard thought differently. He said that he remembered last year's action of the Common Council, how the pension fund was started by donations of money and the proceeds of a baseball game between the local firemen and a team from Brooklyn.

Mr. Daniel did not press his point of contention at this time, but later had the clerk read the minutes of the particular meeting held last year when this matter was first brought up. While it showed that the Common Council did not confirm the election of trustees, it verified approval.

Mr. Mellick stated that he had received his information from Chief Doane and thought he knew what he was talking about. There was further discussion about the matter, and it was finally decided to refer it back to the fire committee to be reported on later.

Mr. Mellick offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the fire committee to secure bids and purchase 1,000 feet of fire hose.

Mr. Daniel reported back the petition of the Board of Health stating that it would need $5,900 for this year's work, and asking for an advanced appropriation of $1,000 of that sum, and on his motion the latter amount was appropriated.

Appointment of the Mayor Confirmed By the Common Council.

SOME ROUTINE WORK

Firemen's Pension Fund Association Cause of Long Argument—Streets' Name to be Changed.

The offer of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital to care for the city's indigent poor the coming year for $1,000 was accepted at the adjourned meeting of the Common Council Monday, and a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel authorized the city treasurer to pay to the Board of Governors the said sum. The resolution was adopted. This is a continuation of the arrangement made last year.

Mayor James F. Buckle, according to the annual custom, appointed the following special police, and they were confirmed in accordance with a resolution offered by Councilman Frank D. Randolph, chairman of the police committee: Frank Day, William Harding, Charles Harris, Henry Pugh, Stevenson H. Hope, Frank Kelso, Isaac Kennedy, Edward Maynard, William Ewens, Edward Martin, Alexander D. Ayers, Robert McCormick, Nathan Pollard, William Forrestel, Thomas O'Gorman, Samuel J. Later Mr. Daniel offered the approved bonds for filing, and th others to be filed when approved.

The semi-annual report of the Pension Fund Association of the Fire Department was presented, showing a cash balance of $299.41, and it was filed.

Following the reading of City Treasurer W. F. Arnold's annual report, which was ordered published in the Daily Press and the Courier-News and 200 copies in pamphlet form were authorized in accordance with a resolution offered by Mr. Daniel.

In response to a petition presented at a previous meeting by Mrs. W. B. T. Lane, in which she asked to have the name of Lane avenue changed to Laing avenue, to perpetuate the name of a Revolutionary ancestor, Chairman Gloak, of the street committee, introduced an ordinance making such a change. It was acted upon on first and second readings and ordered advertised.

Mr. Daniel asked for information as to where the avenue in question begins and ends, thinking it would be better to define it in the ordinance.

He was informed that the corporation counsel drafted the ordinance and it was legally correct.

Firemen's Fund Trustees.

Mr. Mellick, chairman of the fire and buildings committee, presented the names of the trustees of the Pension Fund Association of the Fire Department, recently elected, and asked the Common Council to confirm the same.

The trustees are: T. O. Doane, ex-officio; E. J. McCann, one year; C. C. Graves, two years; J. F. Davis, secretary; Andrew Jennings, treasurer, three years.

Mr. Daniel said that he was under the impression that when the report of this association was presented a year ago the Common Council did not recognize it, but that it was laid on the table for further consideration. He had no recollection of confirmation of the election of trustees last year.

Mr. Hibbard thought differently. He said that he remembered last year's action of the Common Council, how the pension fund was started by donations of money and the proceeds of a baseball game between the local firemen and a team from Brooklyn.

Mr. Daniel did not press his point of contention at this time, but later had the clerk read the minutes of the particular meeting held last year when this matter was first brought up. While it showed that the Common Council did not confirm the election of trustees, it verified approval.

Mr. Mellick stated that he had received his information from Chief Doane and thought he knew what he was talking about. There was further discussion about the matter, and it was finally decided to refer it back to the fire committee to be reported on later.

Mr. Mellick offered a resolution, which was adopted, authorizing the fire committee to secure bids and lightful in reminiscent talks. She made an hour in the neat little sitting room of the Sherman home a very great pleasure for a Daily Press reporter yesterday afternoon.

HER ANTE-BELLUM DAYS

Mrs. Montgomery comes of a long-lived family, and should she reach the century mark she is well preserved as she is today. One of her six brothers is living in England at the age of ninety-five. Until she moved here two years ago she kept house for herself, and was not quite ready to give it up then of her own accord. Of late she has not left the house, but as recently as last May she took a trip to New Brunswick alone and in safety. She had two children, a girl besides the rebel soldier boy. The latter died a few years after the war, but the daughter lived to marry and raised Mrs. Chandler. Mrs. Sherman is the latter's daughter, and her small son, Clifton Robert Sherman, is the fifth generation of her descendants, that Mrs. Montgomery has lived to see growing up.

"I have seen many things in the course of my life," said Mrs. Montgomery to the visitor from The Press, "and if I had the literary skill to give it shape, surely it is an interesting book I might write.

"Regrets? Not enough to spoil my peace of mind. I have a comfortable and pleasant home, and what more does one of my age want? Nothing."

Perhaps. Probably, one will admit, it is true. But one cannot help thinking of the difference between the reception room at Pass Christian and the sitting room on West Fourth street, and wonder.

Alphabetical Sermons.

A series of short alphabetical sermons to children will be started next Sunday by Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schneck, of Trinity church. Each Sunday, before the regular morning service, Dr. Schenck will speak for three to five minutes, continuing until the alphabet has been gone through.

Mrs. A. C. McCrea, of Central avenue, has been detained at home by illness.

B. A. Hegeman, Jr., of the borough, has returned from an extended business trip.

Mrs. Charles J. Fisk, of West Seventh street, has returned from a visit in New York.

BOROUGH NEEDS SEWERS

Mayor Smalley Suggests Co-operation With Dunellen for Sanitary Improvement.

RARITAN RIVER OUTLET

System Independent from Plainfield —Street Committee Likely To Take Action Soon.

While the borough Council was discussing needed improvements last Friday, Chairman Lee, of the street committee, revived the sanitary sewer question by asking Mayor Smalley his opinion of the matter at the present time. The borough's executive responded by outlining the problem in detail and expressing his views more freely than he has at any time in months.

"The agitation now is greater than it has ever been before," he said, "and it is passing the point where it has been a need to an absolute necessity. If North Plainfield has any wish to grow and secure the establishment of fine houses within its limites it must install an up-to-date sewage system. Dozens of people have been coming to this borough with the idea of making it their home only to turn away when they are informed that we lack this improvement.

"To my mind, the most feasible plan is to build an outlet to the Raritan River, and if the scheme is adopted Dunellen would join with us. I had a talk with its Mayor a few days ago, and he said his place would be only too willing to share the expense in getting to tide water. It seems to me it would be the best and the cheapest way.

"The Plainfield system seems to be working fairly well, but the disposal beds should never have been located where they are. That section of the city is building up rapidly, but the nearness to the plant has a tendency to hold back the growth. The recent improvements installed have lessened the disagreeable odors by fully fifty per cent, yet the amount of liquid matter emptied into Green brook is more than it can take care of and something will have to be done in that direction."

Mr. Lee declared there were certain sections of the borough where the need of sewers had become a serious problem, and he asked if it were possible to have Plainfield take care of them for the time being.

"I think not," said the Mayor, "we want an independent system, and, anyway, Plainfield has all it can do to take care of itself. It is a question that North Plainfield alone must decide, and I for one am in favor of having it come to the surface this year. The antiquated cesspool method is not only unsanitary, but it is very costly to the majority of the residents and they would welcome the change. The postal card canvass conducted last year showed that the sentiment is for sewers, and I say let them come."

The Mayor's observations were followed by others from the councilmen, Messrs. Smith and McGee, the new members, taking an active part in the discussion. It is probable that the street committee will have the question put before the taxpayers within the coming six months.

SOUTH ORANGE CALL FOR LOCAL PASTOR

REV. GEORGE MOONEY LIKELY TO LEAVE MONROE AVENUE M. E. CHURCH.

Rev. George Mooney, now serving the second year of his pastorate at the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, in all likelihood, will leave Plainfield following the Newark conference to be held at Newark. He has received a call to the South Orange M. E. church, where Rev. Dr. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut is now pastor, and it is quite certain that he will accept.

In making such a change the presiding elder must be consulted, and he recommends to the bishop presiding at the conference, which will be held in April, such changes in his district as he thinks best. The call to Mr. Mooney has not come before the church officially.

The church at South Orange is much larger than Mr. Mooney's present charge, and the congregation pays its minister a salary of $1,500. A committee from the South Orange church attended a recent service at the Monroe Avenue church and was unanimous in its desire to call Mr. Mooney.

COLLECTOR'S BOOKS O.K.

Auditors Find Borough Has Balance on Hand at Fiscal Year's Close.

SOME SUGGESTIONS

Resources and Liabilities—Law on Payment of School Taxes Creates Actual Liability.

During the regular session of the Borough Council, last Friday, E. L. Suffern & Son, of New York, who have been auditing the books of Collector Brown, presented their report. In a brief and concise manner it gave a statement of the borough's resources and liabilities at the present time. Embodied in the report was a suggestion that Mr. Brown be given authority to charge off all unpaid taxes prior to 1903 that do not appear to be collectible or are not secured through liens of property. The suggestion will be discussed and acted upon later.

The report was as follows:

To the Honorable, the Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, N. J.

Gentlemen: The books and accounts of the collector and treasurer of the borough have been audited and found correct for the fiscal year ending December 31, 1905.

You will find attached a statement of the resources and liabilities of the borough as they appear on the books. Among the resources are the unpaid taxes dating back to 1887 and I renew my suggestion of last year that the collector be authorized to charge off all unpaid taxes prior to 1903 as do not appear to be collectible or are not secured through liens on property. This ought to be done in order to dispose of amounts which now appear as assets when they are not really such.

The existing law relating to the payment of school taxes results in creating an actual liability of $11,285 in favor of the school fund whether the same is collected or not, and to that extent your liabilities are increased over the amount that would have been due under the previous law.

The balance of cash on hand December 31, 1905, was $2,716.49 and agrees with the amount of the bank balance.

Respectfully yours,
SUFFERN & SON.

McALL AUXILIARY TEA NETTED $100.

Affair at Mrs. F. O. Herring's Home a Success.

It is believed that $100 will be realized from the reception and tea held under the auspices of the local branch of the McAll Auxiliary, held Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. F. O. Herring, of Park avenue. Despite the bad weather there was a very large attendance and generous response from the birthday envelopes.

During the afternoon an excellent address yas made by Rev. George Berry, who is the general secretary for the McAll Auxiliary in the United States. His talk about the work of the auxiliary in France was of particular interest. Rev. Dr. W. C. Neilson, of this city, also made a few remarks, telling of his personal acquaintance with Dr. McAll.

Mrs. Herring's home was attractively decorated with Christmas greens and flowers. In the dining room Mrs. Isaac L. Miller poured tea and Mrs. George S. Ring poured chocolate, while a number of young women assisted in serving. Mrs. Herring was assisted in receiving by officers of the auxiliary including Mrs. Frederick G. Mead, Mrs. Augustus V. Heely and Mrs. John Gray Foster.

Concerns Essex Schools.

Essex County School Superintendent Meredith has issued a pamphlet containing much information concerning the schools of that county. The names are given of the members of the Boards of Education and the teachers in all the municipalities of the county with the exception of Newark, Orange and East Orange. The custodians of school money in all the places are named. It is stated that a library of pedagogical books consisting of 590 volumes has been established in the county for the use of teachers. The county has been divided into eight districts, with a library in each.

COURT WILL COST $2,500

Lawyer Shows Where Mr. Coriell's Opposition is Based on Inaccuracy.

LAWS ON THE SUBJECT

The Fix Salary of Judge and Clerk at $1,200 and $600 Respectively —The Other Items of Expense.

When Former Sheriff B. Frank Coriell, who led the argument in opposition to the establishment of a district court here, at the meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday night, declared that the expense maintaining the tribunal would amount to $5,000 a year, he was arguing from a mistaken idea of the law covering the courts. His calculation was based on the law that applies to courts in cities double the size of Plainfield. He had overlooked the provisions to be found on page 195, pamphlet laws of 1904, wherein the salaries for judges and clerks in cities of from 17,000 to 23,000 inhabitants—in which class Plainfield is—are fixed. A lawyer who is interested in the movement to bring the district court to this city, went over the matter from the standpoint of expense, with a Daily Press reporter yesterday, and they figured that the total cost of the court will amount to about $2,400 a year.

Under the law above noted, the judge receives a salary of $1,200, and the clerk's salary is $600. The services of a stenographer must be paid for by the party applying for them—page 259, pamphlet laws 1905.

The cost of a jury is not borne by the municipality. The jury is either to be paid for by the side demanding it, at the time the demand is made or the judge may grant a jury at the expense of the plaintiff, expense to be included in the costs of the suit—page 505, p. l. 1903.

Among the items of expense must be figured a sergeant at arms or a constable. He will cost about $2 a week. The laws of 1898, pages 558 and 559, say he is to receive a dollar for each day's actual work. District courts in cities of this size have no occasion to sit more than two days a week. The court might not have to sit more than one day.

All these expenditures will cost the city, in the course of a year, $1,904. The "suitable rooms, furniture, and such books, stationery, fuel and supplies as may be necessary," directed under the laws of 1898, page 559, will certainly not cost, the lawyer estimated, more than $500 a year. It is doubtful if the cost would amount to that much.

"Those calculations," said the counsellor, "dispose of the $5,000-a-year argument. Another of Mr. Coriell's arguments was that litigants can now secure all the justice of the district court brand they want by going to Elizabeth. That is all very well as far as it goes in the way of plausibility, but as a matter of fact, taking a case before the district court at Elizabeth—not to mention the cost of transporting witnesses at regulation mileage rates—is a one-sided possibility. The plaintiff decides where the case is to be started, and if the plaintiff or his lawyer has a friendly justice in mind he will undoubtedly ignore the Elizabeth court in favor of the justice. The defendant has no recourse from this sort of thing, except an appeal, which is just the sort of thing the district court is expected to do away with."

FASHION TIPS.

A very handsome evening wrap is shown in rose colored chiffon velvet. The front is laid in two deep plaits from the shoulder, adding to the fullness of the garment at the bottom. A rolling collar, cuffs and reveres of chinchilla fur add to the richness of the garment.

A very pretty dinner gown is shown in canary colored peau de cygne. The skirt is box plaited with clusters of sun plaits inverted between each box plait. A bolero of Bruges lace is worn over the bodice of the material. Narrow folds of canary velvet edge the jacket and finish the trimming of lace on the short elbow sleeves.

The long sweeping lines of the loose coats and pointed capes for evening wear lend dignity and permit of any amount of elaboration. Heavy lace gives a suggestion of richness, and combined with the rich cloths and velvets make beautiful evening wraps."

Waistcoats of white or pale tinted cloth are seen in many of the smartest fur coats. A Persian lamb coat shown in one of the local shops has a waistcoat of pale blue cloth covered with silver embroidery. Quaint silver buttons finish it. A hat to be worn with the coat is of black felt trimmed with tiny blue bows and loose rosettes of silver tissue and a huge shaped blue wing.

UNIVERSAL HABIT.

Lives there a man who has not said,

Does feel," and snores till after eight,
Then wondered how he slept so late.

MAYOR SMALLEY'S VIEWS ON BOROUGH FIRE ALARM

DECLARES HIMSELF IN FAVOR OF A CHANGE FROM THE PRESENT SYSTEM.

A report submitted by Chairman VanArsdale, of the fire committee, to the Borough Council, Friday, that the tower holding the fire bell is in bad condition, led to a general discussion of the system that may lead to a change eventually.

Replying to Mr. VanArsdale's announcement that the tower was badly in need of paint, Mayor Smalley aid it would be almost useless to have the work done as the iron is badly rusted and it would have to be repaired at a great expense.

"I was never in favor of the system," declared the mayor, "and I would like to have some sort of change brought about. When the wind is blowing strong in one direction it is almost impossible to hear the bell in the other. An iron tower is a costly and cumbersome affair and it would please me to have the borough's fire alarm system changed throughout."

A suggestion was made by one of the councilmen that a steam gong be used and that it be placed on the roof of the electric light plant where the city's gong is located. This idea was discarded when it was quickly brought out that confusion would be the inevitable result.

The matter was referred back to the fire committee and Mayor Smalley's suggestion will be taken under consideration.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Atlantic Monthly begins the year 1906 with an uncommonly striking number in both the importance and freshness of interest of its articles. Especially notable is a group of three papers upon questions of international politics. Judge Francis C. Lowell, of the United States Circuit Court, writes upon "American Diplomacy," John W. Foster, ex-Secretary of State, upon "The Chinese Boycott," and Herbert H. D. Peirce, Third Assistant Secretary of State, upon "The Mujik and the New Regime in Russia." Among the variety of other interesting papers, special attention should be called to "Of Our Anxious Morality," by Maurice Maeterlinck, the great Belgian mystic and moralist, a curiously vivid record of "Impressions from Chicago Faces," by Loren H. B. Knox, and a very incisive and plain-spoken paper upon "The University Presidency," by Andrew S. Draper. An article that is sure to attract attention is a paper upon the evil of "Special Legislation," by Samuel P. Orth. Among the more distinctly literary papers are a masterly and entertaining survey of the fiction of the past year by Miss Mary Moss, a clear and entertaining account of Esperanto, the new proposed universal language, by Professor Albert Schinz, and a study of recent American biography by M. A. De Wolfe Howe.

"The Story of Steel," illustrated with some wonderful flash-light photographs taken in the interior of a great steel mill, is the leader in The Technical World Magazine for February. G. P. Blackiston, the author, is a prominent iron and steel expert. Without being technical, the article gives a correct and graphic picture of the processes by which iron is transformed into steel. Few great industries are so important or so little understood. A most fascinating and little-known part of the world is described by Fritz Morris in "The Water-Forest of the Spree." The illustrations are from photographs which show the quaint costumes and strange manner of living of a unique and picturesque people. It will be news to the majority to learn that tea can be successfully grown in the United States and, particuarly, that in North Carolina a private tea plantation has proved, commercially, extremely profitable. With pen and camera, Freeman Tilden tells the story of the pioneer tea farm.

Woman Organist Resigns.

After seventeen years of service, Mrs. Charles S. Day has resigned as organist of Holy Innocents' P. E. church, Dunellen. Mrs. Day is well known in this city, where she has played frequently in the Ladies' orchestra. Miss Irene Day is her successor.

Newark Stores' Hours.

All of the Newark stores have changed their closing hours. Until further notice they will close at 5:30 in the afternoon, except Saturday, at which the time is 10 o'clock, as before. The stores will open at 8:30 o'clock in the morning as heretofore.

Mayor's Message Monday.

The Common Council will meet on Monday night in adjourned session to consider matters left over from last year's body and from the first meeting of the year held New Year's night. The Mayor's message will be read.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement has been made of the engagement of Miss Nora Flynn, of Plainfield avenue, to Daniel Mack, of Central avenue. The wedding will take place in February.

TO LOWER BALL SALARIES

Managers of Semi-professional Teams Agree That Players Must Submit to a Cut.

PLAINFIELD AFFECTED

If Saturday Games Are To Be Continued the Coming Season Expenses Must Be Curtailed.

Unless all signs fail, semi-professional ball players who have been drawing all kinds of fancy salaries during the past year will be obliged to submit to a cut if Saturday afternoon games are to be perpetuated. According to managers, the golden bubble burst last summer, when all of the leading clubs in New Jersey lost money on the season. The managers are a unit in saying that it is absolutely necessary to reduce the salaries of players if Saturday afternoon games are to continue this summer in towns where the people demand strong teams and the best grade of baseball.

The managers are confidant that the players will take a fair view of the situation and will look into the matter from a personal as well as a business point of view, and will readily agree to a reasonable deduction, which the moguls declare is the only salvation for the continuance of first class nines in Jersey towns.

The managers of the leading teams in New Jersey and the metropolitan district are planning to take concerted action in an endeavor to accomplish this purpose. It is possible that the managers will form a compact to regulate the salaries to be paid players for Saturday games and a meeting to fully discuss the problem will likely be held in February.

Among those who declare that it is necessary to curtail expenses in this direction is Manager Konkle, of the Morristown-Chatham Club, which organization, it is reported, dropped a fat sum last summer. Manager Konkle has already been at work trying to interest managers in the situation and he says they all agree with him that salaries for Saturday games should be cut.

Among those Mr. Konkle has consulted in the matter is Manager Phil Daab, of the Hoboken-Plainfield team, who heartily concurs with his idea of getting the various managers together for the purpose of discussing the situation. Other managers equally as prominent in the independent ranks as Mr. Daab have given Mr. Konkle their assurance that they will be on hand at the proposed meeting.

Of the clubs that were forced to "give up the ghost" last season, principally due to high salaries and big guarantees, can be mentioned the Orange A. C., Stroudsburg, Phillipsburg, Roselle, Newton, High Bridge and other associations that have in the past put strong teams in the field. All teams in the Lackawanna League last season reported a shortage.

For the past five seasons Westfield has occupied a prominent position in semi-professional baseball and has supported one of the highest salaried teams in New Jersey. The club suffered a deficit which nearly reached the $1,000 mark last season owing to exorbitant salaries and high guarantees, and now Manager Denman says that the association will cut loose from semi-professional baseball and put an amateur team in the field next season.

As a possible remedy for the situation, one prominent manager has suggested that the players' salary scale for Saturday games be fixed at half the amount they receive for Sunday games. He is confident that this arrangement would prove a solution of the matter, and appears to be a proposition viewed favorably by all managers who expect to pilot teams in suburban towns during the coming season.

One manager who has been actively identified with semi-professional baseball for a number of years in New Jersey says it costs between $100 and $125 to pay the salaries of a team of first class players for Saturday games. The battery, he says, invariably costs from $40 to $50, $20 to $25 for the services of a pitcher, while good catchers have been receiving at the rate of $10 to $15, and sometimes higher. The average pay received by good infielders has been $10, while outfielders have been receiving on the average of $8 per game. nI addition to these salaries the umpire and utility player must be paid, which adds to the cost of the team from $10 to $15.

This same manager argues that these figures should be cut in half for Saturday games, for the reason that the attendance at these games is much smaller than at Sunday contests, owing to numerous other attractions on that day. He added that it was utterly impossible to continue the present rate of salaries in towns where the paid attendance at games falls to average over 600 to 700.

Former Assemblymen to Dine.

Former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer and former Assemblyman Charles L. Moffett have received invitations to attend a banquet to be given in the Hotel Astor, New York, on Saturday evening, January 12. The affair is to be held by members of the Assembly during the terms of 1903 and 1904.

SAW PICKPOCKET WORK

Sharp-eyed Little Girl Brings About Colored Crook's Arrest.

ROBBED A CONDUCTOR

Clever Detective Work by Officer Higgins In Tracking the Thief —A Futile Attempt To Escape.

Through the sharpness of a little girl's sight, a daring young pickpocket who worked on a Netherwood avenue car Thursday, was tracked down by the police and forced to give up his plunder. The case involved a clever bit of detective work on the part of Patrolman Morris Higgins.

Charles Vermeule, the conductor on the car, was the crook's victim. His car started from the Netherwood terminus early in the evening and gathered a heavy load on the way to the other end of the line. Early in the trip a youthful negro boarded the car and took his place on the platform. Vermeule didn't notice the colored youth particularly and the latter had apparently no interest in anything but the panorama of houses and streets. At Washington and Fifth streets he got off.

Two or three blocks farther on as the car neared the depot, Vermeule reached for his watch to see if he was on time. Watch and chain were gone. A bright-eyed little girl who sat in an end seat watched the surprised conductor as he looked down at his watch pocket.

"Are you looking for your watch?" she asked. "Why, that colored man who just got off took it. I saw him lean over and pull it out of your pocket a little while before he got off."

Vermeule remembered then that the colored youth had pressed against him, while apparently making way for an oncoming passenger. He reported the case at police headquarters as soon as the trip ended. In his description of the negro he said the youth wore a coat with brass buttons, and Officer Higgins, who was called from reserve and put on the case, turned his sleuth-sense in the direction of seventeen-year-old Frank Brown, who works as a liveried errand boy for a Watchung avenue tailor. Higgins knew Brown as the principal in a police case during the past year, and went out on his trail.

Brown was not there, and Higgins went to his home on Muhlenberg place, and the cop found no trace of him there. Higgins dropped into a colored pool room on Madison avenue on spec. The speculation panned out. Just as he entered the place, Brown broke away from a group at one of the tables and bolted through a back door. Higgins gave chase and overtook him at the foot of the stairs. Brown was gripped and subdued in short order.

At the station house the watch chain was found in his pocket and he broke down and showed the officers where he had hidden the time-piece in an alley on Madison avenue. Friday morning he was held for the grand jury by Justice Mosher under $200 bail. His previous offense was committed in a cutting affray.

A Year Book and Guide.

You frequently hear mention of dead languages. Well, some facts are even deader, but these are not the kind that The Tribune Almanac deals in. By way of verifying that, just take a cursory glance over the issue of 1906, which is now on sale. It is not an almanac in the dictionary sense of the word, but is really a ready reference and guide book, containing everything that such a compilation ought to have. And the material has been garnered and sifted and tested with the utmost care so as to secure absolute accuracy, or at least get as near to it as honest, painstaking endeavor will bring one. Herein will be found a perfect gold mine of information on topics of interest, not only to every American, but likewise to all who care to know about us, our laws, population, officials, and so forth. (And, by the way, if you have any friends in Europe, just send them a copy and see if they don't appreciate it.) There isn't anything missing in the way of records which the average man will want to know about. It doesn't matter what the subject—pension legislation, sporting statistics, facts about universities, colleges, patriotic societies, population, public officials, election returns, railroads, foreign commerce, immigration, foreign rulers, or New York State and city affairs. In fact, it is really not an exaggeration to say that of a hundred and one things a sane person wants to know, at least ninety-nine will be found in The Tribune Almanac.

Plain Apple Pie.

Line a pie plate with good paste and sprinkle with sugar. Cover with thinly sliced apple and sprinkle with sugar and a little cinnamon or nutmeg. Cover with more sliced apple. Dot the top with bits of butter; pour in a tablespoon of water, dredge with flour and cover with a rich top crust. Bake in a moderate oven to allow the apple to cook. Use nearly half a cup of sugar or according to the sweetness of the apple.

CAN TRY CIVIL ACTIONS

Little-Known Fact Regarding Jurisdiction of the City Judge.

SAME POWERS AS J. P.

Brought Out By Discussion Over District Court—But Law is Not Mandatory and Judge Runyon Wont Do the Business.

In the discussion over the district court at the Board of Trade meeting Thursday, the fact was brought out that the city judge has jurisdiction enough over civil suits to make him very nearly a district judge in effect. Under the charter he may try civil actions up to $200.

His powers, as defined by the charter, are the same as those of a justice of the peace. The section covering the civil side of the city judgship reads as follows:

"The city judge shall have all rights, powers, and jurisdiction that justices of the peace have for the trial of civil actions before them; he shall be elected to serve three years, and his court shall be a court of record, the proceedings in which shall be the same as in courts for the trial of small causes, and subject to the same laws as far as applicable; judgments in said court may be appealed from in all cases in which appeals are allowed in courts for the trial of small causes in the same manner, and the Commoun Council shall provide a suitable and convenient place where the court of the city judge may be held."

That the city judge has the power to try civil actions has not been generally known. It was suggested last night that as the city judge must be a lawyer of standing, actions tried before him would be disposed of according to law and the rules of evidence, which is the principal argument in favor of a district court as opposed to the justices' jurisdiction.

There is one thing, however, that stands in the way of substituting the city judge for the justices in the trial of small causes, and that is the absence of a mandatory provision in the civil actions clause above quoted. Litigants, of course, and not compelled to bring their actions before the judge, and he is not under compulsion to take them if they do.

Judge Runyon is emphatically unwilling to handle civil actions. He is so firmly set in this attitude that he told a Daily Press reporter this morning that he would resign if the trial of civil actions in his court were made mandatory.

"I want no part of the justices' business," he said. "To sit up as a civil judge would mean in my case simply that I was bidding for the business of the justices. I don't want to do that, and in any event, under the fee system, the business would be very unprofitable. It would take up a lot of time that I, or any other lawyer, could put in much more profitably in other directions."

"How would you feel if the section was construed as, or made, mandatory?" he was asked.

"I'd get out of the office before I would handle the business."

To Try City Ownership.

A bill, although general in its provisions and applicable to any municipality in New Jersey, but directly in the interests of Newark, will, it is thought, be introduced in the next Legislature. It provides for the installation of an experimental lighting plant by the city and was drafted by City Counsel Joseph Coult, of Newark, at the suggestion of the Board of Works Commissioners. Some months ago expert electricians were engaged, and reported that the old pumping station at Belleville owned by Newark was available for such a purpose. The bill, as drawn by Mr. Coult, provides that any city having available site or having sufficient power to operate it, may construct a plant for experimental or permanent lighting purposes. The bill gives such cities the authority to issue bonds to cover the cost of such a plant.

Pulliam Opposed to Change.

President H. C. Pulliam, of the National League of Professional Baseball Clubs, does not believe that there will be any material change in the playing rules from those that prevailed during the last championship season. When asked whether the game could not be made more interesting by the elimination of the foul strike rule so as to produce a better exhibition of batting, the man who but recently overcame the most powerful influences ever brought to bear to defeat an official of the league replied that in his opinion the rules were eminently satisfactory as they were. "Why, I think it would be suicidal to change the foul strike rule," said President Pulliam.

To Wash Glasses.

Glasses that have been used for milk should always be rinsed in cold water before being washed. The immediate use of hot water would make them dull and cloudy looking.

Mr. and Mrs. McGee Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Henry McGee, of Willow avenue, entertained a number of friends at a card party Thursday night. The affair was a delightful one.

MOUNT ST. MARY'S COLLEGE IS INCORPORATED

Institution of Sisters of Mercy to be Located Here on Ground Donated By Mr. Kenney.

TO BUILD A SCHOOL

Site is on Watchung Mountains—Superioress M. Gabielle is President—A Bit of Interesting History.

Articles of incorporation were filed at Trenton Wednesday for Mount St. Mary's College, to be erected on the Watchung Mountains back of Plainfield on the ground recently donated the Sisters of Mercy of Trenton Diocese by David T. Kenney, of the borough. The incorporators were named as follows: Superioress M. Gabrielle, president; Sister M. Joseph, vice-president; Sister M. Cecelia, treasurer; Sister M. Raymond, secretary; Sister M. Philomena; directors, Sister M. Philomena, Sister M. Mercedes and Sister M. Immaculatta.

It is understood that plans are now being prepared for the erection of the new college building, which will be the finest of its kind in the State and which will rival Seton Hall as a seat of learning. Surveyors started work on the grounds yesterday, laying out roads and drives, and it is hoped to begin the construction of the building early in the spring. According to those directly interested it will take a full year to complete it. When it is ready for occupancy it is proposed to abandon the present school at Bordentown and the students will thereafter receive their education in full at Mount St. Mary College.

The location of the institution in the borough is of much importance to the two Plainfields, as aside from the honor it will be the means of bringing in many strangers who would otherwise, perhaps, never see either place. The Sisters of Mercy is an organization with a present membership of 150, and the strongest of its kind in New Jersey. It conducts numerous missions at different periods of the year, and these will all be held here in the new building. The directors will be aided in all their plans by Mr. Kenney and also by prominent Catholic clergymen.

In connection with the plans to change the location of the college there is an interesting incident. This college was founded originally in St. Patrick's parish, Jersey City, many years ago, and for several reasons it was thought best to move the institution to a more convenient point.

Archbishop Corrigan strongly urged that it be established in Plainfield, believing that it had natural advantages that would be of great benefit to it. This was thirty years ago, and about the time it was almost decided to place the college here a tract of land at Princeton was given for the purpose, and the college was located there. It remained there five years, when more room was needed, the accommodations being limited. It was then moved to Bordentown, where it has continued ever since. The tract given by Mr. Kenney is about forty acres.

Charles Angleman a Police Judge.

Lawyer Charles H. Angleman, of Rahway, a brother of W. S. Angleman, of this city, who is the Republican caucus nominee for journal clerk of the Lower House of the Assembly, equivalent to an election, has just been appointed police judge at Rahway. Mr. Angleman managed the campaign for his party at his home, and every candidate was elected by a big majority.

Dancing Association's Fair.

The first annual fair of the Vardon Dancing Association will be held at Vardon's academy on West Front street the week beginning January 13. Suhr's Imperial orchestra will furnish the music and prizes will be offered, one, a diamond ring, as a weekly door premium. A different entertainment will be given each night, features of which will be illustrated songs and moving pictures.

Will Build Handsome Residence.

Building Inspector Doane has granted a permit to Charles J. Rice, of West Seventh street, to have a house erected for himself at West Seventh street and Lee place. It will be a handsome structure in every particular and will be fitted with all improvements. The cost will be in the neighborhood of $10,000. C. Powell Karr, of this city, is the architect.

C. S. Seay Engaged.

The engagement of Mrs. Martha A. V. Waters, widow of Lewis F. Waters, of Washington, D. C., to Charles Samuel Seay, of this city, has been announced. Mr. Seay is a former resident of Virginia.

Plan Alumni Dance.

The Alumni Association of St. Mary's Parochial School is arranging for a social and entertainment to be held within a short time.

DEPENDANTS ARE ON THE INCREASE NOW.

In Spite of the General Prosperity Is Report From Board of Guardians Made to the Governor.

In its tenth annual report to the governor, the New Jersey State Board of Children's Guardians remarks that, in spite of the general condition of prosperity in the State, and the fact that there has been nothing to disturb the labor market, the commitments of dependent children have continued to increase. No less than 218 children have been committed during the year, more than half of whom have come from Hudson county. The board feels that to a certain extent the increase may be taken to indicate confidence in the method and conduct of its work, and says it has every reason to believe that the county and municipal authorities are well satisfied with it, and that the friends and relatives of the children feel sure that they will be well cared for.

President Hugh F. Fox, of this city, says it is only by the utmost vigilance on the part of the board and its steady pressure upon the committing officers that the number of dependent children is kept within reasonable bounds. The investigation of the children who are newly committed is, he says, so clearly in the interests of the counties that no local official has ventured yet to question it. In the opinion of Mr. Fox it ought not to be necessary for the State board to make such investigation, and the very thoroughness of its work in this direction, he says, encourages the overseers of the poor to laxity. Of the 218 children committed during the year, 84 were found to have relatives able, and in many cases perfectly willing, to give them support, and the children were accordingly turned over to them.

Miss Frances Day, general agent of the board, makes the suggestion that the board should have jurisdiction over the mothers of illegitimate children who are committed to an almshouse. President Fox suggests that this could be covered by an amendment to the desertion act, which at present deals only with deserting fathers. A bill to cover this point was introduced at the last session of the Legislature, but no action was taken. Mr. Fox says the importance of the measure was not appreciated and urges its adoption when the Legislature is again convened.

The report shows that at the opening of the last fiscal year, November 1, 1904, there were 539 children in the care of the board and nine in almshouses. This, with the 218 children committed during the year, makes 766. At the close of the year, October 31, 1905, there were 602 children under the care of the board and two in almshouses. During the year 162 children were discharged. Of the 602 children at the close of the year, 336 were in boarding homes and 266 in free homes.

MR. HALL CONTINUES AS S. S. SUPERINTENDENT.

Annual Meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist Church Sunday-school.

Election of officers and reports for the past year composed the principal business at the annual meeting of the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday-school, Thursday. Reports of the secretary, treasurer and superintendent of the primary department showed the school to be in a prosperous condition. After the transaction of routine business these officers were elected:

Superintendent, George E. Hall; assistant superintendent, Miss Florence G. Hawkins; superintendent home department, Mrs. David M. Runyon; superintendent primary department, Miss Elmira C. Runyon; secretary, Harry F. Cuming; assistant secretary, Matthew S. Mawhinney; pianist, Miss Mary Clark. A resolution was adopted expressing appreciation of the faithful services of the pianist, Miss Clark.

After the business there was a social hour and refreshments were served.

Joe Field's Farm Sold.

J. V. D. Field, who is very well known here, particularly in the political field, has sold his farm near Bound Brook to a rich New Yorker. His father's farm, which adjoins his, was sold at the same time. It is said that the two properties brought $30,000. They are two of the finest farming properties in this vicinity. Joe Field has been an interesting figure in Democratic politics in Middlesex county for some time. His friends here have not heard what his plans for the future are, but he is not likely to move very far away from this section.

Borough School Matters.

Superintendent Krebs has found it necessary to divide the kindergarten class in the Somerset school. It now numbers sixty-three pupils and will probably reach seventy-five within a few weeks. The division is to be made at once and separate sessions will be held morning and afternoon. Mr. Krebs has also decided to omit the winter promotions, but pupils who are entitled to advancement will be given higher studies in their respective classes and will skip a class at the end of the term.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Selected list of books added to the Library during December. Part 1. Part 2 will appear in next week's issue.

Brudno, E. S.—The little conscript.

"A story of the reign of Nicholas I, Emperor of Russia from 1825 to 1855. A Jewish boy of fifteen, a precocious student of the Talmud, is drafted for the army. Because he will not forswear his religion he is cruelly persecuted. . . The conditions of the Jews in Russia are described with startling realism."

Bryant, S. C.—How to tell stories to children.

"A practical little book which will be of great assistance to those who have the pleasant task of telling stories to the children."

Call, Annie Payson.—Freedom of life.

"Many of the chapters contain comfort, and good advice, and are the result of sure insight: among them are 'Self-consciousness,' 'Human sympathy,' 'Dependence' and 'Independence,' 'Self-control,' 'About Christmas' and 'To mothers.'"

Clark, J. B.—Leavening the nation.

"There has been felt among all church workers a need of a careful history of American home missionary work. Foreign missions have had many historians, but home missions have had none."

Darwin, Leonard. — Municipal trade.

"No other book on the principles underlying municipal ownership or trade can compare with this for exhaustive, judicial presentation of municipal analysis and for fairness to both sides of a hotly controverted question. . . It will be a pleasure then, to all who desire light and truth to read this carefully prepared, exhaustive, judicial presentation of municipal ownership, even for those who do not wholly agree with the findings of the judge."—Engineering news.

Dawson, W. J.—Makers of English fiction.

"The author's powers of analysis are considerable, his sympathies are broad, and he has, what is an extremely valuable gift, the historic sense."—N. Y. Times.

Duncan, R. K.—The new knowledge: new physics and the new chemistry in their relation to the new theory of matter.

"It is not too much to say that no intelligent person can afford to permit this book to go unread. . . For the general student who desires to keep abreast of the discoveries of science, Mr. Duncan's book is quite invaluable. It states, as it stated nowhere else, the significance of the scientific discoveries which the newspaper press have made familiar by name the world over. We have failed to find in the book any important inaccuracy, despite the fact that the field covered is so large and the subject mater so difficult."—Educational Review.

Eggleston, G. C.—Daughter of the south.

"A romance of the last months of the Civil War. . . There are descriptions of lawless speculators and plundering merchants, who made the most out of the United States government and the ruined Southerners."

Fish, C. R.—Civil service and the patronage.

"The most valuable part of the book is the second section, dealing with the genesis of the spoils system. This is a genuine contribution to the history of the subject."—American Historical Review.

"This book is distinctly a history of the patronage, and as such deserves recognition as a valuable contribution in this particular field."—W. W. Pierson in Annals of the American academy.

Foote, A. H.—Africa and the American flag.

"The author was Lieut. of the U. S. Brig. Perry, on the African slave trade, and its observations on the manners and customs of Africa make it of very real value."

George, H. B.—Oberland and its glaciers, illustrated with photographs.

Gissing, George.—Private papers of Henry Ryecroft.

"It is difficult to speak too highly of this delightful book. To those who know anything of the literary life its appeal will be irresistible."—Contemporary review.

"A piece of pure literature and an almost perfect expression of his singular temperament and genius."—Churchman.

Gordon, S. D.—Quiet talks on power.

Gordon, S. D.—Quiet talks on prayer.

Graham, Mrs. M. C.—Wizard's daughter, and other stories.

Contents—The wizard's daughter: Marg'et Ann: At the foot of the trail: Lib.: For value received: The face of the poor:

"The scene of most of the stories is in California. Mrs. Graham is known as the author of 'Stories of the Foothills.'"

Gulick, M. A.—Evolution of the Japanese, social and psychic.

"Mr. Gulick's work is marked by sane, constraint and critical acumen. At the same time, though he does not attempt any vivid descriptive writing, Mr. Gulick leaves with the reader a picture of life in Japan that is clear and convincing."

Gulick, S. L.—White peril in the far east.

"After seventeen years of constant intercourse with men in all stations in Japan he is able to give us, not only a highly interesting interpretation of the fundamental character of Japanese civilization and life, but also a thoroughly convincing statement of the attitude of the Japanese toward the outside world today, especially as revealed in the conduct of the war with Russia. . . While in no way profound, it is rich in novel and suggestive points of view. It contains one of the best statements of the real causes of the war with Russian yet published."—Dial.

Hammond, Capt. Harold.—Pinkey Perkins: just a boy.

"Is a little different from most boys' books. He is never monotonous, however."—N. Y. Times.

Hanson, J. H.—Lost prince.

"A book of curious interest in which the author seeks to prove the identity of Eleazar Williams, priest and missionary, with Louis XVII of France."

Hill, D. J.—History of diplomacy in the international development of Europe. v. 1.

"The results of investigation are handled with a narrative skill that invests the driest facts with the interest of freshness; the tone throughout is scrupulously impartial, and the requirements of perspective are unfailingly observed."—Outlook.

Huntington, Emily.—How to teach kitchen garden; or, object lessons in household work, including songs, plays, exercises and games illustrating household occupations."

Ireland, Allyne.—Far eastern tropics.

"His subject is of unusual interest, and is one to which hitherto far too little attention has been paid. . . Mr. Ireland's style is conspicuous for clarity of reasoning and expression, and his criticism is so eminently characterized by sound common sense, and acute observation that he should carry conviction in the minds of most of his readers. . . The book may be cordially welcomed as an interesting study in outline of what is practically a novel subject."—Geographical journal.

Kendall, G. W.—Narrative of the Texan Santa Fe expedition, and an account of the capture of the Texans.

"The character of the Texas expedition was commercial, with the ulterior intention of bringing the eastern portion of New Mexico under the protection of the then President of Texas, Gen. Lamar." As the text and the quaint engravings both picture a phase of life in the west which no longer exists, beside the interest of the narrative which is considerable, the book has real historical value.

Knox, G. W.—Japanese life in town and country.

"In this readable volume Dr. Knox has succeeded in compressing into small space a great deal of interesting matter about Japan."—Independent.

PRIDEVILLE RESIDENTS MUST PUT UP MAIL BOXES.

Failure To Do So Will Deprive Them of Rural Free Delivery Service.

Postmaster E. H. Bird, in referring to the request of certain residents of Prideville for a mail delivery by regular letter carriers, instead of the present rural free delivery service, says that he put forth every effort to include that part of the borough in the rural free delivery territory and succeeded in his purpose whereby the residents now have one delivery every day.

The postal authorities at Washington issued an order instructing Mr. Bird to inform these people that they would be given until January 16 to establish mail boxes in front of their properties, and in case of failure to do so they could not expect any service.

Mr. Bird further says that according to the rules governing the postal business, residents of Prideville are not entitled to regular carrier service, as there is but one important street in that section and sidewalks are not generally laid. He says that the question is whether a man pays little or much tax does not figure with the postal authorities in extending the service.

COLLEGE MEN TO HOLD A SMOKER ON FEB. 9.

S. St. John McCutchen Chairman of the Committee on Arrangements.

It has been decided to hold the university smoker at the Casino on Friday night, February 9. There are about three hundred college graduates here and the response to the invitations exceeded the expectations of the committee. Nearly all the important universities and colleges in the East are represented.

Good music will be provided for the occasion and it is also planned to have a few speeches as an accompaniment to the dinner and smoker. The affair will be an informal one and will be intended as a means of getting better acquainted.

The committee in charge comprises Samuel St. John McCutchen, Yale, chairman; Owen Fleming, Joseph M. Shellabarger, Princeton; Wylie Brown, Cornell; Clifford W. McGee, Yale; Dr. Charles Davis, Pennsylvania, and Willard Wadsworth, Harvard.

New Building Ready Feb. 1.

The Board of Education has decided to open the new High School building on February 1. The contractors promise to have the structure completed at that time.

DEBATE COURT'S COST

Board of Trade Members Non-Committal as to Proposed Tribunal.

OPPOSED BY CORIELL

Cleaning and Checking of Greenbrook Urged Vigorously in City and Borough—Old Officers Re-elected Unanimously.

Measures for the regulation of Greenbrook's flow, the District Court question and the proposed spite-house ordinance were the subjects discussed at the annual meeting of the Board of Trade Thursday. A bare quorum of twelve members were present and the discussions were not long. A committee was appointed to confer with the councilmanic committee on public affairs with regard to the work, and a committee was delegated to investigate the cost of maintaining a court.

The Greenbrook matter, which is not a new one—it is agitated whenever the stream overflows—was brought up through the presentation of a communication from Perrin Freres, glove manufacturers, Washington avenue, who asked the board to take some action in support of their effort to recover part of the cost of building a stone water wall along the brook back of their factory from the city or the county.

Charles Runyon questioned the propriety of asking the city to pay for any private work of the kind, and President Woolston explained that the overflow at the factory was largely, if not wholly, due to the New street storm sewer. The firm had come to the city through the instrumentality of the Board of Trade and felt that the body should help recover something of the expense to which they had been put through conditions not of their creation.

It was the consensus of opinion that if the New street sewer drove the water onto the firm's property the city should look into the matter, and on motion Mr. Woolston was instructed to confer with the chairman of the public affairs committee regarding it.

"While the Council is on that matter they might look into the whole question of checking the brook," said Mr. Runyon. It is time the two municipalities got together and cleaned that brook out. It seems to me the stream could be deepened and held to a straight line between Tier's dam and Washington avenue without much expense."

"A stone wall could be put up, and it would be a great benefit," said E. M. Laing.

W. H. Riley threw a new suggestion as to the treatment of the brook.

"Why can't the stream be improved with regard to its beauties and not solely from a materialistic standpoint?" he asked. Nicely sodded along the banks, it would be a thing of great beauty and a decided feature of the city. It seems to me the community is throwing away an advantage in not making the brook as beautiful as it might be. The improvement would mean dollars and cents in property values. If the improvement must come from private action, I will very willingly pay my share of a general contribution."

President Woolston introduced the subject of the District Court. He called for a discussion of it without expressing an opinion as to his stand for or against. The court proposition was not received with marked enthusiasm. It was discussed strictly from a dollars and cents standpoint, and the members were very evidently reluctant to go on record as supporting it unless a reasonable approach to self-sustenance could be assured for the tribunal. Ex-Sheriff B. Frank Coriell expressed emphatic disapproval of the project.

"The court is not needed here," he said. "Litigants can secure all the District Court justice they want by going to Elizabeth, and the expense of a court here would be altogether too much. It will cost the city very nearly $5,000 a year to maintain it. There will not only be the salary of the judge, but a court clerk must be paid, a court room must be provided and furnished, and a janitor will have to be hired. And the court would be of no earthly good to the city."

"Everybody wants to know what the thing will cost before considering it," said Mr. Runyon. "That is the vital point."

The general opinion coincided with that of Mr. Runyon, and Mr. Coriell and County Register Frank H. Smith were appointed a committee to learn what the expense of maintaining a court would be.

"Don't ask the court officers in Elizabeth for information," Mr. Smith warned Mr. Coriell. "They are not anxious to see a court here."

Mr. Runyon brought up the building ordinance, by suggesting that the board prod the Council into action on it. It was finally decided to allow the matter to lay over until the new Council had had a chance to get into the swing of its work.

In the general discussion growing out of Mr. Runyon's suggestion, Building Inspector Doane, who was present, made a vigorous statement calculated to disabuse the board of the idea that no work had been done on the ordinance.

"A lot of work has been done on it," said the chief. "The chairman of the building committee and myself worked all the time we could get, day and night, on that ordinance for two months. Perhaps as an official I should say nothing about this, but as a private citizen I will say that the ordinance should be turned over to a practical architect to be drafted, then to the Council and then to the corporation counsel. A so-called spite-house ordinance is a mighty hard thing to draw. Any man who can, under the constitution of these United States, make a law that dictates the style of architecture I am to follow in building a house, must be a mighty good man, indeed."

Chief Doane called particular attention to the fact, however, that a clause covering "spite houses" was incorporated in the ordinance prepared for the Council last fall.

The board re-elected all the old officers by one ballot, and added a second vice-president and a collector to the list. The officers are as follows: President, L. B. Woolston; vice-president, James Pope; second vice-president, B. Frank Coriell; secretary, F. B. Smith; treasurer, E. M. Laing; collector, Guillermo Thorn.

The treasurer reported a balance of $130 on hand. During the year $141 has been expended, mainly on the swimming pool.

Chairman Laing, of the dinner committee, reported that practically all arrangements for the annual banquet were made. Nothing absolutely definite could be stated, he said, but the conclusions for the dinner could be given out within twenty-four hours.

DEATH CAME SUDDENLY FOR MRS. MARY L. FORCE

WIDOW OF A FORMER PARTNER IN THE DAILY PRESS, SUCCUMBS.

Suddenly, and without any warning, Mrs. Mary L. Force, widow of William L. Force, for many years one of the proprietors of The Daily Press, died at her home, 22 Duer street, last Friday. She was awakened by her alarm clock at the usual hour to prepare breakfast for her brother, William Laing, who resided with her. She awakened him as customary. While he was dressing he heard a peculiar noise in her room. Calling his sister by name and getting no response, he entered the room, where he was shocked to see her lying dead at the foot of the bed.

Mr. Laing summoned Mrs. Clarence L. Lyons, a neighbor, and then Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan. The latter found Mrs. Force had passed away. Death was due to heart failure.

Mrs. Force was the daughter of James Laing, brother of John W. Laing, during the early history of Plainfield proprietor of Laing's Hotel for many years. She was born in this city and always lived here. Throughout her life she was always doing good wherever she could. In her quiet manner she assisted the needy, never letting the left hand know what her right hand did, and many persons have been made comfortable through her ministrations.

Surviving Mrs. Force are two sisters, Mrs. Julia E. Force, of this city, and Mrs. N. C. Dunn, of Philadelphia; also two brothers, William and Hugh S. Laing. Notice of funeral will be given later.

HIT AT JESSE LAWSON.

Colored Brethren Make Big Protest of Little Moment.

Because Jesse Lawson, formerly of Plainfield, but now of Washington, D. C., where he holds a position in the Federal pension department, did not first ask the Union County Colored Republican Committee for an indorsement of his candidacy for the position of recorder of deeds in the District of Columbia, the committee, in session at Elizabeth, last night, vigorously denounced the regular Union County Republican Committee as well as Mr. Lawson himself.

Mr. Lawson was for many years a resident of this city, spending his boyhood days here and being graduated from the Plainfield High School. He secured a position in the pension department, where he has efficiently performed his duties. For some time he has been trying to secure the appointment of recorder of deeds, a position which has been held by a negro. He obtained the endorsement of the Union County Republican Committee, also that of United States Senator John Kean, who has talked with President Roosevelt about it. The President has appeared to be favorable to the appointment. In case Mr. Lawson receives the position it will be the first instance of a negro from this State holding an office by Presidential appointment.

To Tell of His Travels.

John M. Whiton, who recently returned from a trip abroad, has consented to give a talk before the Men's Club of the Congregational church, in which he will tell of his travels. The club will meet on Tuesday night, January 16, to listen to his address.

A Wedding Announcement.

Announcement has been made of the marriage of Miss Nellie Bird, daughter of Joseph Bird, of West Second street, and Richard Baldwin, of West Front street. The ceremony was performed at the bride's home on December 20.

Against Paying Them to Certain Salaried Officers.

TO SEEK LEGISLATURE

Action Prompted by Hospital Physician's Charge for Signature—Newark Council's Plans.

Legislation for the regulation of fees charged by physicians in public institutions for signing death certificates where there are insurance moneys involved, or, if possible, the abolishment of all fees for such services, will be sought by the Royal Arcanum this winter.

At a special meeting of Newark City Council such action was decided upon, and a committee was appointed to bring the subject before the other councils of the city and to get the latter to join in interesting Senator-elect Colby with a view to having him bring the matter before the Legislature. Behind it all is a story.

Little less than a month ago Ambrose Ham, a member of Newark City Council, died in the Essex County Hospital for the insane, where he had been an inmate for several years. His family during his time in the asylum were unable to keep up his assessments in the council, and the payments were made by the council to the extent of, between $400 and $500. After Ham's death it became necessary, as in such cases, in order to have the insurance money collected, to have an affidavit made by the physician who attended the deceased attached to the death certificate. Dr. Walter Stiles, a salaried employe at the asylum, was the one most in attendance on Ham, and he was asked by William Tries, Jr., a member of the council, to sign the papers.

Heretofore, according to members of the council, fees had not been charged for such accommodation, but Dr. Stiles told Tries that it would cost $5 for his signature to the papers. Mr. Tries, so he informed his brother members of the council, asked of Dr. Stiles, who received the fee and the physician replied that he did. In order to avoid any trouble and to expedite matters, Mr. Tries paid the physician and was later reimbursed by the council. The council took the matter up and appealed to the Board of Freeholders.

County Supervisor Johnson was told that the council had no fault to find with the payment of the money, but it did object to the payment of fees for such services to salaried hospital attaches. Mr. Johnson was asked if such fees were turned over to the county, and replied that they were not. A letter was then sent to County Collector Munn, whose opinion was sought. Mr. Munn wrote that the board could not control charges for such services by physicians. It was on the receipt of Mr. Munn's communication that the council decided to take the step.

MOODY NOT OUT FOR PARTY OFFICE.

Cranford Man Says He is Deeply Interested in Democratic Party Reform.

The reports which have spread about the county during the past few days to the effect that John Moody has entered a contest for the chairmanship of the County Committee are entirely without foundation. The position Mr. Moody has taken on the question is simply as follows:

He has been asked by a number of prominent Democrats to take the chairmanship this year and has stated in reply that he would not be interested in any way unless the members of the committee were willing to co-operate in a plan for the thorough reorganization of the Democratic party in both county and State. Mr. Moody is actively connected with a movement now well under way for the establishment of a State organization which will stand for certain general and fundamental Democratic principles instead of being absorbed in always occupying the political swill-trough, as has been the case in the recent past.

In explaining his position to a reporter Mr. Moody said: "To bring about such a radical reform will necessarily involve changes of the most drastic kind, and I am only interested in the present county committee in the event that it will, as a body, favor this radical programme of reform.

"You cannot make omelet without cooking eggs, nor can you tell the exact condition of the eggs until you have cracked them. Therefore, I am for cracking eggs at once.

"If the county committee will join me in the cracking all well and good. If, however, they prefer to keep the shells intact in order to cover up the stench, then others will do the cracking.

"I think, however, that the committee will favor reform. As for Mr. Crowell, instead of his being a standpatter, as has been stated, I understand that he is about as anxious to crack the ancient and effete eggs as any of us, and Mr. Tuttle, instead of being an obstructionist, is red hot for reform."

IN SECOND ANNUAL MESSAGE MAYOR FAVORS DEPARTMENTAL HEADS' SUGGESTIONS

Urges Common Council to Establish System For Garbage Disposal; a Fire House in the East End, and a Primary School Building.

MORE POLICEMEN AND FIREMEN ARE NEEDED

"Our people, as a whole, are contented and happy."

"The year 1905 has been a prosperous one for Plainfield."

"The affairs of the city you will find are in excellent condition."

"* * * safeguard the citizens' interests by maintaing as absolutely * * * equitable system of property assessments."

"* * * take up for consideration the question of the establishment of a new fire house for the East End."

"* * * the recent troubles (of the police department) have, I believe, given us all renewed faith in its integrity and high standing."

"I heartily coincide with Chief Kiely in his desire that the police force be increased."

"* * * if the incoming Legislature shall vest in me the power * * * I shall * * * appoint another commission at the earliest practical moment."

"There is * * * pressing need for the establishment of a new primary school in the West End."

"* * * I urge that we make certain the * * * retention of first class instructors * * * by paying them as good salaries as they can obtain elsewhere."

"In all the suggestions of the board (Health) I heartily coincide, especially in the one urging the establishment of a municipal system of garbage disposal."

"* * * that your honorable body exercise every caution against permitting any such misfortune (the erection of spite houses) to occur."

"* * * the policy of its management (hospital) has been broadened."

"* * * an indication that the hospital desires to be considered as an integral part of the municipal activities."

Mayor James F. Buckle Monday presented his second annual report to the Common Council. The document, which was read to the city fathers by City Clerk MacMurray, was as follows:

"Mayor's Office,
"City of Plainfield, N. J.,
"January 8, 1906.

"To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

"Gentlemen—The year 1905 has been a prosperous one for Plainfield. Trade has been active in all its branches, work has been abundant for all seekers, cases of destitution and dependent poverty are at a minimum, and our people as a whole are contented and happy all of which conditions made an auspicious opening of the new year, and to you as the chosen legislators of the city I extend my congratulations that you have been called to service in behalf of so favored a community.

"The affairs of the city you will find are in excellent condition. The report of the city treasurer certifies that the general fund has at present for a balance the sum of $48,713.74, or $6,355.06 more than was left over in 1904. This, taken with the fact that we have in nowise been stinted in the matter of departmental expenses and general improvements, bears testimony to wise management by those who have had in charge the expenditure of city moneys.

Taxes.

"The recent laws regulating and governing the collection of taxes continue to bring good results.

"The moneys arising from current taxes come to the city much more promptly than was formerly the case, and one very beneficial result of this condition is that the city is compelled to borrow much less money in anticipation of taxes than was formerly the case, and a considerable item of interest is saved to us.

"The city's interests being thus safely cared for, it only remains for the Board of Assessors and your honorable body to safeguard the citizens' interests by maintaining an absolutely just and equitable system of property assessments.

Fire Department.

"This department is by right of organization, equipment and efficiency, justly a source of pride to all citizens. Its oft demonstrated ability to cope with difficult conditions is too well known to demand recital here, and I bespeak for it your warm support.

"I would ask that your honorable body take up for consideration the question of the establishment of a new fire house for the east end of the city. The value of property interests in that section, and the great extent of territory left practically without any adequate fire protection constitute a problem, the solution of which cannot long be delayed by your honorable body, and I am sure you will best serve your constituents by considering proper measures to ac*complish this end.*

"While another branch of the city government gains a valuable official, I cannot but regard the likelihood of the withdrawal of First Assistant Chief Murray from active fire duty. By a long and devoted service in the fire department he has left the imprint of his personality deeply recorded in all its varied activities, and I hope the department may have the benefit of his counsel and advice for many years to come.

Police Department.

"This department, gentlemen, has passed through the most eventful year of its history, and the recent troubles have, I believe, given us all renewed faith in its integrity and high standing. It has been demonstrated beyond peradventure that a large responsibility for the efficency of this department rests upon your honorable body, and that the best results can be obtained by the officers and men composing the police force only with your co-operation and moral support. I would therefore urge upon you all, especially the gentlemen who compose the police committee, that you hold said department and its men to a strict accounting for every official act, and at the same time give them assurances that they may rely upon you unreservedly for support in every policy and action designed to further public peace and safety.

"I heartily coincide with Chief Kiely in his desire that the police force be increased to the extent of four additional men at least. The beats, as at present, by necessity, constituted make it impossible for the force to police the city in a satisfactory manner, and in this connection I would ask your honorable body to examine carefully the chief's annual report for 1905, giving especial attention to the diagrams wherein are presented the extent of the various beats. I shall study co-operate with you in any endeavor to better these conditions.

"While I was strongly criticised at the time for appointing a police commission, I felt that such a body, bi*partisan* in character, and removed from the influences and sudden changes of personnel incident to politics, could best govern this department, and that belief was the impelling cause for such appointment.

"Recent events have in nowise changed my belief, and I therefore deem it but fair to say to your honorable body that if the incoming Legislature shall vest in me the power of such appointment, I shall feel it my duty to appoint another commission at the earliest practical moment.

Matters Educational.

"As the new High School nears completion the citizens of Plainfield are better able to judge of the vast benefit which will accrue to the community as a result of its establishment, and our Board of Education deserves the gratitude of every citizen for the conspicuously able manner in which its duties and labors in this matter have been performed. The benefit to the city, I take it, will be at least twofold. Our children will naturally enjoy the greater and more direct part thereof, but at the same time, the fact that Plainfield sands so strongly for broad and liberal education, as evidenced in the erection of so costly and complete a structure, must have a tendency to attract to our confines many citizens for other places with whom advanced educational facilities for children are matters of prime importance, and in this respect also the city will be distinctly the gainer.

"There is, however, despite the additional school facilities soon to be had, pressing need for the establishment of a new primary school in the west end of the city, and I trust that your honorable body will look closely into this matter, and enter heartily into the plan of devising ways and means for its erection, whenever such call may be made upon you by the Board of Education.

"But while we are building schools which reflect the highest credit upon our spirit of liberality and progress, I feel constrained to urge upon the proper authorities that the matter of the salaries of teachers be seriously considered, and that measures be adopted to increase them.

"For years we have been favored with an able and devoted corps of teachers, but my firm belief is that we have not paid them sufficiently well to hold the best of them for any length of time, and if there is one profession which merits a fair return it is that of the teacher. Other cities, with no greater resources than Plainfield, offer more attractive inducements to teachers than we do, and I urge we make certain the employment and retention of first class instructors in the only way possible, viz., by paying them as good salaries as they can obtain elsewhere.

Garbage Disposal.

"The report of the Board of Health for the the year year is a most exhaustive and instructive document, reflecting great credit on the gentlemen who have in charge the health of the city, and I earnestly recommend its perusal by your honorable body. In all the suggestions of the board I heartily coincide, especially in the one urging the establishment of a municipal system of garbage disposal.

"The present method is at once highly unsanitary and at the same time greatly handicaps tnose having in charge the supervision of such work, as disregard of proper rules and regulations can exist for a considerable time without detection, even under the most strict possible surveillance. In my message a year ago I called the attention of the Common Council to this subject, and I hope that your honorable body will see the necessity and wisdom of taking positive measures in this very important matter.

Spite Houses.

"In my former message I also dwelt at some length on the advisability of preventing, if possible, the infliction of unsightly shacks upon choice sections of the city. I am glad to say that no such buildings have been erected within the past year, but, nevertheless, I ask that your honorable body exercise every precaution against permitting any such misfortune to occur, and throw all possible safeguards around the city's interests in these matters, both by rules and ordinances.

Muhlenberg Hospital.

"The citizens of Plainfield have great cause to be thankful that such an institution as Muhlenberg Hospital is located in this city. That every one is proud of it is not to be gainsaid, but the incalculable amount of good accomplished through it benefient workings in all probability, known to comparatively few.

"I would say that the policy of its management has of late been broadened, and the Mayor of the city is now, ex-officio, a member of the Board of Governors, of itself an indication that the hospital desires to be considered an integral part of the municipal activities.

"This more intimate association between the city government and the hospital is necessary, I believe, is a good thing, and must lead to a better and more sympathetic understanding between the two bodies.

"I have been greatly impressed with the extent and completeness of the hospital work and would recommend that the members of your honorable body not only familiarize themselves with this splendid institution, but also accord the management generous assistance and support whenever such action is pos*sible.*

General Improvements.

"Concerning general improvements I have, at this time, no direct recommendations to make. In the several heads of my message I have touched, in untmost faith, and in my recommendations which I may later in the year make to you I shall in all probability be largely guided by them.

"Satisfactory progress is being made in the extension of the sewer system; Park Avenue for a considerable distance will soon be widened, as befits its importance as a thoroughfare, and in divers other ways Plainfield is being kept abreast of the times as an important and attractive city.

In Conclusion.

"I trust, gentlemen of the Council, that you and I may work together in entire harmony during the year upon which we have just entered. I believe, so far as official actions go, that the record of our Board in all, viz., to do our best for the city's interests, and that being the case, there should be no difficulty in laboring unitedly for that end.

"If any experience I may have had in municipal affairs can at any time be of service to you I gladly offer you the benefit, and at the same time I would ask that, as occasion may arise, I be made acquainted with the plans of the various committees, so that there may at no time be any misunderstanding between us.

"With sincere good wishes for a successful and harmonious year, I have the honor to remain,

"Your obedient servant,
"JAMES F BUCKLE,
"Mayor."

"WILLIE" DEEGAN WEDS SCOTCH PLAINS WIDOW

PLAINFIELD'S PITCHER MAY NOW BECOME A VILLAGE BONIFACE.

Mrs. Mary Emma Coombs, of Scotch Plains, and William J. Deegan, of New York, were quietly married Tuesday in St. Joseph's church at 10:30 o'clock, in the presence of a few relatives and friends. Father Schwarze, of Stony Hill, performed the ceremony, assisted by Rev. W. H. Miller, rector of the church.

The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Edward J. Deegan, brother and sister-in-law of the groom, as witnesses. Immediately after the ceremony the bridal party returned to Scotch Plains, where Mr. and Mrs. Deegan expect to reside.

"Willie" Deegan, as he is familiar*ly known, is considered one of the* best semi-professional baseball pitchers in the metropolitan district, and is a great favorite here, where he pitched for the champion Plainfield team last season. He has been an instructor in the deaf and dumb institute at Westchester, N. Y., but it is said that he intends to become the proprietor of the Coombs' old stage Hotel. He does not intend to give up baseball and will undoubtedly be seen on the local diamond next season.

Mrs. Deegan is an accomplished and talented woman, and is reputed to be quite wealthy, she owns considerable property both at Scotch Plains and in New York.

COUNTY COMMITTEE RE-ELECTS F. H. SMITH

CHANGES RULE GOVERNING ENDORSEMENT OF CANDIDATES

County Register Frank H. Smith, of this city, was re-elected chairman at the annual election of the Republican county committee Monday. The election was completely unruffled, and marked by the exchange of honied sentiments.

James C. Calvert, of Elizabeth, was re-elected as vice chairman, Durward Smith, of Elizabeth, treasurer, James White, Elizabeth, sergeant at arms. James A. Warner, of Cranford, was elected secretary, to succeed C. A. Reed, of Rahway.

*Mr. Smith made a speech of ac*ceptance. He thanked the committee for the honor conferred on him, and expressed deep gratitude for the loyal support accorded him during *the past year. The members cordial*ly reaffirmed their oaths of fealty.

An amendment to article six of the constitution, covering the endorsement of candidates for political preferment, was adopted. Under the old rule the committeemen voted on each of the Republican candidates represented in their districts. Under the new order they vote on an equality.

William Newcorn, Mayor Buckle and Register Smith were the only Plainfielders present.

A WEDDING CELEBRATION.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Matthews Observe Their 18th Anniversary.

Mr. and Mrs. Luther Matthews, of West Fourth street and Spooner avenue, celebrated the eighteenth anniversary of their wedding on Saturday night, when a large number of guests was present from Newark, Dover, Bound Brook, Dunellen and this city. The home was appropriately decorated for the occasion and there were many pleasant features. Part of the evening was spent playing "Flinch," Mrs. Harry Gardner, of this city, winning the prize.

Mr. and Mrs. Matthews received a large collection of useful gifts. Among the out of town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Cure, of Dunellen; Mr. and Mrs. McCall, the Misses Minnie and Dora McCall, Mrs. James and Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, of Newark; Miss Lizzie Duckworth, Miss Mamie Duckworth, Mrs. Chamberlain, Miss Flossie Chamberlain and Miss Minnie Chamberlain, of Dover.

Another Docket Walks Off.

The docket of the police department of Harrison, which contained records of cases for the past fourteen years, disappeared mysteriously from a desk in the private office of the police justice Saturday. The chief of police says he placed the book in the desk expecting that the police committee might want it, as he knew it was the intention of the committee to go over the cases of a former justice. The books contains the whole history of the police department, and is the only official record that the town has.

COMMON COUNCIL PAYS KIELY'S LEGAL EXPENSES

President Tolles Casts Deciding Vote on Resolution to Assume Chief's Bill.

MR. MARSH ADVISED IT

Hibbard Reveals Secret of Trial, Declaring that With Tyler and Bullock Sitting Police Head Would Have Been Convicted.

By a vote of six to five, the Common Council, in adjourned session, Monday, voted to pay the bill of Chief of Police Patrick S. Kiely, incurred by his trial on charges pre*ferred by* William S. Tyler and William S. Bullock. This decision was reached after a recess lasting over one hour. Councilmen Daniel, Glana, Hilpbard, Mellick and Tyler voted against paying the bill of $795, while Councilmen Buxton, Gloak, Montgomery, Frank D. Randolph, Charles C. Randolph and Tolles voted in favor of doing so. The total expenses for the trial is $1,103.20, which includes the bill of John P. Dengler, official stenographer, of $277.20, and that of Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh of $76 incurred in issuing subpoenas for witnesses and other incidental expenses.

The three claims were presented early in the evening and referred to the proper committee. Later in the *evening, Chairman Frank D. Ran*dolph, of the police committee, asked for a ten minutes' recess, which lasted over an hour. When the members returned, Mr. Randolph presented a letter sent to Councilman Gloak by Corporation Counsel Marsh, relative to the right of the Common Council to pay Chief Kiely's bill.

Moral Obligation, Says Marsh.

In referring to the question as to whether the city could lawfully pay the bill and reimburse Chief Kiely for the expenses incurred by the trial, Mr. Marsh said that the chief had no claim on the city, but in view of the necessity of properly defending himself, he considered there was a moral obligation on the part of the city. He cited several cases to show that the Common Council has the right to reimburse Chief Kiely to the extent of any reasonable amount.

One case cited was that of an officer in Hudson county who secured the extradition of a prisoner from Illinois, and who was afterward acquitted. The Board of Freeholders fully reimbursed the officer for the expenses incurred by him. Several other cases were cited. While not bearing directly on the one in question, the corporation counsel thought that they were sufficiently analagous to permit the Common Council to pay Chief Kiely's bill.

Mr. Marsh referred to the fact that twenty-two charges were preferred against the chief, and he was adjudged guilty of one and technically guilty of three and that it would be proper for the city to re-imburse him to a reasonable amount.

Mr. Randolph then presented a communication from Chief Kiely in which he briefly recited facts in connection with his trial, declaring that he had not been adjudged guilty of incapacity and that he was obliged to expend money for car fares, telephone and telegraph messages and the subpoena of witnesses to the extent of $95 and in addition pay a counsel fee of $700. He then asked the Common Council to re-imburse him in the sum of $795. The communication was filed. Immediately afterwards Mr. Randolph offered a resolution providing that the two bills, one for $95 and the other for $70, be paid by the city.

Mr. Mellick said that he favored paying Chief Kiely any reasonable amount, but would vote against the resolution because he thought the bill to be excessive.

Hibbard Tells Secrets.

Mr. Hibbard, who was a member of the 1905 Common Council, which tried Chief Kiely, caused a great sensation by his remarks in explaining why he would not vote for the resolution. He said that the chief's bill should not come before this Common Council nor be paid by it. "There was an opportunity," he declared, "to present the bill before last year's body which was better able to judge of its merits. Had the two members, referring to Messrs. Tyler and Bullock, who waived their right to sit at Chief Kiely's trial, taken part in it, the result no doubt would have been different. The chief had a very narrow escape; he is well out of it and should be satisfied. *For these rea*sons I shall vote against the resolution."

Councilman Montgomery said that the chief was not convicted, and inasmuch as the corporation counsel has said that the city is morally obligated he thought it should pay the bill. "If we don't pay it other officials may be similarly charged and tried and be made to bear the expense. I think it will have a tendency in the future to make one more careful in bringing charges against an official. Believing that the city should pay the bill I will vote for the resolution."

Daniel Remains Firm.

This ended the discussion on the resolution and the vote was taken with the result as stated. Later when the bills were presented in the usual way, Chairman Daniel, of the finance committee, who voted against the resolution to pay Chief Kiely's bill, moved that power be given to the two members of the committee who voted for it, to sign the voucher. This action was taken by Mr. Daniel for the reason that there is no law authorizing the city to pay the bill. Councilmen Charles C. Randolph and Herbert Buxton affixed their signatures to the voucher and it was subsequently ordered paid with the rest of the bills.

WIDENING ASSESSMENTS

Damages and Benefits for Improvements on Three Thoroughfares Approved.

FIGURES IN DETAIL

Park Avenue Widening to Cost City But $1,101—City's Share of Stebbins place Opening $105.

It is reported that the work of widening Park avenue and Sycamore street and the opening of Stebbins place will be undertaken as soon as the weather will permit and the settlements with the interested property-owners are effected. The Common Council Monday directed the clerk to furnish Tax Collector J. W. Murray, Jr., with a copy of the assessments and the latter was instructed to send the notices to the owners and authorized to receive the money.

The cost to the city of widening Park avenue will be $1,101. The total cost will be $2,483 and the net benefits will be $1,928. By an agreement the two properties owned by The Plainfield Trust Company are assessed benefits and damages alike, $30 on one and $100 on the other. The same agreement was made with Charles W. McCutchen on his property, the amount being $450, which is a set-off. John G. MacLaughlin is allowed for damages $1,625, while his assessment for benefits is $200, giving him a net sum of $1,325. Boice, Runyon & Co. is allowed $475 as damages and is assessed benefits of $75, allowing a net sum of $400.

The territory covered in this assessment extends from the railroad to a point half way between Front and Second streets; on North avenue, half way to Watchung; East and West Second street, half way to Watchung and Madison avenues.

In the widening of Sycamore street, the property of H. P. Reynolds is taken. He is allowed $200 and assessed $50 in benefits, giving him $150 net. For this improvement the city is assessed $50. The total cost will be $348 and the net cost $298.

The opening of Stebbins place will require the whole width of the street, fifty feet. Of this five feet will be taken from Francis J. Skinner, who is allowed $64.44, assessed $75 as benefits, leaving $10.56 which he will have to pay to the city. The Plainfield Real Estate Company, *owning consid*erable property there, is allowed $535.56 and the assessment for benefits is $75, leaving $460.56 to be paid to the company as damages. The city's share of this work will be $105.50, or a total cost of $748. In each case there are many smaller amounts to be paid or received by the affected property-owners.

WEEKLY RUN BRINGS FEW OUT; GOING TOO HEAVY.

New Pack Expected On the Cattle Steamer Bovic Wednesday.

The Watchung Hunt Club found heavy going at the check run Saturday afternoon. The members expected it, and only a few of them turned out.

The riders met at the kennels and followed the pack in the direction of Westfield. The course turned to the left in the direction of the Country Club and thence to the kennels.

The new pack of hounds, recently purchased from an Irish club, is on the way to this country on the cattle steamer Bovic, and are expected to arrive in New York tomorrow or Wednesday. They will be placed aboard a furniture car sent to the pier by the club, and carried that way to this city. Dr. M. O'B. Knott, the M. F. H., will be at the pier to see the dogs safely in the van. They were shipped from Ireland coupled, without crates. There are twenty-three in the pack.

Next Saturday the club will meet at the Country Club, if the weather and going permit.

Rev. Mr. Finn Preaches Anniversary Sermon at Park Avenue Baptist Church.

A SPECIAL SERMON

"The Divine and Human Element in Church Work" His Theme—The Struggle and Victory.

The second anniversary of the pastorate of Rev. A. E. Finn was appropriately observed at the Park Avenue Baptist church, yesterday, when at the morning service the pastor delivered a sermon of unusual interest on *the subject of "The Divine and Hu*man Element in Church Work," taking as his text Exodus 17:11-12: "And it came to pass, when Moses held up his hand, that Israel prevailed: and when he let down his hand, Amalek prevailed.

"But Moses' hands were heavy; and they took a stone, and put it under him, and he sat thereon; and Aaron and Hur stayed up his hands, the one on the one side, and the other on the other side; and his hands were steady until the going down of the sun."

Mr. Finn said in part:

"An intimate friend of Browning and Tennyson tells us of a most touching incident in their intercourse. One day when they were in an intimate mood for revelation Browning said, 'When I am at my best my strongest desire is to leave the world a little better than I found it.' To which Tennyson replied: 'Well, when I am at my best my desire is for a clearer vision of God.' We believe that these were the aspirations of these two great poets and we cannot help but feel that these desires exist in the hearts and minds of many noble people. We cannot make the world better without 'a clearer vision of God' and we cannot help but make the world better when we have the beatific vision. The transfiguration experience befits us for the work that awaits us at the foot of the mountain.

"As we begin today our third year together in service for God I do not believe I could express the united sentiment of this people better than in these words. In our work together as pastor and people, in our worship, smiles and prayer our only aim has been to get a clearer vision of God and bless the world. In this aim we have felt the impulse and inspiration of the divine element and the devotion, consecration and limitations of the human element. Note then our theme: 'The Divine and Human Element in Church Work.'

"The Israelites begin their march from the Red Sea to Mount Sinai, the Amalekites stop them and prevent their progress. Joshua leads the young men of Israel to the fight, a hot and bloody battle begins in the valley of Rephidim. While the battle is going on Moses, Aaron and Hur go to the top of the hill to plead with God for the success of Israel's arms thus we have the combination of the divine and human element in the overthrow of Israel's enemy.

"It is the combination of the divine and human element that brings success in church work. This co-operation has been apparent in every department of our work during the past year; there has been a mustering of the physical, mental and financial forces of this people; there has been much calling upon God for spiritual strength and the combination of these forces has brought us to the position we hold today.

"The Amelekites were not overcome without a great struggle. The fight against sin is real, the adversary cannot be overcome without an intense conflict. Joshua in the field with his united forces fighting the battles of Israel fitly represents the personal work neede in the church of Jesus Christ. Moses in the Mount indicates the prevailing prayer needed without which success cannot be attained, Aaron and Hur assisting Moses to prevail in prayer clearly teaches us that it is the united prevailing prayer of God's people that brings success in life's fierce conflict. I glory in the personal work and unfailing prevailing prayer of this people because it has brought honor to Jesus Christ whose we are and whom we serve.

"The story clearly indicates that the victory could not have been gained without the divine element. Work without prayer becomes perplexing when we lose sight of the divine element. In what we undertake for God this year let us count our allies. —Think! God Almighty is your ally, and Jesus the Savious is your ally, and the Holy Spirit is your ally, and God's providences are your allies, and God's promises are your allies, and the memories of past deliverances are your allies. They that be with us are more than they that be with them."

Parish Meeting.

The congregation of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church will meet on Monday night, January 15, at 8 o'clock, for the purpose of determining the number of trustees of the church and electing such trustees. It will also choose a treasurer of the church.

VOL. XXXVIII. PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, JANUARY 12, 1905. NO. 2.

"Support the Constitution, Which is the Comet the Union, as Well in Its Limitations as in Its Authorities."—Madison.

LEGISLATURE AT WORK

Joseph Cross, of Union Co., Presides Over Senate.

THE COMMITTEES

Features of Governor's Message Includes Proposition for Constitutional Convention.

With the strictest adherence to Republican caucus plans, the one hundred and twenty-ninth session of the Legislature convened at the State House, Trenton, yesterday afternoon. The opening was enthusiastic and was marked by splendid floral displays and unusually large audiences in the galleries and lobbies.

The Senate organized by electing Joseph Cross, of Union, president, and Howard L. Tyler, of Cumberland, secretary. John Boyd Avis, of Gloucester, was chosen speaker of the House and Captain James Parker, of Passaic, clerk. The regular Senate committees were appointed and Senator Childs was placed on the following: Appropriations, boroughs and townships, New Jersey Reformatory and State Village for Epileptics. In the House, Frederick W. Bender, of Union, was made assistant bill clerk and members from Union and Somerset were appointed on the following committees: Tillman, bill revision, towns and townships, New Jersey Reformatory; Coyne, commerce and navigation, corporations, sinking fund, State prison; Hoagland, education, printed bills.

The Senate was called to order by Senator Bradley, of Camden, and Senator Cross nominated for temporary chairman, Senator Childs, of Somerset, who was elected. Mr. Bradley named Senator Cross for president and Senator Ferrell, of Gloucester, named Senator Childs but prefaced the nomination with brief complimentary references to the Republican nominee. Mr. Cross was elected by 12 to 7. S. Merchant Meeker, of Union, was elected Journal clerk.

Governor Murphy's message was received. It defends the State institutions and their unprecedented cost to the State, urges a constitutional convention, holds that the surplus in the hands of the treasurer is too large, and recommends the increase of the annual appropriation to the State school fund from 35 per cent. to 50 per cent. of the total school tax.

On the question of the taxation of railroads the message says: "The subject of the proper taxation of railroad property should receive the earnest attention of the Legislature. * * In my opinion nothing should be done which will decrease the revenue now received by the State from this source, or divert any of that revenue to the local municipalities." A recommendation is made that elections close at sunset and that the voting machines be adopted generally.

Four pages of the message are devoted to the consideration of automobiles, with recommendations that no machines geared to run more than 20 miles an hour be licensed, and that the tax be increased from a permanent fee of $1 to $5 a year and the proceeds be expended on improvement of the roads.

PASTOR TO BE "AT HOME;" INNOVATION AT ONE CHURCH

REV. CHARLES E. HERRING'S IDEA TO TO BE PUT IN FORCE.

For the purpose of giving the members of the church and congregation a better opportunity to meet the pastor, and also provide a regular time for calls, Rev. Charles E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, is planning to set apart stated evenings in the month when he will be "at home" in the church

Plans are now being formed to make the rooms in the chapel more attractive by providing appropriate decorations for the walls. On Friday night the Christian Endeavor Society will hold a passe-partout social, the object being to make these pictures and place them on walls to be covered with burlap. The pictures will include scenes from the Holy Land. Rev. Mr. Herring also proposes to introduce another feature at the "at homes," that of serving some light refreshments, and he will ask various members of the church to assist him at these affairs.

Eagles Install.

Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., installed these officers last night, District Deputy Rudolph Kampf being the installing officer: Worthy president, Daniel V. Force; worthy vice president, Samuel C. Terry; worthy secretary, Horace G. Adams; worthy treasurer, Jacob Blumm, Jr.; worthy conductor, Frank McCabe; worthy inside guardian, Thomas Kane; worthy outside guardian, J. Henry Adams; worthy chaplain, Patrick Guinee; worthy trustees, L. D. W. McIntosh, J. Frank Matthews, Lawrence Powers; worthy physician, Dr. A. H. Dundon. One candidate was elected and five propositions were received. After the installation there was a social time and a collation was served by Thomas Timbs.

"Korea and the Late War."

The recent announcement of the fall of Port Arthur is still the wonder of the world and everyone is watching the last scenes in this great struggle between Japan and Russia. On Tuesday night, January 17, Rev. J. Dehart Bruen will give a stereopticon lecture on "Korea and the Late War." He will show many pictures which have been copied extensively from magazines and newspapers. Mr. Bruen is especially well informed on the subject and his lecture cannot fail to interest all who have been following the history of the war.

A Contract Case.

A verdict in favor of the plaintiff to the amount of $38 was given by the jury in the contract case of John Leany against Franklin Codington, at Justice Hand's court yesterday afternoon. John P. Cowan represented the plaintiff and Codington by his brother, Horace Codington, of Somerville. This was the jury of six men which tried the case: J. J. Kenney, foreman; Frank Jones, Mr. Tems, John Case, William Ricketts and Felix Habt.

MEN'S CLUBS ENTERTAINED

Congregationalists the Hosts at Union of Church Societies.

A CONGENIAL AFFAIR

Good Fellowship a Feature of Last Night's Social—The Clubs Represented and Their Presidents.

Good fellowship characterized the union Men's Club meeting at the Congregational church last night, when the members of the men's organizations of all the local churches were given a welcome, generous and hearty, in every sense of the word. Nearly two hundred men were present at the occasion, which was a positive proof of the interest which the organization of men's societies has taken among the male portion of Plainfield's church membership.

Representatives of all the churches were present, both those whose clubs have been for some time in existence, and those who have lately made the initial steps of organization. In welcoming the various club men to the Congregational church last night, W. B. Wadsworth, the president of the club, spoke of the growing interest in men's clubs throughout the city, and later Rev. C. L. Goodrich outlined briefly the history of the home club.

A portion of the programme which won much deserving applause was several selections by a quartette of the Oshkosh Glee Club. The singers were Willard Wadsworth, C. L. Calkins, E. Maxwell Honeyman and William Barlow. Following the quartette selections, Walter David, of New York, the entertainer for the evening, made a decided hit by his impersonations. Mr. David presented a variety of impersonations, and in all he displayed a perfect ease, a delightful sense of humor or pathos, which absolutely captivated his hearers. He is one of the cleverest entertainers who has ever appeared before a local audience, and the entertainment committee was fortunate in procuring such an artist for the occasion.

At the conclusion of the entertainment, the gentlemen were invited to participate in a social hour and to partake of plentiful refreshments which were provided by a committee composed of Charles Steiner, G. F. Fisher and Joseph D. Moore. The reception committee was Frank A. Weeks, William B. Wadsworth, Charles Steiner and A. Powlison. There are the clubs which represent Plainfield churches, and their presidents: Men's Brotherhood, of the First M. E. church, president, Nelson A. Miller; Men's Assembly, of Grace M. E. church, president, William Warren; Young Men's Club, of Hope chapel, president, William N. Runyon; Young Men's Brotherhood, of Warren chapel, president, Charles Wheeler; Man's Club, of First Presbyterian church, president, Frank Dunning; Men's Association, of Trinity Reformed church, president, H. W. Marshall; Men's Club, of Grace P. E. church, president, Hugh F. Fox; Men's Club, of First Baptist church, president, Dr. Norman Probasco; Men's Club, of Congregational church, president, William B. Wadsworth.

COMPANY K MEDALS.

Members Receive Rewards for Faithful Work.

For perfect attendance and discipline at drill, Privates Winter, Forst and Kofoed, of Company K, were awarded 100 per cent. medals at the regular weekly drill Monday night. All three enlisted in 1902.

The tickets for Company K's annual fair have been issued, and are attractive in appearance and well worth the price charged for them. The committees on the fair report that all plans are progressing rapidly and it is expected that the members of the company will outdo themselves this year.

Mill Fire Settles Fire Loss.

P. S. Dayton & Co., the occupants of the French mill property on Somerset street, recently badly damaged by fire, have effected a settlement with the insurance companies for their loss on stock. They received in cash $1,600 and all the damaged hay, oats, grain and feed, which they have since been selling and which will net a total settlement of nearly $3,000. The firm originally claimed $3,500.

Progressive Games at Y. M. C. A.

Charles Line, a member of the Y. M. C. A. boys' department, won first place in the progressive game tournament held by that organization, winning first honors in each of the several events. Sixteen took part in the games. The second places were accordby Raymond Hodge, Leslie Talmadge and George Merrison.

BALL MANAGERS PLANS

To Hold a Conference in This City on Saturday Night.

CONSIDER LEAGUE

Rahway, Cranford, Westfield and Plainfield in Combination Maybe.

Charles S. Woolston, manager for the Plainfield Baseball Club, is gradually getting his team together and completing other details for the opening of the baseball season in the spring. No doubt games will be scheduled with Rahway and Cranford, but they will be played here. As for Westfield it is likely that not more than five games will be arranged with that team.

The question of forming a four-team league will be decided at a meeting of baseball managers to be held here Saturday night. It is expected that Manager Foster, of Rahway; Manager Lentz, of the Aeolians; Manager Denman, of Westfield, and Manager Wootston, of the Plainfield club, will hold a conference and decide the matter. Charles A. Reed has been indirectly called to be president of the league if it is formed, but he has neither assented or refused, preferring to wait until the request takes a more definite shape.

The team will play an occasional Wednesday game here and away from home, always playing here on Saturday. It is possible that the team may play Sunday games away from home, although this has not been definitely decided. The teams that the management hopes to bring here during the season include Trenton Y. M. C. A., Chatham, Madison, Dover and some of the strongest teams in the Metropolitan district. It is also planned to secure some of the college teams for Wednesday afternoons.

MISS LEE'S LUNCHEON.

The Tables Represent Various Countries.

One of the unique social events of the season was the luncheon given yesterday by Miss Genevieve Lee at Tyrell Inn. There were four tables, each representing a nationality. One table decorated in red, representated China, another in pink represented France, a third in violet, represented Italy and the fourth in yellow, represented Holland. At each table the favors were representative of the country named, there being miniature gondoliers and windmills, while the ice cream was in the form of various things to be found in the four countries represented. After the luncheon the afternoon was spent in playing cards.

The guests were Miss McDermott, of Jersey City; Miss Elsie Harman, Miss Helen Harman, Miss Ursula Rowland, Miss Grace Hartman, Miss May Rodman, Mrs. James R. Blake, Miss Marjorie Fleming, Miss Dorothy Fleming, Mrs. H. E. Butler, Miss Virginia Hageman, Miss Margaret Goddard, Miss Margaret Mead, Miss Edith Fisk, Miss Winifred Haven, Miss Wilhelmina Patton, Mrs. Charles S. Lee, Miss Lee and Miss Helen Coles Lee, of this city.

MRS. KREWSON DEAD.

Councilman's Wife Succumbs After Two Years' Illness.

Following an illness of two years from a malignant trouble, Mrs. Ella H. Krewson, wife of Borough Councilman Frank D. Krewson, died at her home on Somerset street early this morning. She was the daughter of Captain and Mrs. Charles Shepherd and had been a life long resident in this vicinity. Surviving her are the husband and three children, the Misses Ursula and Dorothy Krewson and Malcolm Krewson. There are also two sisters, Mrs. W. B. Vail and Miss Clara Shepherd, of this city, and two brothers, Isaac Shepherd, of Plainfield, and Winfield Shepherd, of Jersey City.

Funeral services over the body will be held from her late home Friday afternoon at 2:30.

Mrs. Myers' Luncheon.

Mrs. Kirtland Myers, of East Seventh street, gave a luncheon today. Covers were laid for eight—Mrs. Francis deLacey Hyde, Mrs. Benjamin Arrowsmith Hageman, Mrs. Chapman Fisk, Mrs. J. Kirtland Myers, Miss Virginia Hageman, Miss Edith Fisk, Miss Georgianna H. Smith and Miss Marjorie Fleming.

REED ANSWERS ENEMIES

Incidently Charges That Courier-News Misquoted Him.

PROPOUNDS QUESTIONS

He Calls Upon Messrs. Honeyman, Place, Cooley and Others to Answer Some Queries.

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed makes reply in a communication addressed to The Daily Press to a letter of A. V. D. Honeyman, Charles Place, Justus H. Cooley, W. W. Howland, J. Harvey Buchanan and Edwin A. Overton, in which they denied being in league with the North Plainfield saloonkeepers in any way at the time of the annexation campaign. That there was a tacit understanding between "the powers in Somerville and the leaders of the anti-annexation party in North Plainfield" was reported by the Courier-News as being charged by Mr. Reed at the last meeting of the borough Council. In repudiating the Courier-News story, the Corporation Counsel says:

Editor, The Daily Press:

Referring to the letter of Messrs. Honeyman, Place, Cooley & Co., published in the Courier-News of Monday, I beg to say that my remark was reported with substantial accuracy in your issue of that date. I did not even mention "the powers at Somerville," and hence it was very easy to denounce as false a statement which was never made.

No assertion, however, on the part of the gentlemen in question would alter the belief which I did express, nor in my opinion, would it effect the belief of any impartial man familiar with all the circumstances. It would not surprise me if one or more of these gentlemen were to declare that the saloon men did not aid materially in the fight against annexation and did not make its defeat possible. But in view of the circumstances would not a contrary belief be tenable?

It is even conceivable that some of them may even yet claim that they have been actively engaged in backing up the Smalley administration in its efforts for higher license, and have always been in full sympathy with that movement. It is perhaps a trifle late to make such a declaration now that the Grand Jury has spoken, but as least it could be refreshing and would doubtless surprise the saloon men. As to some of the gentlemen who signed the letter in question it would never have occurred to me to consider them "leaders" in any sense of the word. But since they have all asserted themselves to be such, and familiar with "the views and doings of the party," they will doubtless be willing to answer the following questions:

Were not the liquor dealers of the borough, to a man, opposed to annexation, and opposed because they feared that it would mean consolidation and higher license and shorter hours?

Did not some of them contribute money to the "anti" campaign fund, and all of them use their influence to defeat annexation?

Did they not consult with the gentlemen in question or one or more of them, directly or indirectly, as to the plan and ways and means of that campaign, and work shoulder to shoulder with them in a cause common to both of them?

Were not the gentlemen in question and the liquor dealers in full accord in that campaign in the common object of defeating annexation, and did they not aid and assist each other toward that same end?

During the campaign a year ago when the "Citizens' Party" was seeking control of the borough, were not these same liquor dealers again in full sympathy and accord with these same "leaders?"

Do these gentlemen now mean to give the impression that if the liquor dealers had believed during either of these campaigns that the "anti's" or the "Citizens'" favored, and would fight for higher license and shorter hours, they, the liquor dealers, would have joined hands or forces with such "leaders" in either campaign?

Has the voice of any one of said gentlemen ever been raised in the borough in public in favor of higher license or shorter hours, and if so when and where?

Charles A. Reed.

Locals Play Carteret.

The basketball team of Leal's School will journey to Orange this afternoon where they will contend for basketball honors with the five representing Carteret Academy. This will be the probable lineup: Chapman, Jewett, Underhill or Glenney, forwards; Miller, center; Manning and Lyman, guards.

MYSTERIOUS BLAZE CAUSES INVESTIGATION

FIRE AT WHITE BUILDING IMPERILS FOUR FAMILIES.

Evidently started by someone dropping a lighted match or cigar in the carpeting, flames spread up the first stairway of the White building at 118 West Front street late last night and imperilled the lives of four families occupying the various floors. The blaze had assumed dangerous proportions when it was discovered by Mrs. Anderson, one of the tenants, who summoned assistance and with several others sought to put it out. In the excitement no one thought to call the fire department but the danger was removed after several minutes of hard fighting. The carpeting on the stairs was ruined, the steps were badly burned and the walls were scorched in many places.

The matter was reported at police headquarters and an investigation is being conducted. There have been rumors of incendiarism but nothing has been learned to bear out any such statement.

GOLD COIN PRESENTED TO R. A. COLLECTOR

AFTER TWENTY-ONE YEARS SERVICE REV. DR. PARKS GETS REMEMBRANCE.

To show their appreciation of the services rendered by him during the past twenty-one years that he has been collector of the organization, the members of Pine Wood Council, Royal Arcanum, last evening, presented Rev. Dr. James H. Parks with ninety dollars in gold wrapped in a crisp one dollar bill. Failing health prevented his accepting the office for the twenty-second year and with his retirement the council decided to signalize the event with more than passing consideration. The presentation was made at Dr. Parks' home, illness preventing his being at the council meeting. Secretary William E. Collins making the address. He referred to the recipient's faithful work and conveyed to him the sincere regret felt by everyone of the members at his inability to continue. Though taken completely by surprise, Dr. Parks found words to thank the donors, declaring that he had felt highly repaid by the members expressed approval of what he had done.

Following the presentation the council adjourned to its rooms where officers for the year were installed by Supervising District Deputy Grand Regent Samuel R. Drummond, of Bound Brook, as follows: Past regent, J. Edward Ruth; vice regent, James B. Guttridge, orator, W. H. Westphal; collector, William B. Noble; secretary, Edward L. Hand; chaplain, Frederick Bour; guide, John F. Green; warden, Matthew Stewart; sentry, William H. Stanbury. Owing to the illness in the family, regent elect, Samuel Hollingsworth, was unable to be present and will be installed at the next meeting. Owing to business cares, secretary elect, William E. Collins, was obliged to resign, Edward Hand being elected to fill the vacancy. Pinewood Council is known as "the little giant" in the Arcanum world and at last night's meeting it was shown that its growth has been almost unprecedented.

To Choose Representative Team.

The local Y. M. C. A. athletic team which will represent Plainfield in the inter association meet to be held at Newark on March 1, will be chosen on February 23. This will be the last opportunity for athletes of the local department to try for the team and already the members of the senior gymnasium club are practicing for the event. The committee in charge of the athletic meet is composed of A. M. Chesley, of Orange; W. H. Elsworth, of Montclair, and L. M. Smith, of Newark.

Joseph L. Myers Engaged.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Joseph L. Myers, son of the late Joseph M. Myers, who for many years was cashier of the City National Bank, and Miss Henriette Hawley, of New York. Until a year ago Mr. Myers resided here, but after the death of his mother he moved to New York.

Elks Incorporated.

Incorporation papers were filed yesterday in the office of the Secretary of State at Trenton by Plainfield Lodge, No. 885, B. P. O. E. The trustees named were: Herbert W. Hoover, James F. Buckie, Charles A. Reed.

G. A. R. INSTALLATION

Post, No. 73, and Women's Relief Corps Hold Ceremony.

ENTERTAIN VISITORS

Delegations From Somerville, Rahway, Elizabeth, Jersey City and Trenton Witness Installation.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the auxiliary, the Woman's Relief Corps, held a joint installation of officers-elect, last night, in G. A. R. headquarters on East Front street. There were present delegations from Wadsworth Post, Somerville; Ulric Dahlgren and Kilpatrick Posts, Elizabeth; Barry Post, Rahway, and veterans from Jersey City and Trenton, including Department Commander James Atwood, of Trenton, and staff, and Department President Mrs. Decker, of Jersey City, the installing officers.

The Post officers were installed first by Department Commander James Atwood: Commander, Isaac L. McVey; senior vice commander, Andrew Cox; junior vice commander, William Hand; quartermaster, John H. Naylor; adjutant, B. Craig Smith; chaplain, M. C. Dobbins; sergeant, Ismal Compton; officer of the day, W. C. Smith; officer of the guard, W. H. Day; sergeant major, Francis M. Whiteley; quartermaster sergeant, Edward Townley, drum major, Joseph M. Bogert.

Department President Mrs. Decker then installed these officers for the Woman's Relief Corps:

President, Mrs. Hadie Baglin; senior vice president, Mrs. Charles Westphal; junior vice president, Mrs. Sarah Mamos; chaplain, Mrs. Catherine Cobberley; treasurer, Mrs. Caspar Bolsterle; secretary, Mrs. William C. Smith; conductor, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins; patriotic instructor, Mrs. Anna Wenzel; press, Mrs. Charles Westphal; guide, Mrs. John H. Naylor; color bearers, Miss May E. Howlett, Mrs. Edward Devine, Mrs. Andrew Cox, Mrs. Mary Bentley.

After the installation there was an informal programme, including short addresses by the visiting comrades, Commander Atwood, President Mrs. Decker. There were also recitations by Miss Mamie Smith, John Manley, Commander Atwood, and vocal solos by Mrs. John Manley, Eugene Alexander and Mrs. Waring, of Elizabeth. A feature was the singing of "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground," by Miss Rose Herbert. Following the informal programme, there was a social time and refreshments were served by a committee from the corps of which Mrs. Charles Westphal was chairman.

Boys' Entertainments.

The third in a series of entertainments given for the boy's department of the Y. M. C. A. will take place Friday night at the association auditorium. The entertainer will be Lucius Perry Hills, a prominent humorist, impersonator and reader. Holtair, an expert magician, was the talent engaged for Friday night, but as he was unable to fill the appointment, he will be transferred to one of the other entertainments. There will also be musical talent from this city. It has been announced what will be the feature of this part of the programme.

Woman's Lodge Officers.

Friendship Lodge, No. 4, Daughters of the Rebekah, I. O. O. F., held its annual installation of officers last night at the headquarters in the Cowperthwaite building. The affair was in charge of District Deputy Mrs. J. F. Kettenring, assisted by the installation team. These were the officers installed: Past grand, Miss Mears; noble grand, Mrs. Myer; vice grand, Mrs. Ford; recording secretary, Mrs. J. F. Kettenring; financial secretary, Mrs. Terry; treasurer, Mrs. Shepherd.

Work of the Grand Jury.

From all appearances the Union County Grand Jury will conclude its labors the last of next week. The session is not considered a particularly heavy one and it is predicted that the number of indictments will not be quite as large as usual. However, there are sure to be several interesting trials following the report of the Grand Jury, one especially, if an indictment is found in the case of Harold M. Wilcox, who shot John Darling at Westfield on Hallowe'en night.

Druggists in Meeting.

The Union County Druggists' Association met yesterday in the Y. M. C. A. for the transaction of regular routine business. The meeting was a quarterly one and was largely attended both by druggists from this city and from other parts of the county.

MONKEY HAS A LIVELY DAY

After Causing Fire Alarm in New York He Is Arrested and Then Pays His Own Fine.

A tow-headed, distorted-limbed, garrulous monkey owned by Guiseppi Degitto, not only caused a section of the New York fire department to rush pell mell through the streets, scared a French maid and a Swedish ditto into fits and roused the volcanic ire of an Irish policeman, but then had himself and his owner arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct.

To cap the climax of Jocko's glory, he produced the money required to make up the two dollars fine imposed on his owner in the West side police court.

It was this way. Jocko, pursuing the fleesome penny, scaled the walls of a house at Riverside drive and One Hundred and Eighth street, upsetting rubber plants and other alleged floral delicacies, one of which descended on the dome of thought of Thomas K. Lynch, a policeman. Mr. Lynch was annoyed. He said so in picturesque language, and after failing to capture the monkey, which scared occupants of the house, the policeman summoned a hook and ladder, which got the festive simian.

The magistrate fined the music manufacturer two dollars. Giuseppi excavated through his pockets and got $1.99. In despair he said something to the monkey, who solemnly produced one cent from his little pocket. Then the two walked out.

SWALLOWED HER HAIR.

A Connecticut Damsel Has an Exciting Time with a Gander.

Nineteen-year-old Rachel Hastings, of South Prospect, came to Waterbury, Conn., with her father and a load of berries and a fine gander imprisoned in a slatted crate tied on to the back of their light wagon.

On the way to town they encountered some boys engaged in killing a blacksnake six feet two inches long. The snake died hard and Farmer Hastings, Miss Rachel and Dobbin all got excited.

Possibly the gander too shared in the excitement, for after it was all over and Farmer Hastings had descended from the wagon at Saxe's greenhouse and Miss Rachel was leaning back in the wagon seat, recovering from the experience, the gander seems to have mistaken her long tress of hair for the defunct snake. Suddenly he thrust his long neck from the crate and, seizing the braid, began to swallow Miss Rachel's back hair with a gurgle of satisfaction.

GANDER BRIED RACHEL'S BRAID.

The girl screamed in fright; Dobbin leaped in terror, turned and ran; the wagon upset, and the young woman was thrown out down an embankment. No serious damage was done. Miss Rachel's braid is still intact and the gander is reported to be doing as well as could be expected.

Doggie's Sympathy Rejected.

A little girl in Iola, Kan., was ill of the measles. Her dog was in great distress because he could not go to her, and one day he was admitted to the bedchamber. Putting his forefeet on the bed, he madly wagged his tail and beamed gladness from every feature. Looking at him a moment, the little girl said, angrily: "Oh, you needn't grin; your turn will come next."

Woman Gravedigger Dead.

England's only female gravedigger, Mrs. Elizabeth Goose, died recently at Lewes, at the age of 76. On the death of her husband, in 1879, she was appointed to fill his place as gravedigger in the Lewes cemetery, and since then performed the duties.

FASHIONS IN FURS.

Feather Boas and Muffs Are Smart For Evening Wear.

It is an easy matter for the rich woman to choose a becoming set of furs, but she whose income is limited finds it a harder task. The most expensive furs are sable, sealskin, broadtail and chinchilla.

The girl who wants a pretty inexpensive fur tie can get one of gray squirrel with ends of chenille or tails of the same fur. A large muff of the squirrel should accompany it.

Furs are combined this season very successfully, sealskin with chinchilla being a favorite combination; also Persian lamb with chinchilla. Sable stands alone in its royal estate.

NEW ERMINE TIE.

Stoles are often formed of three different skins, and the muff must coincide with the neck piece.

The round muff, which has been rather out of it for several winters, is gradually creeping back to favor. The pillow, bolster and bag muffs are all very popular. They are soft and more easily handled than the more uncompromising one of round shape.

Fur tails are not seen on the smart new furs of the season, but the tiny claws are used with fine effect.

Very new and attractive is the ermine tie illustrated. It fits closely around the throat and hangs to the waist in four graduated ends trimmed with a fringe of chenille. A handsome braid ornament fastens the tie at the throat. JUDIC CHOLLET.

VANITY'S VISIONS.

A New Braid Trimming—Marble Velvet in Smart Parisian Wraps.

A new description of velvet christened "marble" has just been added to attractive fabrics of this nature, and, as its name foretells, the new variety is adorned with all the delicate tracery of the marble it simulates. It is used for the popular waistcoat and for trimmings on elaborate gowns and wraps.

Marble velvet is most effective in whites with little pinkish veinings all over its surface which are hardly perceptible in some lights. It is also to be had in black and white, reddish brown and malachite, the latter representing soft shades of green, which are charming when used in connection with black.

The new taffeta braid is very smart with its little silk bands neatly plaited in and out in inch and a half wide trimmings. It is most effective when matching the gown in color.

Becoming long velvet basqued coats are worn with silky cashmere or cloth skirts. This fad has been adopted by all smart women who figure in the vanguard of fashion.

The dancing frock illustrated is of white silk batiste over an underrobe of pink liberty satin. The skirt is delightfully "frouffouey" at the feet, and above the quillings of satin are two flounces of swiss embroidery formed by motifs strapped together with bows of pink satin ribbon. Each flounce is headed by an insertion of swiss embroidery. The baby bodice has the embroidery and ribbon bow effect in front, and the decollete neck is finished with insertion. The high puffed sleeves have a line of smart little bows just below the stiffened puff.

LINGERIE BLOUSES.

Suggestions For These Useful Garments—Dainty Silk Slips.

Lingerie blouses are considered very smart to wear for second dress occasions, such as the matinee and informal calling, in conjunction with the tailored coat and skirt. The most attractive are made of cotton batiste, which costs about 75 cents a yard. All sorts of hand work goes into their making.

A dainty batiste blouse of white has a vest and shallow rounded yoke of anglaise embroidery. The edges are scalloped and run around with narrow val lace. From this emplacement as far as the shoulders is another yoke formed of sunrayed tucks, which are the very latest conceit in tuckdom. The waist proper is rulled on to this and drawn down into the waist belt. The sleeves have a full puff from the elbow and a deep cuff of English embroidery and lace.

Slips of silk in dainty shades are made to wear under the lingerie waist and are really quite a protection. Chilly mortals resort to slips of French flannel, which are warmer and not at all bulky.

Very stunning is this afternoon bridge frock. It is carried out in checked voile in two shades of delft blue. The skirt is laid about the waist in a series of plaits turning toward the front width, which is plain. A double box plait gives the necessary fullness in the back. The bodice has tiny tucks three inches long at the shoulders and blouses a little over a fitted corselet of the cloth, which is scalloped at the lower edge. Under the corselet is another of light blue cloth strapped with gold braid. A charming collar over an inner vest of white lace is trimmed with the gold braid and small gold buttons. The sleeves have the full wired puff at the top and puffings of lace at the elbow, strapped with pale blue velvet ribbon. A cuff of blue cloth trimmed with gold braid joins the upper and lower sleeve.

WHAT IS WORN.

The New Skirt and a Cerclette of Wire to Hold It Out.

To hold out the extremely bouffant skirt there is a cerclette of thin wire, which prevents it from flopping about in an aimless and ungraceful fashion.

WHITE CHIFFON TAFFETA WAIST.

This forerunner of the crinoline will not be found objectionable in its present mild form.

Gold trimming is to be seen on many model gowns.

When made up as a trimming for evening frocks, the tiniest button rose built of chiffon is placed in the middle of a lace wheel.

Sealskin is much used for stoles, and those opening over a pointed vest of ermine and worn with a large gauny muff bordered with this royal fur are the newest ideas.

Yokes of white or cream cloth perforated like broderie anglaise are employed upon cloth gowns.

White chiffon taffeta silk makes the charming bodice shown in the cut. Guipure lace forms the yoke, collar and small vest. Outlining the yoke is a narrow piping of black velvet, over which is laid a guimpe of dull gold. Ornaments of gold close the bodice and band the plaited sleeves.

Feminine Philosophy

Too Clever Women—Education That Is a Waste

They were talking about hard luck in matrimony at the woman's club, and one little person was bewailing the fact that she was not more clever. "I would give anything in the world to be able to do things and compel John's admiration!" she sighed. "What he should have married was a brilliant woman. I am afraid he thinks me very stupid. I can't understand politics or business or any of the complicated things he talks about, and he does so admire women who do things. I'd give my soul to be a clever woman. She must have such an easy time through life!"

The veteran woman member of the club, renowned for her brilliant wit and versatility, smiled quietly. "My dear," she ventured, "have you ever followed out the careers, or, perhaps, to be more correct, the married lives, of clever women? Have you ever seen a clever woman married to a stupid man? Have you ever seen a clever woman married to an ordinary man? Well, if you want a good idea of unhappiness, study that situation. Your husband would like to have you understand his deepest thoughts, so you think. Don't you believe it! In his heart of hearts he is immensely flattered that he is so much your superior that your brain cannot compass them. Sorry the man whose wife not only can understand the most profound machinery of his thinking apparatus, but can go him one better, and perhaps two or three better, in spite of her most charitable efforts to hide the fact. We are told in the marriage service to love, honor and obey our lords and masters. Well, perhaps love is easy enough, but can a superior mind give obedience to a lesser one? And can one honor a fool?"

FORCING THE CHILD.

Worthless Education.

Do you remember, or have you forgotten already, how much your mind was overburdened and crammed when you were a child? Many of the things you were forced to learn you forgot as soon as possible, but the time you spent learning them you took from something which might have done you good and which you imperfectly learned as a result.

"All my days," sighed one woman, "I shall be sorry that the money that was spent in teaching me mathematics and Latin was not devoted to making my voice and my drawing what they should be. I could never put that algebra to any earthly use, the Latin I have long since forgotten, but the little drawing I took has meant many dollars in my pocket, because I made fashion illustrations, and I would give anything for a cultivated voice."

There is one duty which is the greatest a mother can have—namely, to help the child discover her one chief talent and concentrate on that to the exclusion of other branches which only tire her brain and waste her time.

The Tender Hearted Woman.

Bless the tender hearted woman!

She is the first to crowd in at a murder trial and comment on the clothes of the female murderer. You would think she was at a professional matinee.

Watch her when an accident takes place. She will be jostled and almost run over in her wild efforts to see the mangled one, whether it be horse, dog or man.

It isn't tender heartedness; it's morbidity. She loves to read about operations. The more gruesome the better. She delights in the "symptoms" in the family medicine book.

At the Slocum disaster even the police were shocked to see women prowling around peering into the faces of the dead—out of curiosity.

And who supports yellow journalism and the "penny dreadful" sort of news story? Ask the editor. Tender shrinking woman every time.

No wonder men say they can't understand us! MAUD ROBINSON.

UP TO DATE MODES.

Fine Lace the Fad—The Bayadere Skirt Very New.

The new bayadere skirts promise to be very smart. They fit snugly about the hips either plain or with five plaits and have two or three wide bands of contrasting material around the skirt. The bands are usually of velvet ribbon or shirred silk, or on light materials they are often of closely corded shirred silk net.

The bands are four inches wide and are placed six inches apart. Each has a quilling to outline the edges.

Handsome net laces and exquisite valenciennes are seen on all the smart gowns.

The blues of last year seem to be entirely out of the running this winter. Indeed, the only blue considered at all swagger is the kaiser. It is an intense blue of the bluet order and is exceedingly trying to most complexions. The successful wearer must have eyes of blue or bordering on this charming color.

Brown is not as smart as it promised to be. Certain shades of gray are very popular, and in velvet purple is the royal color approved of fashion. Nothing is more elegant or expensive than purple chiffon velvet.

An all black net gown is the most serviceable evening dress a girl on a limited allowance can invest in. This winter a black brussels net or maline may be very up to date and smart with a full skirt tucked up to the knees with wide tucks. The bodice is horizontally tucked and fashioned into a bebe effect, with the round decollete neck finished with a ruching of net.

Of mushroom broadcloth is the Parisian gown shown in the picture. The skirt is slightly full and absolutely devoid of trimming. The waist is bolero in effect and edged with a corded puffing of the silk exactly matching the cloth. A tiny vest of white cloth is edged with a line of gold and fastens with dull gold buttons. A high girdle of brown panne encircles the waist. The sleeves are formed of high puffs of cloth and white chiffon.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

New Wrinkles That Will Make Beautiful Winter Toilets.

A dress trimming of white suede has been introduced having upon it a design in black and gold beads.

All round skirts appear even in costumes for afternoon calling and carriage wear and for dancing and dinner gowns.

A pretty furry novelty is "petta," which is nothing more than the skin of the calf. It is of a beautiful creamy white, with delicate tints and markings of fawn. This petta will make stunning trimmings.

The modernized kimono pictured is carried out in lilac Japanese silk, figured with golden yellow. It is made in two pieces and afterward joined at the waist. The skirt is shirred on the side seams and back and is plain in front. The bodice is gathered on the shoulders and at the top of the sleeves. Trimmings and belt are of lilac velvet.

JEWELRY FANCIES.

Louis and Directoire Jewelry Designs In Vogue.

In the shops are to be found the daintiest kinds of letters and monograms worked by hand in elaborate fashion to apply on sheer lingerie. When the material is cut from under the letter in a deft way the appearance is that of the initial being worked upon the garment.

In jewelry almost everything is very simple. Hatpins are a reproduction of some flower in enamel or beautiful old paste to wear with the directoire hats or some conventional design in exquisite Italian enamels. There are beautiful specimens in buckles, clasps and pendants in these enamels set in dull platinum.

Jewelers are copying designs of the Louis XV. and XVI. periods not only in diamonds, but in a judicious mixture of precious gems of different colors.

Really elegant women are wearing very little jewelry and never commit the error of appearing in a tailor made gown with anything but the severest type of gem workmanship as an ornament to their attire.

There is a revival of the narrow moire ribbon with a single diamond or pearl slide. The fine platinum chain with a single gem suspended is still in vogue.

The practical picture hat illustrated is of mushroom felt bound with brown velvet around the brim. The rather high crown has a deep plain band of brown velvet. A panache of small shaded brown tips decorates the side of the hat. JUDIC CHOLLET.

FASHIONS IN FUR.

Elegant Pelts of the Season—The Latest In Hand Bags.

The old fashioned tight cape reaching to the waist is with us again, with the addition of long, wide stole ends finished with tails or fringe.

The shawl cape of some elegant pelt is a favorite shape for older women. It is soft and comfortable and fits around the shoulders as snugly as a Paisley shawl.

Some of the large muffs have a kind of "collar" or flat frill at either end and are so soft that they could be crushed up and put in a pocket.

Black Persian lamb is often trimmed with chinchilla, mink or sable, and the mixing of furs is an important feature in the world of pelts. Krimmer and opossum are two old world pelts that have been revived this season, although these old furs are not always recognized in their new dressings.

Dainty little jackets, loose and graceful, coming a little below the waist, are made of soft white taffeta and elaborately braided. They are very smart for theater wear when accompanied by a skirt of a light shade.

The very smartest hand bags of leather match my lady's belt stock or jacket trimming and are without handles, two rather awkward pieces of leather at the top of the bag doing duty in this respect. The bags are carried slightly tucked under the arms.

Altogether charming is this dainty evening frock of silver tissue. The full, floppy skirt is trimmed at the knees with an odd design made of lace motifs set between upright bands of silver gauze.

The gauze and lace outline the decollete neck and form a bolero about the bodice. The sleeves are tiny epaulettes of lace and silver.

CHIC CONCEITS.

Lace Blouses Are Fashionable—Cashmere Buttons a Novelty.

A white cloth model recently imported is made with a plain skirt eased slightly at the waist and full at the feet, after the umbrella shape, trimmed with seven rows of graduated suede strappings. The skirt just touches the ground all round, which shows that the smart tailor made will not be short, although there will be no trained effect. The coat bodice is quite plain and tight fitting, fastening with two buttons over a suede waistcoat. A neat suede collar finishes the neck. Strappings appear on the close fitting sleeve, which ends in a broad suede cuff trimmed with old blue enameled buttons.

A novel hat for morning wear is carried out in white hairy felt brought to a point in front and cut up on one side of the brim, where it is lifted off the face. The scalloped edge is outlined with silver braid, each scallop being adorned with a small green velvet button. Through one of these apertures at the side are thrust two shaded green quills, the ends appearing through the hat almost at the point in front.

Among the many stones used in the construction of buttons the catseye is decidedly to the fore. The center of the button is formed of a large catseye set in silver and surrounded with a ring of paste.

The blouse illustrated is one of the novelties of the season. It is of almond green liberty silk made over a fitted boned lining. The silk is arranged about the figure in folds having the appearance of deep tucks. From the emptecement around the shoulders the tucks run downward, and on the yoke up toward the neck. Deep "val" lace makes the choker and furnishes the fall about the bust. As far as the bust line the blouse fastens with handsome large buttons. Above this are small bows of black velvet ribbon. The sleeves have a short puff and a cuff formed of fitted folds finished with lace and buttons.

FACTS AND FANCIES.

New Winter Dress Materials—Trimmings For Gowns.

Two attractive new materials have made their appearance in the dress world, moire poplin and pompadour moire. The first named fabric transforms the stiff poplin of old into a gloriously soft and shimmery, silky material. It is delightful made up into dinner and afternoon calling costumes.

WHITE WALKING HAT.

Pompadour moire is a watered silk having dainty bunches of flowers scattered over its surface.

As a trimming for evening gowns nothing is prettier than white jet, an adornment just out. In some instances the jet is mingled with metallic designs, but when intended as a trimming for tulle and light fabrics it is traced in patterns on lace, with threadings of gold and silver.

Clusters of pink roses with white-frosted foliage are very much used as a supplementary trimming to the evening gowns of today.

For the evening headdress there is a distinct novelty, a cockade of silk or satin, to which is attached a cluster of white or shaded sprays.

Combs or tinted horn represent a popular fad in Paris which is attracting a great deal of attention.

The hat illustrated is a Paquin production. It is of white felt lined with ivory white velvet. The crown is completely hidden by masses of natural marabou feathers, which droop gracefully over the back of the brim and fall lightly on the hair. Two sprays of darker tinted osprey give the requisite finish. JUDIC CHOLLET.

OUR CHICAGO LETTER

GOSSIP OF THE METROPOLIS OF THE CENTRAL STATES.

A NEW FAD FOR SOCIETY

Devoting Its Energies to Saving the Dogs and Cats of the Streets—War on Disease-Creating Evils.

CHICAGO. — This city is developing its class of notoriety seeking rich as New York has done. True the city is not yet the mecca of millionaires seeking a means of separating themselves from their money in exchange for a maximum amount of notoriety, but there is growing up in the city a sort of second and third generation class, whose ambition is to find a method of dispensing the fortunes left them by industrious ancestors, whose industry builded Chicago along with their personal fortunes.

Chicago society of the past has not been given greatly to fads. In fact, when Chicago society looked to such women as Mrs. P. D. Armour, or Mrs. George M. Pullman, as its leaders, it was a society in which ostentation figured not at all. Now a younger element is coming into control, and the frivolities of the east are being imported and copied. This new element has not yet been guilty of a "monkey dinner," but such things will come.

The latest social fad of the city is the befriending of homeless cats and dogs. It is a fad that a humane society will undoubtedly approve of, but that the patronesses of the new "charity" are more interested in what amount of space the newspapers will give to it than in the number of cats and dogs saved, goes without saying.

Mrs. William R. Linn is one of the younger lights in the city's "400," but one of its leaders, and it is to her initiative the friendless animals owe their good fortune. She started the fad by endowing ten cages in a local veterinary hospital, and others, anxious to court favor with the popular society leader, have quickly followed her example. One society woman, in speaking of the "charity," referred feelingly to the large numbers of poor little dogs and cats that would be saved from starvation, and added that it was the finest thing society could do.

It is the practical middle classes who are working to save the friendless children of the streets, though they are aided in their efforts by the society leaders of the past—women with both brains and money.

A Health Crusade.

NOT while one section of society is devoting its energies to saving the "poor little dogs and cats" another section is waging war on diseases that affect the human family. The women's clubs of Cook county are willing to let the pound master solve the "vexed" problem of what to do for the homeless dogs, while they give their attention to existing evils that create diseases, and especially the evils existing in the tenement districts.

There is ample room in Chicago for such a crusade. The city is not so much in need of laws as it is in need of law enforcement. Dirt is the foundation of disease, and while the business interests of the city are making an effort to secure that cleanliness that is next to godliness in the business district, the tenement sections are entirely forgotten.

There is a law in the city that makes it a misdemeanor to throw dirt into the streets. It is not enforced. The streets of the tenement districts are the dumping grounds for all sorts of refuse, and the excuse given is that "it is a convenience for the poor people of those districts."

There is a law in the city against smoking chimneys. It is not enforced. Two-thirds of the factory chimneys of the city pour out a constant stream of black smoke and soot that must be breathed into the lungs of the people, and yet the people are called upon to pay salaries to a force of smoke inspectors.

Dust is a breeder of consumption, and every wind that blows in the city sends clouds of the germ-fruited scourge into the faces of the thousands of pedestrians on the city streets. The health crusade may be a fad, but it is a worthy one.

The Subway Plans.

NOT to be outdone by New York, Chicago is now planning a subway system that will make that of Gotham look small by comparison. The plans of organization are so far advanced that it is useless to longer doubt the possibility of the scheme's early maturity, but the first effects in this city will be far different from the first effects in New York, for the purpose of the originators of the Chicago scheme is first, not to take the people off the streets, but to make room on the streets for the people.

Eventually Chicago street cars will go under ground, but before they disappear the freight situation will be cared for, and, in fact, the system for handling the freight traffic of the city is practically complete now, and the new subway company recently organized in the east comes into possession of a tunnel system, longer than New York's subway, that is ready for operation.

The New York subway cost $35,000,000 to build. The company that is back of the Chicago subway has $50,000,000 to put into the project. It takes over a company that has already expended over $20,000,000 in building more than 40 miles of tunnels for freight traffic that are 40 feet below the city streets, leaving plenty of room between that and the surface for the street car tunnels that are to come later.

Entirely different construction methods are necessary in Chicago from those employed in New York. The subway of the latter city was cut through solid granite. Chicago, on the other hand, is builded upon a marsh, with bedrock from 60 to 60 feet below the street surface. The construction of a subway here means first a solution of the engineering problem of providing for the safety of the great buildings that line the streets under which it must pass. With that problem solved, the actual construction of the tunnels will be a much easier matter than it was in New York. But the first problem is not an easy one to solve.

A Stage Favorite.

THE theatrical world lost a general favorite when Mrs. G. H. Gilbert died, and in no place is she more greatly mourned than in Chicago. It was in stock company work that Mrs. Gilbert made her great success, and it here that she began her stock company career, as far back as 1851.

Hundreds of the older residents of the city remember her as she was in those days, more than half a century ago, and for many of these she has been the only attraction that would take them to the theaters during the last 25 years. One of these, in commenting on the death of the aged actress, said that while he did not now approve of the theater as he did in former years, he always made an exception to his rule to remain away from them when Mrs. Gilbert was in the city. There were many of these elderly residents, some of whom had seen Mrs. Gilbert make her debut in stock company work in 1851, at Powers' theater on the night of the opening of her farewell engagement. When she appeared before the curtain at the close of the last act and recited that old-fashioned epilogue which began with the lines:

Dear friends in front, the curtain must sot fall
Until a grateful woman says good-by to all.
Just think of all the kindness that I've got of you!
I'd like to be the granny of the lot of you.

there was not a dry eye among all these old friends.

To the stage people, old and young, Mrs. Gilbert was always "Granny," and they spoke of her with a reverence that showed their affection. She had no blood relatives, the last of the family, a son, having died several years ago, but she needed none to be truly mourned, for hers was a family that extended throughout all the broad field of stageland.

She was 83 years old the 21st of last October, and had been on the stage since 1846, when she appeared as a ballet girl in England. She came to America in 1849, and though of international fame as an actress, this was the first season that she played star parts.

A Freak Scientist.

SPEAKER NISSEN, of Foolkiller fame, deserves a better fate than to be remembered as a dime museum freak, but he will not get it.

When Nissen met his death in the waves of Lake Michigan he was trying to find a solution for a problem that has taxed the ingenuity of man for three or more centuries—a means of reaching the north pole. Nissen believed that if his water balloon could be proven navigable he could utilize it in reaching the pole by being driven by the winds that blow across the top of the world. Men of ability have pronounced his plan not entirely unfeasable, and it was probably not more so than some of the others that have been tried and failed.

Nissen was a scientist in a way, and he might have been taken more seriously but for the fact that after he had successfully passed through the rapids he exhibited himself in a dime museum in this city at a good price per week. This fact prejudiced scientific men who might have believed somewhat in him but for that fact, and yet the inventor of the "Foolfast, and yet the inventor of the "Foolkillers" did that, not because he was seeking cheap notoriety, but as a means for securing money to continue his scientific investigations.

OUT FOR BUFFALOES

BUT IT WAS WITH A CAMERA INSTEAD OF A RIFLE.

Ernest Harold Baynes Tells of Photographing Herd on a New Hampshire Preserve—Getting Very Scarce.

I am particularly interested in buffaloes for several reasons. In the first place, they are the most magnificent hooked animals on the western hemisphere, and in the next place they are almost extinct. Less than 50 years ago, they were probably the most numerous large wild animals in the world, and to-day there are possibly 1,800 in existence. About a third of these, something over 600, are wild and live in the desolate region southwest of—well, never mind just where it is. The rest are either in captivity in zoological gardens, or in what might be termed semi-captivity in big game preserves. The largest herd in semiconfinement is that in the Blue Mountain forest, otherwise known as Corbin park, a vast preserve some seven miles north of Newport, N. H. There are at this writing approximately 150 buffalo of all ages in this herd, and these great shaggy beasts roam at will over their kingdom of 26,000 acres, confined only by a fence 26 miles in length. Here, in a country of wild mountain forests, bushy thickets, swampy lowlands and grassy plains, the buffaloes thrive and increase in numbers every year, and it is here that I have the privilege of studying their habits, and of photographing the animals themselves to my heart's content.

A few days later, very early one morning, I came upon a herd of buffalo, more than a hundred, all told, grazing on a piece of high land where they had spent the night. I set off home and returned with two cameras, hoping to get a picture of the herd. But before I could get quite near enough, some of the beasts caught sight of me, and by a few deep grunts warned the rest, and the whole lot were soon galloping away down a hill, across a swamp and into a wood where they were lost to view. However, he who runs may read the fresh trail of a herd of buffaloes, by the trampled grass, the broken twigs, and, at this season, by the bunches of hair left clinging to the bushes, so I hurried after them as fast as I could go with two cameras, one in each hand. Now, part of this reserve was once a farming country, and a few of the old farmhouses are still standing. Some of these are in good repair, and are kept as shooting camps, and are used by the members of the Blue Mountain Forest association in the hunting season. Others have gone more or less to decay, and are now prettier homes of wild cats and other forest creatures, and in the floors of some of them there are great holes gnawed by the teeth of porcupines. After toiling after the buffaloes for perhaps three miles, I came upon the herd on a wide open space in the rear of one of of these old farm houses—some grazing and others lying down, all as contented as a herd of domestic cattle. Cautiously I approached, the bushes, quietly I carefully removed a window, crawled into a musty room and drew the cameras in after me. Going through to the rear I could see the whole herd in full view from the back windows. Very slowly I opened one of these windows without attracting the attention of the buffaloes, and quickly put a camera in position. I wished to station the other camera at one of the side windows, but the sash was stiff and threatened to break a pane if I tried to open it. However, it was the work of but five minutes to remove a pane of glass with a penknife, and very soon I had my guns trained upon the herd from two directions. Having made one or two exposures, I waited for a chance to get individual pictures, and a little later, when the buffaloes began to move about, the opportunity came. The first animal to approach the rear window was a fine young bull, whose last winter's coat was still hanging to his sides in tatters. I got his portrait without arousing his suspicions, and then went to see if there was anything within range of the other instrument. Sure enough, round the corner of the house there was a fine old cow buffalo, grazing quietly, and following close upon her heels was her tawny, three-months-old calf, nibbling the grass as though he was not quite used to the taste of it. A moment later they were fairly within range, and I released the shutter, the sound of which caused the cow to lift her head and gaze in the direction of the window. But the room was dark and she could not see me, for the cow went on with her grazing. Returning to the first camera I soon got a snap at two young bulls feeding side by side, and thus I might have gone along until all my plates were used had not a plate-holder slipped through my fingers and fallen to the floor with a crash.

ERNEST HAROLD BAYNES.

OBJECTS TO WEIGHT.

PRESIDENT THINKS HE IS GETTING A LITTLE TOO FAT.

Plays Tennis, Rows a Heavy Boat and Engages in Other Sports for the Purpose of Losing Some Surplus Tissue.

Washington (D. C.) Special.

President Roosevelt has troubles other than politics. He is getting—well, fat. Before, he was "portly," or "rather stout," but since he has passed the 200-pound mark it is nothing but fat. He weighs now 208 pounds, and the last 13 pounds he has put on worries him.

Try as hard as he can, he does not seem able to reduce himself. The president has put in some strenuous days in the last month at Oyster Bay racing about the tennis court in the heat of the day in an effort to get himself down to weight. Horseback riding, upon which he has always depended, failed him. Now he puts in the most of the "weight-reducing" exercise at tennis. He knows he gets more real exercise out of that than he does in a 100-mile horseback ride.

The president's old Harvard chums have told him of many men who reduced their weight by playing handball. Tennis is the nearest approach to handball the president can get, as there is no handball court at either Oyster Bay or the White house in Washington.

The first thing the president did when he got back from Oyster Bay, after looking over the navy and seeing that the South American republics had paid their debts, was to have himself weighed.

The president approached the scales with the determination to know the worst. He had known that he was dangerously near the 200-pound mark, and some scales on which he had weighed would flutter, hesitate and slowly and steadily rise when the weight was advanced to that number on the balance arm.

Lightly the president stepped on the "official" scales and shoved the weight

PRESIDENT ROOSEVELT.
(Now Weighs 208 Pounds and Is Trying to Reduce Himself.)

to 200 pounds. The balance never even wavered.

"Been gaining some, Mr. President," suggested Secretary Loeb, while Dulaney, the president's personal attendant, looked anxious and worried.

"Try another notch," suggested Mr. Loeb, trying to look unconcerned.

Slowly the president topped the weight along by quarters and eighths until the scales registered 208 pounds and was at a perfect balance.

"By Godfrey! but I'm getting heavy," the president said, with a sigh, stepping off the scales.

Then, to make sure that there was no defect in the scales, he carefully balanced the weight and again got on.

But "Jim" again registered the inexorable scales, and the president was convinced that what he had most feared was a reality—he was "fat."

Every since he became president Mr. Roosevelt has been putting on flesh. He weighed when he first came to Washington as vice president but 185 pounds. He had carefully kept his weight down by the most vigorous exercise.

The president's weight is evenly distributed, and he shows less of it in his face than elsewhere. He has no paunch yet, but prevents this developing by the way in which he stands. He is always erect, and takes as much pride in preserving the development of the paunch as a West Point cadet.

The president has weighed as high as 212 pounds, but this was but temporary, and soon came down to 208 under the hard tennis-playing. In addition to tennis the president has gone in for rowing this summer. He frequently takes Mrs. Roosevelt out for a row on Oyster Bay, and finds that it helps to reduce him.

The president is a man with a good appetite and no digestive troubles. He eats heartily and enjoys his food. He prefers plain, substantial cooking to the fancy efforts of chefs. Because of his propensity to gain weight he has been obliged to forego sweets, although fond of them.

The New York World says that clothes that the president wore when he first came to Washington are now too small for him now. He has a chest measurement of 44 inches and a waist measurement of 41 inches. His collars have increased in size from 16½ to 17½, and the president wears his collars tight.

He intends putting in all possible time this summer in an effort to reduce his weight below the 200-pound mark, and will keep at it throughout the winter. Already he has begun the long walks which so tired members of his cabinet who were asked to accompany him.

The president's flesh causes him no inconvenience, but he simply dislikes to be fat.

Sport on the Preserves of H. H. the Maharajah of Rewah—Interesting Amusements of the Natives—On Elephant Back.

A tiger, a leopard, a couple of good sambur, with a possible bear, some black buck and ravine deer if I cared to go after them. This was my dream as I slowly crawled along in an East India railway "express" train in response to a hospitable invitation from H. H. the maharajah of Rewah to spend my Christmas in his preserves. At Sutna Station I found a charming rubber-tired victoria, with a fine pair of Australian horses and a smart gold-laced coachman, awaiting me; also a conveyance which reminded me of a dilligence in some very out-of-the-way part of Switzerland, with a cage fixed on top of it; the former for my servants, the latter for my baggage. Relays of horses were posted every six miles, and the little afternoon's drive of 36 miles was done under the four hours.

Govindnur was my destination, and here I found an imposing camp, as the agent to the governor general for the central provinces was paying his official visit to Rewah. Christmas day was devoted to sports, which the maharajah personally directed on horseback, and the event of the day was an elephant race. The pace at which these unwieldly-looking creatures lumbered along was considerable. They were urged by the yells and prods of the mahout, and also by men on foot with long spears. The beasts evidently quite understood what was going on, and their furious dashes at each other could hardly have escaped being classed as fowl riding.

Hawking is one of the favorite amusements in Rewah, and amongst the spectators at the sports there were several with hawks on their arm. I photographed one, giving him as a companion one of the men who acted as "whipper-in" to the elephants during the race. Next day the private preserves were driven. The various passes up which game is expected to go are each commanded by a comfortable stone-built stand. The beaters on foot were over 1,000, and besides these there were a troop of Rewah cavalry and about 30 elephants. Much was expected, and my hopes rose as I heard heavy firing on my right; but nothing came my way except a "lady" sambur, accompanied by one stag too small to shoot. I used my camera instead of my rifle. The total bag only consisted of two sambur stags. One bear was missed, and two leopards were said to have broken back, besides many ramfurr.

After the departure of the maharajah and the officials, I betook myself to the jungles in search of big game. One morning we were very close on a large tiger; his pugs were so fresh that the sand was falling in at the edges, but he turned into the thick jungle, where tracking was beyond my powers, and the men I had with me either could not or would not—the latter, I think—follow him up. On the way back to camp, late, when the light was falling, a curious gray thing ambled in sight, which caused considerable excitement amongst my followers. I did not know it by the name they gave it, but understood that its destruction was desired. A .577 bullet effected this, and I found it was a hyena, the first I had seen, though many a time I have been disturbed by them in camp at night. Next day they collected a curious band of men and boys about 300 in all, aged from ten to 70, who beat large slices of the huge jungles where sambur were. One fine stag came my way.

On the way back to camp, a long shot in the dusk brought down a fairly good black buck, and next morning I struck camp and went into Rewah city.

FAMOUS IN HISTORY.

A PEEP AT NO. 10, DOWNING STREET, LONDON.

Without Doubt the Most Interesting Old House in the World—The Workshop of England's Prime Ministers.

London (England) Special.

A dingy old house in a narrow cul-de-sac leading out of Whitehall, one of three which form a slender wedge of drab brickwork in a magnificent block of buildings—this is a fair description of the most remarkable dwelling house in England—probably if the world, for it is the center from which, for nearly a couple of centuries, for far-spreading British empire has been governed, and were generations of prime ministers have made their home.

A couple of centuries ago Downing street consisted of "four or five very large well-built houses fit for persons of honor and quality, each house having a pleasant prospect into St. James' park, with a terrace walk;" and it was one of these houses which George II. offered to Walpole, the premier, as a personal gift; and from that day to this 10 Downing street has been the residence of successive prime ministers, and under its roof half a century of cabinets have met. But its early glory soon departed. At the end of the eighteenth century it had become a street of shabby houses—mostly lodging houses—with "The Cat and Bagpipes at one end; and none all the houses but three have been swept away, and of these No. 10 is one.

But what a splendid history this dreary-looking house has had. Walpole made his home there for many years, with his clever, gossipy son, Horace, as his private secretary; and a pleasant place it seems to have been in his day. On the eve of leaving it Horace wrote to a friend: "I am writing to you in one of the charming rooms that look the park; t is a lovely evening, and I am willing to enjoy this sweet corner while I may, for we are soon to quit it." Polham succeeded as tenant in 1743, and was followed by the elder Pitt, Lord Bute, and Lord North.

The younger Pitt conceived a great liking for No. 10, and never spent a night away from it if he could help it. It was during Pitt's tenancy that an angry mob assembled in Downing street and threatened to demolish the house, while Pitt looked contemptuously at their ravings from an upper window; and was to No. 10 that Lord Spencer came with news of the mutiny at the Nore. Pitt was a lavish entertainer—is it not recorded that one month's meat-bill came to £967—and the room in which he dispensed hospitality is known to-day as Pitt's dining-room.

But few of its distinguished tenants have left behind so well as Disraeli, or have had such reverence for its great traditions. He had its rooms most elaborately and beautifully decorated in the style of the early Georgian period at a cost of nearly £5,000. Disraeli, too, was very happy at No. 10. He loved to sit meditating or composing his speeches in the tiny garden with its grass plot and its couple of shady trees; and it is told how, at the time of the Fenian scares, he would seize the detectives whose duty it was to guard him by slipping out through the garden door into St. James' park for a walk, taking care to leave one of his hats hanging up in the hall.

Under Mr. Balfour's auspices No. 10 has assumed an aspect of brightness and youth to which it had been a stranger for many a generation; for he has filled the rooms with his art treasures, including some magnificent pictures by Burne-Jones. The most important room in the house—indeed, one of the most famous rooms in any dwelling house in the world—is the council chamber, where the cabinet meets. This room has been made since 1856. The chamber has double locks, double doors, and double windows. It is plainly furnished, has a lofty ceiling supported on columns, walls lined with bookcases filled with books, and has a pleasant outlook on the park, with a terrace beneath on which ministers may take the air during their deliberations.

At present the council chamber serves as a working room for Mr. Balfour, who may often be seen from the park standing at the desk near one of the windows. The drawing room on the floor above is a beautiful room, with its decoration in cream and gold and its portraits of past first lords of the treasury from Lord Portland, of the seventeenth century, to Lord Roseberry. This is probably the very room in which Horace Walpole wrote the letter in 1742 from which we have quoted.

MINERS ARE TO MEET

ANNUAL GATHERING OF AMERICAN MINING CONGRESS.

Lyman A. Sisley, Editor of the Mining World, Chicago, Writes of the Interesting Programme of the Occasion.

The next annual meeting of the American Mining Congress will be held at Portland, Ore., beginning August 22 and continuing six days. At this assembly many questions of pressing interest to the mining industry in all its phases will be considered. Many gentlemen of national and international reputation will deliver addresses on national questions affecting mining and kindred interests, and those who can attend should certainly do so.

This coming session will be liberalized on a broader review of the mining industry than ever before. It is expected that every state and territory in the United States, Canada and Mexico will present reports on the geological and mineral resources, 26 of which have already taken up the work of preparing their reports, and so notified the secretary, Mr. Irwin Mahon.

It is more than likely from the great interest that is being manifested all over the country in the coming assembly that the attendance will be very large, and that the views of the congress will be definitely crystallized into form that will prove the basis for future federal legislation. Its importance when viewed in this light can scarcely be overestimated, and the mining industry will be benefitted by its wisdom to a degree that can hardly be realized in advance.

One of the important functions of this congress will be a federal department of mines and mining, with a secretary at its head, who shall be a cabinet officer. A measure of this character, of infinite importance to the industry, can acquire momentum only through the action of a mining congress representative of the interests of the mining men generally. Through such a medium it has a political significance that will entitle it to the serious consideration of the law makers who wish to conserve the best interests of a great industrial factor of the country.

Aside from the formation of a code of laws for the approval of congress, and taking such steps as are possible toward the creation of a mining department, the forthcoming meeting promises to exercise no little influence in securing concessions of great value to the industry.

The mining industry embraces not merely mining for the precious metals, and for iron, and coal, but it also includes the production of oil and stone in all their various forms. It covers the entire union, for there is not a single state in which mining in some form is not conducted. It represents the interest, the welfare and the hopes of millions of men and women. Second only to agriculture, if even to it in real importance, mining is the corner stone of the nation's prosperity and wealth. Through the production of its iron and coal mines, the United States has become the chief manufacturer of steel and steel products in the world, and its supremacy in foreign markets would never have been achieved had it not been for the wealth which nature stored in the mines, whether of gold, silver, copper, lead, coal or iron.

To refuse to establish a department of mines and mining, when already we have one of war, of the navy, of foreign affairs, of commerce and labor, and of agriculture, is to neglect an industry which is more to this country than the maintenance of either the army or the navy, for without it we would be dependent in both those branches of public service upon foreign countries. It is more to us than our diplomatic relations, and yields first place only to the cultivation of the soil.

New York paper suggests that "Commissioner McAdoo has taken the stump very early." Devery had him beaten to a standstill. He took everything in sight.

Parisian scientist says "to kiss all you like for it's healthful fun." Fellow out in Indiana who was fined $50 for his osculatory proclivities will seek a new definition for "healthful fun."

Yes, the hour of meeting for the Common Council is 8 o'clock, but you know it is considered the thing nowadays for the city fathers to consume half an hour or so in distributing "the glad hand."

There is good sound advice in Mayor Buckle's recommendation that no supplies be purchased by the city except by bids and that the local merchants be given preference. What applies to the individual citizen in this respect is of equal force when the municipal government is concerned. Prosperity depends upon trade. Do your buying in Plainfield.

One cardinal feature of Mayor James F. Buckle's first annual message to the Common Council is its business-like treatment of the subjects foremost in the taxpayer's mind. His Honor does not waste words in dealing with matters of prime importance and neither does he spoil his message by referring to matters of an unimportant nature. There are no wearisome statistics to wade through nor platitudinous utterances to digest. The major feature of the message is the strong position taken by the Mayor regarding "spite houses" and the public will heartily concur with his statement that "the reputation of Plainfield is bound to suffer, if it shall be determined that any such blighting scheme is a possibility within the city limits, and that citizens must be put to the necessity of paying exorbitant prices to designing parties in order to rid themselves of offensive and undesirable neighbors. I would earnestly request your honorable body to take these matters under advisement, and if it be possible in any lawful way so to do, to see that ample reparation is made for the infliction of these miserable buildings in our neighborhoods And in order that the utmost caution may be exercised in the future in these and kindred matters, I would recommend that the building ordinance be so amended that no permit for a building of any description be given by the Inspector until the same shall have received the sanction of a majority of the fire and buildings committee." His timely advice for the Common Council to lend all support to the Board of Education in the erection of the new high school building stamps the chief executive of the city as a man who is anxious to promote the greatest instrument of public welfare—free educational facilities. He recites that the municipal government is stronger today from a financial viewpoint than ever before, incidently remarking that "the balance of $37,122.94 in the general fund, which the Council of 1904 received as a legacy from its predecessor, has been so wisely safeguarded and carefully husbanded that your honorable body begins its labors for the present year with a general fund showing a balance of $40,231.36." Other noteworthy parts of the message include a recommendation that an early decision be made in the proposition looking to the inauguration of a municipal system of garbage collection and disposal; that when city supplies are necessary bids be requested and that Plainfield merchants be given preference, and that as the macadam pave wears out in the business section of the city, vitrified brick be substituted. There is nothing disappointing in the entire message and by its tone we have every reason to believe that the people made no mistake when they elected James F. Buckle mayor of Plainfield.

AMUSEMENTS.

The firm of Hamlin, Mitchell & Fields have received a communication from Captain Cooney, of the Princeton football eleven, season 1905, asking permission to use Victor Herbert's Indian dance number from "It Happened in Nordland," now running at the Lew Fields Theatre, New York, as an exclusive Princeton football song for next season. Mr. Fields, on behalf of the partners, says he is willing to have the Princeton men go as far as they like with the song. It is a rather interesting fact that three of Hamlin, Mitchell & Fields' musical attractions will thus be honored by three big universities on the football gridiron. Harvard is singing "Love, Love, Love" from "The Wizard of Oz;" Yale used "Put Down Six and Carry Two" from "Babes in Toyland," and now Princeton yearns for "The Indian Dance" from "It Happened in Nordland."

Miss Lulu Glaser, in Charles B. Dillingham's gorgeous production of the Harry B. Smith and Ludwig Englander operatic version of Charles Major's remarkable story, "When Knighthood Was in Flower." "A Madcap Princess" is the alluring title of Miss Glaser's present vehicle, and the title seems well fitted to the buoyant personality of America's leading operatic soubrette. Miss Glaser is ever in good humor, and her cherry nature always seems to spur the company on to better efforts. "A Madcap Princess" recently scored an immense hit on Broadway, and returning to New York so shortly, Grand Opera House patrons are enabled to witness the big Dillingham attraction months before it reaches many important cities. Two matinees are given during Miss Glaser's engagement, yesterday and one on Saturday, January 7, omitting the regular Wednesday matinee.

Many European novelties are announced to make their first appearance at Proctor's during the coming year. The most prominent among these being "Zutka," an act which has caused a great sensation at the London Hippodrome, where it has already been seen for several months. Another important European specialty is the Phono-Bioscope, a combination of the motion picture machine and the phonograph, invented by a German, Herr Noggrath, which promises to cause a great sensation, and which is said to be the best machine of its kind ever invented. Chassino, the renowned shadowgraphist, whose wonderful performances have aroused the curiosity even of the most skeptical, will also be seen at Proctor's shortly, offering many newly developed tricks in that line. The Mouliere Sisters, Europe's greatest female bar performers; the six Peri Sisters, singers and dancers, who come direct from their European successes, and many other novelties which have taken Europe by storm, will in due time be seen in America, and, as usual, of course, for the first time, on Proctor programmes.

Maude Adams in "The Little Minister," is the attraction at the Empire Theatre and Francis Wilson in "Cousin Billy," is drawing big crowds at the Criterion. Charles Frohman's offering at the Garrick is Annie Russell in "Brother Jacques," and at the Knickerbocker is Viola Allen in "The Winter's Tale." Ethel Barrymore is still to be seen in "Sunday" at the Hudson and "Mrs. Wiggs of the Cabbage Patch" still holds sway at the Savoy. Edna May is as popular as ever in "The School Girl" at Daly's again after having completed her run at the Herald Square. Charles Wyndham and Mary Moore are to be seen in "Mrs. Gorringe's Necklace" at the Lyceum and "Woodland" holds forth at the Herald Square. Annie Russell has scored a great success and she, like all other Frohman's stars, is playing to crowded houses.

Very large and brilliant audiences continue to crowd the Manhattan Theatre, New York, where Mrs. Fisk and the Manhattan Company are appearing in "Leah Kleschna," which undoubtedly is the most striking dramatic success in that city in years. Never in the history of the Manhattan Theatre, which has been the scene of many notable successes, has the advance sale been so large or so representative as that which betokens a long success to this remarkable play, so remarkably acted. Mrs. Fisk never has appeared in a drama in New York in which her appeal has been stronger. Her characterization of the heroine in Mr. McLellan's fascinating and powerful drama is one of the most engrossing impersonations in the theatre today. The work of her supporting company, as has been admitted on all sides, has seldom or never been surpassed in this country. "Leah Kleschna" is remarkable not only as a drama of enthralling interest from first to last, its development holding an audience with a grip that few plays possess, but it projects a series of unusually strong characters, every one of which is played by an actor who can develop its utmost possibilities. In these days this is a rare thing in the theatre, and this all-round ability, added to the prime interest of the play itself, accounts for the phenomenal success that "Leah Kleschna" is enjoying.

Henry W. Savage's latest production, "Common Sense Bracket," the new American comedy drama of rural life, with Richard Golden in the title role, has settled down for a long run at the Fourteenth Street Theatre. The play is intensely dramatic in its serious moments and immensely humorous in the lighter passages. Three distinct love interest run through the action and several types and scenes absolutely new to the stage are presented. The scene of "Common Sense Bracket" is laid in Winthrop, Maine, and the story is woven around the doings of Bruce Bracket. Richard Golden has long been regarded as one of the leading American comedians, and in "Common Sense Bracket" he has at last found the long sought for successor to "Old Jed Prouty." In the new piece he is called upon to impersonate a village philanthropist whose life, though outwardly placid, is a storm center of emotional interest. The title "Common Sense Bracket" is the most appropriate name that could have bestowed on him, as his incessant habit of using that brainy article in all of his actions is the master theme in the denouement of the play. The piece is adequately mounted and most faithfully delineated in acting and environment. The company selected by Mr. Savage to support Mr. Golden is one rarely seen outside of star or organizations.

LITERARY.

The American steel industry as developed and maintained in and around Pittsburg is the subject of a valuable article by William L. Scaife in the January Review of Reviews. The industry that has made Pittsburg one of the world's greatest workshops is described with technical accuracy and yet in popular language. Mr. Scaife's article is followed by a running account of Pittsburg's other manufacturing enterprises, from the pen of J. K. McKirdy, while the aesthetic and intellectual aspects of this new great city's life are outlined by Burd S. Patterson. The three articles are fully illustrated, and together form a most attractive presentation of Pittsburg's varied activities.

The mistletoe is generally accepted as particularly emblematic of Christmas. Virginia Belmont, ehowever, shows in her able article entitled "The Legend of the Mistletoe," published in Madame for January, that this mystic plant really belongs to the New Year celebration. In the days of the Druids, the festival of the cutting of the "mistetoe" took place in the month of March on the sixth day of the moon. The tenth of March in that period was New Year's day and as the festival required the full light of the moon, it was held as near New Year's day as the moon would allow. Madame is published by The Ford Publishing Company, Indianapolis.

The January number of The Popular Science Monthly includes in its contents the following articles: "Some Experiments of Luther Burbank," by President David Star Jodan; "The Present Problems of Paleontology," by Professor Henry Fairfield Osborn; "Social and Political Effects of Immigration," by Dr. Allan McLaughlin; "Galileo," by Dr. Edward S. Holden; "Radioactivity and Matter," by Clemens Winkler; "Educational Problems," by the Bishop of Hereford; "The United States Pharmacopoeia," by Dr. H. C. Wood; "The Mosquito Investigation in New Jersey," by Professor John B. Smith.

The highest priced note-taking on record is that of "The Reporter Who Became President," of whom Frederic Irland writes in the January McClure's. The "reporter" was James Madison, and his MS., for which the United States, after his death, paid the sum of $30,000, contains the only account of the speeches of the makers of our Constitution, at the Philadelphia convention of 1787. These speeches (not meant for publication,) are the most important ever made upon our soil. Many interesting facts, never before printed, are told concerning the MS. in Mr. Ireland's article.

There is an ancient mendicant, long known to those who go through Vesey street to the North River ferries, New York city, who has lately laid away his "Pity the Blind" sign and his wheezy little organ, and now helps pick up waste paper and fruit skins in the Pennsylvania Railroad Station Jersey City. His excuse is convincing, "You see," he says, "times got so hard I just had to keep my eyes open to do any business at all."—Success.

DUNDON ON HEALTH BOARD

A Physician is Appointed to Succeed Rev. Mr. Honeyman.

FOR FULL TERM

John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Protests Against a Change—J. F. Humble Votes With Majority.

Though vigorously opposed by Councilman J. H. VanWinkle, who was elected as a member by the Citizens' Party, the North Plainfield Council Friday night confirmed Mayor Newton B. Smalley's appointment of Dr. A. H. Dundon as the successor of Rev. William E. Honeyman as a member of the Board of Health. Though the presentation of the name of the new appointee came as a general surprise it seemed to be cordially received by all the members except Mr. VanWinkle, it being confirmed by a vote of 4 to 1.

In protesting against the failure to reappoint Rev. Mr. Honeyman, Mr. VanWinkle paid a tribute to his "dignity, intelligence and efficiency," adding that he could devote his whole time, if necessary to the work of the board. In reply Mayor Smalley stated as a reason for his making a change that he preferred to appoint a man who is in closer touch with the present administration and more qualified to fill the position. He said that he regarded Dr. Dundon as particularly well fitted for the position and knew that his appointment would meet with the approval of the taxpayers. Dr. Dundon's appointment is for the full term of four years.

Ambrose Campbell was appointed a member of the paid fire department.

PLAINFIELDER AT HEAD OF MERCANTILE EXCHANGE

H. J. RUNYON IS MADE PRESIDENT OF THE NEW YORK ORGANIZATION.

Howard J. Runyon, of this city, has been made president of the New York Mercantile Exchange, succeeding Howard D. Reynolds, who made an exceedingly efficient officer during his term. The selection of Mr. Runyon was made at the annual meeting, the attendance being the largest in the history of the organization.

The new president was introduced to the members by his predecessor and the latter in his address paid a kindly tribute to his sterling qualities, tendering the gavel with sincere wishes for a successful administration. Mr. Runyon addressed the gathering at some length on various exchange matters and concluded by drawing attention to the importance of making sacrifices and appealed to all the members to contribute time, thought and experience towards making the year 1905 the most prosperous one of the exchange.

SCHOOLS DEPLETED BY SCARLET FEVER

EPIDEMIC AT SOUTH PLAINFIELD AMONG THE PUPILS.

A slight epidemic of scarlet fever which is prevalent among the junior population of South Plainfield has practically depleted the attendance at the public school. With the completion of the holiday vacation last week, several of the rooms were almost deserted, in one of them only three children appearing. There are several cases of the disease in the village, but where there is only one in a household it means the quarantine at times of five or six children.

One of the cases broke out in the school building but the authorities have the trouble well in hand and it is thought the spread has been checked.

Another Men's Club.

Prior to the service as the Monroe Avenue church on Sundoy there was an informal meeting of the men of the congregation, called for the purpose of considering the advisability of forming a men's association. The proposition was favorably received and another meeting will be held on Sundap morning when definite action will be taken. Rev. George Mooney, pastor of the church, has taken the lead in the organization and he is receiving the support of the men in the church in the project.

Another Lawyer.

Counsellor and Mrs. Isaac P. Runyon, of Somerset street, are the parents of a baby boy who came to their home Sunday.

If you have not inspected the desirable line of useful articles at A. M. Griffen's hardware store in East Front street, you have no idea what bargains are to be had there.

NEW CEMENT BLOCK PLANT

Another Industry for Plainfield in the Near Future.

F. M. BACON'S SCHEME

To Locate Plant at Ivins' Lumber Yard—Expects Big Business.

Another important industry is soon to be added to Plainfield's already varied list. Frank M. Bacon, who is interested in the making of a patent cement block, is now perfecting plans for the manufacture of these blocks on a large scale. He expects to start with a daily output of nearly four hundred, equal to many thousand bricks. Mr. Bacon intends to locate his industry in the old DeWitt C. Ivins' lumber yard near Church street. There he will erect a plant of good proportions and will equip it with every modern appliance.

Mr. Bacon makes special claims of merit for his invention. The cement block he proposes to make will be about two feet long and twelve inches wide, with grooves at each end. In the center the shape will conform to a letter S. The grooves are intended to permit the hanging of window sash cords without cutting into the window sash. The blocks are considered to be as near fire-proof as it is possible to make them. While this kind of cement blocks have only been manufactured about a year, Mr. Bacon claims to have found a combination of material in their manufacture that makes his patent more valuable than others. Considerable encouragement has been received by him in his enterprise and he expects to furnish the blocks for several new business buildings that are to be erected within the next year.

The first building to be constructed of cement blocks similar to those which Mr. Bacon will manufacture, will be that of Voorhees & VanZandt on Park avenue. The blocks for this building will be made by the Lawrence Cement Company, of which Ernest R. Ackerman is the president. The manufacture of these blocks marks a new departure in building and it is claimed that within a short time the demand for the blocks will be enormous. They not only make a substantial and fire-proof structure, but an attractive one as well, while it is said that the cost is not much greater than that for other so-called fire-proof material.

At present Mr. Bacon is alone in his enterprise, but he will soon organize a company of local men and eventually he hopes to conduct the business on a large score, employing hundreds of men.

DATE SET FOR Y. M. C. A. INDOOR ATHLETIC MEET

INTER-ASSOCIATION EVENT TO TAKE PLACE AT NEWARK MARCH 1.

The Physical Directors' Association of Northern New Jersey has decided upon Wednesday evening, March 1, as the date for the indoor inter-association basketball championship contest. The event will take place at Newark and will be open to all the Y. M. C. A. physical departments who are represented in the society, which includes about fifteen.

The athletic committee has named the events for the meet which will be as follows: 15 yard dash, running high jump, fence vault, 12 pound shot put, running high dive, one mile relay race (four men team.) All these events will take place indoors, and points will be recorded for each event on the scale of five, three and one. There will be first and second prizes in each event, with the exception of the relay race, where four rewards will be offered.

According to the rules governing the athletic meet, each association may be represented in each event by two men, not necessarily the same in every one. The winning association will be given a handsome shield or loving cup, with the names of the team thereon.

For the purpose of selecting the representatives of the local association, several preliminary contests will be held where there is any chance of competition, and the relay team as well as the participants in the meet will be chosen by the physical director. As there is plenty of time before the event, the selection will not be made for some time.

Criterions Active.

The recently re-organized Criterion Club will issue invitations this week for the first of a series of dances to be given in the Casino. The date has not yet been fixed upon but it will be the latter part of the month. The committee to have charge consists of Harry DeMeza, Bert Simpson and Harry Slimm.

FARMERS LEARN HOW TO MAKE A DAIRY PROFITABLE

SOMERSET COUNTY AGRICULTURISTS ELECT OFFICERS FOR THE YEAR.

"The Way to Make a Dairy Profitable," was the subject of an able address by Charles Howell Cook, of Trenton, Saturday afternoon, before the members of the Somerset County Agricultural Society in the court house at Somerville. Mr. Cook's advice to the farmers was to continually weed out the poor cows from the herd and not to keep cattle that are inclined to eat their heads off and give little milk in return. The question was also discussed with profit by Mr. Cortelyou, of Neshanic; Bernard Meyer, of Finderne, and Joseph Fitzga, of Somervile.

The society elected these officers for the coming year: President, L. A. Schenck; vice president, Bernard Meyer; secretary and treasurer, J. P. Sutphen. W. H. Rogers, of this place, was among those present at the meeting.

Sheriff Edward E. Cooper, the retiring president of the society, in his annual address said the outlook for the New Jersey farmers was more encouraging than it had been in many years.

Changes of Business Stands.

James R. Blair, the men's furnishing goods' dealer, will move from his present store in the Marsh building on Park avenue, to G. O. Keller's store adjoining J. Hervey Doane's store on Park avenue, April 1. Mr. Keller will move two doors south to the store formerly used by a shoe merchant. William H. Sebring, the clothier, will also move at the same time from the Marsh building to a new store which Charles P. Sebring is building on West Front street.

Engraving work is made a feature at L. Moraller & Son's Park avenue jewelry establishment. If you have received a Christmas gifts in gold or silver why not have it embellished with your monogram? The cost is trifling if Moraller & Son do it.

In the years that he has conducted his business in this city, Allen B. Laing, the electrician, has undertaken a large number of important contracts. If you contemplate anything in this line ask him for estimates.

Water ices, cakes, salads, pies and ice creams of all kinds, from the French caterer, Demolli, are very choice. Demolli caters to Plainfield's best class of people. No reception or dinner is complete when Demolli is left out.

M. C. Dobbins, the Park avenue tobacconist, has recently added several new specimens to his large collection of birds. Drop in and see them and incidentally try one of those Nickle Yara cigars that Dobbins makes and sells.

Besides conducting a general trucking and moving business, William Hand & Sons, of 136 East Second street, maintain fine storage warerooms for storage purposes.

NEW SEWER COMMISSION

Ordinance Renewing Board to Prevent Legal Complications.

HOSPITAL GETS $1,500

Ten Per Cent. to be Added to Delinquent Taxpayers' Bills—Board of School Estimate Named.

Aside from the appointments by Mayor James F. Buckle and the reading of his first annual message, the business of the Common Council, at its adjourned session, Monday, was of a routine nature. Councilman Clarence L. Murphy was the only member absent.

Mr. Tolles introduced an ordinance, suggested as quite necessary by Corporation Counsel Marsh at this time, which provides for the appointment of three disinterested persons to comprise a commission of assessment in the work of extending the sanitary sewer system. The fact that the term of the commissioners serving last year expired January 1, Mr. Marsh considered it important that a new commission be chosen to serve for one year, so that complications might be avoided. According to the ordinance, which was adopted on first and second readings and ordered engrossed and advertised, the commissioners are to assess benefits and damages and their salary is to be fixed by the Common Council.

Mr. Tolles also introduced a resolution providing that in all cases where taxes were not paid on or before December 20 last, ten per cent. per annum be charged to the delinquents.

Still another resolution by Mr. Tolles called for the acceptance of the offer of the Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital to care for the city's indigent poor during the year for the sum of $1,500, this amount to be raised by the general tax levy and to be placed in a separate account to be known as the "hospital fund," and to be used for no other purpose than that named in the resolution. Both of these resolutions were adopted.

It being the annual custom for the Board of Education to appoint two of its number as members of the Board of School Estimate, they to serve with a like number from the Common Council and the Mayor, Mr. Wilson offered a resolution nominating Councilmen Clarence L. Murphy and Ralph I. Tolles as members of this board from that body. A communication from the Board of Education notified the members that L. N. Lovell and C. F. Abbott were appointed at a recent meeting of the board.

A petition from Jacob A. Kriney and other residents in the vicinity of Hunter and Evona avenues, requested the Common Council to place a hydrant at that point. The petitioners claimed, and presented a letter from W. A. Woodruff, insurance agent, in substantiation of the same, that the insurance rates had been raised in that part of the city owing to the lack of fire protection. The matter was referred to the fire and building committee.

VanZandt & Voorhees, who are about to erect a two story building on Park avenue for business purposes, asked the Common Council for the privilege of using concrete blocks in the construction, believing them to be as near fire-proof as possible. Mr. Bullock later offered a resolution that the request be granted after the plans for the building are approved by the building inspector.

The bond of Constable Peter V. Weaver was received, and having been approved by the corporation counsel, was ordered filed, as was also the communication from the Board of Assessors asking for an increase in salary.

OLD GLORY COUNCIL'S NINTH ANNIVERSARY

ORGANIZATION NOW HAS A MEMBERSHIP OF 148

Having recently completed the most prosperous year since its organization, the celebration of the ninth anniversary of Old Glory Council, Daughters of Liberty, took place Saturday evening. The local council won the prize offered by the State Councilor for the greatest increase in membership. On December 3, 49 members were added to the Council's roll. At the conclusion of the celebration, a supper was served, which was enjoyed by 150 persons.

Old Glory Council was started in 1896 with 33 charter members. As the result of the untiring efforts of the members of the council, the membership has increased to 148. Mrs. W. C. Walker, the secretary, read a letter from the State Councilor in which he complimented the council upon its work.

School Teacher Resigns.

Miss Bessie Morris, of the North Plainfield school kindergarten, has resigned in order to accept a similar position in New York.

PROHIBITIONIST'S TALK

Anti-Saloon League Superintendent Praises Plainfield.

NON-SECTARIAN WORK

Rev. Dr. Charles E. Nash Addresses a Large Congregation at First Baptist Church.

Rev. Dr. Charles Edward Nash, State Superintendent of the Anti-Saloon League of New Jersey, spoke to a large congregation at the First Baptist church, Sunday morning, concerning the work this organization is doing in New Jersey. In a forcible way he gave a clear idea of the methods being used to limit the power of the saloon, stating that it was not the purpose or hope that the saloon could be abolished at once.

He praised Plainfield's method of dealing with the liquor problem, that of high license and paid tribute to a communication in The Daily Press, written by C. W. McCutchen on the question of licenses. Dr. Nash said that he hoped to secure a confederation of God's people in fighting the saloon influence and to agitate and educate the masses. He spoke favorably of local option and referred to Kentucky, Ohio, Texas, Georgia and other States where it is in operation with good results.

Perhaps, one of the most interesting statements made was that while the Prohibition party is doing a good work in some ways, it is being realized by the strongest members of that party that the desired object cannot be accomplished through this political body. Dr. Nash said that he expected that some radical changes would soon be made in the Prohibition party which would benefit the Anti-Saloon League.

Speaking of the organization he represents, Dr. Nash characterized it as being legal, benevolent and Catholic. It was proposed to do everything in a legal manner, and act in a benevolent spirit toward all and the platform is such that all persons interested in the movement can accept it, Protestants as well as Catholics. He said that some of the strongest supporters of the league are Catholic priests. The church in action against the saloon, Dr. Nash said, was one of the chief objects of the league.

The Anti-Saloon League is now preparing a local option bill which it hopes to present to the Legislature this winter. This bill will give any district or community the right to ask for local option privileges. Dr. Nash added that the league does not propose to ask for too much, but if the little that is asked for is not granted, it is planned to give opposing legislators a long vacation the same as is done in other States.

At the close of the address many persons subscribed various amounts toward the support of the league in its work.

KENNETH ROBBIE TALKS ON THE TRAINING OF BOYS

IN HIS OPINION LADS SHOULD BE TRAINED BY CLOSE SUPERVISION.

Kenneth Robbie, boys' secretary of the Y. M. C. A., was the speaker at the meeting of the Congregational church Friday evening. Carrying out the general topic of the week of prayer, "The Home," the subject of Mr. Robbie's address last night was "Boys," and the speaker showed the importance and the relation of the boy to home in an interesting and instructive manner.

Occupied with boys' work continually no more capable speaker on the subject of boys could be secured than Mr. Robbie. In his introduction, he spoke of the relation of the boy to the family, of the influences which are brought to bear upon a boy's life, and of the affection which a boy receives in the average home. He went on to speak of the period when a boy becomes a Christian, and quoted statistics showing the greatest number of conversions to take place between the ages of twelve and sixteen years.

In concluding his remarks, Mr. Robbie said that the chief desire of all those interested in boys is to see them become perfect men. "This," the speaker said, "cannot be done without the close and untiring supervision of the parents. It is not enough to send a boy to school, and put him through the usual stages which go to make up a boy's life, and trust the rest to Fate. The boy should receive the constant and watchful guidance in order to make the perfect man."

MISS BURT'S WEDDING

Ceremony Performed by a Classmate of the Groom.

NOW MRS. H. R. REITER

College Friends Attend the Popular Couple—Costly Gifts Exchanged.

Miss Edith Burt, daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. William C. Burt, and granddaughter of the late Chauncey Schaffer, of New York, and Howard Roland Reiter, of Philadelphia, were married Saturday night at 6:30 o'clock, at the home of the bride in West Seventh street. Rev. George Gilmour, a classmate of the groom at Princeton University, and new pastor of the Congregational church at Rutland, Vt., officiated. There were one hundred guests from Philadelphia, Baltimore, the New England States and this city.

It was a green wedding, Christmas greens predominating, while in the dining room the prevailing color was red.

The bride gowned in white satin crepe de chine, trimmed with French lace, and wearing a veil fastened with a spray of orange blossoms and carrying bride roses, was attended by Miss Marion Douglass, of Minneapolis, a classmate at Wellesley College, as maid-of-honor, and Miss Edith Carpenter, of New York, as bridesmaid. They were gowned in white chiffon over pink chiffon, trimmed with lace. They carried pink roses.

Newkirk Reiter, of Princeton University, brother of the groom, was best man, and Frank Reiter, another brother, Charles Crawford Burt and Chauncey Burt, brothers of the bride, were ushers. The bride was given in marriage by her brother, Warren S. Burt. The wedding march was played by Harry Vannesurdam, quarterback and member of the musical clubs at Wesleyan University.

After the ceremony congratulations were offered and supper served. Later the couple departed on a southern trip. Upon their return they will reside here temporarily.

In the exchange of gifts among those of the bridal party, the bride gave her attendants enameled pearl pins. The groom gave his bride a diamond pendant and to his best man and ushers he gave diamond stick pins. The bride received a large number of gifts of value and use, including a solid silver service from the faculty and pupils at The Seminary, where she was an instructor in athletics.

The bride is a graduate of the Plainfield High School, Class of '97, Wellesley College and the New York School of Expression. For three years she has been in charge of the athletics at The Seminary. She has also been prominent in the production of several plays given at the Park Club and the Casino by local society.

It was at Asbury Park that she met Mr. Reiter while he was a life-saver. Being an expert swimmer, she became interested in his work and two years ago the couple made a heroic rescue of a drowning person.

"Bossy" as his friends know him best, was the star half-back on the champion 'Varsity football eleven at Princeton during the years '96, '98 and '99. He was graduated from the unversity in the Class of '98, but returned for a three years' course in the theological seminary. In 1900 the degree of master of arts was conferred on him. Last season he coached the football eleven at Wesleyan University and he is now considering an offer to take charge of the athletics there. He has also devoted some time to evangelistic work, meeting with good success.

PLAINFIELD PYTHIANS INVADE PORT CHESTER

SEVERAL HUNDRED KNIGHTS ATTEND INSTALLATION CEREMONY.

A large delegation of members from Crescent Company, No. 13, U. R., K. of P., journeyed to Port Chester, N. Y., Saturday evening, where they installed a new uniform company, connected with Port Chester Lodge, No. 33. The initiatory work was conducted by Crescent's own team, assisted by Colonel P. Frank Shanley, of Jersey City, and Captain Hale, of Brooklyn. Colonel Shanley made an excellent address which was responded to by Captain McCullough, of the new company.

At the conclusion of the exercises, the Plainfielders were made the guests of honor at a banquet which was attended by several hundred Knights. One of the members of the new company is Robert Patterson, formerly of West Dunellen, and father of Harvey L. Patterson, a Westfield wreck victim who was a leading member of Crescent Company at the time of his death and through which Plainfield and Port Chester were brought together.

MAYOR'S ABLE MESSAGE

His Honor Wanted Legislation Against Spite Houses.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Recommends That City Fathers Facilitate the Erection of New High School and Other Matters.

Mayor James F. Buckle's first annual message was read to the Common Council Monday. It is as follows:

MAYOR'S OFFICE,
Plainfield, N. J.,
January 9, 1905.

To the Honorable the Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

At this, the beginning of the year, when it is possible to ascertain from the annual reports of the various municipal departments, the city's exact status, both financially and along the lines of progress, it should afford us all, as good citizens, great pleasure to know that the opening of the year 1905 finds Plainfield stronger and better from every viewpoint of merit than has ever before been the case. In fact, the uniform excellence existing in the several departments makes it neither necessary nor advisable that I should do more than offer passing reference to the majority of them, while my recommendations to your honorable body must, for the same reasons, be few indeed.

The financial condition of the city continues highly satisfactory, as may be seen by an inspection of the city treasurer's most excellent report. The balance of $27,122.24 in the general fund, which the Council of 1904 received as a legacy from its predecessor, has been so wisely safeguarded and carefully husbanded that your honorable body begins its labors for the present year with a general fund showing a balance of $40,231 36.

TAXES.

The gratifying increase above noted is in a large measure due to the operations and working of the new law governing the assessment and collection of taxes, whereby property is exposed for sale the next year after the taxes assessed thereon become delinquent, instead of the second year thereafter, as was the case before said law came into effect.

This has naturally resulted in a more prompt settlement of taxes, and reference to the several annual reports of the city treasurer will disclose the fact that $25,000 more has been collected during the year just ended, on the taxes of the year immediately preceding, than has ever before been collected on like taxes during any other year.

The State Legislature has, from time to time, applied itself assiduously to the framing and passage of laws designed to make the collection of taxes as simple and speedy as possible, and has succeeded well in accomplishing the purpose sought. The collection of taxes thus being made easier, it remains for the City of Plainfield, through its properly authorized officers, to exercise the utmost care at all times that every property interest, great and small, be made to bear its just and full share of the burden of taxation.

THE FIRE DEPARTMENT.

This department has well sustained its excellent reputation during the year just closed, and I believe enjoys the esteem and confidence of all right thinking citizens.

I must, however, ask your honorable body, in making and establishing its estimate of fire department expenses for the current year, to exercise the most provident caution, that it may never again become necessary to transfer $4,000, or any other sum, from the general to the fire department fund to enable said department to meet its obligations, as was the case last year.

To the various committees of your honorable body I would especially recommend earnest perusal and careful study of the several reports for 1904, on file in the City Clerk's office, as I believe the recorded experiences of your predecessors will afford you the safest and surest basis upon which betterments in the municipal service may be designed for the year now inaugurated. With the single exception above noted, I am glad to say that all city departments have kept within their respective appropriations.

I would also recommend to your honorable body that whenever occasion arises in any city department to purchase supplies in any considerable quantities, you request bids for the same, and also, that our own Plainfield merchants and taxpayers be given the preference in the purchase of all supplies, unless it can be demonstrated that the city's interests can best be served elsewhere.

THE NEW HIGH SCHOOL.

Plainfield is to be congratulated that its Board of Education has been so prompt to avail itself of the opportunities offered by the new school law, and that the result of their energy is so rapidly materializing in the shape of the splendid new High School on West Ninth street. Always held up as a pattern in the generous care of its youth along educational lines, Plainfield, in its latest display of progress and wisdom, well merits its enviable reputation. In this connection it would seem to be advisable that your honorable body and its individual members should closely follow the workings of the Board of Education, to the end that there may be at all times complete harmony and understanding between these two eminently important branches of the city government.

SPITE HOUSES.

The subject of "spite house," so called, has come very prominently before our citizens recently, and demands more than ordinary notice on the part of your honorable body. While it must be our constant care, as public servants, to safeguard the property interests of all our citizens, foreign as well as native born, poor as well as rich, we must, in justice to all, be especially careful to examine every building transaction in which the city is called upon to exercise its authority in the way of a permit, and if in any instance there be the slightest suspicion of bad faith, we must first make thorough investigation of the facts, and in the event that our suspicions shall prove to be well grounded, do all things lawful to thwart and frustrate the designs of the projectors.

There are two instances of this apparent bad faith to which I would call your especial attention, in one of which the residents of Hillside avenue are vitally concerned; the other of which is a matter of most serious moment to the residents of East Front street. In each of these instances the fact that the owners have gone far away from their own kind and have builded their unsightly shacks in exclusive neighborhoods, where there is not the slightest community of interest for them, is enough to warrant the presumption in any fair mind that ulterior motives influenced them in their actions. Adjacent property values have unquestionably been lessened in consequence, which is a matter of deep concern to the city at large, and in addition thereto, the reputation of Plainfield is bound to suffer, if it shall be determined that any such blighting scheme is a possibility within the city limits, and that citizens must be put to the necessity of paying exorbitant prices to designing parties in order to rid themselves of offensive and undesirable neighbors.

I would earnestly request your honorable body to take these matters under advisement, and if it be possible in any lawful way so to do, to see that ample reparation is made for the infliction of these miserable buildings in our neighborhoods.

And in order that the utmost caution may be exercised in the future in these and kindred matters, I would recommend that the building ordinance be so amended that no permit for a building of any description be given by the Inspector until the same shall have received the sanction of a majority of the fire and buildings committee.

GARBAGE DISPOSAL.

The city being now in possession of a garbage disposal plant, I believe your honorable body should, at its early convenience, take up the matter of the collection of the city's refuse, and if it shall seem to you advisable that the present system of licensed carriers should be discontinued, and the city maintain the entire service, it will then become your duty to provide ways and means therefor.

GENERAL IMPROVEMENTS.

The many and varied improvements which have gone so far in recent years to make Plainfield a desirable home and business city, in each and every instance have proven a success, and as, without exception, the several projects have been well and carefully financed at the outset, our pride in them may well be unqualified. The most recent improvement, and one which we have not as yet had full opportunity to test, is the new brick pavement on Watchung avenue, between North avenue and East Second street, and in case time shall prove the success of this latest experiment, I would recommend that whenever our present macadam pavement becomes worn out, brick pavement be substituted therefor in the business section of the city where the traffic is heaviest.

This, gentlemen of the Common Council, concludes my first message to your honorable body. I sincerely trust that we may work together in entire harmony during the year ahead of us, and with an eye single for our city's welfare.

With assurances of my heartiest cooperation in all plans designed for that end, I have the honor to remain,

Your obedient servant,
James F. Buckle,
Mayor.

BUILDING IMPROVEMENT

Structure for West Second Street, Near Park Avenue.

PLANS ARE READY

Remodelling of Building Next to Schreiner's Drug Store—Store and Offices to be Arranged.

Among the many improvements to be made in local business property are the plans for the remodelling of the brick building located on West Second street, adjoining B. J. Schreiner's pharmacy, which is owned by William R. Codington. The building stands between the pharmacy and the one occupied by Henry VanName. Mr. Codington proposes to transform the structure into a store on the first floor with handsome offices on the second floor. The store will be occupied by Mefford Giles, the butcher, who is obliged to give up his present location, corner of Park avenue and West Second street, which will be occupied with a new building by The Plainfield Trust Company.

The store to be occupied by Mr. Giles will have a twenty foot frontage. It will have two six-foot plate glass windows in front and on the Park avenue side there will be a ten-foot plate glass. It is proposed to bring the structure out to the building line, which will be about on a line with the Martin building.

The upper part of the building will have a frontage of twenty-four feet, the difference of four feet between the upper and lower frontage, will be used for a stairway leading to the offices. Mr. Codington is now receiving estimates on the work.

The changes will be made so that Mr. Giles can take possession of his new store by April 1. The building will have all the modern improvements. It will also be connected by a stairway in the rear from Mr. Codington's building on the corner.

CAPT. HUBBARD HONORED

Chosen Director of Freeholders for Seventeenth Time.

ANNUAL SESSION

Board Now Composed of Fifteen Republicans and Five Democrats —The Proceedings.

J. Frank Hubbard, of this city, was elected director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, Thursday, for the seventeenth time, although the Board will not re organize until the regular May meeting, which time is fixed by law. Owing to the fact that members are elected to the board in the spring as well as November, there is now some confusion, it being difficult for the director to maintain his committees throughout the year. It is quite likely that an effort will be made to have the Legislature fix a certain time in the year when all members shall be elected and thus obviate this trouble. Six new members were sworn in yesterday.

An important matter brought up and left undecided was that in reference to the bill of James J. Manning, formerly City Clerk of Elizabeth, for $840 as personal services in the last election. The Board believes the bill exorbitant and has refused to pay it. Mr. Manning declines to accept any thing less than the amount stated. Yesterday the matter was put on the table for future action. It is said to be the purpose of the Board to ask the Legislature to fix the election fees to be paid the clerks throughout the county.

In the appointment of standing committees, Freeholder W. A. Westphal, of this city, was placed on the jail inspection and appropriation committees. The Board now stands fifteen Republicans and five Democrats.

Captain Hubbard, who has been a member of the Board of Freeholders for thirty-five years, is president of the City National Bank, a director of the Plainfield Water Company, a veteran of the Civil War, a member of Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., and the New York Commandery, Military Order of the Loyal Legion.

PLUMBERS' BANQUET AT THE KENSINGTON

ANNUAL EVENT OF LOCAL UNION, NO. 103, JOURNEYMEN PLUMBERS.

Following the installation of officers for 1905, at Trades' Council Hall, Local No. 103, of the Journeymen Plumbers Union, held its fourth annual banquet Thursday at the Hotel Kensington. The installation exercises were in charge of the installing officers from local No. 24, Newark. State President James Brady from local 14, in Jersey City, and Inspector Addis, were guests of honor.

These are the new officers: President, M. J. McCann; vice president, James Dady; past president, James Fosbere; financial secretary, Louis Feiring; treasurer, Ernest Enander; secretary, Fred Winn.

Immediately after the ceremonies at the rooms the men proceeded in a body, to the Kensington Hotel, where the banquet was held. James Harper acted as toastmaster and the committee in charge was made up of R. J. McCann, Louis Feiring, M. J. Higgins, H. Reilly and E. H. Enander.

Miss Dobbins Six Years Old.

In honor of the sixth anniversary of her birthday, Erma Gordon Dobbins, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter C. Dobbins, of West End avenue, was given a little party yesterday afternoon by her grandmother, Mrs. M. C. Dobbins, at her home in Elmwood place. The afternoon was spent in playing games and later supper was served. The table was prettily decorated for the occasion. Little Miss Dobbins received a number of gifts. The guests were Cora Gray, Theodosia Vail, Elizabeth Higgins, Ethel Vail, Anna Vail and Grace Vail.

Miss Erickson Perkins, of Rochester, N. Y., is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. S. A. Ginna, of Watchung avenue.

REV. DR. RICHARD'S TALK

Noted Divine Addresses His Old Parishioners Here.

MISSIONS HIS SUBJECT

Pastor of Brick Church Says Progress Would be Made if Workers Emulated Christ's Example.

Taking for his thought, the vast progress which the cause would make, were those interested to adopt thoroughly the principles on which Christ carried forward his own missionary campaign, Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, pastor of the Brick Presbyterian church in New York, addressed his old congregation in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue church Thursday, on the subject of "Missions—Home and Foreign."

One of the points made by Dr. Richards was that truly successful mission work must be carried forward by people by the same spirit that moved Christ when He said, "I must preach the Kingdom, for herefore was I sent," the spirit that will not allow the man to do or think successfully any thing not contributing to the general progress of his "mission."

Christ was a missionary, and the most successful of them all. Two faultless reasons for close adherence to His example, by all who would aid the missionary cause. Close adherence to this example means that those who practice it never undertake the most trival appearing things without a determination to make them count for something.

"There was," Dr. Richards said, "a sublime certainty about the acts of the Saviour, finality of purpose exhibited in all his moves, that marked the inspired worker and distinguished him from his equally conscientious, but more plodding fellows who reason out their course and are thus more liable to hesitate or vacillate.

"This spirit at first fills the heart of the new convert or worker, but it is easy to drop into the selfish attitude which says, 'My ideal church is not a place in which the well-dressed congregation, meets to listen to the platitudes of a preacher more anxious to smooth down the rough spots in the pathway, than to develope that fine energy which was the heritage of the apostles and enabled them to clear at one bound, obstacles that a less courageous heart would shrink from meeting.' "

In closing, the speaker expressed the hope that any of those among his old parishioners who felt called upon to "preach the Kingdom to other cities," would listen to the voice seriously and not dismiss the thought with scant consideration.

The latter portion of the meeting consisted of a prayer meeting for missions.

Announce Engagement.

Mr. and Mrs. Adelbert Vail, of Washington avenue, gave a reception last night in honor of their daughter, Miss Edith Vail, for the purpose of announcing her engagement to Frank Knight, of Richmond street. There were about thirty guests present. After congratulations were offered, games were played and later supper was served.

WEALTH IN TEXAS ONIONS.

Hitherto Worthless Land in the Lone Star State Turned to Good Account.

More fortunes are being made in growing Bermuda onions in Texas than in the oil business. Some capital is required to operate in the Texas oil fields, while in the onion growing business an investment of a few hundred dollars is reasonably certain of bringing a profit of several thousand, says an Austin report.

The area of the state in which onions can be grown is limited, but it covers many hundred thousand acres. This land is situated in the extreme southwestern part of the state. The artesian water belt, which extends from Carrizo Springs southeast to near Brownsville, a distance of about 300 miles, is well adapted to onion growing; and very little of it has been developed.

The valley of the Rio Grande, from Laredo down to Brownsville, is also a good onion region. In this valley the irrigating is done by pumping the water from the Rio Grande, while in the artesian water belt flowing wells are bored at depths of 400 to 600 feet. One of these wells furnishes sufficient water supply to irrigate a good-sized farm.

The profits made in growing onions in this region, which was formerly considered worthless except for grazing, are bringing many new settlers into the country. The raw land is selling for $5 to $15 per acre. It costs about $7 per acre to clear it, but when this is done and a water supply is obtained the net yearly income is from $250 to $750.

The onion shipping season for this year is about over, and the yield will be not far from 25,000,000 pounds. The range of prices is from one and three-quarters to three cents per pound. At an average price of two cents the gross receipts this year amount to $500,000, which is distributed among fewer than 50 men.

ONLY SOURCE OF INCOME.

Fishing and Hunting Rights Bring Sole Revenue of Many Titled English Families.

Were it not for the enormous sums paid for fishing and shooting rights, many people of ancient names and goodly title would, in the most literal sense, have no mans of livelihood whatever; and only the other day, says London Tit-Bits, one of the best-known property agents of the West End of London drew up for the writer a list of a dozen people mixing in society of an exclusive kind, every penny of whose income is derived from the letting of sporting rights.

Nearly all the money thus expended has been made in commerce, and the agent referred to above showed documentary evidence proving that there are lots of men who did not mind paying as much as £100 for every deer, £3 for every trout, and £20 for every salmon they kill, plus the sport of killing them. One of the most remarkable features of this letting is the fact that only about one in every hundred of the owners of ancient sporting rights ever enjoys his privileges as a sportsman. He either prefers to, or is compelled to, part with such privileges; and those who take advantage of them are nearly all people in business.

This renting of fishing and sporting has even extended down to comparatively humble people in the provinces. In places like Leeds, for instance, half a dozen small tradesmen buy up the shooting and fishing in remote parts of Yorkshire, the one idea being to get out of the turmoil of town life with some distinct object in view. Many a small Yorkshire farmer is being kept, and well kept, not by his farming, but by the letting of some comparatively insignificant sporting right that was not thought to be worth sixpence ten years ago.

CRUSADE AGAINST HATS.

Physical Culture Society in England Taboos Head Coverings of All Kinds.

If the physical culturists of Leeds have their way the hat will soon disappear altogether, reports the Toronto Telegram. The man who thinks more of personal comforts than of the dictates of fashion has long since discarded the tall hat. Now the members of the Leeds Physical Culture society have entered upon a campaign against all kinds of head coverings other than those provided by nature, from the top hat to the Panama, and from the bowler to the cap.

At a meeting of the committee Harry Kremnitz, an engineer by profession, leveled a strong indictment against hats of all kinds, charging them with being the cause of all baldness, gray hairs and other evils. Nothing could be imagined, he said, which was more unsightly or more uncomfortable than the top hat. He challenged any one to bring forward a single advantage it possessed. Children's hair, he added, would grow curly and strong if their heads were left uncovered, and there was no doubt that if fresh air were admitted to the head it would prevent gray hairs and baldness.

It was decided to bring the matter before the general body of members. Meanwhile efforts are being made to enroll recruits for the new movement.

Mr. Kremnitz has not worn a hat for nearly a week, and several other gentlemen have pledged themselves to go bareheaded when not in the city. On a recent Sunday half a dozen of the bolder spirits went for a walk into the country hatless.

GERMAN ASPARAGUS

ITS CULTIVATION A PROFITABLE INDUSTRY IN THE EMPIRE.

How the Plants Are Cultivated—Should Be Replanted Every Twelve Years—Loose, Sandy Soil Is Needed.

The raising of asparagus for export, as well as for domestic use, is an industry of considerable importance in parts of Germany. It is confined chiefly to certain localities of North Germany and parts of Baden. In Baden much attention is given to the industry, and the asparagus is said to be superior in quality to that grown in other parts of the empire.

The soil in which asparagus is raised in Baden is the sandy loam common in the upper Rhine valley. If well manured, this soil also produces good crops of potatoes, sugar beets, hops and cereals.

For asparagus raising the land is first very thoroughly manured and the roots are planted at intervals of from four to five feet in rows about the same distance apart. For the first three or four years no crop is harvested; the land is kept clear of weeds and well cultivated, and is fertilized with stable manure in preference to commercial fertilizers, although these are used to some extent. During these three or four years the ground is kept hilled up around the plants with a hoe, and the shoots are cut back until a considerable bunch of strong roots forms at each hill with fibers running in every direction, meeting those from adjoining hills.

A fair crop can generally be harvested the fourth year. As soon as the ground is in condition to work in the spring the process of hilling up the earth around each bunch of plants begins. This is done with hoes, and each row now shows a succession of small mounds from 10 to 14 inches high, with a base a yard or more in diameter and with the top flattened to a surface of perhaps half this diameter.

In the first warm days of April the new shoots begin to appear, just breaking through the top or sides of these mounds. A long knife is run into the soft, mellow earth of the mounds and these shoots are cut off from five to eight inches below the surface. The shoots are entirely white, except at the tops, where they show a slight trace of color. They are tender for the most part throughout their lengths and are finely flavored. These shoots are somewhat larger than those commonly seen in the United States, being generally from one-half to three-eighths of an inch in diameter.

The quantity of cuttings taken from each hill or mound during a season varies much with the weather, the quality of the soil, and other factors. It is reckoned at from two or three to four pounds.

An asparagus field is supposed to be at its best from eight to 12 years after planting. From that time on the shoots are apt to be less tender, though they may not decrease in size or quality. Replanting of the field is thought to be advisable after the twelfth year, though many tracts are said to have remained without replanting from 20 to 25 or even 30 years.

As land on which asparagus is grown is worked mainly by hand and requires heavy manuring each year, the crop is said to require considerably more labor than the raising of potatoes. It yields, however, a somewhat better income, one year being taken with another. The crop is reasonably certain and always brings a fair price. Canning establishments buy large quantities of asparagus and generally pay fair prices. The bulk of the crop, however, is sold at Mannheim and other near-by cities for immediate consumption.

The high esteem in which this product is held by Americans living or traveling abroad would suggest that its cultivation in the neighborhood of our large cities might be greatly increased, especially in localities where a loosed, sandy soil exists.

FAT RETURNS FROM DIME.

A New Orleans Traveling Man Says the Little Coin Yielded Him All of $2,750.

"You often hear of men running up a small sum of money into a good big bank roll, but I did something once in Omaha that, so far as I know, beats all records when the amount originally invested is considered," said E. W. Gaylord, of New Orleans, to a Washington Post reporter.

"I was waiting in Omaha for a remittance from my firm, and, having no coin about me was feeling in that lonesome state that the moneyless man alone can appreciate. To kill time I walked into a gambling house, having not the remotest idea of doing aught save watching the players. As I stood in the vicinity of the roulette wheel I mechanically thrust my hand into a pocket of my vest and extracted a lone dime that I did not know was on my person. I actually felt ashamed to put it on anything, but something whispered it might win, and, sure enough, when the wheel stopped my coin had won. Again I won, and again until that ten-cent piece had brought me in nine dollars.

"This is pretty good interest, I thought, and cashed in taking my nine dollars and moving over to the stud poker game, and investing in chips. My luck followed me here, likewise, and I ran up my stake to $85 in less than 30 minutes. Considering what a big return this was, I began to feel a chilly sensation at my pedal extremities, and as it was near the dinner hour, I made this an excuse for quitting.

After dining, the desire to press my luck was too great to be resisted, and being near a hundred strong, I went back to the sporting establishment and took my seat at a draw poker game where the buyout was $50, table stakes. It's no use to weary you with the details of my play, but from the very jump the fortune that had been with me earlier in the day stuck. I held the most marvellous series of hot hands ever known, straights, flushes and fulls without end and several sets of fours, and on nearly all of them got good plays.

"To cut it short, when I left the game in the small hours of the morning I cashed in $2,750, and got the money on the spot, the house man remarking that if this was my usual style he would like to engage me at any salary to play for him."

PIE BRINGS NEEDED REST.

Pastry Contains Opiate and Maniac Is Put to Sleep Without His Knowledge.

All other efforts being futile, a gooseberry pie was finally used as the successful medium to administer opiates to Rufus Davis, of Alexandria, Ind., confined in the Madison county jail until he can be admitted to the hospital for the insane. His mental derangement is such that the man has been a raving maniac since he was brought to the jail. He had slept but very little the past week.

Officers and physicians found it impossible to administer medicine of any kind to the insane man. He was finally asked what kind of pie he preferred for supper, and he begged for gooseberry. A fine, large gooseberry pie was prepared, and carefully mixed with the ingredients were morphine and medicine intended to quiet the man so that he might sleep and be relieved. When the "doctored" pie was given him he was selfish with it, and permitted no one to approach it. He ate all of it, and two hours later was quiet for the first time in several days and, while guarded by a physician to note his condition, Davis slept peacefully through the night.

HE ATE THE WHOLE PIE.

ELKS DECIDE TO BUY HALL

B. P. O. E. Members Unanimously Approve Scheme.

CLOSING THE DEAL

Price to be Paid is $16,500—Option on Building Until Tuesday.

Plainfield Lodge, B. P. O. E., at its meeting Wednesday, expressed unanimous approval of the scheme to purchase the Washington Hall property on West Second street, as a home for the Elks

The proposition submitted by George F. Brown, agent for the property, to sell it to the Elks for $16,500 was favorably received. The Elks have an option on the building until Tuesday, January 10.

There are two heirs yet to hear from before the property can be sold. One is a relative of the late Mr. Rice, former owner, and Captain Baker, both living in the South. They have been written to and as soon as their consent is received the deal will undoubtedly be closed.

GEORGE JOHNSTON MAY MANAGE THE TEAM

WOULD GIVE THE LOCAL FANS A FAST ARTICLE OF BASEBALL.

Definite plans for local baseball the coming season have not yet been announced, but it is learned that George Johnston, who managed the Plainfield A. C. team last year, is willing to assume the management of a first-class aggregation here again, provided he secures the proper support. Friends of Mr. Johnston claim that he was greatly handicapped last year by being asked to take charge of the team after many of the best players had been engaged, and besides there was a club indebtedness that did not work toward the success of the organization. Now that the debts have been paid, it would give Mr. Johnston an excellent opportunity to put a successful team in the field.

Mr. Johnston is one of the best informed men on ball matters in the State. He knows the players, just where to get them and whether they are capable of putting up a first-class game. It has been suggested that if Charles Woolston does not manage the proposed Plainfield A. C. team it would be a good plan to secure Mr. Johnston's services, before he makes other plans. It has been hinted that in case he does not run a team here next season he will be persuaded to put a nine in the field at Scotch Plains, where for several years he was so successful. If Mr. Johnston is secured for the local nine, it will have a tendency to bring the Scotch Plains patronage here, otherwise it may go elsewhere. Providing Mr. Johnston is secured early enough he will be able to pick a fast company of players before they are signed by other organizations. Barring last year's indebtedness, some of which was incurred before Mr. Johnston took charge, the club made money.

ARMY OFFCERS WILL INSPECT COMPANY K

MAJOR - GENERAL WANSER ISSUES ORDERS TO NATIONAL GUARD.

Orders have been issued by Major-General Wanser, of the New Jersey National Guard, for the annual inspections at times appointed by the State officers. A regular army officer will make the inspection.

The first two weeks in March include the dates for the Second Regiment companies, Company K, of this city, being ordered to prepare for an inspection on March 13. The drill, which will be subject to certain orders to be issued to the company in the near future, will be held at the armory.

The uniform for the inspections will be cap, blouse, blue shirt, trousers without leggings, black shoes and white gloves. Enlisted men on detached service may be inspected with any company most convenient, and credit given by the inspector to the company to which the enlisted man belongs. Surgeon's certificates will be presented for all reported as absent, sick, and a copy of the furlough for all absent with leave. Those absent without leave will be tried by court-martial as soon as possible after the inspection.

Annual Y. M. C. A. Meeting.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A., at which the officers and directors are elected, will be held at the association on January 19. An interesting programme will be arranged for the occasion which will be marked by the usual reports and routine business.

SCHOOL BOARD ELECTS

Dr. J. B. Probasco Chosen President for Twelfth Time.

NO CHANGES MADE

In the Reorganization All of the Old Committees Are Reappointed for Another Year.

Outside of the annual election of officers and appointment of the committees for the new year, Wednesday's meeting of the Board of Education, was taken up with purely routine business.

Coming to order with all members present except Charles F. Abbott, the election of officers for 1905 was taken up. This resulted in re-elections all along the line. President Dr. J. B. Probasco then announced that it was his wish that the committees continue as constituted at present.

This makes the twelfth consecutive term of Dr. Probasco's service in the presidency. The other officers are vice president, L. N. Lovell; secretary, F. T. Woodhull, and clerk, Frank B. Clark.

The committees are as follows: Teachers and text-books, J. B. Probasco, L. N. Lovell and C. F. Abbott; books, stationery and supplies, F. T. Woodhull, C. F. Abbott and J. B. Probasco; buildings and repairs, C. F. Abbott, J. B. Probasco and L. N. Lovell; fuel, E. M. Cave, L. N. Lovell and F. T. Woodhull; finance, L. N. Lovell, C. F. Abbott and E. M. Cave.

Three more applications for the post of janitor of the new High School building were received and filed. Benjamin W. Evans, E. P. Kellogg and Alexander G. Martin all want the job. Thomas Clarkson, the present janitor of the Stillman High School, had previously made application for the place.

When called upon for his report, Superintendent H. M. Maxson stated that he had not prepared a formal one, but mentioned one or two things of general interest. Prof. Marrs, he said, an instructor of penmanship, who desires to teach in the local schools, had deposited with him a $300 guarantee, securing the performance of his duties should the board accept his proposition. Dr. Maxson also stated that in his estimation the two new typewriters needed by the commercial department could be bought more economically than they could be rented. He was empowered to act on his judgment in the matter.

The bond furnished by the American Surety Company for George Tobin in connection with his contract on the new High School, was presented and accepted subject to approval as to form.

W. F. Arnold, custodian of school moneys, presented his report which showed among other things an uncollected balance of city school taxes amounting to $11,000. The school tax collected in the city during the past year amounted to over $43,000.

Expenditures on the new High School have reached the sum of $9,800, leaving a balance of about $20,000 to carry the work along until the next series of bonds are issued.

On inquiry from Mr. Woodhull, the clerk reported the coal supply to be holding out satisfactorily in spite of the severe weather.

ASKS $10,000 DAMAGES FROM P. S. C. FOR INJURIES

SOUTH PLAINFIELD MAN BRINGS SUIT IN THE SUPREME COURT.

As the result of injuries sustained in a trolley accident the latter part of October, Anton Phillips, of South Plainfield, has brought suit against the Public Service Corporation for the amount of $10,000. Mr. Phillips is represented by William Newcorn, and the case will be brought up at the May term of the Supreme Court.

While driving home in a closed carriage with his wife on October 30, the rear wheel of the vehicle was struck by the fender of the trolley, and Mr. Phillips was thrown violently out. His wife saved herself by grasping the front set. As the result of his fall, Mr. Phillips' jaw was broken, and the chin so torn that it was necessary to take thirteen stitches in the wound. Several ribs were broken and a number of teeth knocked out. He was driven home after the accident, when Dr. A. F. VanHorne was summoned. Thomas Terrell was the driver of the cab.

Phillips has been confined to his home ever since the accident.

Herbert B. Putnam, of Rochester, N. Y., who has been spending several days with friends here, has returned.

Miss Clara Smith, of Duer street, has recovered from a recent illness that detained her at home for a few days.

PEACE AT HOME

Orange Famine and Cotton Panic Among His Prophesies—Bad Weather for Inauguration.

According to Andrew J. Devoe, the Hackensack weather prophet, 1905 will see an orange famine, a cotton panic, a bad day for the inauguration of President Roosevelt, a severly hot summer and a cyclonic storm which will sweep the Atlantic coast from Maine to Florida.

At his home Thursday Devoe said: "Let all prepare for a small blizzard about January 6. It will continue January 12, 13 and 15. Up to January 25 it will be severely cold On February 3 there will be a big snowstorm, but the severest storm of the month will occur between the 19th and 22d.

"Orange planters in the gulf States who are allowing the fruit to remain on the trees should pick them now, because a great storm and a killing frost is about to sweep that section. All oranges not picked before January 6 will be destroyed. Cotton planters who are preparing to burn their surplus should store it, because the crop this year will be slim. It will also be burned by the sun.

"The important event in March will be the inauguration. The weather on March 3 and 4 will be cloudy and threatening and a heavy storm is due on the fifth.

"For the United States 1905 will be a peaceful year. But the Russian-Japanese War will have to terminate within the next six months, or the United States and Great Britain will interfere, without bloodshed. Both sides will lose, but Russia will have to evacuate Manchuria.

"A great storm is coming in the middle of May. The summer will be one of the hottest on record. December will be one of the coldest months ever known. Cattle and crops will suffer terribly from the summer heat.

"There is an important bill before the United States Senate to offer $150,000 in prizes: $50,000 to the man who most accurately forecasts the regular heavy rainfalls and $100,000 to the man who discovers the law which controls the weather. The prizes will both go to the same man. I have discovered that law."

Brothers Die on Same Day.

Harry and Raymond Higgins, cousins of Miss Alice Higgins, of West Front street, died at their home in Barleysheaf, N. J., on Thursday from spinal meningitis, believed to have been contracted while caring for a horse sick with that disease. One young man died within a few hours of the other. The circumstance has caused an unusual interest among the medical fraternity. The young men were sons of Joseph Higgins, a well-known blacksmith at Barleysheaf, a brother of J. B. Higgins, of West Front street, and they worked about their father's shop. The funeral services were held from the late home Saturday morning at 11 o'clock.

LIBRARY FOR WESTFIELD.

Andrew Carnegie Makes Offer Which Council is Considering.

Andrew Carnegie has offered $10,000 for a library for Westfield, on condition that the town provide a site and will agree to raise $1,000 a year for the support of the library. The offer was laid before the Town Council at its last meeting and a committee was appointed to consider it.

For Fresh Air Benefit.

O. S. Rogers, chairman of the boys' work committee of the Y. M. C. A., has secured the Sagamore Musical Club to give an entertainment on January 23 for the benefit of the Fresh Air Camp. It is not definitely known whether the Y. M. C. A. Hall will be used for the entertainment, though it is expected that the performance will be given in that place.

FIRST BAPTISTS ORGANIZE

Dr. N. H. Probasco President of the Men's Club.

OBJECTS OUTLINED

Alexander Gilbert, Chas. W. McCutchen and G. A. Chapman Members of the Board of Governors.

In perfecting a permanent organization the Men's Club, of the First Baptist church, adopted a constitution and bylaws, elected officers and made excellent progress along other lines toward the success of the club Thursday. Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, pastor of the church, called the meeting to order and made a few remarks, outlining briefly the purpose of the organization. He compared the work of the men with that of the women, adding that many women are able to command their time and devote much of it to societies both in and out of the church, while the men may be just as willing to this but cannot owing to business matters. He expressed his belief in men and boy Christians as much as in women and girl Christians.

The pastor said that men's clubs are now the rule in churches and in many cases they are a power for good. He dwelt on the social side of the club, referring to pure, wholesome entertainment, an occasional ladies' night, fine music, prominent speakers and perhaps an annual banquet, as pleasant and possibly essential, but secondary to the great object, that of doing good and resolving to advance the interest of the Kingdom of God, which he said would mean a long, strong pull all together.

At the suggestion of the members, Dr. Chambliss was made temporary chairman and John G. MacLaughlin temporary secretary. J. Herbert Case, chairman of the committee on constitution and bylaws, submitted what the committee believed would be a suitable form of government for the club. It provides that the organization be known as the Men's Club, of the First Baptist church, to be an auxiliary of the church for the development of personal power and assistance to the pastor and that any man eighteen years of age and over is eligible to membership. It also provides for a president, two vice presidents, secretary, treasurer, a board of governors of ten, that board to select five additional members. Meetings are to be held on the second Monday in each month, except in June, July and August. There are to be membership, finance, reception, music, entertainment, religious work, printing and press committees, also an honorary list. The dues are to be $1 a year. Fifteen members will constitute a quorum of the club and six for the Board of Governors.

After the constitution and bylaws were adopted, George A. Chapman, chairman of the nominating committee, presented these nominations and the election of the ticket was unanimous.

The officers are as follows: President, Dr. Norman H. Probasco; first vice president, J. Herbert Case; second vice president, Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan; treasurer, Alfred M. Day; secretary, John G. MacLaughlin; board of governors, Reuben Knox, James D. Macnab, N. Douglas Drake, Kenneth Robbie, J. Henry Crane, George F. White, Walter C. Dobbins, Stephen B. Joseph, Frank W. Jones and Edward T. Wilson. The board met after the meeting and elected these men as additional members: Charles W. McCutchen, Alex. Gilbert, George A. Chapman, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, and Gifford Cooley.

The new president then took the chair, thanking the members for the honor conferred. He first read an invitation from the Men's Club, of the Congregational church, inviting the new organization to attend its meeting to be held Tuesday night, January 10. The invitation was accepted and a large delegation will attend. President Probasco will appoint the committees within a short time. Arrangements will be made to have some form of entertainment for the first meeting of the club on Monday night, February 13

Inauguration of Governor Stokes at Trenton on January 17, 1905.

What will be the most imposing ceremonial of years will be the inauguration of Governor Stokes at Trenton on January 17, and with fine weather the fete will be worth traveling from afar to see. The New Jersey Central will sell tickets to Trenton from all its stations in New Jersey at one fare for the round trip, and tickets will be good going on January 16 and 17 and good to return on January 18. For further information inquire of nearest ticket agent.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 15.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Am I my brother's keeper?—Gen. iv, 8-15. (A temperance meeting.)

The question of the topic was the question with which Cain answered God when He said unto him: "Where is Abel, thy brother? And he said: I know not. Am I my brother's keeper?" First he denied his knowledge of his brother and then his responsibility for him. And thus today many try to shirk the duties they owe to their fellow men. If men are being ruined by the thousands through intemperance they profess not to know it and then disclaim responsibility if shown it is true. If they heard the cry of a child in a burning building they would risk life itself to save it, and yet the same man is unmoved by the fact that hundreds of thousands of babes grown to manhood are being destroyed by the curse of strong drink. They are not Cains taking the lives of their fellow men, but are they not often like one who would stand upon the shore and watch a fellow man drown without offering to aid him and as he disappeared for the last time would say to himself, "Am I my brother's keeper?" Would the priest and the Levite have had no responsibility had the "man who fell among the thieves" died? Christ's "Go and do thou likewise" forever declares their and our responsibility under such circumstances.

The excuses and objections of men in relation to their responsibility toward their fellow men are false and worthless. This can be easily proved by testing them. "Every man should be able to take care of himself," is an excuse often heard, but experience proves its fallacy. Men are not equally strong or equally capable of taking care of themselves. Some are born strong; others are weak and need the care and guardianship of their fellows. If we were weak and another strong, would we not want their help and support? Again, it is said, "It is all I can do to take care of myself." This is also untrue. No man does take care of himself. God has blessed him with strength, and there are other sustaining influences about the man who can withstand temptation independent of himself. Moreover, the man who stands can help another. All have some power to help others and should do it. "They do not deserve it," is another objection. Many have no sympathy with one who falls into the habit of intemperance upon the ground that he should not have been so unwise, and therefore, having been so, he should reap the consequences. But through the apostle God says, "Brethren, if a man be overtaken in a fault [overcome by temptation] ye which are spiritual restore such a one in the spirit of meekness lest thou also be tempted." Nothing will excuse a man from lending a helping hand whenever and wherever he can do it.

"Am I my brother's keeper?" "Bear ye one another's burdens and so fulfill the law of Christ." "We, then, that are strong ought to bear the infirmities of the weak and not to please ourselves." "Destroy not him with meat for whom Christ died."

THE NATIVE DANCES

GRACEFUL MOVEMENTS OF THE PACIFIC ISLAND PEOPLES.

Music Is Their Natural Expression of Happiness—Various Forms of Expressive Dances Found in Different Island Tribes.

Pango Pango, Tutuilla.—Among the people of the Pacific isles music is the natural expression of happiness. They are of an intensely emotional temperament and joy or excitement is expressed in ringing chorus or in graceful dances.

The native dance is somewhat allied to the muscle dances of the east, but is much more graceful and pleasing.

The Hawaiian hula is danced by any number of girls trained for the purpose. Sometimes there is but one or two and sometimes a dozen or more. These girls are chosen from among the belles of the village and great pains are taken that they shall exercise and perfect themselves in the difficult movements of which their dance consists.

The garments are suited to the dancers. The hair is often left flowing and thickly intertwined with blossoms of different gaudy hues. Heavy wreaths of flowers called leis are thrown about the neck, reaching sometimes to the knees. About the waist is a heavily-fringed skirt of plaited palm leaves, and on wrists and ankles are ropes of flowers.

The orchestra at one of the native dances is primitive, consisting of the beating of native instruments and the intoning of voices, now low and soft as the dancers whirl lightly to and fro, or now a loud chant when the dancers beat their hands together or stamp upon the floor. It is but a question of time when the original Hawaiian dance will be but a memory. The great influx of white settlers has had a pernicious influence upon most things native and bids fair to turn the poetic expression of happiness and simple gayety into a mere vulgar exhibition.

Among the natives of Tahiti a similar dance under the same name is found, except that here the men take part. The dances here are all illustrative of some song. Perhaps it is a song of love, of the courtship of some timid maiden.

The song is low and tender, the maid dances lightly to and fro swaying her slender body to the rhythm of the chant. Suddenly the lover appears. He warily approaches. The maiden, affright, flies beyond, she assumes look and attitude of indifference. This goes on for hours sometimes, the pursued gradually yielding, while faster he pursues and faster the music plays till at last she turns conquered by his persistence and stretches forth her hands, turned palm up, a token of submission, and the dance is over.

Among the Samoan tribes the dances are of still a slightly different nature. They call an assembly of the dancers and the dance itself the Seva-seva.

Instead of standing upright as the other dancers do, the greater part of the time they are on their knees, or crouching in a circle.

The attire is practically the same except that the Samoans bleach the hair with lime till it is of a reddish hue and dress fantastically. They are also tatooed.

The Fijis are more weird, their hair being stiffened into a great pyramid and decorated with mirrors, shells or flowers, anything that can be attached. The dance is akin to the Samoan islanders', though not so graceful.

The Solomon islanders are a very different looking race, small and very black. They delight in war dances with dreadful masks and huge wands of some cork-like substance woven like a shield.

The Maoris of New Zealand dance the Haka, men, women and children. It is a sort of drill accompanied by horrid grimaces, thrusting out the tongue and rolling the eyes.

Among all these people the dance is the natural expression of joy, triumph or celebration.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 15: "Am I My Brother's Keeper?"—Gen. iv, 8-15—A Temperance Meeting.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

The story of Cain and Abel is a true picture of the race in all lands and all times. There are men who try to do the right thing. There are others who have no love to the right course of action and intend and practice the opposite. The doing of the wrong by one's brother causes sorrow to the man who does the right. The doing of right by any one causes him who does the contrary to feel rebuked and condemned. It awakens enmity against him who does the better. Yet, more, unless the wrong is forsaken it will lead from inward dislike of the well doer to open opposition. The two cannot walk together because they are not agreed. The world will hardly be large enough to contain them. They are brothers by birth, and their natures compel them to seek association. It is the inwritten law of God in their very constitution, and they may not escape from it. One must triumph over the other. This is the worldwide, age long conflict. Here emerges the principle also that he who wrongs another will end by hating the one whom he has wronged. The other side of this is equally true—whosoever you help and benefit you will come to love.

Cain does not awaken to a realization of his true relation to his brother until he has slain him. There seems something of surprise in his question, "Am I my brother's keeper?" He has not yet learned that he is to live in society and that his brother is necessary to his own development in society. Still less has he arrived at the truth that he is responsible for his brother's welfare in the same things that he has regard for himself in and in equal measure. The world has been slow to profit by the mistake of Cain and find the clew to security in social life. Still the rule of force and fraud is held too largely in the affairs where neighborly regard should be recognized.

Our lesson calls for special attention to the temperance situation. Few at the present time look upon the saloon as helpful to society. It is tolerated as a necessary evil by those who see no immediate prospect of its banishment. Even the men whose money is invested in the business speak of it as a bad one which they engage in only because of the financial gain to be derived from it. The evil of drunkenness all see and none defend. How to get rid of this evil is the question by which we are confronted and which is one of the most vital in importance of any now claiming solution.

It is beyond dispute that the reclaiming of those who have acquired the appetite for intoxicants must largely be accomplished through personal appeal and individual persuasion. But there is a larger problem to be dealt with in the safeguarding of the young, who should not be allowed to acquire the drinking habit, and those who are too weak to hold themselves in check in the midst of temptations.

Society in its corporate capacity owes to itself the duty to secure for its members the greatest safety possible to morals, as well as to health and protection to property rights.

Continual agitation on the moral features of this matter should be made, and the duty of the state and nation to enact and enforce laws to do away with the evil of the sale of intoxicating beverages should be pressed home to thought and conscience. If we are true to God and our convictions in this regard, progress will be made, and, however slow it may appear to our impatience, it will move in the providence of God steadily forward as swiftly as may be and will end in the establishment of purity and sobriety among men. It is a great issue and cannot be won in a single easy campaign. But because God is God and this is His world right must triumph at length.

Try For Trustworthiness.

People would try harder for trustworthiness if they knew how lovable a quality it is. When you know you can rely upon any one, that whatever they undertake to do will be done, that you can really pass over a share of your load to them, you cannot help liking them. On the other hand, it does not matter how amiable men be, if they are forgetful, if they are unpunctual, if they habitually neglect, they become sources of such annoyance that one's liking is apt to die out.—W. R. Nicoll, D. D.

Service and Pay.

Little children loved Jesus for the luxury of loving Him. Their love was its own reward. They loved the lovable and were happy. But are not older people prone to think that devotion to Jesus ought to be returned in the shape of temporal prosperity? Do we not half expect material payment for spiritual service?—Rev. J. H. Jowett.

Success.

"See how they toil!" the angels said.
The curious host looked down on men.
"What is this thing they call 'success,'
For which they strive and strive again?"

There one appeared, surpassing rich,
With ships afloat on many seas,
Yet anxious care sat on his brow;
His eyes showed not a mind at ease.

Another pressed up Fame's steep cliff,
Amidst applause of human speech,
Unsatisfied, for still there rose
Before him other heights to reach.

And some sought this, and some sought that.
But, one and all, they sought success.
The angels said, "Whatever 'tis,
It's plain it is not happiness."

The heavenly watchers turned away.
"Earth's riddles are not ours to prove;
Our ways are smooth, our lives are led
Along the pathway of His love."

Yet still they pitied mortal men,
The road so oft in failure trod.
"We wish, we wish our brothers knew
That happiness is pleasing God."

QUICK TRIAL FOR NEGROES

Men Accused of Assaulting Marshals to Answer Jan. 23.

RETAIN COUNSEL

Flomerfelt, Accused of Killing Brother-in-Law Released on Bail—Hazzard's Bail $200.

Judge Schenck Friday morning fixed the date for trying the five negroes who created a small riot on Somerset street Christmas eve, in which several marshals were badly injured. The negroes will be tried Monday, January 23, and each will be called upon to present a defense against three indictments, the grand jury having returned true bills charging them separately with assault with intent to kill each of the three policemen.

Whit Tunstall, Thomas C. Henderson, Lee Wells, James Tems and Samuel Hunt, the prisoners, all entered pleas of not guilty. They are defended by Messrs. S. S. Swackhamer, W. S. Angleman and W. G. DeMeza, of this city.

Jacob Flomerfelt, indicted for assault and battery and manslaughter, was released on $2,500 bail, furnished by his brother, James A. Flomerfelt, a wealthy New York jeweler. His case is down on the calendar for trial Monday, January 23.

S. S. Swackhamer, counsel for Russell F. Hazzard, indicted for assault and battery on E. Frank Vail, a local real estate man, asked the court to fix bail in his client's case. Judge Schenck placed the amount of security at $200, which was furnished by Dr. Richard Moldenke, of North Plainfield township.

January 20 was the date fixed for trying Sylvanus Oarkhuff and William Ashton, the men who broke out of the Somerville jail and were recaptured. They are represented by Heracce Coddington and James Meehan.

"MAYOR BILL" SMITH A CHICKEN FANCIER

FAIR HEIR IN A NEW VENTURE TO MAKE A FORTUNE.

"Mayor" Bill Smith, of New Market, commonly known as one of the Fair heirs, having given up the automobile business, has now launched forth in a new enterprise, that of raising chickens. He has purchased two hundred prize incubator chickens which took a gold medal award at the Poultry Show in Madison Square Garden, last week, and he intends to breed chickens for exhibition purposes next year.

Mr. Smith is having a large hennery constructed at his home in New Market and it will be equipped in modern style. Hot water heat will be used to keep the place at an even temperature and the chicken fancier hopes to be able to do a large business in selling eggs from his high-priced fowls.

Robert Crane, of Washington, son of Mr. and Mrs. U. B. Crane, of East Second street, has returned after a visit with his parents.

Mrs. J. C. Milligan, of High Bridge, has been spending the holidays with her daughter, Mrs. B. F. Conover, of this city.

Does It Cost You

TIME to read through the daily and weekly newspapers, the magazines and reviews, and the special journals that constantly clamor for attention? Can you find time to read enough of them to keep posted even on the important topics of human interest at home and abroad? Does the time demanded by so many periodicals leave you time enough for books?

DOES IT COST YOU—

MONEY to buy even a fairly representative list of papers and magazines? Can you afford to subscribe for as many as would be necessary to give you a complete survey of the world's politics, art, religion, industrial affairs, literature, etc? Even if you had the time to read them, would you be able to buy several thousand periodicals, domestic and foreign?

DOES IT COST YOU—

WORRY to sift out the conflicting rumors concerning the Japan-Russia war, and to try to follow its progress? Or to get at the true state of the Presidential campaign, the chances of the several candidates, the tendencies in the various states, and the probabilities as to the platforms? Does it worry or weary you to "keep posted" in this busy, hustling age when there are so few moments for quiet reading and so many demands for your money.

BOARD OF TRADE AWAKES

Healthy Discussion at the Annual Meeting Last Night.

PLAN ENTERTAINMENTS

In the Future Attractions Will be Provided—Officers Are Chosen—Fees Remain the Same.

Ways and means for keeping alive the Board of Trade were discussed in lively fashion at the annual meeting held Thursday. At one time the organization threatened to disband and it even went so far that Joseph B. Coward offered a motion that the board be continued for one more year. Lack of interest, general complaint, the present amount of dues and other things relative thereto, all came in for comment. Some of the members wanted to cut the dues, now $4, in half, while others maintained that if the members could not pay twenty-five cents a month to belong to the board, hay would not join for a less amount.

The discussion was led by President L. B. Woolston, S. S. Swackhamer, Mayor J. F. Buckle, Harry C. Runyon, E. M. Laing, E. Frank Coriell, F. H. Smith, while others who joined in included J. C. Hansen, F. A. Dunham, Herman Schwed, Charles W. Runyon, William Jeffrey and others. Opinions were freely discussed pro and con and it was finally agreed to continue and to have the president a committee of three appointed each month to provide some form of attractive entertainment, possibly an address by W. G. Besler and J. O. Osgood, of the New Jersey Central, and other prominent men. The motion to reduce the dues was lost.

It was decided to introduce questions along the line of municipal ownership and have experts discuss them. It is quite likely that in the near future William Jeffrey will talk on tax reform and S. S. Swackhamer on equal taxation, both offering their services in this direction.

These officers were elected for the coming year: President, L. B. Woolston; vice president, James C. Pope; treasurer, E. M. Laing. The office of secretary was left vacant for one month. F. H. Smith, owing to other duties, was obliged to resign and another secretary could not be found last night. President Woolston appointed M. C. VanArsdale, Herman Schwed and E. Frank Coriell a committee to provide entertainment for the next meeting, Thursday night, February 2.

In the regular order of business, G. Thorn and William Jeffrey were elected members. J. B. Chamberlain, an advertising agent of Philadelphia, asked the board for information regarding Plainfield and it will be furnished. The American Anti-Trust League asked for the endorsement of William R. Hearst's bill to regulate the trusts and it was filed. E. M. Laing, treasurer, reported a balance on hand of $178.02. There was a discussion regarding arc lights and it was decided to recommend that more be located in the business section. In this connection J. B. Coward moved that the committee on arc lights be continued, which was carried.

After the business the committee in charge, of which E. M. Laing was the chairman, served a buffet lunch, consisting of salads, sandwiches, fruits, cigars and coffee, and while these things were enjoyed the members continued the discussion of thoroughly reviving the organization and making it a power in the community.

George Wiltse Signs.

George Wiltse, of Somerville, brother of Louis Wiltse, of this city, who made such an enviable record last season pitching for the New York National League team, has signed a contract for this season with the same team. Last year Wiltse won twelve straight games and only lost three. He claims to be in better condition than ever and that he will exceed his '04 record by many more victories. As yet it is not announced whether Louis Wiltse has signed with Baltimore, but it is presumed that he will, although it is not known whether the players from that team will be in Brooklyn or not.

Law Firm Dissolves.

The law firm of Hetfield & Hetfield have dissolved partnership. Walter L. Hetfield, Sr., will continue his offices at 143 Park avenue, while Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., will open offices at 221 Park avenue, in the Vanderbeek building.

Exposure to a sudden climatic change produces cold in the head and catarrh is apt to follow. Provided with Ely's Cream Balm you are armed against nasal catarrh. Price 50 cents at druggists or Ely Brothers, 56 Warren street, New York, will mail it. The Balm cures without pain, does not irritate or cause sneezing. It spreads itself over an irritated and angry surface, relieving immediately the painful inflammation, cleanses and cures. Cream Balm quickly cures the cold.

STILL FIGHT FOR HIGHER FEE

Borough Council Again Petitions Somerset Court to Grant Relief From Saloons.

THANK GRAND JURY

Vigorously Worded Message to Judge Schenck—Corporation Counsel's Opinion As to the Only Means of Solution.

North Plainfield's Council last Friday adopted a resolution, which will be sent to Judge Schenck, asking the Somerset County Corut to carry out the recommendation of the Grand Jury that the license fee of the borough be increased to $1,000 and that the saloons be compelled to close at 11 o'clock, regulations the same as prevail in this city.

Although it was unanimously adopted, the resolution caused a discussion, during which Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed said: "It is my belief that the license fee would have been raised before now if there had not been some tacit understanding between certain leaders among the anti-annexationists and the liquor dealers that they would assist in keeping it down."

Senator Reed's statement was challenged by Councilman John H. VanWinkle, Jr., who plainly stated that he doubted the correctness of the assertion and openly hinted that it had been manufactured for the occasion. Mr. VanWinkle reminded the Council that as a member of that body he had voted in favor of the resolution sent to the court some time ago, asking for a change in the liquor regulations. Senator Reed replied that he made no reference to the member of the Council and that they were not looked upon as leaders.

Councilman VanArsdale incidently asked the Corporation Counsel what remedy there is for North Plainfield to escape the present deplorable conditions. Without any hesitation, Mr. Reed stated that the most simple and efficacious means would be consolidation with Plainfield. Somerville's argument, said he, that all places of approximately the same population in Somerset County should have the same license rate is unsound because of the fact that after 11 o'clock at night, the true population to which North Plainfield saloon keepers can furnish liquor is that of Plainfield and North Plainfield combined, in other words, a population of 25,000, instead of 6,000. Furthermore, he said, there is no legal restriction in the rate of license fees in Somerset County, except that which prescribes a minimum and that any municipality having the power to regulate its own excise affairs could fix its own rate of fee and time of closing.

The subject was brought up by the introduction of the following resolution which was unanimously adopted:

Whereas the murderous assault made on Christmas eve upon members of our police force was the logical and natural result of the low license and late closing hours permitted to borough liquor dealers, which makes our borough the Mecca of intoxicated roughs who are turned out of Plainfield saloons when the latter are compelled to close at 11 o'clock:

And whereas under the law the licensing of liquor dealers in the borough is controlled by the court at Somerville, to which we have repeatedly, though vainly, appealed for relief:

And whereas our situation in this respect has recently been plainly and graphically called again to the attention of said court by the intelligent and fearless Grand Jury which indicted the criminals who attempted to murder our policemen:

Therefore, be it resolved by The Mayor and Council of the Borough of North Plainfield, that we, as the representatives of the law abiding and peace loving citizens of this borough, do hereby express our warm appreciation of the said action of the Grand Jury, and do once more earnestly petition the aforesaid court to come to our relief in the manner already pointed out:

And be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be sent by the borough clerk to each Judge of said court.

Mayor Smalley congratulated the Council upon its stand on the liquor question. He said incidently: "You should be congratulated that within six months after your petition was made to the court and was refused that an unanimous Grand Jury made up of men from all parts of Somerset County should find it their duty to renew that plea and go still further by asking that the license be $1,000 instead of $600 as suggested by you, which in my judgment coupled with an 11 o'clock closing clause would mean practically prohibition. I congratulate you on the result and hope that the Grand Jury's presentment will be effective."

THE AMERICAN MONTHLY REVIEW OF REVIEWS

The more Magazines there are, the more Indispensable is The Review of Reviews

"Indispensable," "The one magazine I feel I must take," "The world under a field-glass," "An education in public affairs and current literature,"—these are some of the phrases one hears from noted people who read the Review of Reviews. The more magazines there are, the more necessary is the Review of Reviews, because it brings together the best that is in all the most important monthlies of the world. Such is the flood of periodical literature that nowadays people say that the only way to keep up with it is to read the Review of Reviews. Entirely over and above this reviewing section, it has more original matter and illustrations than most magazines, and the most timely and important articles printed in any monthly.

Probably the most useful section of all is Dr. Albert Shaw's illustrated "Progress of the World," where public events and issues are authoritatively and lucidly explained in every issue. Many a subscriber writes, "This department alone is worth more than the price of the magazine." The unique cartoon department, depicting current history in caricature, is another favorite. The Review of Reviews covers five continents, and yet is American, first and foremost.

Men in public life, the members of Congress, professional men, and the great captains of industry who must keep "up with the times," intelligent men and women all over America, have decided that it is "indispensable."

BOYS' HIGH STANDARD IN GYMNASTIC WORK

Y. M. C. A. JUNIORS HAVE MADE DECIDED PHYSICAL ADVANCEMENT.

A decided change in the character of the gymnastic work of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A. has made itself noticed in the last few months. In fact there has been a gradual improvement ever since the classes re-opened for the fall term. Though the class is the largest it has been in years, and the boys are equally as young as those who have formerly made up the department, the kind of work which the youngsters are accomplishing, and their degree of excellence in gymnastic events far exceeds any standard attained by former classes.

This advancement is almost entirely due to Physical Director Fred A. Henckel, who has charge of the gymnastic work in all the departments. His methods and the novelty which he has infused into the drills, apparatus work and games have brought the junior department to a level where they compare favorably with any boys' class in the State.

Among the boys there are several excellent gymnasts, and there is a lack of fear and a snap in all the work, which is decidedly creditable. Many of the juniors do moves on the apparatus which are considered hard in the senior department, and the standing of the classes, grade for grade, is higher than it is to be found in many gymnasiums.

Preparing for R. F. D.

Nelson Peterson, who has been appointed carrier on the new rural free delivery route, has purchased a horse and as soon as his wagon arrives from the West, he will be in readiness to begin work on Monday, January 16, the time appointed by the postal authorities.

MAYOR SMALLEY CENSURES A LOCAL NEWSPAPER

CALLS BOROUGH COUNCIL'S ATTENTION TO SOME DEROGATORY STATEMENTS.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley, at the meeting of the North Plainfield Council last Friday, took occasion to criticise an editorial published in the Courier-News which reflected on the borough government, and which displayed gross ignorance. Following him, Councilman Charles L. Lee had a word or two to say regarding the subject. In referring to some irresponsible petition for the collection of a fund in aid of the borough marshals who were injured on Christmas eve, the Courier-News declared editorially that "in accordance with a borough rule, they are deprived of pay during the time they are disabled, the municipality not taking into account the causes of such disability." Continuing the article in question stated that "everyone must agree that the borough attitude is unjust," and a lot of other stuff just as erroneous.

After reading the editorial to the Council, Mayor Smalley declared that he could not see how a newspaper could get so far away from the truth when it was so easy to obtain the facts. He added that there is no rule whatever in the borough against paying the men who were injured and that there is no disposition among the officials to treat them other than fairly. In conclusion he said that the whole statement was "uncalled for and offensive."

Councilman Lee followed the mayor by stating that it had always been the rule to pay the marshals in such instances and that he saw no reason for such a statement on the part of a newspaper.

Changes Among Carriers.

Frank Bailey, who was first on the list as sub-letter-carrier, has been made a regular and is now carrying the route formerly held by Carrier Phillip Giese. The route formerly carried by Patrick Reville, who was dismissed from the service, is now in charge of Mr. Giese and Robert Geldsack returns to his former position of substitute.

KILL YELLOW JACK.

American Public Health Conference at Havana, Cuba.

PRAISE FOR OUR FEVER EXPERTS.

Dread Scourge Banished From Pearl of the Antilles—Dr. Jesse Lazear a Martyr to Scientific Zeal For Human Welfare.

HAVANA, Jan. 11.—The feature of the formal opening last night of the annual meeting of the American Public Health association was the address of the president, Dr. Carlos Finlay, the yellow fever expert and chief of the Cuban health department. Dr. Finlay paid a tribute to the accomplishments and sacrifice of American experts who have brought about the beneficent result of banishing yellow fever through the energetic application of what previously had been only theories. Dr. Finlay was in turn praised by American sanitarians for his services to humanity in discovering the mode of yellow fever propagation.

Dr. Finlay said Cuba was especially grateful to this association, some of whose members were Cuba's greatest benefactors. The banishment of yellow fever was largely due to two commissions from Washington, the first a quarter of a century ago and the second twenty years later. The latter decisively established the true etiology of yellow fever. Its members were themselves prostrated by the disease, and one, Dr. Jesse Lazear, died a martyr to scientific zeal, permitting himself to be infected and contaminated by mosquitoes. Dr. Finlay praised the work of Major Gorgas, chief health officer under General Wood, who, adopting the commission's findings, succeeded within seven months in ridding Havana of her inveterate enemy.

With reference to the two cases of yellow fever last October in Santiago province Dr. Finlay said it was presumable that they were transmitted by mosquitoes from a quarantine ship. These were the only fever cases since 1901.

The only case of smallpox, Dr Finlay said, was one unvaccinated person, a detention hospital employee, credited to Mexico.

Dr. Finlay urged a stronger fight against tuberculosis, the most important mortuary factor in large towns everywhere.

Dr. Erastus Wilson of Havana read a paper on sanitary conditions in Havana and the necessity of their improvement. He said that while the improvements during and since the American intervention had reduced the death rate one-half Havana was now in the condition of having washed her face and left her underclothing dirty. Her radical requirements indisputably is a complete sewer system. Dr. Wilson pointed out the difficulties which prevent the general government from authorizing the projected $28,000,000 loan for Havana sewers until the soldiers' pay loan is partially cleared off.

Members of the association commended Dr. Wilson's candor and remarked that several cities in the United States were in a condition similar to Havana's.

Democratic Banquet at Lafayette.

LAFAYETTE, Ind., Jan. 11.—Several national leaders of the Democratic party and many prominent state Democrats broke bread last night at the eighth annual banquet of the Jackson club, held in honor of the memory of Andrew Jackson. Following the feast there were addresses in which William J. Bryan received the largest share of applause, but National Chairman Thomas Taggart was also accorded an ovation. There were many prominent Illinois, Ohio and Michigan Democrats present, and nearly every county in Indiana was represented. More than 800 persons sat down at the first table.

To Save Adirondack Forests.

ALBANY, N. Y., Jan. 11.—Attorney General Mayer has stated that ex-Attorney General Cunneen instituted an action in the supreme court to declare the title to the lands in the Adirondacks purchased for the Cornell University of Forestry to be vested in the state and to restrain the university and the Brooklyn Cooperage company from cutting any trees from the same. The attorney general has been requested to give a hearing before any further steps are taken.

Douglas Appoints Chief Justice.

BOSTON, Jan. 11.—Governor Douglas has offered the position of chief justice of the superior bench to Judge John Adams Aiken of Greenfield, and the latter has accepted. Judge Aiken is one of the few Democrats now sitting on the superior bench. Judge Aiken will succeed Chief Justice Albert Mason, who died recently.

Cuban Jesuit College Burned.

CIENFUEGOS, Cuba, Jan. 11.—The college of the Jesuit fathers here has been destroyed by fire. Several firemen were injured, one of them having to undergo amputation of a foot. The loss is $60,000, on which there was no insurance.

Raisinger Case in Jury's Hands.

BRIDGETON, N. J., Jan. 11.—The prosecution in the case of Frank Raisinger, the Shiloh farmer who was placed on trial charged with the murder of his wife, was submitted before court adjourned and the case given to the jury.

Twenty Killed In Riots.

TIFLIS, Jan. 11.—An official report says that altogether twenty persons were killed during the labor disturbances in the oil region and that forty-four oil towers were burned.

FAVOR WAS ILL USED

President Withdraws His Letter to Newsboys' Magazine.

MURAT HALSTEAD HAS RESIGNED.

Roosevelt's Commendation, Couched In General Terms, Used to Exploit an Alleged Unworthy Object.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—President Roosevelt has withdrawn a letter which he wrote last March extending to the American Newsboys' Magazine his wishes for its success. The withdrawal of the president's letter was announced in the form of a letter which the president wrote to Murat Halstead, who was the president of the company which is to publish the magazine. The letter of the president to Mr. Halstead follows in part:

"I am advised that you are the president of a company formed to publish the American Newsboys' Magazine and contemplate withdrawing your connection with it."

After quoting in full the letter which he wrote last March to Colonel O. O. Stealey, then editor of the magazine, the president continues:

"As you will note, this letter is couched in general terms, but it has been used to exploit this company. Certain facts have come to me as to the character of certain persons interested in the corporation as well as the methods they have adopted for the disposal of stock which make me unwilling longer to permit the use of my name in connection with the enterprise. May I ask you to look carefully into the matter and write me your views? I will not have any letter of mine used in connection with any concern which is in any way tainted, even though this letter refers more to a general movement than to a particular scheme."

In response to this letter Mr. Halstead wrote the president that he did intend to withdraw from the company, saying:

"I cannot continue associated with the concern and propose to take the legal steps that may be possible to protect the interests of the bona fide stock subscribers from dissipation."

The president in addition to authorizing the publication of the correspondence took steps to insure the withdrawal of his letter of last March. In conclusion the statement issued at the White House says:

"In making this correspondence public there is no purpose to reflect on the integrity of Colonel Stealey, Mr. Halstead or Mr. Richardson, who were at one time or another connected as officers of the company. They evidently endeavored in good faith to cause it to carry out its original purpose."

Mr. Halstead, who called on the president at the White House, issued a statement, in which he says:

"My business here was to give the president information of the misuse of his name in a company advertised as a scheme of philanthropy. My reason for this was that my name had been abused in the same connection.

"The president had found out the offensive facts and announces that the use in any form of his name or that of a cabinet officer by the American Newsboy company is forbidden."

The stockholders of the American Newsboy company held a meeting here yesterday, at which Charles A. Edwards was elected president vice Mr. Halstead, resigned, and H. K. Holmes, E. R. Johnston and Charles A. Edwards members of the board of directors. Mr. Johnston was elected secretary and treasurer in place of Mr. Richardson.

First Cabinet Dinner.

WASHINGTON, Jan. 11.—Secretary and Mrs. Hay entertained the president and Mrs. Roosevelt at dinner last night. Those invited to meet them were Vice President Elect and Mrs. Fairbanks, Justice Holmes of the supreme court, Senator Allison, Mrs. Slater, Senator and Mrs. Lodge, Senator and Mrs. Knox, Mr. and Mrs. Whitelaw Reid, Mr. Henry James and many others. The table decorations were pink. This was the first cabinet dinner of the social season and marks the abandonment of the former practice of inviting all the cabinet to each of the dinners given by the president's official advisers.

Gomez Declines to Run.

HAVANA, Jan. 11.—General Maximo Gomez has published a letter declining to allow himself to be mentioned as a candidate for the presidency. General Gomez has frequently been mentioned as a possible candidate, especially in connection with his reiterated policy of paying revolutionary veterans in full in accordance with the lists instead of effecting a compromise, which was the plan tentatively favored by the Palma administration.

Tried Suicide With Wood Alcohol.

WATERLOO, Ia., Jan. 11.—Miss Cecilia McAndrews, who was kept under surveillance at Madison, Wis., for two days on suspicion of being implicated in the sudden death there on Thursday of B. F. Burton, proprietor of the Capitol House, attempted suicide at Laporte, a small town near here, by swallowing wood alcohol. She spilled some of it in her eyes and, though she may not die, will be blind.

Buried at Sea New Year's Eve.

WILMINGTON, Del., Jan. 11.—The British steamship Ottawa, from Manchester, England, has arrived at this port after a stormy passage of fifteen days. The captain reported the death of the third mate, Henry Allen, of Derby, England, on New Year's eve, of heart failure. He was buried at sea.

SUNDRY WORK OF COUNCIL

Miscellaneous Business Transacted by Borough Fathers.

P. S. C. PAYS UP

Corporation Counsel Reed Collects Debt From Trolley Company Without Any Difficulty.

After the opening routine had been gone through with at the meeting of the North Plainfield Council last Friday, a petition for a street light at Jefferson avenue and Greenbrook road, was presented and referred to the fire, water and lights committee.

Assistant District Telephone Manager C. W. Runyon's letter in reply to application for a fourth free telephone for the use of the borough government led the mayor to say that as the instrument was needed immediately it would be best to have a paid 'phone installed for use in communicating with the special marshal who sleeps at the police station house so as to be available for night duty. A motion by M. C. VanArsdale to have the 'phone put in, was carried.

Borough Counsel C. A. Reed reported the collection of the claim against the Public Service Corporation for street work on Somerset street along the line of the trolley. He said that the Public Service Corporation would have paid long ago but they were never apprised of the work for which the bill was rendered, until after it had been competed.

Claims against the borough, for salaries, supplies and outside service, aggregating about $2,500, were presented and ordered paid. On J. K. Arnold's recommendation, a note in a local bank given by the borough for $1,000 was also ordered paid.

Clerk Rowley read the report of the finance committee which showed total receipts of $48,255.27, expenditures of $44,844.75 and a balance on hand of $3,410.52.

Some little discussion was raised by the bill for the heating system. This bill, amounting to about $500, was finally ordered paid except a drawback of nearly $50, which will not be paid until certain leaks and other shortcomings of the system heating the engine house and Council chamber have been rectified.

Mr. Arnold reported an expenditure of $117.75 for removing snow from the walks in front of vacant properties and places where the owners neglect to observe the ordinance on that score.

Mr. VanArsdale reported a total of twenty-eight arrests, seven commitments and eighteen suspensions of sentence.

Charles L. Lee introduced a resolution asking for the regular annual appropriation of $100 for the expense of having the borough accounts audited by a public accountant. After slight discussion it was passed.

Mr. Lee laid particular stress on the desirability of having the residents of the borough more prompt about cleaning up after a snow. He advocated the strictest enforcement of the ordinance in this connection and prayed for even greater activity on the part of the police.

Just before the meeting adjourned, the Mayor mentioned several indications of civic prosperity given by the finance of the borough just at present, the most striking of which was that the health board, which a few years ago was continually short of funds, has at present a balance to their credit, tenfold greater than ever before. The board was reminded that it has the privilege of utilizing the Council chamber for its sessions and urged to avail itself of the right, and that a financial report of the Board should appear in the annual borough report.

MR. AND MRS. WILLIAMS' CRYSTAL WEDDING

FIFTEEN FRIENDS JOIN COUPLE IN CELEBRATING EVENT.

Mr. and Mrs. Julius M. Williams, of West Front street, celebrated their crystal wedding anniversary Monday, by entertaining fifteen friends, one for each year of their married life. The evening was spent in a social way, during which the celebrants hearty received congratulations. At a late hour supper was served. The couple received gifts of use and value, they being chiefly of crystal. Included among the guests were Mr. and Mrs. Alvin E. Hoagland, Elston Hoagland, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Shotwell, Mr. and Mrs. Freeman Shotwell and son, Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Mackillop, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Cadmus.

Mr. and Mrs. Williams were married in this city fifteen years ago by Rev. Dr. K. P. Ketcham, then pastor of the First Presbyterian church. Mr. Williams' home was at Warrenville, while Mrs. Williams lived here. They have two sons, Arthur and Harold Williams.

BIG REALTY TRANSACTION

C. W. McCutchen, W. J. Buttfield and N. B. Smalley to Develope Property.

ROCKVIEW PARK

Fifty Acres in West End of North Plainfield Are Secured by the Syndicate—Means Much in the Improvement of the Borough.

William J. Buttfield, Charles W. McCutchen and Mayor Newton B. Smalley, all of the borough, have purchased the frontage of the property on West End avenue, extending from the three houses built by Norman C. Barnes, on the city side, to Stine's brook, beyond Mr. Buttfield's property.

The deal includes practically everything on West End avenue from the point mentioned in the city, except that owned by Mrs. Moore, lying between Henry Liefke's property and the brook.

The place will be known as Rockview Park. It is the intention of the new owners to make one of the finest parks and boulevards in the State, the details and plans for which are now being perfected.

The name is an appropriate one for that part of the borough and the great improvement to be made will interest the people of the West End of the city as well as the borough.

It will also mean the location of a new and substantial bridge across Green brook.

The tract includes fifty acres of valuable land in a desirable section.

OBSTACLE TO CO. K'S PLAN TO ATTEND INAUGURATION

FREE TRANSPORTATION MAY BE REFUSED SOLDIER BOYS.

There is yet a doubt as to whether Co. K. will attend the National inauguration at Washington on March 4. Though Captains Martin and Libbey, of Companies K and L, are both inquiring into plans for accommodations for their companies, there is a possibility that they will fail in this respect, and if so the probability is that both the Plainfield and Princeton companies will remain at their own headquarters.

Major J. E. Bell, to whom the captains have written concerning accommodations, writes that as yet he has been unable to make satisfactory arrangements except upon the payment of a substantial rental. While there is the possibility that the New Jersey Legislature many order one or two regiments to attend, and may select the local company, the matter of accommotions at Washington has been referred to Gen. George H. Harris, who hopes to be able to provide for free quarters.

TRINITY CHURCH HELPS THE COMANCHE TRIBE

FIELD SECRETARY'S APPEAL BRINGS QUICK RESPONSE.

Mrs. Alfred Page, field secretary of Indian Work of the Woman's Executive Board of Domestic Missions of the Reformed church, addressed the Sunday-school of Trinity Reformed church, Sunday afternoon. She presented the great need of the Gospel for the Comanche tribe, which recently expressed a great longing for a church and preacher through two of its prominent leaders, Nahwats and Peraconic. These two Indian chiefs have been devoted followers of the Jesus road for several years, and have been God's instrument in bringing many of their tribe to give up their old life of gambling and worship of sun and stars, and their crying need is for the Gospel and a place of worship.

Mrs. Page's address was interspersed with testimony of Nahwats and Peraconic given in sign language, which was very interesting. At the close of the service, which had been arranged for by the Missionary Society of the Sunday-school, a motion was made that one-half of the Twentieth Century Fund on hand, be given toward the work among the Comanches, also that a special collection be taken for the same cause the last Sunday in the month.

Are you troubled with your feet in any way? If so give Thorp's foot-relief a fair trial and your troubles will soon disappear.

VARSITY MEN'S PROGRAM

Mc Cready Sykes, Henry L. Hall and William N. Runyon to be the Speakers.

RESPONSES COMING IN

Samuel St. John McCutchen To Be Toastmaster—Over 350 College Men in Town.

The committee in charge of the arrangements for the college smoker to be held at the Casino on Friday night, February 9, wishes it understood that the affair is not held for the purpose of forming a university club, but simply to bring together the college graduates and undergraduates in the city for a good time.

The programme, as thus far arranged, includes as speakers City Judge William N. Runyon, Harry L. Hall and McCready Sykes, while others from out of town are expected. There will be plenty of good music, vocal and instrumental. VanEps brothers will furnish a banjo quartette to enliven the occasion, while it is expected that vocal music will be furnished by quartettes from Yale, Cornell, Harvard and possibly Princeton.

Samuel St. John McCutchen, a Yale graduate, has consented to be the toastmaster, and he is now engaged in arranging the "toasts." Thus far it has been ascertained that there are 340 college graduates and undergraduates in town, and the list is not yet complete. Responses have been received from over seventy-five, and it is hoped to have more than twice that number at the smoker.

The committee is particularly anxious that all college fellows who intend to be present send their name and the necessary $1.75 to Owen Fleming, chairman, at the earliest possible date, so that it will be known definitely how many to provide for. The plan is to make the smoker the best thing of the kind ever given here and the committee feels as though it is up to every college man to help make it so.

COURT WATCHUNG, I. O. F., ENJOYS A GOOD TIME.

Has Entertainment and Smoker After Regular Order of Business.

Following the regular meeting, during which there was initiation, the members of Court Watchung, Independent Order Foresters, enjoyed an entertainment and smoker, last night, to which they invited their friends.

Music for the entertainment was furnished by two dark faced artists on a mandolin and guitar, and a programme of lively selections were given. A feature was the sleight-of-hand work of E. Warren Rankin, of Sagaponack avenue, who amused and mystified his audience with a great many clever tricks. Another enjoyable features was an acrobatic performance by Bert Hansen, of the Gesang and Turn Verein team. He gave a clever exhibition of his ability and received great applause.

While the programme was being enjoyed cigars were passed around and a social time enjoyed. Chief Ranger Hayes was in charge of the programme. Court Watchung now numbers over 100 and is steadily increasing in membership.

FLAG FOR HIGH SCHOOL.

Jr. O. U. A. M. to Make Gift for New Building.

Benevolent, Franklin and Somerset councils, Jr. O. U. A. M., will present a large American flag to the Plainfield Board of Education, to be displayed from the new High School when completed.

A joint committee from the three councils called on the board three months ago and suggested that they would like to furnish the flag for the new building. The offer was accepted and the committee was told that it would be notified as to the time of dedication of the building. The flag will be presented at that time.

Frank Bergen Will Speak.

In addition to those already mentioned as speakers for the annual banquet of the Board of Trade to be held at the Casino on Thursday night, January 25, Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth, will respond. This banquet is not exclusively for the Board of Trade members, but interested citizens in general and as there are a limited number of tickets an early request is urged.

Joint C. E. Meeting.

There will be a joint meeting of the Intermediate, Junior and Senior Christian Endeavor Societies at the Park Avenue Baptist church Friday night. The leaders will be Mrs. W. S. Lowry and Miss Elinore Stutsman. The subject will be "Christ's Life."

JUNIOR COUNCILS PLAN BIG BANQUET

WILL BE HELD AT LOCAL HOTEL ON FEBRUARY 28.

For the purpose of increasing the interest among the members of the Jr. O. U. A. M. in this city a joint committee from Benevolent and Franklin councils is now perfecting arrangements for a banquet to be held at one of the local hotels on Wednesday night, February 28. It will be known as "The American Banquet of the Jr. O. U. A. M." and it is proposed to make it a great success.

The State officers, prominent officials in the State and county, as well as the city officials, will be among the invited guests and subjects of a public interest will be assigned to them. The speechmaking will be brief and to the point. Good music will be provided and it is hoped thereby to arouse the order to even greater things than heretofore attained. There are about 700 members of the order here and of necessity tickets to the banquet must be limited. The control of the tickets will be in the hands of three members, to avoid any difficulties that might arise otherwise.

The committee in charge of the affair comprises Albert Honeyman, chairman; H. C. Runyon, secretary; T. E. Currh, treasurer; John G. Bickwell, Ephraim Compton and Alfred H. Tranchard. A meeting was held last night when considerable progress was made in perfecting the details.

PARK TEAMS WINS 2 OUT OF 3 GAMES

LOCAL BOWLERS DO GOOD WORK ON THE ALLEYS.

The Park Club bowling team took the Cranford Casino five into camp on the local alleys last night, by defeating the visitors two out of three games rolled in the Central Journal Bowling League tournament. The Parks opened in whirlwind style, rolling 935 to 862 for the visiting team. In this game Long was high man, rolling 224.

The Parks took the second game by a score of 828 to 817, and the third game was lost by one pin, Cranford winning by a score of 845 to 844. In this game Barlow rolled 204. The work of the Parks throughout was strong and showed steady improvement. The scores:

| PARKS. | | | |
|---|---|---|---|
| Barlow | 189 | 151 | 204 |
| Daniel | 195 | 186 | 134 |
| Wilme | 132 | 160 | 178 |

MRS. MARGARET STONE DEAD.

Passed Away This Morning at the Home of Her Son on Putnam Ave.

Mrs. Margaret Stone, widow of Jacob Harvey Stone, died this morning at the home of her son, J. J. W. Stone, of Putnam avenue. She had been ailing for some time, but death was indirectly due to old age, having been in her ninety-first year.

Mrs. Stone came to this city from Hamilton, Ont., in 1886, and had made many friends during her local residence. She was a Methodist in faith and attended church regularly until infirmities prevented. Beside Mr. Stone, who is a lawyer practicing in New York, there are two daughters surviving—Mrs. Bartindale, of Brooklyn, and Mrs. Jeffery, of New York.

The funeral service will be held at the convenience of the family, and interment will be made at Hamilton, Ont.

Wedding Invitations Issued.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Reinhart, of Belvidere avenue, have issued invitations to the marriage of their daughter, Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart, and William Maury Corbin, of Cincinnati, which will take place Wednesday evening at 8:30 o'clock in Grace church, to be followed by a reception at the home of the bride's parents at 9 o'clock. It will be a brilliant affair and largely attended by society people from this city and many distant points.

Want Auxiliary There.

The annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A., which will be preceded by a banquet, will take place in the large hall of the association tomorrow night. The Women's Auxiliary of the organization has been invited to listen to the addresses and reports from the gallery.

TRADE BANQUET TOPICS

T. J. Hillery to Speak on Taxation and Frank Bergen on Good Roads.

NEW YORK ORCHESTRA

W. L. Saunders Likely to Dwell On Consolidation—Father Bogan's Subject Not Announced.

Details for the annual banquet of the Board of Trade to be held at the Casino on Thursday night, January 25, are being perfected and it is expected that the affair will exceed that of last year.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, will be the toastmaster, and it is understood that he will have something to say on the subject of the consolidation of Plainfield and the borough.

One of the principal speakers will be Senator T. J. Hillery, of Boonton, Morris county, who will talk on "Equal Taxation." "Good Roads" is the subject assigned to Frank Bergen, of Elizabeth. Father Bogan, of St. Mary's church, another speaker, has not yet announced his subject. It is understood that Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, who was invited, will not be able to attend.

The tickets for the dinner are limited and the committee is anxious that all who intend to be present make application as early as possible. An orchestra from New York will furnish music throughout the evening.

BOY CUT IN HALF.

School Child Killed by Trolley at Elizabeth.

Raymond Devine, aged seven years, of Elizabeth, met a horrible death shortly after 8 o'clock this morning, while on his way to school. He attempted to cross East Broad street and ran directly in front of a Jefferson avenue trolley car. The child was struck with such force that the body was cut in half and thrown to either side of the tracks.

The motorman did all in his power to avert the accident, but the boy was so close to the car that it struck him before he could fully apply his brakes.

Schwalbach Case Still On.

The damage suit for $10,000 instituted by Mrs. Schwalbach, of Dunellen, against the New Jersey Central, for the loss of her son, Henry Schwalbach, who was killed at the Dunellen roundhouse last year, is still on today before Judge Fort at Elizabeth. It is likely the case will go to the jury this afternoon.

Songs at the Fair.

The attendance at the Vardon Dancing Academy fair was almost 400 last night. The entertainment feature comprised songs by Miss Emily Henry and John Todd. Tonight Joe Kelly, a Rahway actor, will do a buck and wing dance. Illustrated songs are also on the programme.

His First Bill.

Senator Ackerman presented his maiden bill in the Upper House of the Legislature yesterday morning. The measure provides that the powers conferred upon any officer in respect to the collection of taxes or sale thereof shall not lapse because of any vacancy which may arise in the office.

Mr. and Mrs. Mantz Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Mantz, of East Fifth street, entertained a whist club at their home last night. Mrs. Gilbert Fletcher received the prize for the women and H. C. VanEmburgh the one for the men. Mr. and Mrs. H. C. VanEmburgh will entertain the club in two weeks.

In Mayor Smalley's Court.

"Gumph" Friese, the borough young man who was arrested for disorderly conduct, was fined $10 and costs or five days in jail by Mayor Smalley, last night. The complaint against him was pressed by Chief Weiss.

Reception for Guest.

Miss Margaret Keegan, of New Haven, Conn., who is visiting at the residence of John A. O'Keefe, 319 Grant avenue, was tendered a reception last evening. The time was pleasantly passed with games and music.

County Register Going South.

County Register of Deeds Frank H. Smith and wife, of West Fourth street, will leave on Saturday, January 27, for a month's trip through the South. The change is made for the benefit of Mr. Smith's health.

"Franklin, the Man."

At this morning's chapel exercises at the Plainfield High School, Principal Travell spoke to the students on "Franklin, the Man," today being the 200th anniversary of Benjamin Franklin's birth.

HIGH SCHOOL OPENING

Handsome New Structure is to be Dedicated on Washington's Birthday.

A FORMAL AFFAIR

Hundreds To Be Invited—$300 Subscribed for Alumni Reception —Public to Inspect Building.

After several disappointments, the city Board of Education has been informed that the new Plainfield High School will positively be completed next month and February 22 has been set as the date on which to carry out the plans for the formal dedication, which have been agreed upon last night and all arrangements are to be completed by the building committee, which was instructed to assume charge and select the speaker, preferably a graduate of the present High School.

The greater part of the regular adjourned meeting was taken up with a discussion of the new building and its opening and an active part was taken by Andrew McClean Parker, who was present as a representative of the Plainfield Alumni Association. He said it was the purpose of the organization to take charge of the reception in the evening and to have present, so far as possible, all the members of former Boards of Education, former superintendents, former teachers, graduates, present students and faculties. Letters had been sent out, he said, and more than 200 replies had been received and $200 subscribed. The money would be turned over to the board for its use in meeting reception expenses and indications point to the amount being doubled.

The board informed Mr. Parker that the building was to be open all day on the twenty-second and the public would be invited to inspect it.

It was thought the building could have been gotten ready for use by January 1 and the opening was originally planned for that date. Difficulty in obtaining materials held the contractors up and they were unable to complete the work but they stated positively that it will be done the first part of next month. Classes will be transfered from other buildings directly after the dedication.

MAN KILLED UNDER ENGINE

Alexander Johnson, of New Market, fireman on the Newark and New York branch of the Central Railroad, was killed in an accident on the Newark meadows this morning. For some reason as yet unlearned the engine overturned and Johnson was crushed beneath it.

Not much damage was done to the train, which was bound for New York. The passengers were shaken up, but escaped injury. The accident occurred at Brill's, where there is a nest of switches.

Johnson had been on the run only since last summer.

School Trustees Reorganize.

At its regular meeting, last night, the city Board of Education reorganized for the year. Dr. J. B. Probasco was again made president, L. N. Lovell, vice president, and F. T. Woodhull, secretary. L. N. Lovell acted as secretary while the election was completed and at its close President Probasco announced that the committees would remain the same as they have been. F. H. Clark was reappointed clerk to the board at the same salary.

Presbytery Meets.

Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church; Rev. C. E. Herring, of the First Presbyterian church, and Rev. L. R. Howard, of Hope chapel, were the only local representatives at the Elizabeth Presbytery meeting in Elizabeth, yesterday. The business was chiefly of a routine character and nothing of interest to Plainfield was considered.

An Advertisement Party.

An advertisement party will be held at the parish rooms of St. Stephen's church 721 East Sixth street, Wednesday night, January 24. Those attending are requested to represent in some way an advertisement. Prizes will be given for the funniest representation, also one to the one guessing the greatest number of advertisements correctly.

Salvationists Shifted.

Ensign and Mrs. Magee, of the local corp of the Salvation Army, today received orders "to farewell to Plainfield" on Sunday, February 4, and proceed to their new appointment the following week. As yet they have not learned where that appointment is located, nor who are their successors.

SHOEMAKER IS CLEARED

District Attorney's Office Says It is Satisfied He Had no Part In Swindle.

HE EXPLAINS ALL

Promoter Talked Over the Case With Assistant District Attorney Garvan for Two Hours Yesterday.

William A. Shoemaker talked with Assistant District Attorney Garvan, of New York, for two hours yesterday, for the purpose of making it plain that he had nothing to do with the counterfeiting of the Norfolk and Western stock. After the interview Mr. Garvan said he was satisfied Mr. Shoemaker was innocent of any complicity in the counterfeiting plot.

He said, however, that he had evidence tending to show that Shoemaker had been dealing for a long time in old certificates of the company, which have been worthless since the reorganization of the Norfolk and Western in 1896.

The detectives say that Shoemaker went to Frank Bell & Co., brokers at No. 1416 South Penn Square, Philadelphia, about ten months ago and there passed some of the old certificates. He offered this as well as one of the old issue of the Baltimore and Ohio and a 5 per cent. bond of the State of South Carolina, both of which were practically worthless, and asked for a loan of about $400 on them. This was refused by the brokers.

In the statement made by Mrs. Shoemaker yesterday, it was voluntarily acknowledged that the promoter had sold old N. and W. bonds. Her husband, Mrs. Shoemaker said, had sold them for what they were.

CRAWLED HALF A MILE DRAGGING BROKEN LEG

PLAN ADOPTED BY FRANK MARTENSCHENCK TO REACH HIS HOME.

Suffering the most excruciating pain and at times half conscious from its effects, Frank Martenschenck, who resides on Jefferson avenue at the city line, dragged himself half a mile along a frozen road with his right leg broken just above the knee. At times he was compelled to stop from exhaustion, but after an hour's effort reached the porch of his home and attracted his wife's attention by shouting and pounding on the steps. She was unable to lift him up and had to call on neighbors for assistance to get him into the house. Dr. Gaston, of Dunellen, was summoned and after setting the limb took steps to prevent his suffering from the effects of exposure.

Martenschenck had been buying chickens from farmers at the foot of the mountains and was returning home by way of Jefferson avenue. Half a mile from where he resides there is a small bridge, and as he was crossing this his feet slipped, causing his right leg to double under him. The break was clean and it was several minutes before Martenschenck could recover himself sufficiently to know what to do. The road is frequented but little and knowing there was no chance of some one happening along he decided to crawl to his house.

He was resting easily today and to all appearances will recover fully.

SCHOOL CONTRACTS LET.

Last Ones for the Furnishing of the New Building.

During the regular order of business at the Board of Education meeting, last night, some final contracts for furnishing the new High School were let. The bid of the A. H. Adrews Company for 300 chairs at $1.35 each was accepted as was also the bid of the Abbott Company which asked $200 for furnishing stationary shelves. The Narragansett Machine Company was awarded the contract for furnishing forty-two open lockers for $263 and the same concern is to supply the paraphernalia for the gymnasium.

The custodian's report was presented and showed a balance to the board's credit of $86,119. The medical inspectors reported examining 205 pupils during December.

Death of Infant Son.

Irving John Staats, the two-months-old son of Mr. and Mrs. John Staats, of Columbia avenue, died yesterday. The funeral will be held from the parents' home and will be private.

—For a jaded appetite there is nothing like White Label sugar sifted peas. Everybody who has tried them declare they are delicious. Neuman Brothers sell them.

GIFT OF EDUCATION BOARD'S FIRST REPORT

DOCUMENT DATED 1848 TO BE EXHIBITED IN NEW HIGH SCHOOL.

The city Board of Education received a communication from Councellor William M. Stillman, last night, in which he made an offer to the members to present a framed copy of the first annual report of the Plainfield Board of Education, dated February 14, 1848. Mr. Stillman's family for three generations has been identified with local educational affairs and the Stillman High School was named after his father, Dr. C. H. Stillman, who was the first superintendent. Counsellor Stillman is a graduate of the class of 1872.

The report he mentioned is one that has been preserved in the family and is one of the few in existence. It is signed by Zachariah Webster, William Sutton, Jesse Vail, Robert Anderson, William Dunn, W. P. Williamson and Dr. C. H. Stillman. The members of the present board could not help making a contrast when it was stated that the report showed the expenditures for school purposes in Plainfield for the year ending February 1, 1848, were $629.25. The cost of the local schools last year was $118,000.

Mr. Stillman's offer was accepted with thanks and the report will be displayed in a conspicuous place in the new High School to be opened next month.

W. R. CODINGTON GETS STANBERY AUTOMOBILE

PAID $340 FOR IT AT ADMINISTRATOR'S SALE OF PERSONAL EFFECTS.

The home of the late William R. Stanbery, in Fanwood, was crowded yesterday when the administrator's sale of all the household goods and personal effects of the dead man was held. Among the things sold was the $1,400 Rambler touring car in which Mr. W. R. Stanbery was fatally hurt in Dunellen last summer, when Mr. Stanbery and Oscar Harrison came into collision.

The auto was bought by William R. Codington. He secured it for $340. The machine was run up and down the yard and tried out and it acted as if gentle and healthy.

All the other effects were sold rapidly and at good prices. An unusual feature of the sale was the presence of more men than women. There were enough of the latter, however, to take up all the dishes, pictures and other household goods as fast as they were offered.

The sale was held to close up the estate. P. H. Lacourette was auctioneer. M. Laing, the administrator, was in charge.

Garwood Strikers Return.

Owing to the failure of the Union to support them in their contentions, the men who left the Hall Signal Works at Garwood on strike Saturday, have returned to their places. According to the officials, the trouble was caused by a few dissatisfied employes, who induced others to join them in going out, making excessive demands that were refused. As the Union was not advised of the trouble until the men had struck, the organization refused to take any part in it. The company took back most of the strikers, but the leaders were told to look elsewhere for employment.

I. O. F.'s Entertainment.

Court Watchung, No. 3871, Independent Order of Foresters, initiated a candidate last night and the remainder of the evening was taken in charge by the entertainment committee. A series of fascinating handbalancings by a young gymnast, Albert G. Hansen, and sleight-of-hand tricks by W. Warren Rankin were the features. Refreshments were served.

Prizes for Attendance.

Prizes for attendance at the meetings of the Junior Auxiliary, of St. Stephen's church, have been awarded to Miss Harriet Knox and Miss Edith Higgins. Miss Hattie Mattox has received a prize for saving her offerings during the summer vacation.

Clinical Society Meets.

The Clinical Society held its monthly meeting at the Casino, last night, when Dr. Kirman presented a paper on "Neurasthenia." This was followed by a discussion. Dinner was served by Mrs. Lena Hellstrom, covers being laids for ten.

"Mite Socials."

It is proposed to give a series of three socials at the parish rooms of St. Stephen's church, 721 East Sixth street, before Lent. They will be known as "mite socials," and a silver offering will be received for the parish house fund.

FT ARMORY PROJECT

Company K Will Put Proceeds of Annual Fair In Building Fund.

BANQUET AFTER FAIR

Many Five-Year Service Medals Will Be Presented at the Dinner—Re-enlistments Expected.

Company K has two big annual affairs on its mind. On February 17 it will start a week-long fair, and the company banquet will be held on February 26.

In the company councils the banquet is regarded as the biggest thing of the two, but more real interest, from the standpoint of the command's welfare, lies in the fair. The banquet will come and go and be more or less forgotten, but from the fair, it is expected, renewed impetus to the armory project, in which the company is very much wrapped up, will come.

Every cent netted from the fair will be placed in the armory fund. The company is determined to have a home of its own, and if the bazaar is as successful as it can easily be made, the hopes of the command will be vastly strengthened and put in a fair way to be realized.

The exercises at the opening of the regimental armory in Trenton last week, awoke renewed desires on the part of the company for a building all its own. Gov. Stokes spoke of the armory as the regiment's home, but the Plainfield command regards the place as nothing more than the armory of the Second battalion. The jubilation of the Trenton men made them more anxious than ever to build a place for themselves.

The dinner will be a great affair. Military guns of large calibre will grace it, and make impressive post prandial noises.

A feature of the occasion will be the presentation of five-year veteran medals to the men whose terms of service entitles them to the decoration. Many of the members will finish their periods of enlistment the night after the banquet. Very nearly all of them will re-enlist for a year.

RETURNED TRAVELLER TELLS OF FAIR SICILY.

Interesting Lecture Before Congregational Church Men's Club by J. M. Whiton.

J. M. Whiton lectured on Sicily before the Men's Club of the Congregational church last night. The meeting was open to the women of the congregation, and a large audience heard Mr. Whiten's very interesting discourse.

Mr. Whiton spent three months in Italy, last fall, and some of the fifty Sicilian views, with which his lecture was illustrated, were taken by himself. Just before he sailed for home from the port of Naples he met G. H. Frost, of this city, who is still touring in Italy.

Before the pictures were thrown on the screen, Mr. Whiten told what Sicily is, the character of her scenery and people, what she stands for in history and archaeology. The pictures included views of Palermo, Messina, Taormina, Catania Syracuse, of Mt. Aetna in various aspects, of Grecian temples and other scenes archaeologically interesting.

Other features of the entertainment besides the lecture were whistling solos by Mrs. C. A. Rice and piano solos by Miss Ida Lie, a pupil of Prof. Janke. Refreshments were served. The committee was made up of William McIntosh, G. T. Rhoades and A. R. Miller.

F. W. FROST IN INDIA.

On His Way Now to Delhi; Will Be In Japan Next Month.

Further advices have been received from Francis W. Frost, of Watchung avenue, who with another member of the party that went to the Philippines with Secretary Taft, is touring the East. Mr. Frost is at Darjeeling, Northern India, en route to Delhi.

He will go through Peshawur and Kohyber pass. On January 30 he will return to Bombay and go from there to Egypt. Mr. Frost is in good health and having an enjoyable time.

Distinguished Guest to Speak.

R. S. Miller, secretary of the American Legation at Tokio, will speak at the annual meeting of the Y. M. C. A. tomorrow evening. He spent four months with the soldiers in Manchuria and will have considerable of interest to relate.

Boys' Five Match.

The boys' department first team of the Y. M. C. A. will play the Rahway five here on February 19. The game will open their season.

CAUGHT A CLOTHES THIEF

Colored Girl Was Stripping a Line When Surprised By Marshal Pope.

ARRESTED AFTER CHASE

Pleaded Guilty in Court and Sent to Jail by Mayor Smalley—Lives on Plainfield Avenue.

Marshal Pope, of the borough police force, was passing along Watchung avenue, near Fairview, Wednesday, when he noticed a young colored woman taking clothes from a line in C. H. Rugg's yard. It is an occurrence that a policeman sees regularly, and he thought nothing more of it until the girl turned suddenly and caught the glint of his brass buttons. She immediately dropped everything she had in her arms, with the exception of a pair of lace curtains, and ran as fast as her skirts would permit her.

She started down Watchung avenue, but Pope was behind her in an instant and stopped her flight before she had gone half a block. The exertion had left her with but very little breath, but she managed to gasp out:

"All right, mister, Ah'll go with you; I didn't mean to do it."

There was no doubt in Pope's mind then but what he had a clothesline thief, and he took the girl to police headquarters. She described herself as Martha Brown, twenty years old, of Plainfield avenue, and said the array of clean linen had attracted her notice as she was returning from her work place next to the Rugg residence. It suggested a way to replenish the Brown family wardrobe, and she had made quite a selection of underclothing, shirts and stockings when the bluecoat came upon the scene. Pope admitted that he hadn't looked upon her as a thief until she started to run, as many families leave the "wash" out until late at night.

Martha was arraigned before Mayor Smalley Thursday and was fined $10 and given seven days in jail. The charge against her is a State offense, but the Mayor was lenient because of her youth and the fact that Chief Weiss had looked up her relatives and found that she has hitherto borne a good reputation. She was unable to pay the fine and will serve the full time at Somerville.

DR. JACKSON PREACHES HIS FAREWELL SERMON

ASSUMES NEW PASTORATE IN NEW YORK NEXT SUNDAY.

Rev. Dr. E. E. Jackson preached his farewell sermon as pastor at the Mt. Olive Baptist church last night, taking for his subject "God is Love." In the course of his remarks the preacher congratulated his people on the success attained during his pastorate of seven years and seven months and referred specially to the harmonious relations existing between pastor and people.

During his pastorate Dr. Jackson has received 350 new members into the church, a majority being baptized by him. The number of deaths has been small and very few members have been lost through other causes.

Assisting in the farewell services was a choir of fourteen voice from the Waverly Place Baptist church, New York, to which church Dr. Jackson will go this week. He will assume his new pastorate on Sunday and on the second Sunday in February will be installed.

In addition to the farewell sermon last night, the deacons of the church gave expression to their feelings of appreciation for the good work accomplished by Dr. Jackson and wished him success in his new field. For the present the church will have supplies, and there will be no haste in the calling of a successor to Dr. Jackson.

Preparing Missionary Box.

The Women's Home Missionary Society of the Crescent Avenue church is preparing a box for a missionary under the care of the Synod of New Jersey. Work on it will be continued at a sewing meeting of the society in the church parlors Friday afternoon. The society is much interested in the work and is anxious for a great effort toward its continuation by all the members.

Day Nursery's Appeal.

The Day Nursery committee, from the City Union, King's Daughters, asks that the public keep in mind the appeal made for articles for the Day Nursery to be opened on Tuesday, January 23, at 3 o'clock. Anyone having such articles can send them to the nursery at 444 West Third street, where the matron, Mrs. E. L. Bird, is in charge.

Mrs. S. C. Fisher has returned from a visit to relatives in Lebanon.

John Dowd, whose fingers were crushed by a heavy casting in a Plainfield shop a week ago, is recovering from the accident and the shock of the amputation that it made necessary.

PERSIAN BOY WIDE AWAKE.

British Diplomat Relates an Instance of His Acute Observation.

Sir Mortimer Durand, the British ambassador at Washington, is a student of child life, and wherever he is stationed he never fails to gather some interesting data about the manners and methods of the juvenile population. He has found infinite amusement in observing the street gamin of New York, particularly the venders of papers and even in the staid and quiet American capital the diplomat has discovered young minds to study.

But Sir Mortimer gives the palm for infantile intelligence to the little folks of Persia. For many years the present envoy to the United States represented the kingdom of Great Britain at Teheran, [illegible] descendants of the fire worshipers. Sir Mortimer has embodied his impressions of Persia in a clever book, and Lady Durand, his wife, has written a dainty sketch called a "Diary of Travels in Southern Persia." Both volumes show deep sympathy and intimate knowledge of the people and pay high tributes to the qualities of the children of Iran.

The other day, however, the British [illegible] a luncheon. That functionary is as [illegible] in Teheran as he is [illegible], and he told [illegible] that the children would pack the baskets—that they knew the ways of the [illegible] just as well as he. Sir Mortimer was willing, and a tempting array of sandwiches and fruits was set forth when the time arrived.

Sir Mortimer himself unpacked the drinkables, in which claret and brandy figured, and securely tied to each bottle was a package of peppermint drops bought of the English druggist in Teheran. Sir Mortimer says he felt very uncomfortable for a time to think how carefully those youngsters had studied his ways.

TWO CLASSES OF OAK TREE

One Notable for Its Wood, the Other for Its Brilliancy of Coloring.

The great oak family might be divided into two classes, writes Edwin W. Foster, in "Our Friends, the Trees," in St. Nicholas; those that ripen their acorns in one season, such as the white, post and mossy-cup oaks, and those which require two full years, such as the red, scarlet and black oaks. To the first class belong the chestnut oak and the live oak of the south. This latter tree for generations played an important part in ship building, but has now been superseded by iron and steel. The leaf, which is an evergreen, is entirely without indentations, and is thick and leathery. The wood is very heavy and strong, has a beautiful grain, and is susceptible of taking a high polish. At one time this wood was so valuable that our government paid $200,000 for large tracts of land in the south, that our navy might be sure of a supply of live oak timber.

To the second class of oaks we are largely indebted for the gorgeous colors of our autumn leaves. The red, scarlet and pin oaks, with their brilliant reds, scarlets and browns, are close competitors with the maple in giving our American landscapes the most wonderful autumn colorings to be found anywhere in the world. These three trees are quite similar, but by careful examination may always be distinguished.

RAIN WHEN COW SNEEZES.

Tennessee Negro Discovered Remarkable Accuracy of the Act as a Weather Sign.

"There was an old negro slave on my uncle's farm down in Tennessee who was a peculiar chap, and of whom the youngsters about the place—white as well as black—stood in fear," said Senator Carmack, in conversation with a group of friends, relates the Washington Post.

"This aged Senegambian, Uncle Tom by name, could give all the modern weather sharps cards and spades and beat them, for he could predict with almost unerring accuracy what the elements would be doing. One day I was standing out in the cow pen beside the old man, when he suddenly exclaimed: 'Did you hear that?'

"'Hear what, Uncle Tom?'

"'Hear that old speckled cow sneeze. Sho' as yo' am libin', boy, it am a-gwine ter rain befo' morning, kase wheneber you hear a cow sneeze dat means rain.'

"Sure enough, it poured down from the skies, as Tom had foretold. Prior to that I had never taken note of a cow's sneezing, and there may be skeptical folks who would doubt that this was a bovine habit, but my own belief in it is firmly established, and I am equally sure that old Uncle Tom had good cause to establish a connection between it and wet weather."

New Korean Railway.

Japan subsidized a company to build the Corean railway lately opened. All the rolling stock came from the United States—the locomitives from the Baldwin works, Philadelphia, the cars from the various American car factories, and the 90 pound rails from the Carnegie steel works. The cost of the Seoul-Fusan line, 276 miles, has been about $50,000 a mile, or $13,800,000. There are 26 tunnels, 96 long bridges and about 500 smaller ones. The two chief construction engineers were Japanese.

National Pride.

Sir Rottyn Rowe—All your—haw—really brilliant marriages are contracted in England, y' know.

Miss Gaysett—Perhaps, but that's passe. All our brilliant separations are strictly American.—Puck.

IMITATIONS OF LEATHER.

Tricks of the Tanner Make It Difficult to Tell the Substitutions from the Real.

Leather is becoming more and more of a puzzle to retailers. Substitution of leathers is now so deftly practiced that undoubtedly many a buyer is completely fooled, says the Shoe Retailer. The tricks of the tanners are innumerable, and as these are masked behind the practices of the shoe manufacturer, the shoe retailer has a tough proposition to ascertain whether or not he is getting real or imitation goods.

Cowhides and sheepskins are among the cheapest of hides and skins in the market, but by a few clever manipulations tanners make them valuable. A cowhide is tanned. Then it is put through the splitting machine, which machine is so delicately adjustable that it will shave off leather as fine as tissue paper.

For the tanner's practical purposes it splits leather into any weight desired; a fine kid for a woman's shoe, a heavier calf weight for boys' and men's shoes, or even heavier stock for workingmen's shoes. The light weight split is given a vici kid finish, the medium a velour calf, while the heaviest weight may be grained. Other splits may be chrome tanned and given a patent finish, and may be sold as patent colt.

A sheep leather, especially cabretta stock, is made into imitation of kid, and large quantities of it are sold as such. Sheep leather is even given a patent finish and sold as colt and kid.

THE CRUELTY OF FASHION.

Slaughter of Waning Species of Bird for the Decoration of Women's Hats.

The splendid snow-white heron, known as the American egret, one of the few kinds which bear the aigrette plumes of millinery and commerce, is among the waning species of America—a victim of inexorable fashion, says Herbert K. Job, in Country Life in America.

In 1903 the price for plumes offered to hunters was $32 per ounce, which makes the plumes worth twice their weight in gold. There will always be men who would break any law for such profit. No rookery of these herons can long exist, unless it be guarded by force of arms day and night.

Mr. Job tells how he visited what is perhaps the last large remaining egret rookery in North America.

It should be remembered that these plumes—which are variously called by milliners "aigrettes," "stubbs" or "ospreys," and are dyed to whatever color is fashionable—are borne only during the nuptial season and can be secured only by shooting the birds when they have assembled in colonies to breed, when their usual shyness has departed, owing to the strength of the parental insitnct. Returning to their nests, they are shot down and their young are left to starve.

DOGS USED AS CARRIERS.

Pressed Into Service by the Poorer Classes in Some Parts of Europe.

But there are many countries and many circumstances where the possession of a horse or even a donkey is beyond the means of those who serve as carriers. I am not considering, of course, those mighty carriers, the elephant, the dromedary and the camel, writes Gerrish Eldredge in "Queer Carriers" in St. Nicholas. These are exceptional animals, as are also the ox of our own land, the Egyptian buffalo and the zebra of India, which are employed under unusual conditions, where great strength or endurance is required. In Germany and other parts of Europe dogs are in very general use among the poorer classes as carriers; and, indeed, many New Yorkers can remember how, more than forty years ago, the dog was very largely used by the ragman and traveling peddlers of New York. Every morning the little wagons, some with two and some with four wheels, would come down the street, drawn by one or two dogs, and guided by a woman and sometimes by boys.

THE BIG ALASKAN BEAR.

His Skin Highly Valued by Sportsmen of the World as a Trophy.

Alaska is particularly rich in bears; and most of them belong to a group known as the Alaskan brown bears, of which the Kodiak bear is one. So wide is his reputation that sportsmen from all over the world spend thousands of dollars in order to add a skin to their collection of trophies, says J. Alden Loring, in Recreation. "The weight of a well-known Kodiak bear is not known, although specimens have been killed that were estimated to weigh between 1,500 and 1,800 pounds, and some hunters claim that they they will go as high as 2,200. While at Kodiak several summers ago, I measured the skin of one of these huge animals which stretched the tape nine and a half feet from the nose to the tail, and ten and a half feet across the outstretched front paws. Mr. A. C. Goss, who handles all of the brown bear skins that pass through the hands of the Alaskan Commercial company at Kodiak, told me that he had seen skins that were three feet longer.

The Ever Faithful Delegate.

"Thin we'll stroike until they raise thim," said the sleepy walking delegate, [illegible]

LITERARY NOTES.

An exquisite portrait of Mrs. Potter Palmer is the frontispiece of the February Smart Set. This new feature of the magazine has met with universal appreciation, and the publishers announce that future issues will contain equally fine portraits of beautiful and prominent women. "News and the Man," a novel of love, journalism and intrigue, by Jesse Lynch Williams, is the leading piece of fiction. It is safe to say that no more realistic picture of the exciting life of Park Row has ever been drawn. The story is dramatic to a degree, and of the final scene in the newspaper office, particularly, Mr. Williams writes vividly and with brilliance. Richard Le Gallienne and Irma Perry have collaborated in an essay which they call "The Laurel of Gossip," wherein they discuss, with unusual cleverness, the little scandal-mongers who infest every society. The paper is delightfully satirical, and will be much enjoyed. "Half-Gods and Gods," by Emery Pottle, is a strong story of two sisters in a provincial town, whose simple romance is told with great art. John Regnault Ellyson, in "The Wolf-Prince," has written another of his fantastic tales; and "The Face," by Stephen Chalmers, is almost equally weird. "In Bluebeard's Closet," by Virginia Woodward Cloud, is one of this author's finely wrought tales, and "A Splendid Decadence," by G. Vere Tyler, will be read by every woman. Zona Gale, Mabel Herbert Urner, W. Carey Wonderly and William C. de Mille are among the other writers who contribute fiction. Bliss Carman's important poem, "The Miracle," is a feature of this number. The well known Canadian poet has done nothing better for several years. Edith M. Thomas, Lizette Woodworth Reese, Kate Jordan, Beatrix Demarest Lloyd and Algernon Tassin also contribute verse, while Tom Masson, Tom P. Morgan and Richard Fechheimer supply the humor. The February Smart Set is a most attractive number of this always delightful magazine.

Since California has entered the epoch of newspapers, she has, with her usual progressiveness, spared no expense in securing the best equipment for their production. Time was, however, when she dreamed life away without a desire for the printed page, and the first six decades of her civilized career glided by without one typographical apparatus within her borders. To Augustin V. Zamorano is due the credit of introducing the printing press into California. His order was sent from Monterey to Boston in 1832, and two years later a wooden Ramage hand press was brought out by Captain Shaw at a cost of $460. Whether Zamorano had wished to expend but little money on the new venture, or whether the Yankeetraders thought any machine good enough for the unsophisticated Californians is not known; but it is evident that the press had done hard service before embarking for the West. Its first product in Monterey, in 1834, indicates that the press gave an uneven impression and that the type was much worn. * * * There was evidently no call for a periodical in the State, and the press was used chiefly for official proclamations and some little school books. About 1837, Zamorano sold the press to the government, and in that year it was taken to Sonoma by Vallejo. Later it was returned to Monterey and seems to have fallen into disuse until after the American occupation.—Katherine Chandler in Sunset Magazine for January.

Suggestion is a journal of the New Psychology for health, happiness, and success; it teaches how to apply the great basic Law of Suggestion in the everyday affairs of life through autosuggestion. How shall I succeed in life? Suggestion is the publication that point the way. It is the only publication in the world that shows why some fail and why some succeed; the teachings of Suggestion, if followed consistently, will turn sickness into health, despondency into cheerfulness and failure into brilliant success. Why not read Suggestion? Why not understand the secret of power, health, success? Why not? Do it now. Suggestion is a magazine for thinkers; for those who will not shy at an idea; for those who do not use predigested thought; for those who wear no tag or brand or collar; for those who want facts. ### Congratulates "Youngest Grandpa."

Winsted, Jan. 13.—Gus Jenks, thirty-five years old, of Millerton, N. Y., the youngest "grandpa" in New York, if not in New England, has received a letter of congratulation from President Roosevelt. Gus's father has received a similar letter congratulating him on being a great-grandfather at fifty-six.

RECURRENCE OF BICYCLE.

Restoration to Favor of the Handy Conveyance Seems to Be Assured.

The restoration of the bicycle to popular favor can have only good results. No other means of conveyance ever possessed such a large number of good qualities, and it seems only natural, says the New York Sun, that the manufactories should again be working at night to meet the demand. The manufacturers, even with their present extra effort, are working merely to reach a sane and reasonable demand, and it is not at all probable that such a mania for wheeling as we saw ten years ago will be repeated.

It is probable that few of these wheels are being manufactured now for use in New York. There is no place left in the life of the metropolis for the enjoyment of the bicycle. Since thousands rolled about the streets local conditions have changed. Preparations for the building of the subway helped to hasten the decline of bicycle riding as a sport in this city. Now that the streets are clear of this obstruction the volume of traffic is greatly increased. The presence of the numerous automobiles is sufficient in itself to make the recurrence of the old-time numbers impossible. There is no longer any room in the streets for so many riders. It is a misfortune for New Yorkers that they are not going to share in the convenience and healthfulness which will be a consequence of this revival of the bicycle. It is to the dwellers in small cities that the benefit of this change will go. There one realizes the extent to which the bicycle is an important feature of life. As a means of relaxation the wheel is subordinate to its practical utility as a method of getting from place to place.

OIL OF THE BAKU FIELDS.

Petroleum Production Falling Off as a Result of Disturbances in Russia.

The effect of the recent disturbances in Russia on the production of petroleum in that country is made the subject of a report to the government department of commrece and labor by United States Consul Stuart, at Botum. Mr. Stuart says that "the production of crude oil in the Baku fields in 1904 exceeded the apparent production of 1903, but there was a very great loss of crude oil through fires in September and October, 1903. In 1904 the production was also curtailed by a strike in December, which commenced on the 26th and continued until after New Year's day. Notwithstanding that the producers made great concessions (after incendiarism had destroyed 120 rigs, mostly of producing wells), it is said that the workmen since returning to their employment have not been working with any*thing like their former energy.*

"The loss of production by the December strike, leaving out of the question flowing wells, was not less than 110,000 barrels per day for the month. As there were 289 wells completed in 1904, against 189 in 1903, the results indicate very clearly that the production can only be maintained at about the quantity necessary to cover the demand by the drilling of at least 250 wells yearly."

WARRIOR'S ODD PASTIME.

Famous British General Prefers Modeling in Clay to Anything Else.

One of the many interesting features in a recent issue of Printer's Pie, states the Dundee Advertiser, is a symposium on the "Pastimes of Popular People." Maj. Gen. R. S. Baden-Powell writes as follows:

"Apart from playing the bassoon—which I look upon as giving, par excellence, the best exercise for the intelligence and temper as well as for the minor physical organs, both inside and out—the pastime [illegible] more than any other is that of modeling in clay. It is a nice and messy pursuit, and yet very clean. It is fascinating, and at the same time restful. For a busy man it is accommodating, because he can take it up or leave it at any moment—in his room or office, or even, as I have done, in the train. It beats golf in the number of iron or wooden tools which can be used in it, but which are none the more necessary to success.

"Personally," adds the major general, "I like it because the results of my efforts far transcend and surpass those of anybody else—in their total absence of merit."

Peculiar Life Insurance.

A curious form of life insurance is springing up in French manufacturing towns under the name of "La Fourmi" (the ant). The peculiarity is that the longer a man lives, the less he becomes entitled to. The payment of 4s a month assures the payment of £200 to the heirs of a man dying before the age of 38, the payment diminishing proportionately to £102 at 51. The idea seems to be that if a man dies young his children are likely to be in want, but that when he is 50 they will be able to earn their living.

SOME PRETTY TALL CORN.

Farmers Require Tree Climbers to Go Up the Stalks for the Ears.

A story printed a few days ago that Missouri has corn ten feet high at this season in one section amused the Kansas farmers who read it, says the Kansas City Star. In defense of Kansas corn big stories can be found readily. Lute Newton, who owns several farms along the Neosho, northeast of town, says:

"Missouri may be able to brag on raising mules with ears ten feet long, but the fact that it has corn ten feet high is not remarkable. Kansas can give Missouri cards and spades and beat all its corn stories. Corn 14 feet high out along the Neosho is not causing any particular comment among the farmers. It is still growing. It will reach 18 feet before it matures. That is not an uncommon height for Kansas corn in favorable years."

Most of the early corn has been "laid by" and has reached the roasting ear stage. The unusually good corn year has revived the old-time corn stories of the Jack-and-the-Bean-Stalk type. The other day a farmer, after buying a new buggy and set of harness at an Emporia store, inquired if the merchant had any tree climbers in stock.

"Tree climbers?" responded the merchant. "What have you on the string, a tee tree?"

"Naw," drawled the farmer. "We fellers on the bottom this season will have to use climbers to reach the ears of the corn."

RED-TAPE IN BUTTONS.

An Instance of the Absurd Extent to Which Officialdom Goes in England.

Seriously as the British war office takes it, the height of absurdity appears to have been reached in the matter of buttons. The design is about to be changed, and already a small fortune has been spent upon designs and other incidentals, to say nothing of a year of conferences. With the question still undecided, $25,000 has already been spent, and, judging from past experiences, another year and a second appropriation will be required.

On one occasion no less than 200 conferences were held by the high officials of the department on the subject of a button which upon adoption was found to be most unsatisfactory.

The Brodrick cap, a German importation, adopted only after endless discus*sion, including a parliamentary debate,* was discarded almost immediately with a loss of more than $500,000 to the government. At least one suicide may be directly traced to the controversy.

Even more costly has been the change in rifles, more than $1,500,000 having been wasted in the adoption and discarding of various arms upon the mere question of the proper length of the barrel.

Under such circumstances as these even the "embalmed beef" of the Spanish-American war becomes a mere trifle.

VICTIM OF TIGHT LACING.

Curious Warning in Antique Tombstone in Scotch Burial Ground.

A few miles from Annan, in the world-famed burial ground of Spring Well, celebrated in song and story in connection with the tragic death of Fair Helen, of Kirkconnel Lea, there is to be seen still in a state of good preservation a curious old tombstone, upon which is sculptured a full bust figure of a woman with a waist that any lady in search of a slim figure might well envy.

But this tombstone writes a correspondent of the Dundee News, was not erected to encourage vanity in the feminine mind, but for the purpose of warning ladies who were inclined to indulge in tight lacing of the fate that awaited them—as the lady over whose remains this unique tombstone was erected had fallen a victim of this fashionable tightness of the waist. On another part of the stone there is a mounted figure supposed to represent a horseman hurrying to seek a doctor to relieve the sufferer.

Sinbad's Alleged Prototype.

The story of Sinbad the Sailor is believed to owe a good deal to the legend of St. Brendan, the Kerry saint whose day is May 18. According to the legend, St. Brendan sailed the ocean for seven years in search of the island that had once been Adam's Eden. During that time he regularly revisited the Island of Sheep, where the sheep are as large as oxen; the Island of Birds, that are really fallen angels, and another island which is really a big fish named Jascon trying to get his tail into his mouth. St. Brendan used to encamp on the fish on Easter Monday. He found the Eden island at last, but no one has seen it since, though it appeared on seventeenth century maps and in an eighteenth century treaty between Spain and Portugal. Probably Irish monks took this legend with them to the east in the ninth century.

Fruit Used in Fishing.

A recent writer in The National Geographical Magazine" tells of a tree growing in the Malay archipelago, the Andaman islands and Ceylon, which produces a fruit used in fishing, with results of a remarkable character. The fruit is pounded up into paste and left in bags over night, after which it is sunk at low tide in deep holes along the reefs. The fish soon begin to appear at the surface; some of them lifeless, others attempting to swim or faintly struggling, with their ventral side uppermost. In this condition the natives have no difficulty in picking them out of the water with their hands.

COMPANY K. AT TRENTON

Local Military Boys at Opening of Second Regiment Armory.

THEY GET 17 MEDALS

Governor Stokes Makes a Speech Following Review—Dancing at Close.

With practically its entire membership, Company K went to Trenton Wednesday to take part in the review of the Second Regiment by Governor E. C. Stokes and his staff. The militiamen left Plainfield by special train at 7:15 and returned on the 2:30 Friday a. m., the trip being one of the most pleasant the company has ever taken.

The review was brought about through the formal opening of the new Second Regiment armory at Trenton, the largest in the State. All the companies participated and many State officials were present. The exercises began at 8:30 with the first call and was followed ten minutes later by the adjutant's call and formation of batallions. Following the review, Governor Stokes presented the Long and Faithful Service medals, the Collins medal, National Rifle Association medal and 100 per cent. duty medals. The following members of Company K received 100 per cent. medals: Commissary-Sergeant Edgar R. Pearsall, Sergeant George L. Apgar, Sergeant Oliver R. Pearson, Jr., Corporals Lendrum Jennings, James F. Niles, Arthur Phillips, G. Stewart Smith, Alfred R. Tranchand and Thomas A. Weaver: Privates Jesse Dayton, Jr., Roy DeCamp, Albert Ford, James M. Frazee, Victor French, Charles Kofoed, Walter M. Sampson and Percy W. Vail.

*More of these medals were pre*sented to the local company than to any other in the regiment. Plainfield got seventeen, the nearest to it being Company C, of Elizabeth, with eleven. Companies A, B, D and E, which are to occupy the new armory, got seventeen combined. Governor Stokes complimented the men as they stepped forward and afterward made an address.

A regimental parade came after the presentations and at the conclusion of the retreat, the Second Regiment Band played "The Star Spangled Banner" and the flag was lowered. Dancing brought the exercises to a close, only those living at a distance leaving before midnight.

SPLENDID RECORD OF CAPT. WILLIAM B. MARTIN

HEAD OF COMPANY K. ONE OF THOSE TO RECEIVE SERVICE MEDALS.

Captain William B. Martin, who is at the head of Company K, was one of the State guardsmen who received twenty years service medals at the exercises in Trenton, Thursday night. He is one of the most popular officers in the Second Regiment and has a record that is one to be proud of.

He enlisted in the old Third Regiment on December 16, 1884, and was discharged January 7, 1891. Through successive re-enlistments he served until the disbandment of the regiment May 2, 1889. He was then commissary sergeant but re-enlisted as a private in Company I, Second Regiment, May 3, 1899, serving steadily since that time. He entered service in the Spanish-American War April 27, 1898, as commisary sergeant and was in the Third New Jersey National Guard Volunteer Infantry and was first lieutenant and battalion adjutant when discharged February 11, 1899.

As a rifle shot his record is a bril*liant one. He won the Wimbledon* match at Sea Girt, in 1901; the Gerstenberg trophy at Washington, in 1902, and the Hayes and Spencer match at Sea Girt in 1905. He shot on the American team against Canada in 1901 and against Canada and Great Britain at Ottawa, Canada, in 1902. In 1903 he shot on the American team at Bisley, England. He is the senior member of the New Jersey State team, having been a member since 1899. He holds the world's record with the military rifle at 800, 900 and 1,000 yards. On May 19, 1903, he made 73 at 800 yards, 72 at 900 and 68 at 1,000 yards, a total of 213. On September 9, 1905, he made 24 consecutive bullseyes at 600 yards, which gave him second place for that distance and on the same day 17 consecutive bullseyes at 800 yards, winning the Spencer medal.

By the members of Company K, Captain Martin is held in high esteem and he has done a great deal to bring the organization to its present state of efficiency.

H. S. Thomas, formerly a reporter for the Courier-News and the Elizabeth Leader, is now doing reportorial work on the State Centre-Record, Bound Brook.

Jesse H. Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, who is detained at home with an attack of scarlet fever, is much improved.

JOURNALISTIC OPINIONS

Publication of the Laws.

The fact is recalled by the Mount Holly Mirror that when Franklin Murphy was Governor a delegation of newspaper men waited on him in reference to the publication of the laws in the newspapers, and he suggested that a bill providing for the publication of a synopsis of the laws be prepared and introduced in the Legislature. If that body passed it he would give it his signature. Such a bill went through, but it failed at the point where the Governor was to attach his name. The delegation referred to were influential men, and it is to be feared that the people should be informed as to the sessional laws than by the object of getting official advertising to print. But their motives could not serve to condemn the principle of publication of the laws in a form to which ordinary expense, under Murphy's suggestion was business-like. A synopsis of the laws is all that is necessary, and there are many legislative acts, of interest only in certain localities, that need not be promulgated in other localities. To the more important daily papers of the State, and to the weeklies of large in any shape would be of no commercial profit at the rates usually fixed by the State. They would use the publication more particularly as information for their readers. The Paterson Press undertook to print a synopsis of the laws several years ago, but private enterprise in such a matter lacks the essential of certainty in the correctness of the version given. The synopsis should be officially made, and 'be given out by State authority.—Newark Advertiser.

New Jersey.

Governor Stokes, of New Jersey, in his annual message recommends the licensing of automobile drivers after examination and the revocation of the licenses of lawbreaking drivers. He adds: "It might be provided that deliberate reckless driving, whether of automobiles or horses, resulting in injury to person or property, should be punished by imprisonment." No State has a greater interest than New Jersey, with its magnificent roads and its situation midway on the great lines of travel between New York and Philadelphia, in the repression of the crime of road recklessness and the punishment of manslaughter by speed madness. The message as a whole is disappointing. Governor Stokes recommends a further step in creation of assembly districts, a Corrupt Practices act based on English and Massachusetts models, forestry reservations, the taxation of railroad "main stems," by and for the State rather than locally—a suggestion that will be severely criticised—and the limitation and taxation of local franchises. But there is nowhere the ringing word to the people of the State calling upon them to rid their Commonwealth of the shame of issuing letters of marque to pirate corporations to prey upon the people of the other States. Governor Stokes has even the effrontery to follow Senator Dryden in the assumption that Federal control of life insurance "is but a question of a few years."—The World.

Fowler Rose to It.

Representative Charles N. Fowler, chairman of the House Committee on Banking and Currency, evidently knows a psychological moment when he sees one. It may have been Banker Schiff's Chamber of Commerce "panic" speech and the subsequent hue and cry for something in the way of currency reform, which created the moment which carried with it so many possibilities for the right man who could do the right thing; but it was a Democratic representative in Congress who rose to the occasion by introducing a new and improved credit currency bill—in violation apparently of all the so-called understandings that there was to be no financial legislation this winter. It was a most timely act, being pitched into the public eye just when the Schiff and other denunciations of our currency system, and the disaster it is calculated to produce, were still ringing in the ears.

It is too much, of course, to predict now that the bill, in any form, will become a law at this session. That it, or something like it, ought to pass, there is no gainsaying. It should have fair treatment in the House, with the chairman of the right committee as its sponsor. But it has small chance in the Senate, little to be hoped for in the Senate, where the Committee on Finance has decided, as reported, that nothing beyond a slight amendment to the existing national banking act will be given favorable consideration at this session—the moving the prohibition against retiring to exceed $3,000,000 of bank notes within a month. But whatever happens to this ,the latest Fowler currency bill, one which is planned to furnish flexibility and security and provide for the elimination of the greenbacks it is enough of an improvement on former Fowler bills to win a still greater indorsement among the bankers of the land.

The present law permits national banks to issue currency to the extent of their capital, secured by government bonds. The new Fowler bill merely prescribes that national banks may issue credit currency equal to half their capital. This is to be secured by a five per cent. fund, which would have been more than enough, as shown by Treasury records, to make good the notes of all failed national banks to date. The tax on these notes, under the Fowler plan, would be only two per cent., which, with the two per cent. it is proposed to have banks pay on deposits of government funds, would go toward the purchase of gold bullion, to be used in retiring the greenbacks, a process which, as projected, would take fifteen or twenty years. It is also planned that government deposits in national banks shall not exceed half the amount of the bank's capital, thus tending to distribute the public funds more generally throughout the country.

From the earlier synopsis of the bill it would seem, therefore, that nothing like inflation is involved. The total of a national bank's currency issue may equal its capital, but only half that may be of the credit variety; it being left to the bank to decide whether to issue both credit and bank-secured notes at once. In any case, it would relieve a bank from tying up some of its funds in bonds, when a money strain came. Calling for interest on government deposits should bring friends to the measure and as soon as Representative Fowler makes it clear to objecting bankers and others how his plan for retiring the credit notes will work, it might prove another long step forward in acquiring the needed education to push through this or some similar panic preventer.—Newark News.

ABOUT PEOPLE.

Senator Knox and his stenographer are frequently at work as early as 5 o'clock in the morning, and by breakfast time the shorthand man has work enough to last him all day.

Nathan Wesley Hale, a Republican Congressman from Tennessee, can claim descent from Oliver Cromwell, and one of his ancestors, General Nathan Towson, was a quartermaster-general under George Washington.

Mrs. Russell Sage sent every one of the 200 laborers of Central Park, New York, $5 as a New Year present, because, as she says, she is pleased to see the excellent condition in which they maintain the drives.

Mme. Marta S. Bramsen, head of the vocal department in a fashionable musical school at Pittsburg, has not worn stockings since she was 14 years old. Her antipathy to hosiery was only discovered recently when she attended a reception at a musical institution, the tuneless movement of her gown disclosed a bare foot in a sandal of ancient pattern.

It is asserted that Frank H. Hitchcock, first assistant to the Postmaster-General, has worked from 9 a. m. until midnight for three years, his only vacation in this time consisting of two days to vote.

COINCIDENCES.

"I wonder whether any one else has discovered that Rudyard Kipling appears to be indebted to Ralph Waldo Emerson for one of the best lines in his 'Recessional?' The resemblance is, at any rate, very remarkable. Kipling writes:

Beneath whose awful hand we hold
Dominion over palm and pine.

"The following is a couplet from Emerson's 'Wood Notes:'

And grant to dwellers with the pine
Dominion o'er the palm and vine."

The City Temple can,or at any rate could until recently, claim a curious ornithological connection. A correspondent writes: "A pew was rented by three persons; at one end was Miss Wren, at the other end Mr. Nightingale, and in the centre a family of Robins.

"I wonder, with you, why these coincidences run chiefly to birds," says a correspondent. "I remember a household in Clifton (which there were no domestic service) Mrs. Pidgeon (cook), Mrs. Partridge (lady's maid), and Mrs. Hawke (charwoman). But that is trifling compared to the case of the old Congregational chapel in Faversham, where the Rev. Hall Sparrow was pastor, Mr. Sparrow and Cuckoo were the names of two of the deacons in his time; Mrs. Martin was the chapel keeper; Mr. Lark, Miss Crow and Miss Nightingale were members of the congregation, and the organist was, and is, situated in Partridge Lane."

Inland Revenue writes: "It may interest you to hear that on our lists of publicans for the county of Oxford there appeared some years ago the names of Samuel Johnson and James Boswell consecutively."—London News.

The New York Tribune Almanac.

Of course, it is possible to worry through life without keeping a Tribune Almanac at your elbow, but is it worth while—does it pay? For 25 cents a year this publication supplies you with a really marvellous amount of information and the man who has it is an authority in his neighborhood. He doesn't have to be "guessing" or "supposing" about election pluralities, the names of cabinet ministers, Senators, Congressmen, Governors or judges. He doesn't have to depend upon his memory when anything comes up about the big events of the preceding year, or in relation to our army or navy, or sporting records, or, in fact, almost anything else of record worth knowing. If you have never examined The Tribune Almanac just invest a quarter for one, and see how well pleased you'll be. The 1906 one will be on sale January 1, and may be had from your newsdealer, through your local paper or direct from The Tribune Office, New York.

JAPANESE MANUFACTURERS.

Falling Off in British and German Imports Caused by Their Enterprise.

Japanese enterprise in various manufacturing industries is being felt in the Japanese markets of British and German traders, according to a report received at the Washington department of commerce and labor from Ernest L. Harris, commercial agent at Elberfeld, Germany. Mr. Harris says:

"The Japanese industries are gradually forcing themselves into various markets of the world where their competition is being keenly felt by English and German traders. Japanese ingenuity and industry are beginning to exert an influence to such an extent that their exports are increasing, while at the same time the markets in Japan are passing more and more into the hands of home manufacturers. This is causing a reduction of imports. It has long been thought that the Japanese were masters of the art of imitation, but it is now generally admitted the world over that they also possess powers of great initiative.

"A recent report of the British consul at Kobe records the fact that the import of cotton yarns shows a big decrease, due to the increased growth of the Japanese industry, which is gradually but surely ousting Lancashire coarse cottons from the Japanese markets. Among woolen manufactures the outlook for imported goods is not bright. The manufacture of flannels in Osaka has improved to such an extent that imports of this article have fallen off considerably. Japanese manufacturers to-day are producing the cleverest kinds of cotton underclothes, toilet soap and lamps. The indigo and tobacco trades are also rapidly passing into Japanese hands."

FAIR INDIAN TERRITORY.

Contrary to Common Impression It Is a Fine and Productive Country.

The people of the east have very little comprehension of the conditions of things out in Indian territory. According to the popular impression it is a wilderness, sparsely settled by savages, partially civilized halfbreeds and a few white adventurers and escaped criminals. That never was the case. Writes W. E. Curtis, in Chicago Record-Herald, although the territory has had more than its share of rascals and adventurers, and is not entirely without them yet. To-day, as you ride through from Kansas to the Texas boundary on any of the railroads, you will see very little difference from either of those states, and will not realize when you have crossed the border line. The landscape is lovely—a rolling prairie, broken by frequent timber and watered by large streams—including three of the largest tributaries of the Mississippi river. Practically all of the untimbered land is under cultivation, and you are scarcely ever out of sight of a house. The soil is as thoroughly cultivated as that of Kansas, Nebraska or Missouri, and just at this time of year, when the wheat fields are ready for the harvest, the corn is waist high and the foliage of the forest is lustrous with life and vigor. The Indian Territory is more beautiful to the eye, while few sections respond so generously to the labor of the farmer.

AT THE PHOTOGRAPHER'S.

Sitter Who Needed a Little Fixing Up, But the Artist Was Equal to It.

"I have come to get my wife photographed," said the determined-looking man as he entered the studio, followed by a meek-looking woman. "You can make fools look grand, sir, can't you?"

"Certainly, sir," replied the photographer; "that is part of my business, you know.

"Well, Maria here fell out of the window last year and broke her nose. You can straighten it out, I suppose?"

"Certainly, sir."

"And you can push in Maria's ears so that she won't look so much like a rabbit?"

"Oh, I think so."

"And what about the squint in her left eye?"

"Oh, I can touch it up with Indian ink."

"And the freckles?"

"They won't appear on the picture at all."

"And will the hair be red?"

"Oh, no."

"Well, you can go ahead. Sit down there, Maria, and try to look pleasant."

Sun Dials in Many Gardens.

Since the sun-dial and hour-glass have become necessary adjuncts to the landscape garden women cannot make the clock an excuse for being late. The old contrivances cannot err unless somebody tampers with them. In many gardens of beautiful country places the sundials shine. In Woodlawn park, Sarasota, Florida, Hilton's beautiful estate, which the Clarence Mackays have taken for August, there is a garden behind the house which boasts a curious sundial. Mrs. Mackay has a collection of hour-glasses, many of which have historic interest. One of her friends says they indicate her appreciation of "sand."

Suggestion Rejected.

"John, my son," said the doting father; "who was about taking him into business, "what shall be the style of the new firm?"

"Well, governor," said the youth, "I don't know—but suppose we have it John H. Samplin and Father!"

The old gentleman was struck with the originality of the idea, but didn't adopt it.—Chicago Journal.

COMMERCE OF ARGENTINA.

Exceeds That of Japan, Though Population Is Only One-Eighth as Great.

The Argentine republic, as it is commonly called, is to-day one of the most progressive and progressive countries. Its foreign commerce for 1904 reached the immense total of 451,463,000 in gold. This was greater than that of any other Latin nation, not excepting Mexico and Brazil. It exceeded the foreign trade of Japan, of whose marvelous progress we now hear so much, and it went far beyond that of China, concerning which there is general discussion. In other words, Argentina, with only 5,000,000 people, showed a buying and selling capacity in excess of Japan with 40,000,000 people, and China, with 400,000,000! My comparison is no reflection on these latter countries and I have always been an earnest advocate of the importance of our commercial and political interests in the far east, but these facts should not overshadow or hide what we have at stake in South America.

That Argentina is moving ahead with proverbial leaps and bounds is proved by the fact that her foreign commerce, the best thermometer of a country's prosperity, increased $90,000,000 in 1904 over the total for 1903, which was $360,000,000. Estimating her population, as before stated, at 5,000,000, she has in the present total of her $451,463,000 the remarkable average of nearly $90 per head, or a far greater average than the United States or any of the principal European countries. If this lusty young giant of South America keeps progressing at this rate, it will be difficult to estimate her trade and wealth when she has a population of 25,000,000. Unfortunately for the United States, our trade exchange with Argentina ranks fourth among foreign countries, or after Great Britain, Germany and France.

OLD CURE FOR POISON IVY.

Simple Remedy Which Affords Speedy Relief from the Intense Itching.

This is the season when the person who takes woods rambles is very likely to suffer for days thereafter with swollen wrists and itching hands, sometimes suffering real agony, from ivy poison, says the Milwaukee Sentinel. Poison oak and ivy are much like the copperhead snakes in the hills in that both seem to try hard to torture human beings with their poison, and will do so if they come too close, especially in the spring. One consolation is that while there was nothing that would cure ivy poison quickly, but that doctoring it and letting it alone took about equal time, so he advised washing the parts affected quite often and letting it take its course. Now, this course consists in first washing with soap and water, then applying a very simple adherence to two things: Preventing the spreading of the poison and drying it up quickly. Its spread can only be prevented by washing frequently with hot water; its cure by anointing the affected parts with tincture grindelia, procurable in any drug store, as soon as the skin has been dried. Every camp outfit should contain a four-ounce bottle of grindelia. Its cure is very rapid, and it soon stops the almost unbearable itching by which the poison is noticed. This remedy is a very old one, but it is not known as well as it should be.

Salmon in the Lakes.

A new era in Great lakes fishing was marked recently, when from the nets of Gamash, Smith & Co., of Waukegan, was taken a ten-pound fresh water salmon. Several years ago the United States government planted a number of young salmon in Lake Michigan. The fish were not caught later, but it was thought that the waters of the lake were not favorable to their growth. This year, however, they began to show up, and at Waukegan 25 or 30 have been taken during the three to four months. These have been replaced, but the big one has been kept, and a report to Washington will be made.—Milwaukee Wisconsin.

Needless.

The Good Fairy called her assistant and showed her a golden box.

"Take this box," she said, "and lock it carefully in the safe. It contains a secret."

"My mistress," replied the assistant, "why should we lock up good advice? No one will ever take it."—Puck.

Dressed to Kill.

Nero was not satisfied with the slaughter he was causing in the arena. "This is too tame," he said; "I'll have to get an automobile." Then he donned a pair of goggles and a rubber coat, announced to the Roman senate that he was dressed to kill.—Brooklyn Life.

German Publications.

In Germany last year 28,378 books were published. Of this number only 3,954 volumes were ranked as "belles lettres." Fiction was included under this head. The output is not so astonishing as it seems, for pamphlets and university bulletins are reckoned as books in the list.

Too Much for Him.

She—I wish you'd help me work out a puzzle.

He—I'm not a success at it. I worked four years on one puzzle and then gave it up.

"What was it?"

"A girl."—Detroit Free Press.

German Remedy for Seasickness.

Bright, red spectacles, accompanied by internal doses of calomel, form a new German specific against seasickness.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 21.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Christ's Life I. Lessons from His boyhood.—Luke ii. 40-52. (Union meeting with the Junior society.)

The reason why the Christianity of so many professed Christians is of such an inferior character is because they are ignorant concerning the life of our Lord Jesus Christ. There are many Christian people who are thoroughly familiar with the lives of Washington and Lincoln, but who at the same time have no intelligent knowledge of the life of Christ. The reason of this ignorance is not hard to find. We study the lives of Washington and Lincoln intelligently and systematically, but when we come to the reading or the study of the life of Christ it is done in a most unsystematic manner. We read a chapter here and there in the gospels, but have no intelligent idea of the life of Christ from childhood to His death and resurrection. Few Christian people, perhaps could name the first ten events in regular order in Christ's life, and yet if we are to be like Him we can all see the great importance of knowing what He was. It is gratifying, therefore, that in connection with the Christian Endeavor prayer meetings we are to study the life of Christ, and it should be thoroughly and faithfully done.

Christ's boyhood was spent like the boyhood of other Jewish boys in His day. The incidents surrounding His birth are familiar to us as well as His flight with His parents to Egypt and His return after the death of Herod to Galilee, which from that time on became His home until He entered upon His public ministry at thirty years of age. Between the events of His childhood and the entering upon His public ministry, there is nearly a silence, but one incident in connection with the life of Christ is given—namely, His visit to Jerusalem when He was twelve years old with His parents at the time of the feast of the Passover. But this event is in connection with other incident references to His life during this period may teach us some lessons from the boyhood of Christ.

1. The boyhood of Christ teaches us the dignity of labor. Every Jewish boy was required by the law to learn an industrial trade. Christ became a carpenter, and during these silent years he undoubtedly spent much of his time working in the carpenter shop at the manual labor of His trade. Nothing in all human history has so dignified manual labor as the period in the life of our Lord and Saviour. It also teaches us the importance of youth being trained in a way that will result in their physical development, no matter what may be the professional or political career that seems to be before them.

2. Christ's boyhood teaches the importance of education. Every Jewish boy was well educated. It is true that his education consisted largely in studying the Scriptures and committing to his religion, but in this study his mind would be as certainly developed as if the time had been given to the study of foreign languages or mathematics. The Jewish boy at three years of age began the study of a certain phase of Jewish religion, and by the time he was 5 he entered a more difficult study, and at thirteen years of age, having thoroughly studied the Jewish law, with its traditions, he became "a child of the law" and occupied the same position in relation to the nation and to the church as all the men of Israel.

3. The boyhood of Christ teaches the importance of religion. This fact is most evident. His whole life centered in His relations to God and His mission as the Messiah, and His boyhood without religion should be made an absolute impossibility. In the days of our youth we should be taught to remember our Creator.

The Committee System.

The committee system, like the prayer meeting and the pledge, is one of the unique and distinctive things which Christian Endeavor has brought to the young people of the world. It has emphasized personal responsibility; it has given them something to do; it has put into a million minds the thought: "I, too, am a worker in the Master's kingdom. I may be young and ignorant and untalented, but I have my task as truly as the minister has his or the Sunday school superintendent has his. A member of a committee is one to whom something has been committed, and the particular task assigned to me has been committed to me both by the election of the society and by the will of God. Then I will do my best on my committee for Christ's sake."—Dr. Francis E. Clark.

As a Tribute to Dr. Clark.

Perhaps from no one thing that the convention did was more to be expected than the appointment by the board of trustees of a quarter century memorial, the suggestion being for a national headquarters building to be erected as a tribute to Dr. Clark, secured through a twenty-five cents apiece contribution from the Christian Endeavorers of the world, which will represent a gift of a cent for each year of Christian Endeavor history.—John R. Clements in Interior.

The Five Goals For This Year of Christian Endeavor.

One million dollars for the missions of your churches.

One million new churchgoers.

One million new church members.

One million new members in our societies.

An average gift of 25 cents from each present and absent Endeavorer for the quarter century memorial building and fund.

—Rev. L. C. Littell in New York Observer.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 21: "A Spirit Filled Life"—Joel ii, 28, 29; Luke i, 13-15; John xiv, 16, 17; Luke xxiv, 49; Acts ii, 2-4; x, 44-47; Rom. viii, 9; xv, 13; I John iii, 24.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, D. D.

To every well balanced and healthy person life presents many things enjoyable. There are days when it is a joy to be alive. Mere physical existence is exquisite pleasure. Perfume of flowers, song of birds, colors of sky and foliage and waters and clear, crisp, invigorating air make every sense convey enjoyment and tingle with satisfaction.

But, however perfect the physical gratification, it alone does not long give complete pleasure. We are something more than body, and spirit must claim our highest regard. This can never be fed by physical sensations. Bodily good becomes good to spirit only as it is able to express to the inner life some spiritual thing of value. The rose gives pleasure because of its spiritual use. If given by some loved one it continues to give heart pleasure after all color has gone from the petals and speaks to us for years of those who can no longer speak to us. After all, it is spirit that has the real life, and the body is only its house, in which it dwells and works.

So the important facts of life for us are those which have to do with the inner self—not the visible things, but the unseen realities of confidence, hope and affection.

It is much we need to emphasize this more than we do! We are eager after the gain and glitter of life, and when we grasp some, after a hard struggle, we find it only dross and tinsel, and we have lost time and strength and peace without gain. Then will we feel the truth of Paul that we must be filled with the knowledge of His will in all wisdom and spiritual understanding."

But when Christ dwells in the heart, not when He makes an occasional passing call as a friend, but when He abides in us as a permanent indwelling presence, we come to a deeper comprehension of love in its height and depth and length and breadth, an apprehension which passes knowledge because it is a different realm from intellectual facts, being in the region of the feelings; we come to consciousness of the fullness of God as filling us.

I worship Thee, sweet will of God,
And all Thy ways adore.
And every day I live
I seem to love Thee more and more.

We come to an attitude of expectancy toward God. Expecting to be directed by Him, we delight to learn and do His will. His love satisfies in the absence of the ordinary comforts of life, if they are withheld, and in the abundance of earth's benefits keeps from pride and dependence on sensuous delights.

Would you know life? Then be filled with the Christ spirit.

A Prayer.

Teach us that here we have no abiding city. Teach us to look for a house that hath foundations, of which Thou art the maker and builder. Lift our hearts thither in earnest desire. O Sabbath of eternal peace! O haven where the wicked cease from troubling and the weary are at rest! When shall we see Thee, O Lord and behold the King in His beauty? When shall we meet the apostles of our faith and the great multitude whom no man can number? When shall we see again our dear friends who sleep in Jesus?

O God the Father, who hast the times and seasons in Thine own power, let not that day grow long upon us.

O God the Son, who art gone to prepare a place for us, in Thine own time take us to Thyself, that where Thou art there we may be also.

O God the Holy Ghost, the pledge of future glory in our hearts, seal us until the redemption of the purchased possession. Amen.—Dean Alford in Christian Endeavor World.

In Touch With Christ.

Christ never grows old. He is a new and a living Saviour to the growing Christian every day. We cannot keep in touch with our generation unless we keep in touch with Christ, whose life, teaching and gospel are always in touch with men. So long as the new life Jesus gave to the world, the new truth He taught and the new religion He founded are in you a divine power, building your character, directing your life, your neighbors will enjoy your religion, the bloom and fragrance of your piety will remain, your faith will crave no crutches, your hope will not set, and the bells in the tower of your soul, rung by unseen hands, will never cease to give forth melodies, thrilling men and women with their eloquence.—J. Von der Veer Shurts.

Contentment.

To be content, look backward on those who possess less than yourself, not forward on those who possess more. If this does not make you content, you don't deserve to be happy.—Benjamin Franklin.

Sing.

Let cheerful song touch song through all the day
Last morsel eaten, cleansed upon a bough
Their dainty bills, the topmost branches they Devote to songs of praise and, I dare say,
Sleep sweeter, too, and sometimes start the song
Of music in their dreams. When troubles show
Their ugly heads let happy singing stay
Extract the venom and beneath your feet
Then lay no vanquished foes. Should griefs arise,
Lift up your voice until it reach the skies.
Praise God in song; in heaven it will need
The songs of the redeemer of the race.
One grand, sweet song of everlasting

DON'T WEAR REAL FLOWERS.

There is nothing that stamps a girl or woman as hopelessly out of fashion as the wearing of real flowers in the evening. If you want to look as though you had never been anywhere or seen anything pin a long spray of prickly roses, a bunch of bright carnations, or a couple of huge chrysanthemums to the bodice of your evening frock. The reason of these flowers is quite fashionable, so the wearing of real flowers at an evening function is very evident. The smart woman and the smart girl wishes to look as trim and neat and immaculate when she is leaving as when she arrives, and this is impossible when real flowers are worn. Often one sees at the close of a ball a girl with nothing but a few prickly stalks and withered leaves pinned to her frock. The roses have all been rubbed and broken off. Or perhaps it is a bunch of violets, once fragrant and elated, now hanging their heads crushed and scentless.

ELBOW SLEEVES.

When off for a week-end house party there is nothing more useful to slip into one's dress suit case than a fine lawn blouse. A lingerie blouse with elbow sleeves is simply invaluable to any girl. Adjustable mitt cuffs are now often made to wear with these dainty elbow sleeve blouses. They take the place of gloves, and are quite the usual correct to be considered with special favor. They are made of lace or of the same material as the waist, embroidered. They have a shaped piece which falls well over the hand to the knuckles. At the inner arm seam the cuff buttons, and in this way it is shaped closely to the wrist. The cuff may hook or button invisibly under the band which finishes the elbow sleeve. —Woman's Home Companion.

BRIDAL LORE.

A January bride will be a prudent housekeeper and very good tempered.

A February bride will be a humane and affectionate wife and tender mother.

A March bride will be a frivolous chatterbox, somewhat given to quarreling.

An April bride will be handsome, amiable, and likely to be happy.

A May bride will be handsome, amiable, and likely to be happy.

A June bride will be impetuous and generous.

A July bride will be handsome and smart, but a trifle quick tempered.

An August bride will be amiable and practical.

A September bride will be discreet, affable and much liked.

An October bride will be pretty, coquettish, loving and jealous.

A November bride will be liberal, kind, but of a wild disposition.

A December bride will be well proportioned, fond of novelty, entertaining, but extravagant.—Chicago News.

"WE'VE ALWAYS BEEN PROVIDED FOR."

"Good wife, what are you singing for?
You know we've lost the hay,
And what we'll do with horse and kye is
While like as not, with storm and rain,
We'll lose the bonnie boat."
She looked up with a pleasant face, and answering low, said:
"There's a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

He turned round with a sudden gloom.
She said: "Love be at rest;
You can get grass, provided soon and late,
and did your very best.
That was your work; you'd naught at all to do with wind and rain.
And do not doubt but you will reap rich fields of golden grain.
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand,
we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

"That's like a woman's reasoning—we must, must, must!"
She softly said: "I reason not, I only would trust;
The harvest may redeem the hay, keep heart whate'er betide.
When ever door shuts I've always seen another open wide.
There's a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

He kissed the calm and trustful face;
gone was his restless pain.
She heard him whistle a cheerful step go whistling down the lane.
And went about her household tasks, full of a glad content,
Singing to time her busy hands, as to and fro she went:
"There is a Heart, there is a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

Days come and go—'twas Christmastide, and the great fire burned bright.
The farmer said: "Dear wife, it's been a happy year!
The fruit was gain, the surplus corn has bought the hay, you know."
She laughed and answered low, and said; "I told you so!
For there's a Heart, and there's a Hand, we feel, but cannot see;
We've always been provided for, and we shall always be."

Beware of Him.

Who is a pessimist.
Who is a spendthrift.
Who is fickle in his affections.
Who is selfish, mean and stingy.
Who never works unless he has to.
Whose word you cannot rely upon.
Whose highest ambition is to become rich.
Who is a bully at home and a coward abroad.
Who thinks it cowardly to refuse to drink and gamble.
Who is not particular about his intimate associates.
Who is always making excuses for not keeping engagements.—Ex.

THE CONSTITUTIONALIST.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

Published at

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms: $2.00 per year.

L. FORCE, Editor and Proprietor.

THURSDAY, JAN. 18, 1906.

Perth Amboy saloon has been robbed. The proprietor should have no ground for complaint. Honors are even.

Richard Mansfield, David Belasco and Mrs. Fisk must shudder over the fact of the dramatic art when they behold "Pompadour Jim" Corbett the ex-prize fighter in a Bernard Shaw play. And at one of the most famous theatres of the histronic profession, too.

If the present Legislature wipes out the fee system and place county officers on a salary, it will indeed merit warm praise. The present system of paying county officials is one of the most pernicious things ever devised and the sooner it is done away with the better it will be for the people of New Jersey. Its only defenders today are the few officeholders who reap the benefit at public expense.

If it be true, as reported, that Charles Schanz or any one else intends to apply for a license to conduct a saloon at No. 100 West Second street, he might as well save his money. His effort would be a fruitless one for no self-respecting Common Council would grant such a petition. In the first place, the location adjoins the theatre and would surely tend to spoil its business. A further and greater reason is that it is altogether too near a house of worship, Trinity Reformed church being less than 200 feet away. Moreover there is no need for any more saloons, the present number being entirely sufficient for the community. There are now thirteen legalized liquor establishments. Let the number be a hoodoo to anyone who wishes a new license.

It will take very little hard thinking to discover that the New Brunswick Times' remedy for corrupt practises is indeed a poor one. The principle advanced by the Middlesex county paper is that "if it be proved that a vote was bought or a voter suborned, the candidate in whose interest the corruption was practiced loses his office, even though only a single voter was approached and the candidate had 1,000 majority." Such a penalty according to the Times would make all elections honest, but would it? Suppose some "heeler" offers a bribe for a vote for a candidate opposed to his "boss," what then? And again suppose that friends of both rival candidates are convicted of offering a bribe, what then? If the Times really wants to solve this question of political corruption it will have to think again.

ICE MAY BE A CENT A POUND.

None Has Been Harvested Because of Mild Weather.

Wholesale ice dealers in the northern part of New Jersey have about abandoned all hope of gathering a sufficient supply of ice for summer. At Greenwood Lake, which is controlled, so far as the frozen product is concerned, by the American Company, the ice had attained a thickness of four or five inches, when it was spoiled by the rains of Sunday and yesterday.

One wholesale dealer declared that he would not be surprised to see the price of ice rise to a cent a pound during the coming summer. The Mount Pocono Ice Company is in the same predicament, as are the Slayback Brothers, who control the ice at Verona Lake.

CONDEMNS RICE FOR THE BRIDE AND GROOM.

Monsignor Fox Takes Decided Stand on That and Question of Flowers.

Monsignor Fox condemned the sending of flowers to funerals in a sermon yesterday morning at St. Mary's Cathedral, Trenton, and also the custom of showering rice over a bridal couple after leaving the church door.

The speaker began by stating that he wished to condemn certain customs that existed to a great extent in that city and elsewhere. The first one, he said, was the showering of rice over persons just married, while they were leaving the church, also the "vulgar custom" of throwing old shoes into the coach and placing placards on it.

Monsignor Fox strongly advised against the foolish display of flowers at funerals. He declared that no flowers should surround a casket only in the case of an infant. In this case the monsignor said one wreath of white roses or lilies should be placed on the casket as a symbol of the baby's innocence and purity.

The priest told the congregation that there was not sense in the wasteful display of flowers at funerals, and urged the people to discontinue the custom.

AMUSEMENTS.

"A Society Circus," the New York Hippodrome's latest and greatest success, has by popular verdict been declared the ne plus ultra of modern or ancient theatricals. Its magnificence, splendor and grandeur are unparalleled and compel the admiration of the marvelous who have witnessed the marvelous production. Hippodromitis is the most popular disease in New York at the present time. The "Court of the Golden Fountains," the final tableau, is the most amazingly beautiful spectacle ever witnessed. An idea of the magnitude of the production may be gained from the following figures: There are used two hundred pounds of gold leaf, 5,000 sheets of polished foil, 20,000 yards of lace, 8,000 imported artificial flowers, 982 costumes, 21,000 yards of cloth, one and one-half miles of orchestral music. In the last scene there is enough water to supply New Rochelle for twenty-four hours. Of pure white linen there are 147,000 feet, 12,000 yards of fire proof linen, 1,500 pounds of spangles and fifty real ostrich feathers. Forty thousand hours of carpenter work were needed to build the undecorated scenery, which is of stupendous size. The three arches in the second scene are larger than the entire opening of the majority of the New York theatres. Each of the six drops is fifty-five feet high. Twenty-five thousand buttons were used and the gypsy wagon used in the opening session was purchased from a western Pennsylvania tribe. Noveau art, the French fad in architecture and decorations, is used for the first time in theatrical history. Matinees are given daily.

"Before and After" continues prosperously at the Manhattan theatre, New York, and by the audiences that enjoy it this laughter play by Leo Ditrichstein is voted the best that has come from the author's pen. As the Herald says, this is one of the plays that is "good for the nerves," for it drives dull care away and excites steadily to laughter. The fun begins at once and it is continuous to the end. There have been so few plays in New York this season that were constantly amusing that "Before and After" strikes a popular note, and it should long enjoy the suffrage of the large public that wishes in the theatre to find something that will put it in good nature if suffering from the blues, or that will perpetuate good nature if that condition originally exists. It is seldom that a play has the advantages of interpretation that have fallen to "Before and After." It is staged handsomely, and in all respects in a Broadway play, while with such a company as is seen in Fritz Williams, Thomas A. Wise, Leo Ditrichstein, Kenyon Bishop, Katherine Florence, George Lawrence and Jean Newcombe, its full possibilities are developed. But one matinee a week —on Saturday—is given at the Manhattan.

The best comic opera in years, is what New York is enthusiastically calling Manager Charles B. Dillingham's brilliant production of "Mlle. Modiste," the new musical success now at the Knickerbocker theatre, with piquant little Fritzi Scheff its bright particular star. Produced initially but a fortnight ago, it has already taken first place in the affections of the light opera lovers of the metropolis. The production's success is of the big and popular kind. Miss Scheff's society following, carried with her from her grand opera triumphs, has crowded the Knickerbocker nightly since the gay little singer's advent there. In his book and lyrics, Henry Blossom has done the best work of his career, and Victor Herbert, the composer of the score, has nothing else quite so merry and clever to his credit. The stage pictures are gems of Parisian color and gaiety, especially the millinery shop on the rue de la Paix and the gardens of the Chateau de St. Mar with their stirring military ensembles. The supporting company is admittedly one of the most melodious and best acting organizations that has ever relaxed a Broadway audience. The demand for seats is so great that they have been forced on sale four weeks in advance.

The announcement made last week that "The Walls of Jericho" would be temporarily withdrawn by Mr. Hackett, and that he and Miss Mannering would present for a limited period a new play, "The House of Silence," by Herman K. Viele, was somewhat of an astonishment to the knowing ones who were well informed that the former play, ranking prominently among the great successes of the present New York season, and now rapidly nearing the sixth month of its present run in New York, was far too profitable an enterprise to be retired without some urgent reason. But "The House of Silence," which Mr. Hackett tried for a few perfomances in Pittsburgh at the close of last season, was a play so attractive to that gentleman that he immediately contracted with the author to produce it in New York during the present season, and thought that he had placed the limit far enough when he had given "The Walls of Jericho" until the first of February to complete its run there. Mr. Hackett has fixed the date of January 22, at the Savoy theatre, for the first production of "The House of Silence," and at the same time has given notice that he will offer occasional matinee performances of "The Walls of Jericho" during the run of the new piece. Also that as soon as it is possible, under his contract, to temporarily retire "The House of Silence," "The Walls of Jericho" will again be presented.

Fay Templeton has made a sensational hit at the New Amsterdam theatre in Klaw & Erlanger's production of George M. Cohan's new music play, "45 Minutes from Broadway." Her first week in New York showed receipts of over $14,000, which indicates the number of people who saw her most inimitable impersonation of "Mary, the housemaid." This is the first serious part Miss Templeton has acted in many years and is a most interesting exposition of the great talent which has led her to be regarded as the most artistic actress in character roles on the American stage. In Victor Moore, who plays the role of "Kid Burns," a worldly-wise youth with a wonderful vocabulary of piquant slang, Miss Templeton has an excellent foil. He plays the role of the "Kid" with a quiet unction that makes the character appeal to everyone in the audience. They are real characters and "taken from life" does not at all exaggerate their merits. Miss Templeton's songs "Mary is a Grand Old Name" and "So Long, Mary," have become the hits of the town and the airs are played in all the hotel restaurants and whistled on the streets. Seats are now on sale for every performance in the next four weeks and can be secured by mail or telegraph.

The New York premiere of Rev. Thomas Dixon, Jr.'s, play, "The Clansman," took place at the Liberty theatre last Monday evening, and scored a remarkable hit. The house was packed to the doors and hundreds of people were turned away. The piece took the audience by storm and proved a powerful melodrama, dealing in strict historic fidelity with a great theme—the relation of the white and the colored people in South Carolina in 1867 and the conditions which led to the formation of the Ku Klux Klan in that State. A more enthusiastic audience was never seen in a theatre than that of Monday evening. Applause was so spontaneous that even most interesting situations were interrupted, so powerfully were the people moved. At the end of the second act Rev. Mr. Dixon was called before the curtain and made a brief speech. At the conclusion of the play the audience arose as one person and cheered.

"Before and After" has entered its sixth week at the Manhattan theatre, New York, and maintains a popularity well deserved. It is one of the most amusing farces—Leo Ditrichstein, its author, calls it a "laughter play," and aptly—seen in New York in years. The fun in "Before and After" begins at once and runs continuously, and thus the play is a sure prescription for the blues or any feeling that relates to the blues. There is a very large part of the public that goes to the theatre when it can be assured that it will see something amusing, and this play is just the sort of entertainment for that sort of people. Therefore, those who like laughter should make it a point to go to the Manhattan while this play is running there. "Before and After" presents a company of comedians that would make a set of by-laws interesting and amusing, and when such a company has sympathetic material to wor kwith—as this company has in Mr. Ditrichstein's play—the result is inevitable. Fritz Williams, George C. Boniface, Jr., Thomas A. Wise, Leo Ditrichstein, Roy Fairchild, Frederick Barton, John Daly Murphy, Katherine Florence, Georgie Lawrence, Kenyon Bishop, Jean Newcombe, Grace Quackenbush and Mabel Findlay, who make up this organization, have capital opportunities, and their assembled names mean something out of the ordinary. Suburban theatre lovers who cannot find other times to see "Before and After" may take advantage of the Saturday matinees at the Manhattan.

FIFTEEN MINUTES TO HERALD SQUARE.

Pennsylvania and Associated Companies to Provide Fast Transit from Newark.

Fifteen minutes from Newark to Herald Square, to Church street, or to Ninth street and Broadway, New York, and establishment of a gigantic trunk line terminal in Harrison, are plans of the Pennsylvania Railroad Company. In these things it is working with the Public Service Corporation of New Jersey, the McAdoo tunnel companies and the Belmont-Ryan syndicate of New York.

Plans for improved transit between New Jersey's cities and towns west of the Hackensack meadows have been in course of formation for many months. They took definite shape recently when Thomas N. McCarter, president of the Public Service Corporation, announced that a piece of property had been purchased in Park place, opposite Military Park, Newark, as the terminal point of a fast electric care system to be established between Newark and New York.

Officers-Elect Installed.

Martha Washington Council, No. 23, Daughters of America, installed these newly-elected officers Saturday night: Councilor, Mrs. M. Hoffman; associate councilor, Miss F. Welsh; vice-councilor, C. Taynor; associate vice-councilor, Mrs. H. Thompson; junior past councilor, Mrs. M. Nilsh; conductor, Miss D. Gary; warden, Miss E. Bush; inside sentinel, Miss F. Moorehouse; outside sentinel, W. F. Welsh. The initiatory team also had a drill.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AS CHURCH TREASURER

W. F. ARNOLD RESIGNS AFTER LONG AND FAITHFUL SERVICE.

Under the laws of 1905 governing the Presbyterian churches, all trustees of that church were legislated out of office the first of the year and others had to be re-elected on a basis of three or a multiple of three. This rule, in common with others, affected the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, where the number was seven.

A meeting of the re-election of trustees was held Monday, Charles F. Abbott presiding. These trustees were chosen: One year, Townsend Rushmore, William A. Garrigues; two years, H. G. Runkle, James W. DeGraff; three years, Charles F. Abbott, Joseph W. Sandford.

By the declination of George H. Strong, Ernest R. Ackerman and William F. Arnold to serve longer as trustees, a change will be necessary in the treasurership. It is likely that Joseph W. Sandford will be elected to that office.

Mr. Arnold has served the church as trustee for twenty-seven years and twenty-five years as treasurer. Owing to this long service and upon the advice of his physician, he decided to retire. A resolution offered by E. H. Ladd, Jr., expressed the appreciation of the board of trustees for Mr. Arnold's lang and faithful services.

An auditing committee, comprising Stuart H. Patterson, H. C. Munger and George H. Goddard, was also elected to serve for the coming year.

LEG CUT OFF TO FREE VICTIM FROM MACHINERY.

Paterson Mill Foreman, Caught Between Cog Wheels, Suffered Until Death Came.

His leg caught between a set of bevelled cog wheels and slowly drawn in up to the thigh before the machinery could be stopped, Thomas Pierson, foreman in one of the departments of the Passaic Steel Works at Paterson, suffered intense agony for half an hour Saturday night. He remained conscious while men with crowbars tried to release him.

The machine is so constructed that no matter which way the wheels were turned the leg would be drawn further in. The ambulance from St. Joseph's Hospital arrived with Dr. Smallman. The surgeon adopted the only course left for him to release the imprisoned foreman. He administered an anaesthetic and then amputated the leg. Pierson died an hour later at the hospital. He was to sail for Europe in a few days on a pleasure trip with his wife and child.

EX-ASSEMBLYMAN FEENEY DIES

Started in Life as Newsboy in Jersey City—Became Police Commissioner.

John P. Feeney, who was a police commissioner in Jersey City for nine years and who served three terms in the State Legislature, died yesterday at his home, Eighth and Erie streets, Jersey City, after a long illness. A widow and two children survive him.

Mr. Feeney was forty-six years old. He was born in Jersey City. Educated in the public and parochial schools he began life as a newsboy. He took an active part in Democratic politics in the old "Horseshoe" district of Jersey City, was elected a constable in 1882, re-elected in 1885, and in the fall of 1886 he was elected an Assemblyman. He was re-elected in 1887 and 1888. He served on important committees and was one of the leaders in the movement to make the late Governor Leon Abbett a United States Senator in the place of the late John R. McPherson in 1888.

He served as a detective on the staff of the late Prosecutor of the Pleas Charles H. Winfield, and in 1889, when a State Constabulary was formed, Governor Abbett made him its chief. He was appointed a member of the Board of Police Commissioners of Jersey City by the late Mayor Orestes Cleveland, and in the nine years he served was president of the board for three terms. It was through his efforts that the police telegraph and patrol box systems were established.

Upon his retirement from active politics in 1890 Mr. Feeney became an adjuster for the North Jersey Street Railway Company, and when the Public Service Corporation absorbed the trolley systems in Northern New Jersey he was made chief adjuster. He held that position at his death. He was an extensive property owner in Jersey City and Hoboken.

WORK ON STORM SEWER.

West End Avenue Sewer to Be Begun Tomorrow.

Work will be started tomorrow on the West End avenue storm sewer and rushed rapidly toward completion. The sewer will extend from Green brook, where there will be two outlets and catch basins. One of these will be on either side of the boulevard running to Myrtle avenue, the plan being to carry the surface drainage from the intersecting streets as well as the boulevard.

The work will be done under the direction of the borough street committee, Mayor Smalley believing that it can be accomplished just as well and for less money than by an outside contractor. The necessary pipe has been delivered.

MINISTER DRAGGED IN UPSET CARRIAGE

REV. DR. DWIGHT, FORMERLY OF THIS CITY, HURT IN NEW YORK.

Hurled about in his wrecked brougham as it was whirled across Union Square in New York, Saturday, upset by a Broadway car and twice in collision with other vehicles, the Rev. Melatiah E. Dwight, a wealthy retired Congregational minister, who formerly lived in Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, barely escaped serious injury. His coachman risked his life to save the helpless passenger.

Driving up town soon after twelve o'clock, James F. Keenan, coachman for the Rev. Mr. Dwight, turned his horses into Fourth avenue, at Union Square. At Fifteenth street a truck coming from the eastward struck the rear wheel of the brougham so sharply that the pole was snapped at its middle. This also swung the horses around and they dashed down Fourth avenue, in spite of Keenan's efforts to stop them.

Crossing "Dead Man's Curve," where the Broadway cars swing into Fourteenth street, the carriage was struck, and upset by a southbound car. Keenan was pitched from his box and alighted on his feet, receiving severe injuries, but preserving sufficient consciousness to yell to Policeman Frank Hefferen:

"There's a man in the carriage." Hefferen, a traffic squad man, was running to stop the horses as the car struck them. He caught the bridle of one after the carriage was overturned, but was dragged along helpless.

Directly in front of the runaways was the Lincoln statue and the iron fence about it. Hefferen caught the other horse's nose strap. With a determined pull he made them both turn south of the statue without hitting the fence. He brought the horses to a standstill in front of the old Tiffany building.

Opening the carriage door the Rev. Mr. Dwight was found in a state of collapse in a corner. He quickly recovered, however, and did not require the services of Dr. R. L. Graham, of 158 East Seventy-ninth street, who bound up the coachman's lacerated face. Mr. Dwight, at his home, No. 31 Mount Morris Park West, was reported to have suffered no serious harm.

Colored Cop for Elizabeth.

If the endorsement of the Colored County Republican Committee, which met Friday night in Union Hall, Elizabeth, will have any effect, then the colored citizens of that city will be represented on the police force. The person endorsed by the committee is Mahlon Y. Gibbs, and one of the colored members of the city central committee.

Elks Lodge Reception.

Elisabeth Lodge, No. 289, B. P. O. Elks, will have a "ladies' night" and reception at Turn Hall, Elizabeth, Wednesday evening, January 24. The programme for the evening will be in charge of Harry Wetton, and he has selected music a la Elkdom, to which the bucks and does will prance.

Address by Moody's Son.

W. R. Moody, son of the late D. L. Moody, the great evangelist, will address the Young People's Association of the Crescent Avenue church Friday night. He will tell of the continuation of his father's work at Northfield.

PLAINFIELDER ONCE CAPT. OF CHEROKEE

BENJ. DOANE TOOK STRANDED VESSEL ON MAIDEN TRIP.

In the heroic rescue of fifty-six passengers taken off the steamship Cherokee, of the Clyde Line, while stranded in a fierce gale near Atlantic City Sunday afternoon, there is a local interest. It was Captain Benjamin Doane, of East Seventh street, father-in-law of J. Hervey Doane, who took the boat on her maiden voyage and for many years afterward had charge of her. Not once during his long career as a sea captain did he meet with an accident and he was considered one of the best men in the employ of the Clyde Line.

With daring and perfect seamanship that took no heed of the gale or mountain waves, while ten thousand persons looked on for hours, the passengers and all of the crew of the stranded Cherokee, except the captain, two other officers and the carpenter, were rescued Sunday afternoon by Captain Mark Casto and his crew in the fishing sloop Alberta.

The Cherokee has been stranded on the Brigantine Shoals for three days and she rests solidly on the sands with twelve feet of water in her hold. The old salts say that it will be impossible to get her off. Except for the nervous strain of twenty-four hours at the mercy of the gale and the privations of the four hours tossing in the little boat all the passengers and crew are well and the majority left Sunday for New York.

NARROWLY ESCAPED DROWNING

Seven Young Men and Women Break Through Ice at South Plainfield.

Seven young men and women from this city, who were skating on Spring Lake, South Plainfield, Saturday night, narrowly escaped drowning, through the ice breaking. The group accidentally met on a part of the lake where the ice was in a dangerous condition and it gave way beneath their weight.

They were about thirty feet from shore at the time, but the water at that point was over their heads, and all seven were submerged. The young men proved themselves heroes by retaining their presence of mind and holding the young women up. By degrees all seven managed to reach the shore, although greatly exhausted.

A chill East wind was blowing at the time and all seven contracted colds before reaching home, otherwise there were no serious consequences.

EASY ON C. E. REED.

Former Railway Tax Collector Settles for Shortage.

The case of the City of Rahway against Charles E. Reed, former tax collector of that place, has gone over for the present term of court. Mr. Reed recently paid over a check for $5,140 to cover any shortage that might appear in the accounts of the collector while he held the office, but there were strings attached to it to the effect that if the auditor should discover the accounts to be in Mr. Reed's favor, the difference was to be returned to him.

This morning all rights were waived by Mr. Reed and it is understood that he has permitted his check to go through to cover the shortage found in the accounts. At any rate it is believed that the case is settled and will not be re-opened.

Epworth League Social.

The first Epworth League social will be held on Friday night in Vincent chapel. The entertainment committee has provided a programme of unusual interest. In addition to music and refreshments, a pantomime, "Wanted—A Wife," will be given by a number of young women. A cordial invitation is extended to all.

Mrs. Steele Giving Readings.

Mrs. Jessamy Harte Steele, formerly of this city and the daughter of Bret Harte, is now giving readings from her father's books. In these readings Mrs. Steele gives selections from her father's stories with dramatic impersonations of the characters and sings the poems that have been set to music, playing her own accompaniments.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Smock, of Red Bank, have been spending the past week with relatives here. They formerly resided in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Chauncey Pennington, of Webster place, have moved to Westfield. Miss Hannah Thayer will make her home with them.

ALERT P. S. C. AGENT WARDS OFF BIG SUIT

INJURED WOMAN SETTLES FOR $15 AND MAY BE HURT PERMANENTLY.

Through activity on the part of its claim agent, the Public Service Corporation has probably saved itself being made defendant in another damage suit which might have been brought by a former local resident.

Several weeks ago Mrs. Eugene Reid, of Dunellen, who was formerly Miss Mary Honan, of West Fourth street, this city, fell from a trolley through the conductor's negligence, and was badly hurt. She was taken hom and a physician attached to the company's staff arrived soon after and made an examination. He informed her relatives that the injuries were only slight and that she would recover within a few days. His statement was accepted and when the claim agent arrived and offered $15 in settlement the amount was accepted. Mrs. Reid signed a paper that she would not bring suit, believing that she was merely bruised.

Since then her injuries have manifested themselves and there is a possibility that they are of a permanent nature. She is now confined to her bed and is being attended by her regular physician.

Ingenious Jerseymen.

WANTED THE PARSON TO GO ON A DRUNK WITH HIM.

Newark Man, Accused of Robbing Sister, Arrested While Trying to Give Money to Minister.

Dennis Giblin, of 138 Prospect street, Newark, was held in $4,500 bail for indictment at Newark yesterday on a charge of having stolen $75 from his sister, Mrs. Christopher Dowd.

While Mrs. Dowd was asleep, it is charged, Giblin slipped from her wrist a piece of cord to which was attached a key to her strong box, stole the money and after relocking the box replaced the key on her wrist.

He was arrested Monday night while trying to give away one-dollar bills to a minister in front of the postoffice. When asked why he was giving the money away after he had stolen it, he said that he did not want to go on a drunk alone, but wanted company.

Band of Girl Thieves.

According to the police of Gloucester City, Bella Pine, thirteen years old, now under arrest, has confessed that she is a member of a band of girl robbers which has committed many depredations. Among its offenses, the police say, was the robbery of the home of John O'Donnell last Sunday and the holdup of a child who was robbed of $6. The girl was held by Mayor Casey for further examination. The police are seeking the other members of the band.

Luncheon and Dinner.

Lawrence J. Myers, of New York, formerly of East Front street, who is to be married to Miss Henrietta Eugenia Hawley, of New York, January 23, in St. Thomas' church, will give his farewell bachelor dinner at the City Club next Saturday and Miss Hawley will give a luncheon party for her bridesmaids at the Buckingham Hotel, Friday of this week.

Musical Entertainment.

Miss C. C. Sampson's piano pupils had a pleasant musicale at her home in East Fifth street Saturday afternoon. The affair was followed with games and refreshments that were enjoyed by all present. Selections were played by Miss Eleanor Browning, Edythe Bechtle, Isabelle Sherwood and Ruth Delhunt. A very pleasing feature was a selection played by Miss Thelma Curits.

TABLET UNVEILED IN MEMORY OF S. A. GINNA

PRESENTED TO BETHEL CHAPEL BY ITS MEMBERS AT EXERCISES YESTERDAY

In memory of the late Stephen A. Ginna, who was superintendent of the school for many years, a tablet was unveiled at Bethel chapel, Sunday afternoon. It was a gift from the members of the chapel and Sunday-school, steps having been taken to secure it shortly after his death. A portrait of the late superintendent, presented by Mrs. Ginna, was placed to the right of the pulpit at the same time the tablet was put up.

The latter is of brass mounted on oak, letters in black giving an appropriate inscription.

The exercises attending the unveiling were in charge of Superintendent Duxbury, who, with Mr. Ginna, started Bethel chapel twenty years ago. Hymns were sung by the school and addresses were made by Dr. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue church; Rev. J. O. McKelvey and L. N. Lovell, of Warren chapel.

WOULD ABOLISH FOOTBALL AT ||

RADICAL ELEMENT IN THE FACULTY WANTS TO FOLLOW HARVARD'S PLAN.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 17.—An element at Yale wishes to follow Harvard's lead in reforming college sports, and especially football. A secret faculty meeting was held last Saturday, it was learned today, at which demands were made for action looking to general college changes, even to abolishing football and all college sports and gate receipts. The meeting was stormy and lasted nearly four hours. No vote was taken on any feature of athletic reform, the matter being left for a second meeting to be held next week.

The reform element took the lead in demanding changes quite as radical as that just put into effect at Harvard. A leading member of the faculty said today:

"The general conduct of athletic sports will be much changed at Yale, but I doubt whether football will be abolished."

If the movement in the Yale faculty for athletic reform goes through the action will amount to a turning against Walter Camp, Yale's athletic adviser and director for eight years, and will be virtually a repudiation of Yale's position before the Intercollegiate Football Rules Committee. The stand which has been taken by the Yale faculty is a surprise to the alumni in general, and many of them are expected to utter a protest before the faculty action is crystallized in a formal vote next Saturday.

NEWSPAPERS.

Striking Things That Great Men Have Said About Them.

A correspondent requests that we print some of the striking things great men have said about newspapers—that is, sayings that embody the purpose and doings of the press. With pleasure.

Bryant said: "The press is good or evil, according to the character of those who direct it. It is a mill that grinds all that is put into its hopper. Fill the hopper with poisoned grain, and it will grind it to meal, but there is death in the bread."

James Parton said: "The newspaper press is the people's university. Half the readers in Christendom read little else."

Jefferson said: "The basis of our government being the opinion of the people, the very first object should be to keep that right, and were it left to me to decide whether we should have a government without newspapers or newspapers with a government, I should not hesitate a moment to prefer the latter."

Cardinal Gibbons said: "The dread of exposure in the public press keeps many a man sticking close to the path of rectitude who otherwise would stray off into the byways of graft."—Chicago Journal.

Conscience Money.

Comptroller Herman A. Metz, of New York, received yesterday by mail, in an envelope directed "Department of Finance, City of New York, 57 Chambers street, New York," $12 in bills and 22 cents in stamps, with the following memorandum: "In making a return of personal property for 1905 about $800 was overlooked. Amount due on same, with interest at 7 per cent., is handed you with this, say $12.22." Comptroller Metz turned the contribution into the city treasury.

Party Needs Followers.

In the opinion of the Summit Record, which ought to know what it is talking about, the Democratic party in Union is urgently in need of followers more than leaders. Now let Chairman Moody take the hint and produce the right kind of music to attract the multitude. He can't get followers by drafting.—Newark News.

Mrs. Thomas Caldwell, of Morristown, who has been the guest of Mrs. William Palmer Smith, of Netherwood, has returned home.

Assemblyman Martin Introduces Resolution Asking For Joint Concession.

FOLLOWS NEW YORK

Members of Legislature Reticent About the Bill—Referred to Committee—Text of Bill.

Assemblyman Martin, of Essex county, caused something of a surprise at Trenton Monday by introducing a joint resolution asking for a committee to investigate insurance in New Jersey. As indicated in the resolution, the investigation is planned to follow closely the paths made by the one in New York. Both Asblymen and Senators were reticent last night in expressing opinions on the resolution, and no line whatever could be obtained as to its fate. It was referred to the Committee on Banking and Insurance.

The resolution says:

"Whereas, The recent investigation of insurance companies in the State of New York has caused doubts to arise as to the conduct and management of such companies and allied corporations, such as trust companies, savings banks and State banks, and the sufficiency of the supervision and control of said companies and the safeguards provided by law; and

"Whereas, Some of the investments permitted by law to be made by insurance companies, trust companies, savings banks and State banks have been charged to be unsafe, and

"Whereas, The State Department of Banking and Insurance is limited in its power to examine the officers and agents of insurance companies, trust companies, savings banks and State banks, and it is expedient that as a basis for legislation the operations of such companies should be investigated as fully and promptly as may be; now, therefore, be it

"Resolved (The Senate concurring), That a joint committee be appointed consisting of three members of the Senate and five members of the General Assembly with power and authority to investigate and examine into the business and affairs of life insurance companies, trust companies, savings banks and banks doing business in the State of New Jersey, the investments of said companies, the relations of the officers thereof to such investments, the relation of such companies to subsidiary corporations, the government and control of such companies, the cost of transacting business, the expenses of said companies and other phases of the business of each of said companies, in the discretion of the committee, and also to investigate and report the operations of the State Department of Banking and Insurance, its supervision and control of said companies, and any other matter in relation to said department or companies which the said committee may deem proper, for the purpose of reporting a revision of the laws regulating the business authority and affairs of said companies as said committee may deem proper. And it is further

"Resolved, That said joint committee be and hereby is authorized and empowered to sit during and after the session of the Legislature to require and enforce the attendance of witnesses, te production of books and papers, to administer oaths, to employ counsel, stenographers, clerks and such other employes as may be necessary for the purpose of the investigation."

SAYS DRINK MENACES WOMEN.

Dr. Peters Thinks Fashionable Tippling Threatens the Republic.

The Rev. Madison C. Peters has discovered that there is inebriety among "society women," and he talked about it yesterday at the people's meeting in the Epiphany Baptist church.

"The fashion that encourages women inebriates among the society women of New York," said Dr. Peters, "presents a deplorable outlook for the future of the Republic. The fashionable of this city are establishing a custom which is being followed by millions of American women, to the detriment of the race.

"Closely observe the goings on in the fashionable drinking places of our city, and nine out of ten women drink habitually, their tipples identical with those of men and the calls as frequent, drinking with men and women and alone, at luncheon, at dinner, at supper, and between times, young women and old, to say nothing of the drinking in their own homes, where nobody except their maids see them.

"Fashionable physicians know that I tell the truth. Alcoholism among women is alarmingly on the increase. I appeal to every woman who loves her kind to discourage the custom of social drinking and help to save the womanhood of the Nation from the curse of drunkenness."

N. P. H. S. vs. Rahway.

The North Plainfield High School basketball team will play the Rahway High School at Rahway Friday night. A return game will be played in this city January 31.

MGR. DAAB'S POSITION

He Will Not Bring Hoboken's Here Again Without Associational Support.

BIG CUT IN EXPENSES

An Organization Could Save $1,000 in Running Expenses and Daab Could Top Off Salaries to Same Amount.

Manager Phil Daab, of the Hoboken nine, is engaged in careful and interesting calculation as to his bearings in the Plainfield baesball world. After one searching look around, he is still undecided as to where he is at. The whole question of the return of the Hoboken combination to Plainfield is very much in doubt.

One important factor in deciding the question will be the extent to which patrons of the sport, who have means, will consent to give Mr. Daab support in carrying the team through the season here. Mr. Daab made up his mind that he is through going it alone in Saturday games. He would like to manage the team for Plainfield, but he cannot do it if he must carry the burden himself. Unless an association or a partnership is formed to put in one half of the money required, Daab will not come back here.

Such an association may be formed, and this week or next may decide the matter. Mr. Daab has seen and talked with well-known baseball supporters here about the association plan. He made a special trip to this city for the purpose last week, and since then he has written of the proposition to all the men likely to fall in with it. A meeting will probably be held this week, and almost certainly before the end of next.

Mr. Daab's desire is to have an association of about six men, who will jointly contribute one-half of the sinews of war. With such an association the game could be made to pay. Without it, the season—if a first-class team is maintained—and Plainfield will have no other—must be a financial failure, as was the case last year.

Two things will work to make an association a financial gainer this year—a cut in salaries and a saving in running expenses. Saturday salaries must come down. That is settled. The players realize, as well as the managers, that the Saturday gaem with a fast team is a losing proposition at the salary rate of the past few seasons, and to prevent the lopping off of all income on Saturday the ball chasers are willing to take a cut.

As matters were last year it cost about $120 to send a team into each game. A saving of $40 a game on salaries will amount to about $1,000 in the course of the season. An associational manage can save $1,000 on the running expenses in the course of a season. Last year Mr. Daab had to hire men to take tickets, to keep an eye on the grounds to carry messages, to do the forty-seven different things that must be done. An association of six men can do these things themselves and save at least $1,000. With attendance as good as last year's, and a $2,000 drop in expenses, the game will pay.

Should Mr. Daab take hold of the team again he will cut the season as well as salaries. In his judgment—and most students of local conditions agree with him—a season opening the first Saturday in May and closing after Labor Day is as long as is good for the sport in Plainfield.

Items of Interest from Our Mt. Pleasant Correspondent.

Stanley C. Harris has received a new position with a wholesale cloth house in New York and he expects to go on the road as salesman in the spring, as he is going to be sent all through the States of Maine, Texas, Iowa, Georgia and Florida, and he is looking forward for the trip and will be gone for some time before his return.

The Potter boys are looking forward for their new set of boys this coming year, as they expect to have new arrangements made so as they can get an early start for the year. They will in a short time hold a fair, so as they will make the money to order their new suits for the Potter baseball team.

Lester B. Harris, also of Mt. Pleasant, has bought a new rubber tire rig from Homes and Co., of Plainfield. Mr. Harris expects to sell his farm in Potter's and is going to buy a large house in Plainfield, in which he will move into in spring.

Bride's Life in Danger.

Mrs. Oliver Collins, formerly Miss Jennie Reed, of Washington, who was married last Saturday night, is threatened with death by blood-poisoning. While laying a carpet in her new home at No. 3 Railroad place, Washington, the day before her wedding, Mrs. Collins ran a tack into her finger. Blood-poisoning has set in, her right hand is badly swollen, and if she escapes with her life she may lose her arm.

Informal Dance at Park Club.

The informal dance at the Park Club Saturday night was attanded by 250 members and friends. The music by an orchestra was a feature and greatly enjoyed by all.

SEEK W. A. SHOEMAKER

New York Police Say He Guided Seton Stock Swindle.

IS DISBARRED LAWYER

Tried to Sell, It is Alleged, a Forged $1,000 Certificate for $400, Intimating That It Was Stolen.

William A. Shoemaker, who was disbarred in Philadelphia nine years ago, is being sought by Central Office detectives and by the Pinkertons, on the charge that he is connected with the Norfolk and Western Railway Company's certificate swindle. Telegraphic orders for his arrest have been sent to nearly every large city in this country. The European police have also been asked to look for Shoemaker.

Shoemaker, it is charged, is the brains of the entire swindle which resulted in the printing of $4,300,000 worth of bogue securities of the Norfolk and Western.

Ten years ago he became prominent as chief counsel for H. H. Holmes, the murderer, who was tried and convicted in Philadelphia and hanged. It was subornation of perjury in connection with the defense of Holmes that led to his disbarment.

Since then Shoemaker has been a great deal in New York. He is well known as a shrewd operator and promoter.

Shoemaker first appeared in connection with the railway certificate swindle six or eight weeks ago.

Cornelius E. Baird, a member of the Stock Exchange, with offices at 18 Broad street, was visited one day recently by Humphries, who had with him a well dressed man about forty years old and wearing a heavy mustache. Humphries introduced his companion as "Mr. Shoemaker, of Philadelphia, a prominent member of the bar." He told Mr. Baird that Shoemaker was the owner of a ten-share certificate of Norfolk and Western stock and was anxious to secure a loan upon it.

Mr. Baird was in no hurry to make the loan. Though nothing was detected to show that the certificate was bogus, the police believe that this was one of the certificates printed at the direction of Charles Augustus Seton.

A few days later Shoemaker returned alone to Baird's office.

"I want to know if you will make the loan on the surety which I offered you the other day," Shoemaker said. "You know," Shoemaker is alleged to have said to Mr. Baird, "you can make some money out of this little transaction. I really do not want a loan on this stock; I want to sell it. If you will let me have, say as little as $400 for the certificate, which is negotiable, why, it is yours. The certificate is worth, at par, $1,000, and all I ask for it is $400."

It is alleged that the reason Shoemaker gave for his desire to sell the stock so cheaply was that the certificate had really been stolen. At that time Mr. Baird ordered his visitor out.

Mr. Baird heard of Humphries arrest in connection with the Norfolk and Western stock swindle and communicated with Inspector O'Brien at police headquarters.

The police were unable to get anything out of Humphries till on Saturday night they confronted him with Mr. Baird. Then he wilted. "I am going to tell the whole truth now," said Humphries.

It was not until then that Humphries really furnished information of value. At once detectives were sent out to hunt for Shoemaker. There is a possibility, however, that he may have gone to Europe. The examination of Humphries will be continued today. The authorities hope that they will be able to apprehend Shoemaker.

CLERGYMAN ASKS FAGAN.

Through Church Paper Requests Reason for Transfer of Police.

"Why have you removed John Clos?" the Rev. Dr. E. L. Stoddard, rector of St. John's Protestant Episcopal church, in Summit avenue, Jersey City, asked of Mayor Fagan in the current issue of St. John's Bulletin, a weekly paper published in the interests of the parish.

Clos, appointed to the police force forty years ago next May, served as desk sergeant in police headquarters for fifteen years. A few days ago he was transferred to do detective work in the Sixth precinct, known as Goatville.

The Mayor's reply to the clergyman's question could not be obtained last night. It is said the police board transferred Clos expecting he would apply for retirement.

Chase Again Put Over.

The members of the Watchung Hunt Club did not hold their weekly "chase" on Saturday, owing to the bad weather conditions. Another "chase" is scheduled for Saturday, but as yet the course has not been selected. The new pack of hounds will be used at this time.

Trinity Turkey Supper.

The Ladies' Christian Work Society of Trinity Reformed church is arranging for holding a turkey supper in the lecture room of the church on Thursday and Friday evenings, February 1 and 2.

BALL PLAYERS DOINGS

How the Members of the Plainfield Team are Spending Their Time.

COSGROVE A ROVER

Connolly a Printer; Dalton An Inventor; Leonard in Rubber Business; O'Neill a Bowler.

Since the close of the 1905 baseball season it may be of interest to the local fans to know how some of the Plainfield team stars have been spending the winter months. "Tip" O'Neil, who was very popular here as a catcher, is an expert on the bowling alleys. He is recognized as the champion of the Bronx and is to be seen almost every night smashing pins. The 200 mark is easy for the plucky catcher. He maintains that the exercise is beneficial and every player should bowl in the winter to keep his muscles in condition. Recently "Tip" said: "I am in better condition than ever and expect to play the game of my life next summer. Why, I felt like going in a game Christmas Day, it was so warm."

Owing to a slackness in work, the versatile shortstop, "Happy Kiernan, has been enjoying a mid-winter vacation. He is another player longing for "the good old summer time."

"Billy" Beck, who did good work here last summer in the box, is very busy these days at his trade, that of plumbing. In the evening he is an instructor in a trades school. He has an offer to pitch for Central Islip this summer and will probably accept.

"Pete" Lamar, "Dave" Driscoll and "Wally" Cosgrove are regular attendants at the three-round boxing shows in New York. According to report, "Wally" Cosgrove is rapidly becoming an expert on pugilistic affairs. His friend, "Bill" Tierney, has offered to back him against any bantam weight in the profession.

Connolly, who covered right garden so faultlessly last season, is still in the printing business and is waiting for the time when he can pull down long drives and crack out three base hits and home runs.

It is said that "Rube" Oldring will be seen in a Jersey City uniform this summer. Connie Mack, of the Philadelphia Athletics, will attach a string to him and allow him to gambol in Jersey pastures for another season.

Advices from Peekskill state that "Pete" Cregan is enjoying daily excursions on the Hudson River with his ice yacht, when not engaged in looking after the yeast factory.

William A. Dalton, the fast second baseman of the Plainfields, has perfected a patent on a telephone appliance which he hopes will increase his supply of worldly goods in the near future.

"Mike" Leonard, the best third baseman in the semi-professional ranks, is holding down a good job in the rubber business in New York. "Mike" is anxious for spring and summer weather.

The recent marriage of "Willie" Deegan to a rich and charming widow has caused consternation in the semi-professional ranks. The players invariably ask, "Is she really rich?" and other kindred questions. "Willie" was generally considered a bashful boy and his team mates cannot account for his action in becoming a benedict.

In every case the players comprising the Plainfield team last year are axious for the baseball season to open, and it is not too much to hope that local fandom will have the opportunity of seeing this fast aggregation again when the summer time arrives.

Mrs. John Hiscox, whose husband died recently at Westerly, R. I., has returned to Plainfield and will remain for the present.

SPEAKERS FOR BANQUET

Senators Ackerman and Hilliery and Father Bogan to Make Addresses.

AT CASINO JANUARY 25

Former Mayor W. L. Saunders To Act As Toastmaster—Subjects for Speeches Not Announced.

Definite arrangements have been made by the committee of the Board of Trade for the organization's annual banquet. It will be held at the Casino on Thursday night, January 25. The number of tickets is limited and the committee is anxious that those desiring to attend the affair make application early.

Former Mayor William L. Saunders, of North Plainfield, will be the toastmaster. Mayor James F. Buckle, of this city, and Mayor Newton B. Smalley, of North Plainfield, will make brief remarks. The principal speakers will be Senator T. J. Hillery, of Boonton; Senator Ernest R. Ackerman, and Father Bogan, of this city.

The topics have not been assigned yet, but they will be along matters of local public interest. A stringed orchestra has been engaged to furnish music. Mrs. Lena Hellstrom will serve the dinner.

Governor Stokes was invited to attend, but in his reply stated that he has every date in the month filled. The committe in charge of the banquet comprises Eugene M. Laing, chairman; James C. Pope, Amos Andrews, H. W. Marshall and DeWitt C. Ivins.

The banquet last year at the Hotel Iroquois was a pronounced success and the effort this year will be to eclipse it.

GERMS BY THOUSAND FOR JERSEY BABIES.

Veterinarians Say Farmers Send Out Unclean Milk to Customers—Fluid Shy on Fats and Solids.

People of certain sections of New Jersey, not in Plainfield, however, are drinking milk containing from 47,000 to 1,097,800 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, according to a paper read yesterday afternoon by Dr. L. P. Hurley, of Hopewell, at the twenty-second annual meeting of the Veterinary Medical Association of New Jersey, in room 100, at the Trenton House. Milk containing more than 10,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, it was stated, is a menace to public health.

Dr. Hurley's paper was one of the interesting features of the meeting. He devoted his attention first to cleanliness in handling milk, and showed that many farmers are uncleanly to a large degree in caring for their milk. He insisted that attention should be paid to this important matter and a reformation wrought. The paper also referred to samples of Jersey milk that had been tested and in many instances showed less than nine per cent. of fats and solids. The standard of the State Board of Health requires that milk shall contain at least twelve per cent. of total solids.

Dr. Hurley presented a series of more than a dozen bacteria tests of milk from various sections of the State and the result was the figures already given. Dr. Hurley said that the standard towards which all milk producers should aim was not more than 5,000 bacteria to the cubic centimeter, and 13.5 per cent. of solids, of which 4.5 per cent. should be butter fats.

FAIR HEIR MEETS WITH AUTO ACCIDENT.

E. P. Smith Latest Member of Family to Wreck Machine and Injure Himself.

E. P. Smith, a brother of Mrs. Charles L. Fair, who was killed in an automobile accident in France, a few years ago, was seriously injured in a similar accident near his home in Topeka, Kan., Thursday night.

Since Smith received his share of his sister's estate he has gone into business in Topeka. He was riding home in his automobile Thursday night. His machine ran into an excavation, around which there was no light. He was thrown against the curbing and sustained internal injuries. He is now in the hospital. The physicians say he will recover.

Mayor Bill Smith met with a similar accident about a year ago.

Long Service as Guardsman.

First Lieutenant Henry Landhal, of Company H, New Brunswick, who received a bronze and gold medal from Governor Stokes at Trenton for twenty-five years' service in the State militia, has the distinction of holding the second longest record of service in the Second Regiment, and one of the longest in the State. There is only one man with a known longer record in the National Guard of the State, and he is Sergeant John G. Boss, of Trenton. He has served forty years and last night was given a gold medal studded with diamonds.

Verdict Against Hall.

W. W. Wilson secured judgment against Albert Hall in Justice Mosher's court yesterday in an action on contract. F. J. Blatz appeared for the plaintiff.

REV. GILBERT LOVELL IS STUDYING CHINA

LETTER FROM PLAINFIELDER ENGAGED IN MISSIONARY WORK.

Rev. Gilbert Lovell, of this city, who was sent to the Chinese mission field by the Crescent Avenue church, is rapidly familiarizing himself with his environment and the character and possibilities of his work. He keeps his friends here posted as to his experiences, by means of frequent letters, all of which are unusually interesting reading. In his last letter, dated Siangtan, Hunan, October 30, he says:

"I made my first visit upon a mandarin alone, and without any foreigner to help me. I had always before gone with Mr. Locke or Dr. Vanderburgh, but this time I went alone and called upon the chief mandarin of the city, who is termed "hsien" because he is the chief officer of that kind of city, a city of third rank, and yet in this case one of the largest cities in all this province. I was afraid that some matter of etiquette would arise which, with my limited knowledge, I could not meet, and such a thing did happen, but I think matters in this case arranged themselves. I was on my way to the mandarin's and my boy was a little in advance of my sedan chair carrying my card, which has to be presented before I arrive in order that I may be received, when I feel in with seven or eight officials all on the same errand. The question was—should I allow them to precede me, and thus gain an audience before me, or should I hurry on ahead and strive to gain one ahead of them? I chose the former course, only to have them received in the large guest-room while, on the other hand, very shortly after they had gone in I was invited into a private room, where the mandarin gave me the first audience, so that I felt in some way honored above the visiting officials.

"This month Mrs. Lovell held her first woman's meeting, and she has now formed a class which meets around our dining-room table once a week and the members of which, in all about six, have some knowledge of the gospel. We want your prayers for this work, for there are vast possibilities in it, and Mrs. Lovell and I are very enthusiastic over it. She is taking up the study of God with them because that is the starting point of all, and especially as they know so little of what God means.

"The other day I accompanied Mr. Locke to one of our out-stations, where we have a little preaching chapel, and I preached my first sermon although, as a matter of fact, it was only an informal talk and I enjoyed it. The trip occupied only the best part of a day and we were home at six in the evening, but it was very enjoyable, especially the Chinese meal, which was prepared for us in our own chapel in the seventeenth ward by the chapel-keeper."

LUMBER DEALERS HOLD A POW-WOW.

They Discuss Condition of the Trade, It Is Reported.

The present condition of the lumber trade was thoroughly discussed at a meeting of dealers held at the office of Boice, Runyon & Co., Friday. Representatives from every town of importance between Elizabeth and Somerville were in attendance.

It was reported that the tendency of the lumber trade is upwards. There is a great deal of building and demands for lumber, while the supply is limited. Large firms, it is claimed, are retiring from business simply because they have cut their last timber. Report was made of the alleged ruthless cutting of trees in the big lumber districts.

A local dealer said today: "The time has passed when people can expect to purchase lumber at low prices. Prices may be higher than at present."

In this section of the State the dealers get their lumber from Maine, Wisconsin, Michigan, Washington State, British Columbia, Florida, Mississippi, many other points in the South and Western Pennsylvania.

Repairs to Ice Houses.

William H. Kirch, of Duer street, contractor, has just completed extensive improvements at the plant of the Natural Ice Company on the big pond at Watchung, and repairs at the old ice house on Wilson's pond. At the big pond a new steam conveyor has been installed in the ice house which will carry ice to any part of the structure by steam power. The old shute has also been repaired. A new shute has been constructed at the ice house on Wilson's pond and other needed repairs made. All of this work has been under way since last October.

After Thieving Servants.

Chief Kiely went to New York today, to watch the proceedings against Louise Rehak and Lizzie Bednarik, the Huntington servant girls who are accused of stealing $150 worth of clothes, in the First Police Court. The chief expects to have no trouble in getting the prisoners transferred to his charge.

PLAINFIELD LIBRARY NOTES

Selected List of Books Added to the Library During November, 1905, Part 2.

(Part 1 appeared in last week's issue.)

Little, Archibald, J., Far east.

"The book is no mere compilation, but written out of a full experience. Most of the chapters are occupied with China, historically and geographically. .. The description of the Yangtse valley is especially good and complete, for on this Mr. Little writes with unique knowledge. There are also interesting chapters on Mongolia and Turkestan, and a very good and full account of Tibet and the various approaches to that land."

"Is a most comprehensive and scholarly work, written by one who has a lifelong knowledge of the Far East, and is, in addition, an accomplished geographer." Spectator.

Loomis, C. B.—More cheerful Americans.

"The title not only fits the book, but is equally applicable to those who read it." N. Y. Evening Past.

"He finds his types among the people we all know, and puts them in situations which, if funnier than those of everyday life, never seem improbable. His touch is light, and there is an ingratiating kindliness about his attitude toward the men and women he sketches." N. Y. Tribune.

McCarthy, Justin.—History of our own times, v. 4 and 5.

"He is always interesting, and though sometimes gossipy and sometimes affected by personal prepossessions, he writes with singular fairness of temper. His history is journalistic rather than scientific." The Outlook.

Martin, H. R.—Sabina.

"A dialect story with a psychical plot. The scene is laid among the Amish, a religious sect of the Pennsylvania Dutch, and the heroine is a little Amish maiden who is suffering under a peculiar kind of hypnotic influence. The story is told with a realistic simplicity which is very refreshing, and serves only to enhance the atmosphere of weirdness which pervades every page." Churchman.

Merwin, Samuel.—The road builders.

"Its plot centres in the struggle to build one little connecting link of one hundred miles of railroad. No trick known to Wall street strategy or legal chicanery is left untried. Financial life and death depend upon the hero's putting it through, and the story of his work is a thrilling one."

New York, city, Metropolitan museum of art. Illustrated catalogue of paintings.

Page, T. N.—Burial of the guns.

Contents: My cousin Fanny; The burial of the guns: The gray jacket of "No. 4:" Miss Dangerlie's roses: How the Capthin Made Christmas: Little Darby.

Peattie, Mrs. E. W.—Shape of fear and other ghostly tales.

"The tales which are called ghostly delicately and sometimes humorously so, and fill a place not quite occupied by anything else in English fiction." Dial.

Reed, Myrtle.—Lavender and old lace.

Reed, Myrtle.—The Master's violin.

Repplier, Agnes.—In our convent days.

"This volume presents Miss Repplier. in a new field. The sketches, which appeared in the 'Atlantic,' are made up of personal reminiscences of her childhood in a French-American convent school. .. An added interest lies in the fact that the 'Elizabeth' who figures largely in the sketches as the bosom friend and confidante of the story-teller herself, is none other than Mrs. Elizabeth Robins Pennell, the well-known writer, and wife of Joseph Pennell, the artist.

Scherer, J. A. B.—Japan today.

"Probably as authoritative a work as it is possible for a foreigner to make. The author has had the advantage of many years' sojourn in Japan. .. A book of impressions but written with that full knowledge which has enabled the author to eschew what was either undesirable or what further investigation proved to be false." . Y. Times.

"Altogether a welcome addition to our knowledge of present day Japan by a thoroughly competent and unprejudiced resident." Athenaeum.

Scudder, V. D., ed.—Letters of St. Catharine of Siena.

"Her correspondence was wonderfully varied. She wrote to prisoners and outcasts, to great nobles and to plain business men, to physicians, lawyers, .. kings, queens, cardinals and popes, to recluses .. and to men and women of the world." London Times.

"It would be difficult to praise Miss Scudder's work too highly. Her translations are spirited, characteristic, and faithful. Her few pages of excellently written introduction are all that is wanted, as information and appreciation to lead the reader on to the study of St. Catharine's letters, deservedly placed among the Italian classics, one of the glories of the 14th century literature, valuable for all time as history and psychology." Spectator.

Stillman, Benjamin. — Remarks made on a short tour between Hartford and Quebec in 1819.

"A book of carefully recorded observations and also contains much historical matter relative to the country through which he passed, the murder of Miss McCrea, Gen. Bougoyne's expedition, etc. The quaint old prints add much of interest."

Smith, W. W., comp.—Complete handbook of religious pictures.

"Contains an alphabetical list of pictures published with their addresses, notes on publishers and their pictures .. a brief explanation of graded picture work in the Sunday-school, a list of illustrated books on Bible history, etc." Churchman.

Sparks, E. A.—United States of America.

MISS BROADNAX IS ADMIRED AT OBERLIN.

Faculty Regards Bright Colored Girl As a Splendid Student.

Continuing the unusually good work as a student, that marked her progress while at the High School here, Anna F. Broadnax, the colored girl who was valedictorian at the last graduation, has made herself prominent among the undergraduates at Oberlin College, where she is a member of the freshman class. The attention of the faculty has been drawn by the character of her work.

In a class of forty-five students, Miss Broadnax stood first in scholarship at the High School. She determined to prepare herself for teaching among her own people in the South. In order to secure the best advice on ways and means, she consulted Booker T. Washington. It was at his suggestion that she went to Oberlin.

The secretary of the college says: "There are 200 students in the freshman class, and Miss Broadnax's grades entitle her to rank sixth in that class, with only two white girls ahead of her."

Professor Adams wrote: "She has been one of my best students throughout the year. Her average for the term was about 98 per cent. She is an unusual student, and very lady-like in her bearing. In my judgment her education is an investment of the first rank."

BALL STARS TO BOWL.

Lou Wiltse and Jimmy Beisel Will Roll for Y. M. C. A. Team.

Baseball stars, one from the limelit world of professionalism, and the other from the lively-enough semi-professional world, will be mainstays of the new Y. M. C. A. bowling team.

Lou Wiltse, ex-Oriole and outlawed Tri-State twirler, is one of the rollers, and so is Jimmy Beisel, formerly pitcher for the Plainfields.

Lou has always taken a great interest in bowling, and rolls well up in the 200 class. Jimmy couldn't roll poorly to save his life.

Manager C. B. Koons expects to send his team against the Saturday Night Club, next week. His team will stand up to the alleys as follows: Beisel, Sutphen, Jeffery, Barlow, Koons and Wiltse.

King's Daughters' Luncheon.

The Daughters of the Cross will hold a luncheon at the Park Club on Thursday, January 25, for the purpose of raising funds with which to meet the annual pledge to the support of the King's Daughter's nurse.

FOR GARBAGE DISPOSAL

Board of Health Anxious that Municipal Collection System be Adopted.

COUNCIL MAY ACT

House-to-House Inspection to be More Thorough Than Even This Year—What Was Done in 1905.

In planning its work for this year, the Board of Health hopes to be able to continue the house-to-house inspection, begun in 1904. As a result of efforts in this direction last year 1,635 houses were inspected, 112 sewer connections were made and 226 vaults and 71 cesspools abolished. The three months' inspection cost the city $224.75, as against $86.37 for the inspection of 796 houses in 1904. The cost in 1905 was 13.7 per cent. for each house.

This year it will be the aim of the Board to continue the work until every house is inspected. The health authorities can see but one relief from the nuisances caused by accumulation of garbage and that is municipal collection and determined efforts are to be made to have the Common Council take this matter up at once.

The present indications are that considerable progress will be made in this improvement and possibly its adoption in the near future. Several members of the Common Council are known to be in favor of municipal collection of garbage and will be ready to vote for it if the right plan is presented.

The city still owns the plant formerly the property of the Plainfield Sanitary Company, and Mayor Buckle in his message urged that the question of making use of this plant be considered by the Common Council at the earliest possible date. The operation of the plant is sure to raise a storm of protests from residents living in the West End of the city, but what effect they will have remains to be seen. The Board of Health has asked for $5,000 this year, $1,000 of which has been advanced, to meet certain present expenses that are necessary before the annual appropriations are made. According to the conditions under which this amount is appropriated to the Board, all fees and fines received are turned over to the city treasurer.

DOUBTFUL OF ADMITTING CRESCENT AVE. SOCIETY.

Endeavor Union Discussing the Wording of the Organization's Constitution.

The congress of the local Christian-Endeavor Union held its regular bi-monthly meeting last evening in the Congregational church. Clarence La Rue was appointed chairman in the absence of President Fred Lounsbury, who was unable to be present.

The question of admitting to the union the Young People's Society of the Crescent Avenue church was again discussed. As the constitution of the union is worded at present, much discussion may be held over this point, but it was finally voted to arrange a meeting between representatives from the Crescent Avenue Society and the members of the congress, when a definite and satisfactory settlement is hoped for.

A large mass meeting in charge of the missionary committee, of which A. M. Van Arsdale is chairman, will be held next month.

Plans were formed for receiving contributions from the different societies of town for the Clark memorial fund. Printed booklets containing the constitution and by-laws of the union were distributed to those present.

FOOTBALL SHOULD SURELY BE ABOLISHED.

Pupils of the Plainfield High School Have So Decided.

Notwithstanding that it was decided by debate at the Plainfield High School yesterday that the game of football as played by the American colleges should be abolished, it was afterwards announced that the result would not affect the game as played by the team from the local school.

Miss Ruth Bullock and Horace Vail argued for the affirmative, and Phillip Leichtentritt and Joe Osgood for the negative. After a spirited debate, it was declared that the affirmative side won. Principal Travell acted as judge, Miss Loch as critic and George Fisher as chairman.

The decision has not been transmitted to the intercollege football reform committee.

Freeholder Wilbur Busy.

During the illness of Freeholder William A. Westphal, affairs at this end of the county coming under the supervision of the Board of Freeholders have been attended to by Freeholder S. P. T. Wilbur. Several county line bridges in this city have been sadly in need of repair and Mr. Wilbur has been kept busy looking after them. The Rock avenue bridge is now under repair, and work has been ordered on the Grove street structure, as well as one or two others.

PUBLIC SERVICE LOSES

Gambles on Verdict in Stevens Suit and Gets the Worst of the Deal.

AGREES TO GIVE $300

An Hour Afterward Jury Throws the Case Out of Court—Plaintiff Asked $1,500.

Still staggering from the effects of the Guinn verdict of $22,000 Wednesday, the Public Service Corporation blow Thursday, or in common everyblow yesterday, or in common everyday slang was badly "stung" because of its lawyer, John B. Bernhard, gambling on the jury's decision in the suit brought by Mrs. Mary Stevens, of this city.

The plaintiff asked $1,500 for alleged injuries received on an Arlington avenue car in August, 1903, and the evidence was heard yesterday morning. The case went to the jury at noon and while it was deliberating, Bernhard consented to give Mrs. Stevens' counsel, S. S. Swackhamer, $300 and costs, the latter agreeing to abide by the decision no matter what the verdict. When the jury returned at 4 o'clock it said simply, "No cause of action," and the Public Service people have been kicking themselves ever since. If Bernhard had waited, the trial would have cost them nothing whereas the expense will reach $500.

Mrs. Stevens alleged that while a passenger on one of the company's cars, the conductor threw a seat over, breaking two of her ribs. Bernhard alleged that the plaintiff was intoxicated and that she refused to move when requested.

Before the case was called yesterday morning, Bernhard offered to settle for $5, but this was refused. A little later, Bernhard and William Church, an adjuster for the company, suggested to Swackhamer that his client accept $50. This was also declined. Then after the evidence was all in, the defendant's counsel offered to pay $200 damages, but Swackhamer wouldn't listen to anything less than $250.

After the jury retired, Bernhard again approached Swackhamer and said:

"What will you take for the verdict now, no matter what it may be?"

Swackhamer consulted his client, and then told Bernhardt that she would accept $300, the defendant to pay the costs of the trial. This was satisfactory to all concerned and the agreement was duly drawn up and filed.

"Now remember," said Bernhard, putting the paper in his pocket, "this stands no matter what the jury does."

Swackhamer nodded assent and the Public Service representatives went off by themselves and had a good handshake. It is not recorded what they said when the verdict was returned but up to noon Swackhamer was still abiding by the articles of agreement and enjoying a series of chuckles.

THOMAS B. CARDNER DEAD AFTER A LONG ILLNESS.

Widely Known and Was a Member of Many Local Organizations.

Following a long illness from a complication of troubles, Thomas B. Cardner, a well known local resident, died this morning at 5 o'clock at his home on Orange place. He had been confined to his bed for several months and though undergoing great suffering had borne it all with patient fortitude.

Mr. Cardner was a machinist by trade and for many years was employed at the Scott Press Works. He enjoyed a wide circle of acquaintances in every part of the city and was greatly liked for many excellent traits. He was a member of Jerusalem Lodge, No. 26, F. and A. M.; Freedom Castle, No. 42, Knights of the Golden Eagle; Woodmen of the World, and the Scott Beneficial Society. He leaves a widow and four children, the Misses Mabel, Susy and Harriet Cardner and Edson Cardner.

RECEPTION TO ORRA S. ROGERS AND HIS BRIDE.

Given by Rev. and Mrs. George B. Shaw, at Seventh-Day Baptist Church Parsonage.

Rev. and Mrs. George B. Shaw gave a reception in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Orra S. Rogers, of Madison avenue, at the Seventh-Day Baptist parsonage, Central avenue, Thursday. Mr. and Mrs. Rogers were married recently in Lockport, N. Y., the home of the bride. While Mr. Rogers is well known to Plainfield—he is superintendent of the Sabbatarian Sabbath-school—his bride was a stranger to the Seventh-Day Baptist church members until last night.

The affair was very largely attended and passed off delightfully. There was an entire absence of formality.

Those receiving were Rev. and Mrs. George B. Shaw, Mr. and Mrs. Orra S. Rogers and Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Robbie. In the dining room were Mrs. James Everett Kimball, Dr. Martha Rose Stillman, Mrs. Oscar Ellis and Miss Ernestine C. Smith.

COAL DEALERS WRANGLE

Dissection Reported in Newly Formed Retailers Protective Association.

THE CAUSE OF DISPUTE

Can't Agree On Who Should Not Be Given Credit—At Meeting Soon To Be Held Change May Be Made.

Although the Plainfield Retail Coal Dealers' Protective Association has been in existence but a few weeks there is already a rumor of dissension within the organization. According to one of the dealers, "there will be a red hot time at the next meeting to be held soon." The date of meetings are kept as much of a secret as possible.

From what can be learned some of the dealers have been reporting the names of certain persons, friends of other dealers and known by them to be good pay. In one case a customer claimed that the dealer seeking a settlement was indebted to him for a like sum and he had called the account square.

It is also alleged that some people have been reported for a debt of $1.25 and $1.50, and this has caused trouble. The rule of the association is that where a person owes a bill to two or more dealers he cannot get any more coal, except for cash, until his old accounts are settled. Even this rule has complicated affairs, for oftentimes persons so charged with owing bills have been able to explain the matter, and in several instances it has been found upon investigation that the claims were in dispute, which could only be settled by a law suit.

Under these circumstances some dealers have not adhered strictly to the rule, it is said, and have continued to use their own judgment as to whether a man is good pay or not. It is further said that one man was reported unworthy of credit and a dealer, to his own certain knowledge, knew he was good and said that he would sell him any amount of coal and trust to getting his money.

Aside from these troubles which seem to have caused dissension in the association, it is claimed that the co-operation of dealers has been productive of much good in that many delinquents have settled old accounts and are now paying cash for coal. It is said that all of the dealers have profited in this respect.

One dealer, when asked his opinion concerning the future of the association, replied that there would have to be a change in some of the rules if it was to be a successful organization. The dealers got together chiefly for the collection of bad bills and to prevent them in the future. Other disturbing elements have entered the association and caused a friction, and the various dealers are not as harmonious as in the first instance.

CREDITORS GET VERDICT IN ATTACHMENT SUIT.

Jury in Westfield Declares Fulton Owns Furniture Held Up.

A jury in Justice Toucey's court at Westfield, yesterday afternoon, brought in a verdict in favor of the plaintiffs in the suit brought by M. R. Giles and J. A. Smith & Brother, of this city, against Robert Fulton to prove the ownership of property.

Fulton resided on West Seventh street, this city, and breaking up housekeeping, but his furniture in storage. He afterward took it out and placed it in freight cars for shipment to Alan Gale at White Plains, N. Y. Giles and the Smiths, who were creditors of Fulton, placed an attachment on the goods and held them up.

Fulton claimed the goods did not belong to him and when the suit was heard before Justice Toucey, Mrs. Fulton said that she had owned them but she had sold them to Gale. Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., presented a strong case and proved by several witnesses that Fulton was the man who had transacted all dealings in regard to the furniture and that Gale did not figure in the ownership until after the attachment was served.

The goods will now be sold to satisfy the claims of the creditors. Gifford Williams, a New York lawyer, represented the defendants.

Congratulates the Chief.

The current number of The Detective, the official organ of the International Association of Chiefs of Police, refers to the result of the Kiely trial and cordially congratulates the chief on his vindication. As a further comment on the investigation it quotes The Daily Press as to the flimsy basis for many charges against men in the chief's position.

Mr. and Mrs. Smith Entertain.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Embury Smith, of Madison avenue, who will soon leave for Western Pennsylvania, where Mr. Smith will be engaged as a surveyor for the construction of a railroad, entertained a number of friends at their home Thursday night. The guests were principally those who comprised the bridal party at the wedding of Mr. and Mrs. Smith in October.

GUARDSMEN AS SCALPERS

They Speculate in Tickets For Opening of New Armory at Trenton.

INVESTIGATION LIKELY

Cards of Admission Not Needed—Some Brought As High As $5 Apiece—An Invitation Affair.

Despite the fact that the formal opening of the new Second Regiment armory at Trenton Wednesday night was so successful, there was one marring feature to overshadow the brilliancy of the event. That was the ticket speculating which was carried on to a great extent. Many residents there paid fancy prices for the tickets, and then discovered to their regret that they were not necessary to gain admittance.

The matter may be investigated by the officers of the regiment and charges preferred against the guardsmen who disgraced their uniforms and their companies by becoming common ticket scalpers.

Several days before the event the South Jersey guardsmen, including some officers, it is said, disposed of all the tickets they could get for from $1 to $5 apiece. Before the event and on Wednesday a reporter at Trenton was offered tickets by regimental members who asked fancy prices.

When the armory opened Wednesday evening, guards and officers were stationed at the doors. The officers resolved to outwit the scalpers, and during the early part of the evening no tickets were collected. This gave the guardsmen and their friends who had not become scalpers already, an opportunity of making considerable money. The local soldiers had all been ordered to bring their tickets and were threatened with court martial if they did not do so. In consequence of their order, the soldiers saved one ticket, but when it was discovered that no tickets were necessary to enter the building, some of the guardsmen immediately made for the nearest exit and from there to State street, where numerous "easy marks" were found, who purchased tickets from five cents up. As the hour approached for the exercises to begin the price decreased.

Many of those who were not members of the guards were given the chance of making money also. They collected tickets from their friends who were allowed free access to the building and then hustled out to dispose of them.

Some of the soldiers proved more successful than others, as many after discovering that tickets were not needed, stood at the doors and collected many tickets, it is said, and then got some boys to sell them.

One guardsman admitted to a newspaper reporter that he had sold ten tickets for $2 apiece.

There was considerable dissatisfaction among a number of the soldiers who would not risk going outside and disposing of their pasteboards after once entering the building. These claimed they should have been informed that they did not need tickets to enter, and given the same opportunity as their fellow soldiers of making money.

Much indignation has been aroused over the affair, and those who fell victims to the scalpers and paid high prices for tickets when they could have been admitted without them, feel that they were badly "stung" and claim the scalpers should be court martialed.

GIRL TEAMS MATCHED.

Whittier Basketball Five Arranges Championship Series.

A special match series of games has been arranged between the Whittier and High School second girls' basketball teams. The series will decide the junior championship. They will be played in Hope chapel gymnasium.

The dates are as follows: January 18, 26; February 5, 13 and 26. The Whittier girls defeated High School in a game recently, and Roy Woodhull, who manages the Whittiers, is calling them "my champs" already.

LOCAL WOMEN GUESTS.

Attended Reception Given at Wallace House, Somerville.

Mrs. A. K. Currie, secretary; Miss Adelaide Dietrich, registrar; Mrs. Florence Howe Hall and Miss May Brown, first and second vice-regents, of Continental Chapter, Daughters American Revolution, attended the reception given at the Wallace House, Somerville, Thursday afternoon, by Frelinghuysen Chapter in commemoration of its tenth anniversary.

The Plainfield women were especially interested in the curious relics displayed at the Wallace House, as Continental Chapter contributed $200 for the preservation of this landmark. Refreshments were served and the occasion was a very pleasant one, many women from out of town attending.

Series Illustrated Lectures.

Within a short time the Plainfield Camera Club will give a series of illustrated lectures on popular topics. The members of the club will furnish the slides, some of the finest ever made.

MULFORD COLE ESTATE BUILDING BOOM SITE

PROPERTY TO BE DIVIDED INTO SIX HUNDRED LOTS.

One of the old landmarks of the city, known for years as the Mulford Cole property, located in the east end of the city, will, during the coming year, be the center of a lively real estate boom. This property, comprising over 600 lots and the Colé homestead, occupied for twenty-five years, was recently purchased by Elston M. French and then sold to the Highland Park Realty Company, of which he is the president. It is on the site of what everyone familiarly calls "Cole's Hill," and extends from East Front street along Leland avenue, almost to the Netherwood station of the New Jersey Central. The main line trolley runs through the center of the property.

Arrangements are now being made to install water and sewer mains and the present streets are to be improved, while two miles of new streets will be opened and macadamized. It is expected to start this work as soon as the weather permits, and during the coming spring and summer many new and attractive residences will be erected. Thus far twenty-one lots have been sold and nearly all of the purchasers will build homes for themselves.

This land is fifty feet higher than North avenue at the railroad station, thus making surface drainage practically perfect. Already many trees have been set out in this strip and contracts have been given for flagging and curbing.

In view of the suggestion made in the Mayor's message to the Common Council, urging that a fire house be erected and equipped with apparatus in the east end of the city, the Highland Park Realty Company is now considering the advisability of offering two lots to the city upon which such a fire house can be built. With the many new dwellings to be constructed the need for greater fire protection will be more urgent than ever.

No doubt at an early date a petition will be presented to the Common Council asking for certain improvements to be paid for by the property owners and city on an equitable basis.

It was right in this vicinity that the Public Service Corporation met with considerable trouble in extending its line through to Elizabeth. It was forced to purchase property for the right of way, and after doing so discovered that there was a mortgage on it which must be provided for. Mr. French adjusted the matter and then sold the property to the Public Service Corporation, after which the trolley line was extended.

F. A. HENCKEL NOT TO RETURN TO OLD POST.

His Trips Here to Circus Committee Meetings Gave Rise to Rumors.

There have been rumors among Y. M. C. A. men for several days that F. A. Henckel, who resigned as physical director last year to take an assistant directorship at the Brooklyn Central Branch, would return to the local association as Mr. Boardman's successor. General Secretary Harry Manning denied the truth of the rumor this morning very positively.

"Mr. Henckel hasn't the faintest idea of returning to Plainfield," said Mr. Manning. "He holds too good a position with too excellent a prospect, to consider a resumption of his work here."

Mr. Henckel has come out to this city twice in the past two weeks to advise the circus committee and assist in arranging the ring show. These visits probably gave rise to the rumor. The supposed possibility of Mr. Henckel's return has occasioned a good deal of comment among association members. He was a highly successful and popular director, and the announcement of his return would have caused universal pleasure in association circles.

CHARLES CORIELL, JR., WEDS.

Quietly Married to a Somerville Girl at Her Home Yesterday.

Charles Coriell, Jr., of Dunellen, who is well known in this city, was married yesterday afternoon in Somerville to Miss Ruth Jaeger, of that place. The wedding was quiet, only relatives and close frends of the family attending.

The groom is the son of former Postmaster Coriell, of Dunellen. He is in the oil business in New York.

Sewer Extension Ordinance.

Having allowed the south-side sanitary sewer ordinance to remain on the table following its return with the Mayor's veto, it is unlikely that the matter will be taken up under its present conditions. The members feel that the improvement is of too much importance to act hastily upon, and they will probably wait for the report from Street Comissioner Gavett and the consulting engineer, J. O. Osgood, who are now working on the plans.

To Give Piano Recital.

Miss Palmer and her pupils have issued invitations for a piano recita' to be given at the Hartridge School Tuesday afternoon, January 23, at 3 o'clock. The programme will include six musical illustrations of scenes from "Enoch Arden."

WANTS ALL COLLEGE MEN TO ATTEND SMOKER

OWEN FLEMING ISSUES INVITATIONS FOR THE AFFAIR.

Cards of invitation were sent out yesterday by Owen H. Fleming, a Princeton graduate, of 1012 Park avenue, asking all college men in Plainfield to meet at the Casino for an informal smoker to be held on Friday night, February 9. It is believed that with the co-operation of every college man in Plainfield this smoker can be made an immense success and become an annual affair, similar to those held at Morristown, the Oranges and throughout the country.

Mr. Fleming's list of college men in this city is incomplete and he earnestly requests that any college man who fails to receive a reply postal card will kindly communicate with him, telling him what college he attended and in what class.

There will be plenty of good music, "rag" and otherwise, informal speeches from representatives of the various colleges and lots of refreshments. The "soiree" is to be set in motion at 9 o'clock, and it is earnestly hoped that every college man will whoop it up for his own alma mater. It is urged that all replies be sent as early as possible to Owen H. Fleming, 1012 Park avenue. The smoker is for all college men, whether graduates or not. This committee is in charge of the affair:

S. St. John McCutchen, Clifford W. McGee, Yale; Joseph M. Shellabarger and Owen H. Fleming, Princeton; F. W. Goddard, Amherst; H. L. Hall, Columbia; Wylie Brown, Cornell, and William Wadsworth, Harvard.

TO REQUIRE DIPLOMAS FROM ALL PHARMACISTS.

Alumni of New Jersey College Advocate Passage of Such a Law.

Resolutions requesting the State Board of Pharmacy to urge the passage of a law compelling all pharmacists to have a diploma from some reputable institution were passed Wednesday night at the tenth annual banquet of the Alumni Association of the New Jersey College of Pharmacy, in Davis' parlors, Newark. A committee was appointed, consisting of Adolph F. Marquier, Clyde W. Heberling, Frank W. A. Hine and Carl Van Gehren, to present the matter to the State Board.

Covers were laid for thirty guests. Among those in attendance were Dr. William J. Disbrow, Professor H. E. Baldwin, Dr. J. H. Hood, William O. Kuebler, former County Clerk and president of the college, and Dr. P. E. Hommel.

These officers were elected for the ensuing year: Adolph F. Marquier, president; Frank W. Hine, vice president; Louis C. Hagney, secretary; Clyde W. Heberling, treasurer; Frederick Erbacher, delegate to the board of trustees of the New Jersey College of Pharmacy.

The committee in charge of the affair was made up of F. W. A. Hain, chairman; Oscar A. Schraft, Adolph F. Marquier, Albert Schurmann and Clyde W. Heberling.

PERSONAL NOTES.

Rev. Helmer T. Smidt, pastor of Christ Church, Chicago, has accepted an appointment from the Chicago Tract Society as director of its work among the Germans of the city.

Vine Hovey has acted as agent for the Burlington Road at Forrest City, Missouri, for forty years, without losing a single day's work, and in consequence has been given a two years' vacation with full pay.

Robert Hall McCormick, of Chicago, by the new additions to his famous collection of the productions of English artists, is now the possessor of the finest gallery of English art outside of the British Museum itself.

A copy of John R. Mott's book, "The Pastor and Modern Missions," has been presented to every pastor in the New England conference, through the generosity of Mrs. J. A. Woolson, the Hon. E. HH. Dunn and Dr. E. M. Taylor.

Rev. J. S. B. Hodges, one of the oldest pastors in Baltimore, and rector for the past thirty-five years of old St. Paul's Protestant Episcopal church in that city, preached his farewell sermon last Sunday and retires from the pastorate of the church as rector emeritus.

Mrs. Shaw and Mrs. Root are two ladies of the President's domestic family who are well versed in cooking. It is said that one of the servants can get up a better meal, and that they not infrequently look after that part of their household duties personally.

No Plant at Oil Cloth Factory.

After going to considerable expense in fitting up the building a plant to make refrigerators and door blinds, the firm which recently purchased the old oil cloth factory on North avenue, has decided not to engage in business in this city. They have consolidated with another concern in Syracuse, N. Y., and will transfer all the machinery to that place. Aleck Kane has made the owners an offer for the old factory and there is a possibility that it might be torn down.

SERVICES OVER REMAINS OF DR. J. L. M'MURRAY

JERSEY CITY DENTIST DIED AT HOME OF HIS SISTER IN THIS CITY.

Dr. James L. MacMurray, aged thirty-seven years, a well known dentist in Jersey City, died on Thursday at the home of his sister, Mrs. E. S. Alpaugh, of East Ninth street. The cause was lung trouble. Brief services were held from the residence last night, Rev. A. C. McCrea, of the First M. E. church, officiating.

The remains were taken to Jersey City this morning, and tonight services will be held from the residence of a brother at 36 Zabriskie street. Rev. Mr. Russell, of the Palisade M. E. church, will be in charge, and members of Summit Lodge, 182, I. O. O. F., and Palisade Encampment, No. 4, I. O. O. F., will attend. Services will be held at the same residence tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock for the family, and the interment will be in Jersey City.

Dr. MacMurray was born in New York, but resided in Jersey City Heights from childhood until a year and a half ago. He was graduated from the Denver Dental College, class '97, after which he practiced dentistry in Jersey City. Suffering from lung trouble he returned to Denver a year and a half ago, but the change was not beneficial. Four weeks ago he came to Plainfield to live with his sister. He was in charge of a trained nurse continually.

One sister, Mrs. E. S. Alpaugh, of East Ninth street, and three brothers, John William and George MacMurray, of Jersey City, survive Dr. MacMurray.

STATE CHARITY MEETING PLANS

Former Governor Murphy Made Chairman of Local Committee for Big Gathering.

Detailed plans for the big influx of charity workers expected to attend the convention of the New Jersey Conference of Charities and Correction, in Newark, on February 15, 16 and 17, were begun at a meeting of the local committee at the Free Public Library yesterday afternoon. Clergymen, representatives of the city and of most of the institutions of various kinds hereabouts form the committee, which is to have charge of all the local arrangements. The hospitality of the homes of many or those present yesterday was offered for the entertainment of delegates and others attending the conference, and preliminary arrangements for several big dinners and receptions, with which the three day sessions are to be enlivened. talked over.

Former Governor Franklin Murphy was elected local chairman, and, though he was not present at the meeting, it is understood that he will accept. There was an amusing little contretemps, occasioned by the eagerness of some to name Rev. Dr. James I. Vance as local chairman. The nomination was made by Rev. Louis Shreve Osborne, and immediately seconded, before it developed that Mr. Murphy had been asked to take the chairmanship and had accepted. Dr. Vance was made temporary chairman for the afternoon, Arthur W. McDougall secretary, and Benjamin Atha treasurer of the committee.

The place of meeting was discussed at length and it was decided that the Free Public Library assembly room would be altogether too small for the big sessions, though the use of it might be asked for the day meetings. An effort will be made to secure Wallace Hall for the evening sessions.

Bleecker Van Wagonen, of South Orange, president of the State Conference, in a brief talk set forth the aims of the conference and told of how it had grown since its organization. He predicted that the meeting in Newark would be the largest and most important yet held.

"The work of the State Conference," said Mr. Van Wagonen, "has now reached a point where it is desirable to go further than we have yet gone. In the past the meetings have brought together those who have been interested in various phases and developments of philanthropic work, to talk over what has been accomplished. Now we are to go on from these historical reviews to the ideals of service which lie before us. We have arranged a programme for this coming meeting which shall include a setting forth of the new ideas and ideals in charity."

There will be at least two receptions given at the homes of prominent citizens and special dinners to groups interested in the same things. On the Friday of the convention there will be a dinner for all of the overseers of the poor who will attend the convention, and others are yet to be arranged for.

Committees are to be appointed on the following matters by Mr. Murphy: Headquarters, printing and advertising, hospitality, finance, press, registration, visiting institutions and places of interest, and tuberculosis exhibit.

Planning for New Building.

The New York and New Jersey Telephone Company is perfecting preliminary details for its new building to be erected on East Fourth street, near Park avenue. Work is expected to begin in the spring.

PARK CLUB BOWLERS DO THE BEST WORK

AN INTERESTING FIGHT IS BEING WAGED IN CENTRAL LEAGUE.

Nearly half of the series of games scheduled in the Central Bowling League have been rolled for the season of 1905 and 1906. Up to date twelve of the thirty series of three games have been decided. Westfield Club's team has won nine games and lost three and has an average score of 856 and a high score of 934. The Park Club, of Plainfield, so far holds the record for high team score, 949, with the Cranford Casino team having second highest score, 941. The Elizabeth Club has won eight games and lost four, and has an average of 845.11 and high score of 932. The Elizabeth Club team is fighting hard for first place, and will roll a series with the Parks at Plainfield tonight, while Westfield will contest with the Cranford Casino team at Westfield. Should Westfield lose one to Cranford tonight and Elizabeth take three from Plainfield the first and second teams in the league would be tied. Last night's games were therefore being looked forward to with great interest. Keys, of the Elizabeth Club, has rolled the highest individual score of 254, and stands a good chance of winning first prize in this class. The averages to January 9 of players who have rolled over 160 follows:

| | Games. | Aver. |
|---|---|---|
| Ball, Park | 11 | 188 |
| Waterbury, Westfield | 12 | 180 |
| Keys, Elizabeth | 12 | 180 |
| Hageman, Westfield | 12 | 177.2 |
| Brown, Newark Bay | 12 | 176 |
| Hunting, Elizabeth | 12 | 175.5 |
| Barlow, Park | 12 | 175.1 |
| Condit, Westfield | 12 | 174.2 |
| Patterson, Roselle | 9 | 174.1 |
| Blanchard, Eliz | 6 | 173.4 |
| Dederich, Newark Bay | 12 | 171.2 |
| Willis, Park | 12 | 171.1 |
| Long, Park | 4 | 171 |
| Crane, Cranford | 12 | 168.5 |
| Saphar, Cranford | 12 | 167.10 |
| Wheelwright, Eliz | 12 | 167.5 |
| Howe, Roselle | 12 | 167.3 |
| Bogart, Westfield | 12 | 167.3 |
| West, Roselle | 10 | 166.7 |
| Daniels, Park | 8 | 163 |
| Bates, Cranford | 12 | 162.10 |
| Beckwith, Newark Bay | 12 | 162.10 |
| Tenney, Elizabeth | 12 | 160.8 |

Team Standing.

| | W. | L. | Av. | H.S. |
|---|---|---|---|---|
| Westfield | 9 | 3 | 856 | 934 |
| Elizabeth | 8 | 4 | 845.11 | 932 |
| Park Club | 5 | 6 | 856.4 | 949 |
| Roselle | 6 | 6 | 807.4 | 875 |
| Newark Bay | 5 | 7 | 823.4 | 878 |
| Cranford | 2 | 10 | 807.3 | 941 |

High individual score—Keys, Elizabeth Club, 254. High team score—Park Club, Plainfield, 949.

HIGH SCHOOL GIRLS PLAY BASKETBALL.

Plainfield High School Represented In League Composed of Teams In Northern Jersey.

Plainfield represents Union county in the league ofl girls basketbal teams which will be played among upper Jersey teams starting this month. The Newark High team has the best prospects in the league, though the Plainfield High girls have a strong team, and will prove an important factor in the schedule. Battin is not represented. Miss Dorothy Clark, of Newark, is the manager of the league. The schedule prepared by Miss Clark is as follows:

January 16—Belleville High School, at Newark.

January 20—Passaic High School, at Passaic.

January 26—Plainfield High School, at Newark.

February 10—Englewood High School, at Englewood.

February 16—East Orange High School, at Newark.

February 21—Plainfield High School, at Plainfield.

February 28—East Orange High School, at East Orange.

March 3—Passaic High School, at Newark.

March 14—Bloomfield High School, at Bloomfield.

March 17—Hackensack High School, at Newark.

March 21—Belleville High School, at Newark.

April 14—Hackensack High School, at Hackensack.

April 28—Englewood High School, at Newark.

"Marty" O'Loughlin Re-engaged.

"Marty" O'Loughlin has been engaged for the coming year as the professional at the Plainfield Country Club. Aside from being very successful in his work last season at the club, "Marty" won distinction on outside links, where he won many prizes and other honors in his playing with the "pros." It is proposed to open the course in April, weather permitting. The annual club meeting will be held in February, when officers will be elected and the season's programme prepared.

Women Golfers to Meet.

The annual meeting of the Women's Metropolitan Golf Association will be held January 29 at Mrs. Tiffany's, No. 128 East Thirty-sixth street, New York. Many clubs have offered their links for one day tournaments for the coming season, and it is expected that a schedule of these popular meetings will be arranged.

JOHN GOFF CALLED OFF

Leader Advises Him Not to Apply Again For a Hotel License.

HE'D HAD SOME HOPES

But He Gave Them Up Thursday After a Talk With Andy McCardell on the Street.

Residents of the West End who been wondering whether John Goff would apply for a license again this year may rest in case or sigh with regret, as their attitude toward a new saloon may move them. Goff, it may be said on very good authority, has been told by the political powers that he had better not apply for a license before the present Council. This is tantamount to instructions, and will be so regarded by Goff. He has had great hopes of the new Council, but he will give up hoping now.

Goff, it is said, was given his cue in the license matter Thursday. He met Andrew McCardell, leader of the Fourth ward, on the street and stopped him. He wanted to know what chance he had of getting a license.

Mr. McCardell, it is said, spoke very plainly to Goff. He told him that the time was the reverse of propitious for applying and advised him earnestly to give up all idea of it.

Goff was reluctant to abandon hope, but McCardell made it very plain that he stood no chance of securing either organization support or votes enough to send the proposition through. Goff finally bowed his head to the inevitable and assured Mr. McCardell that he wouldn't try to force his saloon on the Council.

Whether or not the Seeber-Goff-Rising Sun plans have been abandoned for all time is a question. George Seeber put up the hotel on West Front street for Goff, with no other idea in mind than to conduct a licensed place. That was the one sole, undivided raison d'etre, and there is much shaking of heads and dubious sighs in the Seeber-Rising Sun circles every time the Goff Hotel investment is mentioned. The prize is worth playing a waiting game for, and the license question may very easily come up again in one, two or three years hence. For the present, however, the residents of Goff's neighborhood may regard the license matter as dead.

COURT PLAINFIELD, I. O. F., INSTALLS NEW OFFICERS.

Members Afterward Enjoy Informal Entertainment and Smoker.

Court Plainfield, No. 1144, I. O. F., at its meeting Friday night accepted two applications and initiated five candidates, after which Past Chief Ranger Otto Moor, assisted by Past Chief Ranger James M. Smith, as high marshal, installed the officers recently elected to serve during the year. After the installation ceremony remarks were made by all the new officers and songs were rendered by several of the members, during which a smoker was enjoyed. The court's annual entertainment and dance will be held in Saengerbund Hall next Friday night, when Professor Howard, of Newark, will furnish the entertainment and Professor Heinemeyer, of Elizabeth the music for the dance.

The officers installed were as follows: Court deputy, Charles J. McCarthy; past chief ranger, Charles Jaeger; chief ranger, Louis Feiring; vice-ranger, A. Neumann; recording secretary, James Patterson; financial secretary, Henry Hansen; treasurer, Edward J. McCue; orator, Thomas Roddy; senior woodward, Peter A. Kane; junior woodward, Fred Wilbee; senior beadle, Thomas Monsell; junior beadle, T. Fitzgerald; finance committee, Fred Wilbee, P. Harrington; trustees, Thomas Roddy, H. H. Lowrie, M. D.; court druggist, Jasper Cadmus; court physicians, Drs. H. H. Lowrie, A. A. Gesswein and A. K. Brennan.

FARMER TRAPPED FOX.

Dan Schenck Captures and Kills Destroyer of His Crops.

Daniel Schenck, who runs a farm in Piscataway near Fred Endress' place, captured a big red fox in a trap Wednesday night. The capture ended a long string of sudden deaths in the Schenck hennery.

For a week before the fox was captured Schenck's chickens and ducks were decimated nightly. By Tuesday night he had lost fifty or sixty fowls and his patience. He got out a lusty trap and set it, baited with a plump hen in the barnyard. At 2 o'clock he heard the bait squawk, which was followed by a yelp. He went downstairs and found one of the biggest red foxes he had ever seen, held by one leg in the jaws of the trap. Schenck carried a gun, and he lost no time in avenging the death of his fowls.

May Not Build Bridge.

William Farrier, of New Market, who has the contract for building the new West End avenue bridge over Green brook, is still very ill and it cannot be determined yet whether he will be able to do the work.

LONG HANGED FRIDAY

Murderer of Matthew Cunningham Died on the Scaffold at 10:45.

MADE NO STATEMENT

Spent His Last Night on Earth Playing Cards With the Death Watches—Story of the Crime and Capture.

Maintaining his phlegmatic temperament until the last moment, Charles Long, the murderer of Matthew Cunningham, who was captured at New Market, died on the scaffold in the jail yard at Trenton Friday. Th trap was sprung without a hitch at 10:45 and one minute and ten seconds later physicians pronounced him dead. The execution was satisfactory in every way to Sheriff Wilbur and his assistants, while the witnesses were hardly aware it had taken place.

Long spent the night playing cards with the death watches. He was told yesterday that there was absolutely no hope for him and he received the news with the utmost unconcern. His spiritual adviser, Rev. Father Whelan, broke the news to him but his outward expression narrated no emotion.

He was called Friday by Sheriff Wilbur, who gave him the customary suit of black clothing and he put it on with alacrity. He then spent a short time bidding good bye to all who had been kind to him and afterward retired to the recesses of his cell to talk to Father Whelan. On the advice of the priest he resolved to make no statement and when the time came for him to walk into the court yard he did so with a firm step and his head erect.

He hardly looked about him as he mounted the scaffold and no words were spoken except by the guards who directed him where to stand. No one but Sheriff Wilbur knows who sprung the trap as it was done by means of a wire rope running into the court house and to a man stationed out of sight.

As Long's friends seem to have deserted him, his body will be buried at the expense of the county.

The crime for which Long was hung was committed at Trenton last July. He and Matthew Cunningham became involved in a quarrel over a woman and Long left the house they were at in a rage. He returned shortly afterward with a shot gun and creeping behind his rival, emptied the charge in his head, killing him instantly. He made his escape from Trenton and came to Dunellen, pursued by detectives. He succeeded in throwing them off his track and made his way to Piscataway township and for a week played hide-and-seek in Dismal Swamp with the Trenton and Plainfield police. He was finally captured on Frank VanNuis' farm below New Market by Chief Kiely, Detective McCarthy and Patrolman Higgins, of the local force. His captors were supposed to get a reward, but when they asked for it, VanNuis claimed it because of giving information. The police denied that he had aided them in any way and the matter is now being fought out in the courts.

DR. JESSE L. HURLBUT NOT TO GIVE UP PREACHING.

Says He Will Take a Church When Appointments Are Made.

The announcement made a few days ago that in all probability the Rev. Dr. Jesse L. Hurlbut, pastor of the South Orange M. E. church, and formerly of Plainfield, would not be returned to that church next spring when the Newark Methodist Conference meets in Jersey City, but that the chances were, as things stand now, that the Rev. George Mooney, of the Monroe Avenue M. E. church, would be sent to South Orange, caused much comment in Methodist circles in that town. It has been hinted that perhaps Dr. Hurlbut, who is one of the best known preachers in the conference, would take up church literary labor, or would receive some appointment in the conference Sunday school work, but Dr. Hurlbut said yesterday that he wished to correct that rumor.

"Whoever authorized the statement," writes the preacher, "gave it without knowledge, and it is likely to do me some harm. I do expect to continue in the pastorate and to receive appointment to some church in the conference."

This is the first utterance on the matter for publication from Dr. Hurlbut, as he declined to talk when pressed for a statement. He will remain in pastoral work and will take a church, but it does not yet appear what church has signified its wish to have him sent to it.

Bible Class To Give Musicale.

The Young People's Bible Class of the Holy Cross church is hard at work rehearsing for a musicale and the "Stanley Dwarfs," which will be given at the Park Club on the evening of February 7. Some of the best musical talent of Plainfield will take part in this entertainment, which is to be given for the benefit of the music fund of the church.

HE PREDICTS "OPEN DOOR"

Dr. Bostwick Just Back From Morocco Talks Entertainingly of That Country.

A CONFERENCE IS ON

Has Good Opinion of the Sultan, But Like Others Little Respect for American Consuls.

From the land of sunshine, flowers and a delightful climate to that of mid-winter, and a poor specimen at that, Dr. Frank Brown Bostwick arrived in Plainfield Monday from Algeciras, Morocco, just at a time when the eyes of the world are centered on his home, in view of the Morocco conference, which opens there today and which will settle the question of the "open door" for Germany. Dr. Bostwick has come to Plainfield to prepare for his marriage to Miss May Eoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. W. Eoff, of Crescent avenue, which takes place on January 23.

Dr. Bostwick is a native of Ohio, a graduate of the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania, class '92, and has been practicing dentistry in Gibraltar and Morocco for four years. For a time he was a dentist at the Court of Madrid, and in his profession he has met nearly all of the notables.

When seen by a reporter for The Daily Press last night the doctor was found to be very willing to talk about affairs in his interesting country. In his opinion, Germany will triumph in her contention for the "open door" in Morocco, for he says that it is recognized that once France gets control of affairs it will virtually be a "closed door," and the natives are against this. When the doctor left home he says that elaborate preparations were being made for the conference, the city hall being practically refurnished with carpets and furniture for the occasion.

When questioned as to Morocco, the doctor painted a glowing picture. He described it as one of the most fertile countries upon which the sun shines. He thought that aside from the influence exerted by others, the Sultan was very fair and not half as bad as described. "The trouble is," said the doctor, "he wants to modernize Morocco too fast and the natives object seriously. It is his wish that his country keep apace of others in the way of improvements, and his people will not stand for it. His power is absolute as to the enforcement of laws and in this respect he rules with an iron hand."

Referring to internal affairs in Spain, Dr. Bostwick said that it would not be surprising to hear that King Alfonso had been invited to leave his throne and the government turned over to the militia. He said that before he sailed there was strong intimation of this, not that the King himself is unpopular, but that the people do not like those about him. He declared that the King is a much-abused person and that it has been his aim to give his people a government that will please them.

The doctor was very pronounced in his declaration about the men who represent this country in Spain as consuls, and told of the contempt that a majority of the people have for them. They think that they should be representative of the American citizen, and when these consuls allow their freedom to exceed good manners, the natives are disgusted. Dr. Bostwick communicated with the State Department about the action of a consul general, and he was informed that if he would give details it might be investigated. He let the matter drop, although the representative's action was the talk of the community in which he lived.

The doctor gave an interesting description of Gibraltar, its strong fortifications and of the peculiar military rules governing it. Unless a special permit is obtained no outsider can remain within the fort after 7 o'clock at night, and, in fact, a permit has to be secured to visit the place from day to day.

The future home of Dr. Bostwick and his bride will be at Algeciras, where he has a delightful residence. They will arrive there early in February. Sometime ago Miss Eoff, accompanied by a party of friends from Boston, took a trip abroad and visited Gibraltar and her future home at Algeciras. Therefore, the country will not be strange to her. She becomes very enthusiastic when telling of the country and its peculiar customs and says that there is always something novel and attractive to interest one.

Annual Meeting February 6.

The annual meeting of the Plainfield Country Club will be held Tuesday night, February 6, at the Casino, for the election of officers and transaction of other business. It is understood that George P. Mellick will be re-elected president.

Justice Hand's Case Adjourned.

The case of Hezekiah Hand against M. J. Ginsburg, set down for trial in the Supreme Court yesterday, was adjourned to February 14, owing to the illness of the defendant. At that time the case will be tried before Judge Vail, without a jury. William Newcorn represents the plaintiff.

SNOWDEN SAVED HIS FIFTY-DOLLAR ROLL

SAW NEGRO PICK UP MONEY HE DROPPED IN TROLLEY CAR.

James Derry, a Westfield negro, nearly got away with $50 belonging to Alfred Snowden, of this city, on a westbound main line trolley car last Monday. His failure to succeed will cost him thirty days of liberty.

Snowden and Derry were sitting side by side in the car, which was due at the Watchung avenue depot at 8:45. Near this city Snowden put his hand in his trousers pocket to get some change and pulled out a roll of bills amounting to $50. The money fell to the floor and Derry fastened his eye on it. Apparently he was the only one who did notice it. A minute later he stooped and picked it up.

The movement undid Derry, the covetous. Snowden saw it and the suspicion that the negro was picking up something he had dropped flashed into his mind. While Derry was hurrying down the car aisle Snowden thrust his hand in his pocket and discovered the absence of the bills. Then he got up and chased very rapidly after the negro. He caught Derry just as he swung off the car. The negro protested his ignorance, but didn't put up a fight. Snowden clung to him with an unbreakable grip, and when the car reached this city he took him to police headquarters. As soon as Sergeant Frederickson heard the story he had Derry searched. The roll was found in an inside pocket.

He was arraigned before Judge Runyon Tuesday under a charge of disorderly conduct. The magistrate made it thirty days straight.

D. A. R. WILL CELEBRATE BATTLE ANNIVERSARY

ANNUAL MEETING OF LOCAL CHAPTER AT MRS. D. P. HALL'S HOUSE.

Continental Chapter, D. A. R., held its annual meeting Monday afternoon at the home of Mrs. D. P. Hall, Madison avenue. The session was postponed from last fall.

Officers were elected as follows: Regent, Mrs. D. P. Hall; first vice regent, Miss Mary Brown; second vice regent, Mrs. D. H. Rowland; registrar, Mrs. Addie Dietrich; secretary, Mrs. N. W. Currie; treasurer, Mrs. F. H. Andrews; board, Mrs. Charles McCutchen, Miss Sarah Manning, Miss Harriet Manning and Mrs. C. P. Leggett.

The following candidates for State office were endorsed: Regent, Mrs. Ellen Mecum, of Salem; vice regent, Mrs. Gaylord Putnam, of Elizabeth; vice president general, representative of the State in the national body, Mrs. Kearfoot, of Montclair.

Mrs. Hall was designated as the delegate to the Continental Congress at Washington, D. C., April 16. Mrs. Rowland, Mrs. J. G. Foster and Miss Dietrich were named as alternates.

The chapter decided to mark the anniversary of the Battle of Lexington with an entertainment after Easter. The proceeds of the affair will be applied to the fund for the erection of a monument at Washington Rock.

In accordance with an annual custom, the chapter will offer a prize for an essay on an American historical subject to the High School pupils. The competition this year may be extended to the borough High School, with two prizes.

MAYOR'S FATHER-IN-LAW BREAKS LEG BY FALL.

John Becker, Aged 78, Badly Hurt at N. B. Smalley's Home.

John Becker, aged seventy-eight years, fell on the back cellar steps at the home of his son-in-law, Mayor Newton B. Smalley, in Mercer avenue, at 6 o'clock Monday, breaking his right leg and sustaining severe bruises. He was carried up to his room by the mayor, who summoned Drs. Carmen and Pittis.

The broken bones were set and the injured man is resting quietly. The attending physicians believe that owing to his advanced age he will never fully recover the use of the leg.

Mayor Smalley heard the noise of the fall and at first believed that Mr. Becker had fallen out of a rear second story window. Owing to his condition, the injured man was not questioned as to the cause. It is believed now that he slipped and fell while closing the cellar door.

Senior Class Play.

The committee from the senior class of the High School is considering the advisability of giving as its annual play, "The Taming of the Shrew." A meeting will be held within a few days to decide the matter.

Ordered to Appear for Examination.

George W. Steengraff, against whom the Mt. Penn Stove Works secured a judgment, has been ordered by Judge Fort to appear before Isaac P. Runyon, of this city, on Friday morning for an examination of his books and accounts. The plaintiff is represented by William Newcorn.

MR. FISK NOW CHAIRMAN

Former Mayor Chosen as Head of the Republican City Executive Committee.

DR. JENKINS RETIRES

Two Additional Members From Each Election District Provided For—John W. Murray, Jr., Resigns.

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk was elected chairman of the City Republican Executive Committee Monday night. Dr. O. L. Jenkins has held this position for five years and now retires.

The meeting was called by William Newcorn, who acted as temporary secretary and F. H. Smith was made temporary chairman. In the re-organization of the committee these officers were chosen: Chairman, Charles J. Fisk; vice chairman, Dr. O. L. Jenkins; secretary and treasurer, William Newcorn.

The resignation of John W. Murray, Jr., as a member was accepted. A resolution was passed adopting the constitution and bylaws under which the old committee worked.

Another resolution was adopted changing a section and providing for two additional members from each election district, making an increase of eighteen members or a total of thirty. The names of the new members will be announced at the meeting to be held Tuesday night, February 6.

The secretary was authorized to draft suitable resolutions to be presented to Dr. Jenkins, showing the appreciation of the committee for his faithful work during the five years he was chairman. Action on these resolutions will be taken at the next meeting.

WANT THE THEATRE CLOSED ON SATURDAYS

SEVERAL MERCHANTS SAY IT HURTS THEIR BUSINESS.

Several merchants have interested themselves in a plan to increase their business on Saturday afternoons and nights. They claim that since the new theatre has opened its doors, their Saturday trade has fallen off, and to restore it is the object they seek.

A representative of one of the largest retail stores in the city said today that a petition to Manager Counihan would be made by a number of merchants. They want him to close up on Saturday so that they can make more money.

It is extremely unlikely that the New Plainfield theatre's management would pay any attention to such a request. The Saturday business at this, as at all other playhouses, is the best of the week. Manager Counihan, like all other managers, depends upon the receipts of the last day of the week to defray most of his expenses.

The merchants say that at least 1,000 people who formerly shopped Saturday nights spend that time now at the theatre.

SIX CENTS DAMAGES.

That's What Jury Gave Man Suing Trolley Company.

In the case of Thomas Marley, formerly of this city, but now of Elizabeth, against the Public Service Corporation, tried before Judge Fort at Elizabeth, yesterday, the jury awarded the plaintiff six cents damages.

Marley claimed that he was thrown off a trolley car near the B. & O. Railroad crossing at Cranford in 1900, receiving severe injuries to his knee and hands. The defendant company claimed that Marley was intoxicated and that he was not thrown off the car.

Centennial of a Landmark.

In celebration of its one hundredth anniversary the owners and employes of the tobacco factory in Bloomfield avenue, West Caldwell, will hold a banquet next week. Up to 1860 tobacco was carted by wagon from Newark in hogsheads. The staves, which were made of black walnut and other hard woods, were sought by residents for miles around to build fences. The business was started by Nathaniel Douglass in 1806, and has changed hands many times. Last month the business was incorporated as the Lane-Lockward Company. The present frame structure has been altered very little since it was first erected.

At Home for Fiancee.

Invitations have been issued by Mrs. William Barlow, Miss Barlow and Miss Maude Chandler for an at home on Saturday, January 27, from 4 until 6 o'clock at their residence, 40 Prospect place. Miss Chandler is the fiancee of Charles Barlow, a son of Mr. and Mrs. Barlow.

Vanderhoef Buys Property.

J. V. E. Vanderhoef, of Prospect place, has purchased the Marclay property, No. 446 West Second street, from E. M. Laing, the administrator of the estate.

CLOSE VICTORY FOR Y. M. C. A. FIRST FIVE

BEAT OUT FAST ORIOLES, OF NEW YORK, BY TWO POINTS.

Using every ounce of strength and all the tricks they know, the Y. M. C. A. first team managed to nose out a two-point victory over the Oriole basketball five at Y. M. C. A. gymnasium last night. The score was thirty-five to thirty-three.

It was their familiarity with the gym floor that saved the Y. M. C. A. men. They shot goals all around the New Yorkers, but the latter were faster on their feet, quicker in passing and more resourceful. They had six chances at the basket to the Plainfielders' one. The latter chance usually counted, and there lay all the difference in the going. Scull and Leary made some especially fine shots, but Downs, with seven to his credit, surpassed them.

Score and line up:

| Y. M. C. A. | | ORIOLES. |
|---|---|---|
| Smith | | Downs |
| Thompson | | Cook |
| | forwards. | |
| Scull | | Stuart |
| | center. | |
| Leary | | Seward |
| Letson | | McMillan |
| | guards. | |

Goals from field—Smith, 2; Thompson, 2; Scull, 5; Leary, 6; Downs, 7; Cook, Stuart, 2; McMillan, 3; Seward, 2. Goals from foul—Thompson, 3; Cook, 3; McMillan. Umpire—Morse. Scorer—Sanderson. Timer—Phillips.

Between halves the High School five toyed with the Business Men. The latter worked hard, but fell down in crucial instances, which is polite diction for unable to make good. The score was twenty-nine to ten. Collier and Smith played star games.

The line up and summary:

| High School. | | Business Men. |
|---|---|---|
| Smith | | Spicer. |
| Collier | | Miner |
| | forwards. | |
| S. Freeman | | Browning |
| | center. | |
| H. Freeman | | Utzinger |
| Doane | | Loizeaux |
| Caldwell | | Haynes |
| | guards. | |

Goals from field—Smith, 6; Collier, 4; S. Freeman, 2; H. Freeman, Doane, Spicer, 2; Utzinger, Loizeaux. Goals from fouls—S. Freeman, Browning, 2.

LITERARY.

Good woodcock shooting in the Middle States, and especially in New York State, is rapidly becoming a thing of the past. Nowadays when a sportsman goes out for a day's hunt, no matter how good his dog may be, if he brings home even a few woodcocks he is considered lucky, and even then he will generally bring home all that he has seen. So that now our day's sport in the woods is mostly dependent upon the wily old grouse, who very often allures even the best of our sportsmen. It is now generally considered by the majority of naturalists and sportsmen that the woodcock are fast becoming extinct, and a sad thing, too, it is to believe; however, when we stop to consider that they simply run the gauntlet from the State of Maine to the Gulf, and from September to April a hunter can go into one State or another where he will find an open season, then perhaps we ought to realize one great reason why our choice little game bird is becoming scarcer every year. This fact has really been quite noticeable for the past few years, through the central part of New York State, where I have regularly, each fall, visited holds some ideal woodcock cover.—L. B. Cooper, in Recreation for January.

The January number of the new magazine, Interior Decoration, is especially interesting. An article on Mosaics is followed by a fully illustrated story of the work of the Swedish Cottagers, while a third treats on "Mission Furniture and its Environment." The "Ideal Kitchen" is the subject of a well illustrated article, and in another, the perplexing question of "The Treatment of the Floor," is carefully considered. "Comfortable Furniture" and "The Modern Library" are two other stories, with good illustrations. "In the Shops" is a department which will appeal to every one. It is full of new ideas and suggestions taken from the various prominent stores. The number costs ten cents and may be had from all newsdealers. It is published at 19 Union Square, New York City.

Honor for Young Plainfielder.

Leonard Gavett, son of Street Commissioner Gavett, has been elected to "The Dunstans," the honorary society of Cornell College, which selects its members after long and earnest consideration. The young man is now in the sophomore class and last year won recognition as a member of the winning freshman rowing crew in the intercollegiate races at Poughkeepsie. He is looked upon as available timber for the senior crew and is being watched by the leaders.

Probation Officer in Attendance.

At the request of City Judge William N. Runyon, the probation officer will be in the police court here every Saturday morning. Either Mrs. Williamson or her assistant, Captain Irwin, will be present.

DENIAL FOR SHOEMAKER

Wife Declares He is Innocent of Complicity in Stock Swindle.

HAD NO CERTIFICATES

Promoter Told The Press by Telephone This Morning That It Could Get a Statement from Mrs. Shoemaker.

A story published from the New York World Monday, referring to the alleged complicity of "W. A. Shoemaker, an attorney disbarred in Philadelphia nine years ago," in the Norfolk & Western stock forgery case, called forth a telephone message to The Daily Press from William A. Shoemaker, of Berkley avenue, Tuesday morning.

"I suppose you are aware by this time," said Mr. Shoemaker, "that the story in your paper yesterday, evidently taken from the World, is not true. You may see my wife this morning and get the whole truth so far as I am concerned."

A reporter did see Mrs. Shoemaker at the Berkley avenue house. She made a very complete denial of everything alleged or intimated, so far as the stock swindle was concerned, in the World article.

"My husband did not tell me to make a statement," she said, "but I know that the story published about him is not true, and I know his side of the whole thing from what he has said.

"Mr. Shoemaker was never disbarred, he never saw one of the forged Norfolk & Western certificates, and there are no warrants out for him. He called up the district attorney's office in New York yesterday, and they told him that they had no warrant for his arrest, and had not connected him with the case. They said it was all a newspaper affair."

The reporter called Mrs. Shoemaker's attention to an article in the Herald of this morning, which asserts that Mr. Shoemaker promised to go to the district attorney's office, but did not do so.

"When Mr. Shoemaker called up the district attorney," explained Mrs. Shoemaker, "Mr. Jerome was not in, and neither was the man next in authority. The office did not appear to care at all whether he came and he thought it better to wait until some one in real authority was on hand.

"Mr. Shoemaker denies positively that he ever went into Baird's office with Mr. Humphries to sell a Norfolk & Western certificate. He never owned one of the certificates and never even saw one. Some months ago—about ten months, I think—Mr. Shoemaker did sell some old bonds of the Norfolk & Western Railway, but he sold them for what they were. Anybody can sell old bonds or stocks, if they sell them for what they are. Mr. Shoemaker got his bonds from a man named Smith, who handles such things—R. W. Smith, I think it is—and he holds receipts for them.

"Mr. Shoemaker told me last night that Mr. Humphries had denied the World article. He saw Humphries' lawyer, Mr. Zeigler, and the latter said Humphries declared yesterday, in his presence and that of others, that Mr. Shoemaker was innocent. These are the words Humphries used, Mr. Shoemaker says:

"'Did you see what they say in the World about Shoemaker? It's outrageous. Shoemaker is just as innocent a man, Mr. Zeigler, as you are.'

"My husband has no idea how his name came to be connected with the case. He called up the World yesterday and a reporter told him that he had been taking care of the Seton case, but didn't write the article about Mr. Shoemaker. Another reporter brought that in. I suppose it was one of those crazy reporters you don't care about who never gets anything straight. I think it is just shameful the way such things are done. I just wish we had a censor for newspapers like they have in Europe. My husband wants a retraction of that article from every paper that used it, and he intends to get it."

"You say your husband was not disbarred?" asked the reporter.

"Yes; he was never disbarred."

"He was counsel for H. H. Holmes, the murderer, in Philadelphia, wasn't he?"

"Yes."

"Didn't District Attorney Graham move his disbarment?"

"Yes, he did; but my husband was not disbarred. He was suspended for one year. There is a great difference between disbarment and suspension.

"He was reinstated at the end of the year, and practiced law in Philadelphia after that for three or four years. He gave up his practice not because, of that matter, but because of his health. He has always been delicate and couldn't stand the strain. He spoke of giving up the law before the Holmes case. Mr. Shoemaker was very unjustly used in that suspension matter. It was all a game of George Graham's, and people know it now. He didn't want Holmes to have counsel, in order to close up the case unopposed, and he set out to revenge himself on Mr. Shoemaker because he took the case. You know they plotted to entrap Mr. Shoemaker, and did it by sending a woman to his office to give him a false affidavit. George Graham has been shown up since and people know things about him now that they had no inkling of then. That affair made a lot of friends for Mr. Shoemaker; a good many people seemed to see through Graham's game.

"My husband is ready to answer any question he can about the case, and to say anything that is right about it. He is in New York today but will be home tonight at his regular time, between 6 and 7 o'clock. He will be in Philadelphia tomorrow, to see his mother, who is very sick. He should have gone there today, but has business to attend to."

"What is Mr. Shoemaker's business?" asked the Press man.

"He sells stocks and bonds."

"Has he an office in the city?"

"No, he has no office."

BROADWAY MASHER WHIPPED BY WOMAN.

Binghamton Man, Sixty Years Old, Chastised for Unwelcome Advances Made in the Street.

Badly battered, a well dressed, dignified man, apparently about sixty years old, was led into the "Tenderloin" police station, New York, late yesterday afternoon by Policeman O'Flaherty, and behind the two came a handsomely dressed woman about twenty-five years old. The woman's hands were diamond-bedecked, and an expensive set of furs set off to advantage her costly black tailor-made gown.

Policeman O'Flaherty led the man to the desk, and on the woman's complaint a charge of disorderly conduct was registered against him by Sergeant Himmel. The woman explained to the sergeant that the man had addressed her at Broadway and Forty-first street, in that city, with the salutation, "Hell, bright eyes!"

What followed is the woman's story, borne out by the condition of the man when he landed in the police station.

"Sergeant, I didn't give him time to repeat his salutation," she said. "I landed squarely on his nose, and just as I was about to give him another blow this policeman came along."

"I want to apologize to you," faltered the man in reply.

"But you say you have a wife and children?" said the woman. "You have just told the sergeant so. Any man of your age and apparent respectability who cannot let women alone on the street deserves just what I gave you. I wish the policeman had given me one more minute with you!"

By this time the man explained to the sergeant that he was a business man from Binghamton, N. Y.; that he had just reached New York, and he was sorry for his action.

"Go down to court, madame, and appear against this man," said the sergeant to the woman.

"Me go to court!" gasped the woman. "Oh, no, I am too well known to do that, and my family is too prominent to permit such a thing. I wouldn't have my name known in this connection for any amount of money." Then turning to the man she said: "I guess I have punished him enough."

As the woman refused to proceed further in the case the man was discharged, and she left the station house without disclosing her indentity.

STRUCK BY EXPRESS; APPARENTLY UNINJURED

MIRACULOUS ESCAPE OF ALDENE MAN AT CRANFORD CROSSING.

Struck by a Royal Blue Line express at Mix's Crossing, near Cranford, Monday afternoon, James Sonning, of Aldene, apparently suffered no more harm than a few bruises. He was hurled twenty feet in the air and landed at the foot of an embankment in a confused heap, but was quickly on his feet.

The train left New York at 2:45 and was bowling along at full speed near Cranford, when the engineer noticed a man directly ahead of him on the track. He blew the whistle and reversed the brakes, but the fellow appeared to be totally unconscious of his danger. The cylinder head on the right side hit him squarely and to all appearance he was killed.

The express was stopped and the crew rushed back expecting to find a corpse, but instead they found Sonning bemoaning the loss of his pipe. He was taken to his home and unless internal injuries develop, he will be all right within a few days.

Passengers who went to Sonning's assistance state that he was intoxicated and that he did not realize that he was on the track.

CANEPARO FINED AGAIN

Borough Delicatessen Dealer Also Gets Lecture Akin to a Runyonization.

ASSAULTED D. DEMOLLI

Used a Butcher's Steel On His Head As Windup To An Argument—Warned By Mayor Smalley.

Arraigned in the borough police court Monday for the third time within a few months, Joseph Caneparo, who keeps a delicatessen store on Somerset street, was not only fined by Mayor Smalley, but was given a verbal raking over that made cold perspiration stand out on his brow.

He was haled before the magistrate on complaint of David Demolli, the caterer, who charged him with disorderly conduct and assault. Lawyer Fred J. Huff made an eloquent plea for the prisoner and probably saved him from going to jail, as the Mayor let him off with a $10 fine and the scathing lecture.

Caneparo and Demolli have been exchanging business courtesies in the way of lending money and materials and Saturday night Demolli called at Caneparo's store for some dishes that belonged to him.

"Say," said Caneparo, "when are you going to pay me that $15 I loaned you?"

"If you'll settle up that bill I sent you a few days ago," replied Demolli, "I guess you'll find I don't owe you anything."

A hot argument followed and both were raking up each other's past history and telling what they knew about one another when Caneparo lost all reason. He seized a heavy butcher's steel and brandishing it about his head yelled to Demolli to "clear out." Before the caterer could take the hint and vacate the steel was brought down on the back of his cranium with force enough to make him think the Fourth of July had arrived. He had a friend with him named Joseph Milam and the latter shoved Caneparo back until Demolli could collect his scattered senses and adjourn to the sidewalk.

Caneparo admitted the truth of Demolli's testimony when brought into court, and through his counsel declared his hot temper had gotten the better of him. He handed up the fine as soon as it was imposed and promised that he would try to curb himself. The first time he was arrested he was fined $10 by Recorder Doud and about a month ago he contributed $27 to the borough treasury for selling liquor illegally.

"Now remember," called Mayor Smalley as Caneparo started to go out, "high fines have been the rule in the borough, and we're going to leave it that way; be a wise man and profit accordingly."

APOPLEXY FATAL TO JAMES DEGRAW

BROTHER OF CHARLES DEGRAW DEAD AFTER TWO DAYS ILLNESS.

James DeGraw died early Tuesday morning, following a stroke of apoplexy late Saturday night. Prior to that time he was enjoying good health. He retired to his room about 10:30 o'clock Saturday night and fifteen minutes later was found in an unconscious condition by his brother, Charles DeGraw.

Mr. DeGraw was the son of Mr. and Mrs. Augustus DeGraw. He was born at New Brunswick sixty-seven years ago. His father died here about ten years ago, and his mother is still living. Mr. DeGraw lived with his parents in New Brunswick for several years, where his father was proprietor of the Whitehall Hotel for a long time. About thirty-five years ago the family moved to Plainfield, where the father engaged in the mineral water business on West Second street. James was also employed in this business, selling mineral water throughout the section.

Later, when his father retired, James engaged in the restaurant and candy business, first on Front street, opposite Park avenue, and then on Park avenue. After that he lived in retirement.

Mr. DeGraw is survived by his mother and two brothers, Charles DeGraw, of the firm of Putnam & DeGraw, of West Front street; Edward DeGraw, of Philadelphia, and one sister, Mrs. A. D. Cook, of West Seventh street.

Boy Stole Valuable Rings.

Max Krahnert, sixteen years old, employed as a plumber's helper, is being held at Red Bank for the Grand Jury on his own confession of stealing two valuable rings from the jewelry store of Leon DeLa Reussille, on Broad street, that place. The prisoner made a confession in court yesterday. He says he took the diamond rings, which are valued at about $1,000, and hid them in the plumber's shop, as he was afraid to be seen with them. He was suspected of the theft and arrested. The rings have been recovered.

STREET SPRINKLING BIDS

Municipal System Unlikely to be Favored by Council.

COST CONSIDERED

City Can Not Do the Work for as Low a Figure as a Contractor It is Argued.

The question of municipal street sprinkling that has been agitating the minds of some of the members of the Common Council, will probably be decided at the next meeting to be held on Monday night, February 6, and from present indications it is quite likely that the Common Council will be willing to contract for the work as during last year. Since the matter has been under discussion, some of the members have learned that it would be more expensive for the city to do the work than to award the contract to the lowest bidder.

Contrary to the rule last year, the Common Council will undoubtedly advertise for bids for the work. This would be in accord with Mayor Buckle's expressed wish as well as that of the Common Council, as now constituted. As it requires a considerable sum to buy horses and other equipment for this work, there is naturally not many persons who are looking for the contract. The first year John E. Keely secured the contract, there was only one other bidder, the Plainfield Cab Company, through James Davis, the manager, and Mr. Keely's bid was the lower. The next year bids were not asked for and Mr. Keely again received the contract. Now the question of municipal street sprinkling has been introduced by Councilman Wilson, chairman of the street committee.

It is understood that a majority of the members of the Common Council are not in favor of the city doing the work unless it can be done more cheaply than at present, and this does not seem to be apparent. In comparison with the cost in other cities, Plainfield seems to be getting the work done as cheap, if not cheaper.

The great obstacle in the way of the city purchasing its own horses and equipment seems to be in having a place large enough to keep them. There are very few places in the city big enough for this purpose and it would be necessary for the city to erect a building at considerable expense.

The question of renewing the contract will come up at the February meeting and those well acquainted with the situation seem to think that the work will be awarded to the one making the lowest bid.

MR. JOY'S LECTURE.

Was Heard By Large Gathering in the First Presbyterian Church.

In spite of the bad weather a large crowd turned out last evening at the "ladies' night," of the Men's Club of the First Presbyterian church. The affair was a great success, and the lecture by James R. Joy was thoroughly enjoyed. The women of the congregation were especially invited for the social and many attended.

Mr. Joy lectured on his trip through the West, particularly the Yellowstone region, his remarks being illustrated by views. At the conclusion of the lecture, a pleasant social took place, the affair being in charge of Frank Dunning, assisted by a committee.

Entertained Clericus.

Rev. Arthur S. Phelps, of Bound Brook, entertained the Plainfield Clericus at his home, yesterday afternoon. Owing to the stormy weather the attendance was small. Those present from here were Rev. E. Vicars Stevenson, Rev. E. M. Rodman, Rev. Arthur S. Peck and Rev. Harris C. Rush, of Westfield. There was an informal discussion of general topics, but no regular paper was presented. Before the clergy departed refreshments were served and a social time enjoyed. The place for the next meeting in February was left for the secretary to decide.

Funeral of Mrs. Potter.

The funeral services of Mrs. William H. Potter were held yesterday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the late home at Mt. Pleasant, and were largely attended by friends and neighbors. Rev. Charles E. Herring, pastor of the First Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Potter was a member, conducted the service. The interment took place in the family plot at Rahway.

EXPLODING CHEMICALS ENDANGER MAN'S SIGHT

WILLIAM TOTTEN HAS NARROW ESCAPE FROM TOTAL BLINDNESS.

Wm Totten, a well known employe of the Hotel Kensington, narrowly escaped being totally blinded yesterday, by the explosion of a preparation used in forming acetylene gas for the hostelry's illumination. He had been bending over the machinery holding the chemicals when they suddenly burst in his face and his eyes received a large share of the liquid. He was assisted from the basement to an upper floor, where treatment was given him but it was not until today that he was able to see fully.

Mr. Totten's escape was made all the more narrow from the fact that he only has the sight of one eye, the other having been destroyed many years ago while he was an employe of the New Jersey Central, a large piece of coal striking the optic and destroying the pupil.

MUSIC AND ELOCUTION DELIGHTS LARGE AUDIENCE

BENEFIT ENTERTAINMENT AT Y. M. C. A. FOR FRESH AIR WORK.

For the benefit of the Fresh Air Camp at Netherwood and for the work which Miss Currie is conducting among the poor children in New York, an entertainment was held in the Y. M. C. A. last night, which did credit to the artists, and delighted the audience. The entertainers were the Sagamore Musical Club, of this city, and Miss Helen Mar Wilson, a talented and attractive elocutionist.

While the young musicians were given their usual hearty reception, Miss Wilson was the life of the entertainment, and her readings were applauded again and again. Her swift change from the merry, prattling child to the fiery, impetuous sternness of tradgedy enables her to fill an entire evening with her own exertions.

The Sagamore Club played three popular selections in its usual apt manner, and responded to several encores. In solo work, Chester H. Briggs, the leader of the club, won much applause. The other members of the club are Monroe Long, Theodore Gavett, S. B. Howe, Jr., mandoline; William Briggs and Garth Williams, banjos; Charles Eoff, William Gaston and Herbert Smith, violins. Other features of the evening were selections rendered by a professional quartette, while between the numbers, stereopticon illustrations of Miss Currie's headquarters, both in New York and in Netherwood, together with pictures of the children under her care, were thrown upon a screen.

The entertainment was arranged by Albert C. Rogers and he worked unceasingly for its success.

DUNELLEN RESIDENTS WANT TRACKS ELEVATED

SOME CITIZENS INCLINED TO CRITICIZE THE BOROUGH OFFICIALS.

The death of Peter Mohan, who was killed by an express train near the Washington avenue crossing at Dunellen last Tuesday night, has renewed the agitation of having the railroad elevate its tracks through that borough and has caused some comment to be made about members of the Council who are railroad men and two of whom are Democrats. The Mayor is also a Democrat. These officials are charged by some persons with lack of diligence in not urging the railroad to elevate, and that the recent fatalities that have occurred point to the dangers that beset those compelled to cross the tracks daily.

Mayor Wyckoff, who is a railroad employe, said: "In the last year but two persons have been killed by the cars in this town, and in both instances the fatalities would have occurred even though the tracks were elevated to a height of fifty feet."

Held Dance at Seminary.

A company of young married people held a dance at the Seminary last night, there being about fifteen couples. The affair was very informal and similar to those occasionally held there during the winter.

George D. Halleck and family, of North Plainfield, expected to start today for Atlantic City, but the storm may delay their trip for a time.

PURSUED BY ANGRY CROWD

Lively Chase in West End After a New York Man.

FINALLY CAPTURED

Placed in Police Cell on Charge of Attempt Assault—Will Make No Statement.

After he had been pursued by a crowd of angry men and finally captured by Special Policeman Samuel J. Robinson, Irving Washburn, a young man who claims to live in New York, was placed in a cell at police headquarters last night, on a charge of attempted assault on Margaret Walsh, the thirteen-year-old daughter of James Walsh, of Lee place. The men who ran after him were returning employes from the West End factories and for a time the fellow was roughly handled. Robinson stood by his side and kept the more excited ones back while he had the police patrol summoned. When brought to the station, Washburn refused to make any statement, to Chief Kiely's queries simply replying, "I'm up against it." He will be given a hearing before Justice Huff this afternoon.

The Walsh girl was walking on Lee place shortly after 5:30 yesterday afternoon, when Washburn approached and caught hold of her. He made some insulting remarks at the same time and the frightened child made a struggle to escape from his grasp. The proceeding was witnessed by H. F. Hunter, the girl's brother-in-law, from his home and he ran to her assistance, at the same time shouting at the offender.

At the sound of his voice, Washburn sprang away and attempted to escape but the crowd of workmen were at his heels Others came in from various streets and the fugitive was soon headed off. He was defiant when surrounded and his attitude at least, would have precipitated trouble but for Robinson's intervention. At the time only a few of the men knew what the man was wanted for.

In appearance Washburn is about twenty-five years old and of slight build. After saying that his home is in New York and that yesterday was the first time he had ever been in Plainfield, he became silent and has since remained moody and taciturn. He has retained Walter L. Hetfield, Jr., as counsel.

BOTH HOUSES RE-ELECT JOHN KEAN SENATOR

PLANS TO GIVE HIM A SERENADE OF NECESSITY CALLED OFF.

The two houses of the Legislature voted separately yesterday for a United States Senator to succeed John Kean, whose term is about to expire. Mr. Kean, who was the choice of the Republican joint caucus to succeed himself, received a majority of the votes and will be formally elected to the Senate at a joint session today.

Col. Edwin A. Stevens, of Hudson County, was voted for by the Democrats. The vote in the Senate was: Kean, 14; Stevens, 6. Senator Childs, (Dem) was absent.

The vote in the House was: Kean, 43; Stevens, 13.

The Union County Republican leaders were preparing to give the Senator a big serenade at his residence, Ursino, tonight. It was the intention to have all the Republican clubs in the county assemble at the party headquarters in Elizabeth and, headed by a band of music and the county Republican executive committee, march to Ursino and pay their respects to the Senator. The latter, however, when waited upon by Vice Chairman James White, of the county committee, to notify him of the proposed demonstration, declared he would not be at home, as, after the reception today at Trenton, he intended to start directly for Washington. Accordingly the whole affair had to be called off.

Two Contract Cases.

Summons have been issued in the contract case of Lewis Williams against Joel Coddington, which is returnable at Justice Smalley's court. Francis J. Blatz will represent the plaintiff. The case of the Newark Sheet Metal Manufacturing Co against M. Armstrong, of this city, has been laid over for one month. One of the witnesses in the case is in Florida. F. J. Blatz is the lawyer for the plaintiff

DEMOCRATS ARE OBDURATE

Their Action May Mean Election After All.

WON'T FILE REQUEST

Board of Freeholders Will Have to File Bonds in Order to Secure Money for the Purpose.

Assemblyman Edward S. Coyne, chairman of the Union County Republican Committee, in speaking of the proposed special election, said today, that the Legislature will probably take some action this afternoon to enable Union county to hold an election on February 7. This action is necessary because the Union County Democratic Committee, at its meeting last night, refused to file a request that no election be held.

It was hoped by the Board of Freeholders as well as leading Republicans, that an election could be avoided and the county spared the $10,000 expense. It will be necessary for the freeholders to issue bonds for the election, it is said, as all of the county money is apportioned and there is not now $10,000 surplus about to meet the expenses for the election. It was with this fact in mind that the Board sent a delegation to Trenton to interview the Governor to see what could be done about calling off the election and having the special act set aside. It now looks as though the election will be held on February 7.

OSHKOSH CLUB MEN ARE TO ORGANIZE

A PERMANENT ASSOCIATION IS THE PLAN OF THE PROMOTERS.

So successful has the Oshkosh Club been in its amateur performances given a year ago and this year, there is a strong sentiment among the members of effecting a permanent organization for the purpose of giving similar affairs once a year, as well as arranging other social events. This sentiment was expressed on Saturday following the afternoon performance of the "Oshkosh Club at Home," and another meeting will be held soon to take some definite action.

As yet no statement has been made regarding the disposition of the profits from the recent performances, but Joseph M. Shellabarger, under whose direction they were given, is preparing such a statement which will be given out soon.

Former Mayor Charles J. Fisk showed unusual interest in the club's work this year and very soon he will give a dance at the Casino to the members in appreciation of their efforts. It is understood that Mr. Fisk is quite anxious that the club be made a permanent organization and that he will become one of the active members of it. It was largely for the benefit of the club that he had extensive alterations made at the Casino whereby the stage and scenery compares favorably with those in many theatres. By the enlargement of the stage it was possible for the performance of last week to be given with such success. Many other improvements have been made at the Casino and it is believed that Mr. Fisk has an idea that this favorite amusement place will be an ideal home for the Oshkosh Club and with that end in view is doing all that is possible to make it meet the needs of such an organization.

Reception in Honor of Sister.

Jonas Lie, the artist, gave a reception in his studio in the Babcock building, last night, for his sister, Miss Lie, who will return to her home in Norway in March. During the evening Miss Lie rendered several selections by well known Norway composers on the piano and Mr. Van-Ness and Mrs Bender sang several duets. After the informal programme, refreshments were served and the rest of the evening was spent in a social way.

Receiver for Bank.

Vice-Chancellor Pitney, in the Court of Chancery, Newark, yesterday, granted a rule to show cause why a receiver should not be appointed for the Union County Bank of Rahway, and held over an injunction restraining the bank officials from depositing of its assets in transferring its property. The rule was made returnable February 2, and directed that the Comptroller of the State be made a party to the proceedings.

John J. Cornell, a prominent Friend, of Baltimore, will speak at the Friends' meeting house on Watchung avenue, Sunday, Feb. 5.

WINTER'S WORST STORM

Small-Sized Blizzard Drops Down on This City.

TRAFFIC IMPEDED

Trolley Cars Blocked and Streets Made Almost Impassable by Heavy Snowfall.

In the belief that an ordinary snowstorm was about beginning, Plainfielders retired last night while light, feathery flakes were falling, only to awake this morning and find a healthy young blizzard cavorting around. From one inch of "the beautiful" on the ground at 11 o'clock last night it had reached a over foot on the level this noon and it is still coming in clouds that bode a complete tie-up of traffic. The storm is by far the most severe of the present winter and is almost on a par with the blizzard of 1900. The streets are practically deserted and only those who have to, venture out of doors, the high wind making it almost impossible to see.

The Public Service Corporation employes are putting forth determined efforts to keep the trolley cars moving as regular as possible. Both the large snow plow and the sweeper are kept running up and down the lines and they are followed closely by the trolley cars. In this way a fairly good schedule has been maintained in the city during the morning, but at the present time a complete blockade is threatened.

Greater difficulty is experienced between here and Elizabeth, as well as towards Bound Brook and New Brunswick, where the snow drifts completely blocked the traffic most of the distance. No effort has been made to maintain the through service between Jersey City and Trenton, the company preferring to attend to local traffic.

All of the local and through trains on the New Jersey Central are from one to three hours late and at 2 o'clock this afternoon the general conditions were worse than at any time since the storm began. Freight and coal traffic is practically suspended.

Owing to the very light attendance at the various schools it was decided not to hold any sessions today. At the High School, Principal Travell gave an interesting talk on the present situation in Russia for the benefit of the few who braved the storm to reach school. In some of the grades not a single pupil put in an appearance, this being especially noticeable in the kindergartens.

MANY GUESTS ATTEND A BOROUGH WEDDING

MISS MARY DEVINE IS NOW THE WIFE OF WALTER GORMAN.

In the presence of a large gathering of relatives and friends, Miss Mary E. Devine, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Edward M. Devine, of Somerset street, was made the wife of Walter Gorman, of this city, last evening, the ceremony taking place at the home of the bride's parents. It was performed by Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. church, the young people standing beneath a floral decorative effect in the parlor.

Miss Virgina Devine, a sister of the bride, acted as bridesmaid, and Henry Keen, of Somerset street, was best man. Maud Edell and Bessie Taynor, two little cousins of the bride, acted as flower girls. The wedding march was rendered by Mrs. Kelley, a cousin of the bride, and the latter was given away by her father.

Miss Devine was prettily gowned in cream colored voile trimmed with lace. She carried a large bouquet of bride roses. Her attendant was attired in blue voile and carried carnations. The little flower girls were gowned in white and carried baskets filled with carnations. Following the ceremony, a reception took place during which Mr. and Mrs. Devine were showered with congratulations. They will make their home on East Front street.

Both young people were remembered with a large array of presents, and in the bridal party there was an exchange of gifts which included a stickpin to the best man and bracelets from the bride to the bridesmaid and the flower girls. The color scheme used in decorating the home was pink and green, making a decidedly striking effect.

The guests included friends from this city, Newark, New Brunswick, Bangor, Pa., and other places.

Miss Kahrman and John Hall recently joined the choir at St. Stephen's church.

LOCAL ORGANIZED AID WARNS AGAINST BEGGAR

DECLARES CHARITY EXTENDED DOES NOT MEAN PERMANENT RELIEF.

Families in Plainfield, as well as the Organized Aid Association, have been much annoyed recently by a colored man with defective eyesight who has been making a practice of begging from door to door by means of a card. Through its attention being called to the case, the association has investigated the same and finds that the verdict of the occulist is that he is probably permanently disabled and that any charity bestowed upon him is unwisely given as it will not lead to permanent relief.

The association has decided that he is a case for city support and Overseer of the Poor Ayers has arranged to give him a place in the Industrial Home. It is the desire of the association that any one to whom he makes an appeal will send word to police headquarters that the man may be arrested for begging.

FLOCK ASKS PASTOR TO REMAIN IN CHARGE

DUNELLEN METHODISTS MAY NOT GET REV. MR. SCHULTZ.

Resolutions have been adopted by the official board of the Dashiell Memorial Methodist Episcopal church, requesting that Rev. J. H. E. Schultz, who has received a call to the Dunellen M. E. church, be continued in the pastorate for another year, beginning next April, and expressing appreciation of his leadership and faithful work. The resolutions were presented by James E. Jamieson, signed by the entire officiary of the church, at the fourth quarterly conference held Sunday evening.

Mr. Schultz replied that his answer to this invitation to return must be similar to that given the committee of the Dunellen church, which recently extended to him a unanimous call. The appointing power is with the bishop and cabinet, and he will return to the Dashiell charge if they so determine, but his willingness to do so, he said, was conditioned upon the faithfulness of the membership in standing by the enterprises of the church during the interval between now and conference. While he felt that many were doing their duty, he knew that others were not. The delinquents, he declared, must at least show their willingness to make good their pledges on the debt fund of the church, and others must be more faithful to their church duties. He did not reconsider his promise to the Dunellen committee, which was an expression of willingness to become pastor of that charge should the appointing powers deem it best.

MISS ALICE L. BARKER NOW MRS. Z. P. SECOR

FORMER PLAINFIELD YOUNG WOMAN MARRIES IN BROOKLYN.

Miss Alice Leola Barker, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horsley Barker, formerly of Grove street, but now of Brooklyn, and Zeno Percival Secor, son of Rienzi A. Secor, also of Brooklyn, were married yesterday afternoon in Grace Church Chantry, Brooklyn, by the Rev. Arthur B. Kenselving. The wedding was a very quiet one owing to the recent death of the groom's sister, and only the immediate members of the two families were present. The bride was attended by Miss Eugenie Hanigan, of Deer street, the borough, as maid of honor.

The bride, the daughter of Horsley Barker, who is well-known here, having been in business on West Front street for several years, is popular among her many friends both here and in Brooklyn. The groom is a grandson of Zeno Secor, who was prominent in shipbuilding and who built the majority of the iron clads for the Government during the Civil War.

The young couple started South immediately after the ceremony, where they will spend their honeymoon. They will reside in Brooklyn upon their return.

LIQUOR LICENSES ON FEB. 6

Will Fee Effect Number of Applicants to be Considered?

AS TO JOHN GOFF.

Municipal Collection and Disposal of Garbage Among Important Matters to be Dealt With.

The February meeting of the Common Council to be held on Monday night, February 6, promises to be one of much interest, as several important matters are likely to come up. It is generally at this meeting that the various applicants for liquor licenses put in their applications, and it will be interesting to know whether the new license fee of $1,000 for retailers will have any effect on the number applying. The licenses expire on March 1 and, of course renewals are made at that time.

It seems to be generally believed that John Goff will make application for his hotel on West Front street and that there will be considerable opposition to it. Mr. Goff will undoubtedly take his chances in getting a license, although the present makeup of the Common Council is uncertain in this and other matters. No one doubts that the increased fee will have a tendency to reduce the number of regularly licensed places, but the policy of the Common Council not to increase the number of drinking places is quite likely to be maintained. It is said that the present dealers will not object to the large fee provided no additional places receive a license to cause a greater division of profits. Under the present ordinance old applicants are not required to secure signers to their applications, as some years ago, but all new applicants are obliged to get the usual number of freeholders as signers.

In accordance with the recommendation of Mayor Buckle, the Common Council may consider the question of municipal garbage collection and disposal. It is known to be the wish of a majority of the members that this matter be taken up early this year. The city now owns a disposal plant which needs some repairs to be put in working order, and the question of securing horses and suitable wagons will probably be taken up soon with a view to getting the proposed system in operation by the arrival of spring weather.

That there will be opposition to the operation of the garbage plant from West End residents goes without saying, but it is not likely to have much weight. It would be difficult to move the plant elsewhere and inasmuch as the plant is now owned by the city it could not be expected to let it remain idle and use some other method of disposal. The cremation method seems to have the approval of the Common Council and the Board of Health and it is practically a sure thing for Plainfield.

The month of February will be occupied in making up the several amounts to be asked for the several departments in making up the annual budget so that it can be fixed by the March meeting and advertised by ordinance according to the usual custom.

A TINY SOLOIST.

Seven-Year-Old Tot Sings at Faith Chapel Entertainment Last Night.

Under the auspices of the King's Daughters' Circle of Faith chapel, an entertainment was given last night. Considering the weather the attendance was large. The programme opened with a piano solo by Miss Lottie Conger, followed with violin and piano selections by Kenneth Stuart and Charles Suhr. A feature was the singing of Dorothy Hetfield, aged seven years. Each number was well received and Miss Conger was especially favored with encores. Other features were the recitations given by Miss Mackey and Rev. J. W. Musson, pastor of the chapel. After the entertainment there was a social hour and refreshments were served.

Called to a Washington Church.

Rev. T. R. Davis, of West Fifth street, who has been supplying the pulpit of the Lamington Presbyterian church for several weeks, has received a call to the pastorate of the Presbyterian Memorial church, Washington. On Sunday, January 8, Mr. Davis preached at that church as a candidate and has just received word that he is the unanimous choice of the congregation.

Notable Women

All Round Capacity of the Feminine Sex

It is now universally recognized that the beginning of education is child study. In this it is only natural that women should be most successful. Notable first as primary instructor, then as writer on education and philosophical topics is Mrs. Ellen Kenyon Warner of Brooklyn. While a teacher Mrs. Warner strove to obtain the best results with the primary children under her care. This set her to studying them carefully. At the same time, in order to approach her subject fully equipped, she studied also philosophy, logic and psychology.

Applying the philosophical method to child study and child training, Mrs. Warner found much that instructors seemed not to know. In order to tell what she had learned she began to write articles for educational magazines and to give talks to teachers. The studies continued; the educational papers increased in importance; the talks widened out till they became lectures, which teachers throughout the country wanted to hear.

At present Mrs. Warner gives all her time to writing and lecturing. It is one of her ideas that the whole all around education of a child should begin at the very beginning of understanding and all its faculties be developed at once. For instance, she would have an infant's ethical training commence when it learns its letters. She found no school readers that met this plan of gradual mental and moral development, so she herself prepared a set for use either in school or at home. Each book was to take some one moral theme and ring changes on it in its many ramifications till the child faculty answering to that theme should be awakened and developed.

A Woman Soldier.

In one of the rough riding Cossack regiments of the Russian army in Manchuria is a soldier enrolled as Michael Nicholaievitch. The soldier was born and bred on the Manchurian border, so knows that language as well as Russian. Special scouting service this soldier is detailed for and is noted as one of the most daring of all in the Cossack regiment. This soldier is in reality a woman, whose true name is Helen Smolko. She wears the regular Cossack uniform and is an unerring shot. She could shoot and ride when she was only eight years old. Nothing daunts Helen Smolko, even in the cold and rough Manchurian land. Frequently in her scouting expeditions she rides fifty to sixty miles at a stretch.

A few officers know the secret of Helen Smolko's sex, but they do not reveal it to the regiment or army. Michael Nicholaievitch's services as a scout are too important to be dispensed with.

Mrs. Carpenter's Prophesy.

In a merry mood Mrs. Philip Carpenter, president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs, dropped into prophecy at the recent Pilgrim Mothers' dinner in New York city. She began her speech thus:

"I shall look ahead a hundred years. Well, this is what I see—not men taking care of babies or wearing aprons, keeping house or anything of the kind—I see sweet women, mothers, being mothers—charming women housekeepers—keeping clean, rosy and happy homes like the Pilgrim Mothers. I see women voting—yes, because they are taxed and because men want a strong vote on the clean and honest side of things.

"Once upon a time in the year 2004, at high noon, there reassembled at the balcony room of the eighty-fourth floor of the Tower building in upper Broadway a procession of beautiful airships. As they moored alongside the balcony there stepped from them many women—graceful, charming and intelligent.

"'Dear me,' said one, 'I had such a time this morning. When I pushed the button to turn on the concentrated sun heat to start the breakfast cooking in the kitchen it never came on at all. So when I pressed the second button a half hour later the dishes all slid beautifully into their various places on the tables, but not a thing was cooked. Now, wasn't that trying?'"

INCOMPATIBILITY OF TEMPER

How One Diplomatic Wife Gave Her Husband Hints.

"When most people marry they take each other too seriously," remarked the thoughtful woman. "They are duly impressed with the fact that marriage is divine, so much so that they forget its human side. After two people have bumped along the rocky road for awhile and prayed and wept and fumed in private over its tribulations they often finally give up in despair and pronounce marriage a failure.

"Half the time the trouble is with their dispositions. They can't get the right key to each other. Can you blame them when they have only known each other for a few months? And yet the unreasonable part of it is that the man expects the woman to understand him as if she had lived with him all her days, and she retires into her shell with her pride crushed to earth if he fails to mind-read her every thought. When he asks, 'What is the matter?' her answer is, 'Nothing,' which helps along his mental denseness a good deal. She simply won't tell him."

One Woman's Plan.

A young married woman I know had a rather difficult disposition, but she—think heaven!—a sense of justice and of humor. She was perfectly willing to let her husband see as many of the cards in her hand as it was necessary in order that he might put up a good game. After awhile she lived in hopes that he might be clever enough and play a straight, winning game without a peep at her cards, but meantime she was helping him to learn.

"SHE WOULD LEAVE A LETTER HANGING FROM THE GAS JET."

So when they had a falling out on a frosty evening or morning she would leave a letter hanging from the gas jet, and on his return from business he would find it there. The letter stated in terms succinct and often humorous just what had started her side of the quarrel. Then after he had digested the contents and made mental notes thereon she would float in, serene and beaming, and he would profit by the knowledge gained in this diplomatic way.

LOBSTER PARTIES ARE TOO CRUEL FOR IOWA.

Secretary of Humane Society Would Not Stand for Boiling Them Alive.

Webster City, Ia.—"Lobster parties," recently the social fad in Iowa, are languishing, and just because some one was indiscreet enough to invite Mrs. Elizabeth Jones, secretary of the Iowa Humane society, to join in the joys of the entertainment. The "lobster party," as an Iowa product, contained some features that may be regarded as unique. Each guest brought along his or her lobster and then the party made merry around the fire while the green sea creatures turned pink in boiling water until ready to be served. The sole duty of the hostess was to provide the fire, the kettle or boiler and the dressing. The guests did the rest.

This horrified the humane secretary.

"The very idea," she said, "of boiling

"THE VERY IDEA," SHE SAID.

a lobster alive and watching its sufferings, too. Who ever heard of such cruelty in Iowa? They may do that sort of thing in New York, but never in Iowa as long as I am alive."

There was a tone in Mrs. Jones' voice that caused the participants in the party to think. Lobsters cost from 50 cents to $1 each in Iowa, and with a justice's court attached it made the entertainment rank with bridge whist for expense—and that ended it.

The news traveled swiftly, and many prospective parties were called off at once. Now the dealers are wondering what they will do with the many lobsters they ordered while the fad promised to make business boom.

BRAVE BLUECOATS AFRAID OF PRESENT.

Member of Chicago Force Gets Unappreciated Gift from an Admirer.

Chicago.—A mysterious package was received by Operator McDermott, of the Maxwell street police station, last week and spread terror by reason of a peculiar scratching sound which could be heard in the bundle. Mr. McDermott thought of clockwork bombs and infernal machines; but, calling the officers around him, he gingerly untied the string.

A wooden box was revealed with a slide top. The slide was pulled back and Mr. McDermott and the officers jumped back, as a vicious, snapping head emerged from the box, followed by a sinuous, scaly body.

The bellicose little stranger proved to be a young alligator which, it is said, was sent to Mr. McDermott by Miss Sadie Vivian Duffy, a Chicago school teacher, who spends her winters in Florida. Every year she sends Mr. McDermott some strange animal and the young alligator is the latest addition to the collection, which includes a monkey, a parrot, a beaver and a one-legged ostrich.

The visitor from the south keeps the station in a state of commotion and has extracted a good deal of lonesome morsels from the hands of the policemen.

Mr. McDermott declares he will present his little saurian to some of his friends when they are not looking.

BEGGAR PLAGUE IN A MISSOURI TOWN.

Joplin Has So Many Back Door Callers That a Convention of Mendicants Is Suspected.

Joplin, Mo.—Joplin is overflowing with beggars. They are as thick as if coming to hold a convention, and they have canvassed the city from Easy Joplin to Fairview cemetery and from Turkey Creek to the Newton county line.

Beggars are conceded to be pretty crafty, but those who infest Joplin have excelled all records with their stories of misfortune. It is natural to suppose that when so many of the back door fraternity reach a city no larger than Joplin they would divide it into districts so that two would cover the same ground, but they have not done this, and as a result the busy housewives have had to spend a large portion of their time responding to raps upon the back door.

"It is actually the number of horses that die just as they reach Joplin," said a woman. "Within three days three different children have been to my kitchen.

Woman Up To Date

The Resourceful Girl and the Loud Voiced Lady. A Spinster's Experiences With Man's Conceit

Who is the wisest and best of her sex?

The resourceful girl.

There are plenty of women who can accomplish results if they are given a lot of the finest material to work with; there are fewer who can do wonders with scant material, but the smallest number of all comprises those who can make almost any kind of success with what they have at hand.

Take the apparently small matter of "making a home." It's easy enough if you have a man back of you to pay the rent and sign checks, but when you are alone and can only afford one room, which must be your studio and workroom, your reception room and bedroom, your kitchen and dining room as well—what then?

The Way Out of Difficulties.

The ordinary girl would give up any idea of home and live in a hall bedroom in a boarding house where she could not receive her friends, but the resourceful girl manages both to live and to receive her friends in her little combination studio. What if the guest of honor is seated on the potato barrel artistically draped as a piano stool? He does not know or care. And if the highly ornate screen conceals a few pots and pans and a gas stove no one will be so rude as to pry. The box divan with its wealth of pillows is both wardrobe and bed, but who knows that? The artistic portiere does not conceal the entrance to another room, but merely the closet which the resourceful girl has converted into an ideal dressing room. And thus she lives at one-half the cost and in twice the comfort of the unresourceful maiden.

The Loud Voiced Creature.

I am wondering what process of regeneration the loud voiced woman will undergo in the next world, for surely the saints won't tolerate her in the midst of the eternal peace.

Whether you do or you don't wish it, you are simply forced to listen to her talk. Often more than not it is about the most trivial domestic matters; sometimes, also, it is about subjects which are of the utmost intimacy; hardly ever is it intellectual or even interesting. The street cars appear to be the ideal spots for such conversation, and all the passengers are the audience.

Sometimes, however, the fair speaker is not in ignorance of the carrying power of her voice, and you know it right away by the character of the conversation, such as:

"Ye-es, I really think they cook potatoes better at Delmonico's. I was there to lunch yesterday, and"—

"I saw a headdress like that at Mrs. Greatriches' ball. Such nice people, the Greatriches!"

And her hearers are duly impressed!

Masculine Conceit.

"I wonder if there are any limitations to masculine conceit," observed the sarcastic spinster. "I passed a man hobbling along on the ice, supporting himself in a painful manner with a crutch. Suddenly he made a misstep, and without thinking I stretched out my hand in pity, fearing he was going to fall. Just imagine how I felt when he recovered his balance and jauntily touched his hat, with a killing expression. But this is not the limit. The other evening in the car a very fat and sporty looking old gentleman, with one eye quite closed and a stout bandage over it, cheerfully ogled me out of his remaining orb all the way uptown!"

SHAFT FOR BRIDGER.

MARKS THE RESTING PLACE OF NOTED SCOUT'S BONES.

Placed by General Dodge in Mount Washington Cemetery, Kansas City—Famous as a Frontiersman and Pathfinder.

Kansas City.—The bones of Jim Bridger, pioneer of Westport, famous scout, discoverer of the Great Salt lake, were brought to Kansas City for burial. The first grave was in a tangle of brambles and weeds on the farm of Siobhn Watts, one mile north of the little town of Dallas, in this county. A broken headstone marked the resting place of probably the most picturesque character in western history. From 1824 until late in the '60's he was the west's greatest mountaineer, frontiersman, trader, guide and fighter. He was the chief of five of the most powerful Indian tribes, the founder of Fort Bridger, the discoverer of the South Pass, and he selected the route for the first railway through the Rocky mountains.

Bridger's bones were given a final resting place in Mount Washington cemetery. A granite monument seven feet high and three and a half feet thick has been placed over them.

A life-size bust of the frontiersman and an inscription telling of his greatest deeds is sculptured upon the shaft. Mrs. Mary Leighlite, Bridger's granddaughter, unveiled the monument.

Col. John B. Colton, of this city, a life-long friend of Bridger, was in charge of the removal of his bones, and superintended the placing of the monument.

The expense was borne by Gen. Grenville M. Dodge. He was the engineer who selected the route for the Union Pacific railway across the plains. When his surveyors reached the Rocky mountains they could go no further. The obstacles presented by "the backbone of the country" were apparently not surmountable. Dodge consulted mountaineers, but they could offer no suggestion that would lead to a solution of the engineering problem. Then he sent for Bridger. Without a moment's hesitation "the original pathfinder" told of the pass through which the railway was afterwards built. Because of the assistance then rendered by Bridger, Gen. Dodge decided to honor his memory. The first task was to find the grave of Bridger. He consulted Mr. Colton, who was one of the "Jayhawkers of '49," a band of 36 gold hunters who crossed Death valley in California and escaped death by a miracle. After much search Mr. Colton found a broken headstone bearing this inscription:

JAMES BRIDGER.
Born March 17, 1804,
Died July 17, 1881.
We miss thee in the circle around the fireside;
We smile thee in devotion at quiet eventide.
The scenery of thy nature, so full of truth and love,
Shall lead our thoughts to seek thee among the best above.

Beneath the stone the bones of Bridger were moldering. The inscription did not please Mr. Colton. "The idea of putting that sort of a verse over old Jim Bridger," he said. Mr. Colton wrote to Gen. Dodge and together they agreed upon a new burial plan. The Mount Washington cemetery officials told Mr. Colton that he might select the spot for the grave and that the cemetery association would maintain it forever. Gen. Dodge then ordered the shaft which now marks the grave.

National Longevity.

Of European nations the Norwegian and Swedish are the longest lived, the Spaniards the shortest. According to a foreign statistical return recently issued the average duration of life is as follows: Sweden and Norway, 50 years; England, 45 years and 3 months; Belgium, 44 years and 11 months; Switzerland, 44 years and 4 months; France, 43 years and 6 months; Austria, 39 years and 8 months; Prussia and Italy, 38 years; Bavaria, 36 years, and Spain, 32 years and 4 months.

The Bookmaker Won.

A Londoner lent a street bookmaker his watch so that the bookmaker might be sure that he did not take bets on a race that had already been won. The bookmaker kept the watch and the lender sued for it. The court decided that as it had been lent for an unlawful purpose it could not be recovered at law.

Americans Lead.

All the five planetary satellites discovered since 1846 have been found by Americans. They include Hyperion, the seventh satellite of Saturn; Dismos and Phoebus, the little moons of Mars, and Phoebe, the ninth moon of Saturn.

BODILY GRACE.

Any Woman May Become Lithe and Easy of Movement.

In America we have not yet learned to give proper attention to our bodily movements. We are apt to think that if we are comely in the face nothing more is needed. There is no greater mistake. The woman who carries herself in a graceful, noble, queenly way will attract admiring notice wherever she passes, while nobody will look at a merely pretty girl who slouches awkwardly along beside her.

In France the streets and parks abound in groups of rare and classically graceful groups of statuary. The people, even the poorest working women, have these exquisite models of grace and poise before their eyes always. In course of time they unconsciously imitate the grace of the marbles. Moreover, the tiny French maiden is trained from the time she begins to walk to move her feet and hands gracefully.

Abolishing Round Shoulders.

A common disfigurement is round shoulders, with the accompanying hollow chest. A woman simply lets the muscles of her chest slide down in front upon her stomach, making no persistent effort to sit and stand braced up as a lady should. The results are three—round shoulders, a hollow chest and a large stomach. The tendency to unsightly and ruinous slumping must be taken heroically in hand. To begin, let the round shouldered girl sleep without pillows. If she has acquired the very bad habit of sleeping half in a sitting posture, let her take the props away, one at a time, gradually lowering the head till she can lie upon the bed comfortably with her whole body stretched flat, or, if she must have a pillow, let it be a hair one, thin and flat. Feather pillows are heating and bad to bury the face and hair in.

An admirable exercise for filling out the chest and flattening the back is this: Stand erect, weight poised upon the front of the foot. Extend your arms in front of you, as in the picture, palms together. Next, rise upon your toes, take a deep, slow, full breath. Exhale this breath slowly, and as you do so bring your arms up over the head and down behind your back. The dotted circles will show how this is done. Let your heels descend till they again bear your weight. Repeat this a number of times, always with the deep breathing and rising upon the toes. It will lift the body and limber marvelously the stiff, ungainly muscles of the shoulders and back of the neck.

Calisthenic Dancing.

Education in dancing is greatly neglected in America. There ought to be in girls' schools a set of dancing exercises planned carefully with the view to cultivating lightness and limberness. Skirt dances, high kicking, bending the body from the waist, can be easily performed to the accompaniment of music, which lightens the spirits and makes amusement out of work. Even ordinary dancing lessons may be depended on to make girls graceful of step and movement.

The most graceful and beautiful women the world has ever seen were those of ancient Greece. Every woman there was trained in childhood to take part in athletic games suited to her sex, also to dance in rhythmic motion. Clumsy and ungainly movement on the part of a woman partook of the nature of sin.

A woman can make no greater mistake either than to conclude she is too old to dance or to learn gymnastic exercises. The stiffer a woman's joints and muscles are the more need she has of limbering exercises. Let her get a move on.

Proper Sitting Posture.

When some people sit down in a chair they plunk into it as though they were a side of dressed beef, with not a bit more life or lightness about them than that. The right way is to let yourself down easily, lightly and gradually into the seat. Don't lean upon your arms when you sit down or rise. Do not sit upon your backbone either. Sit squarely upon the great muscles at the back of the hips, with the thigh bones at right angles to the spine. This is the only graceful and hygienic way to sit. Maintain this attitude, with the chest up and spine straight, and you will present always a graceful picture. Lolling upon the backbone makes the back ache and causes spinal trouble.

MARY ELIZABETH HART.

Hard Work!

Not long since a rich society woman "went into business," as was heralded from one end of this happy land to the other. She appeared at her business place half an hour before noon and remained there till 5 o'clock, with half an hour counted out for luncheon. Two weeks of this strenuous life so wore her out that she was obliged to lie by for a period of rest and recuperation. Dear, dear!

Feminine Snapshots

What Women Are Saying and Doing

Queer creatures are women—at least some women! Not long ago one of the richest women in the world, of course an American—one, too, who has made her immense fortune herself by her own shrewdness and strict attention to business for over thirty years—shot off a set of opinions on the subject of the feminine sex engaging in commercial enterprises. "A woman's place is at home with her family. She has no business to go into business. Every woman without exception ought to learn to cook," said this astonishing feminine person, whose practice for a quarter of a century had been the direct opposite of such preaching. It looks—it really does—as if this woman, who has accumulated her own millions, were jealous of a possible woman rival in the business world, so is trying to keep the rest of her sex out of the field in which she has beaten all but a few even of her men competitors. Then there is another woman, a stunning figure on the professional stage. Madam has also accumulated a noble fortune, lives in splendor and rides in her own automobile. Besides that, she has also enjoyed the inestimable privilege of supporting a husband in luxury for twenty years. She, too, bejeweled and surrounded with everything that money can buy—won, mind you, every dollar, by her own exertion—lifts up her voice in a dismal howl against women who enter the money earning ranks. She herself has earned more money than one man out of a million is able to do, yet she wrings her hands and fairly sobs over the shame, the misery and the pity of woman's going out to work for money. They are incompetent creatures, to begin, going out to work for money, says she, and if they only wouldn't do it men would support them all. If this successful woman knew or cared anything at all about real industrial conditions she would know that if men could not support them any longer that women entered the money earning field. It looks as if the stage lady also were trying to keep possible sister rivals out of her field.

Every woman ought to have a gymnasium suit to wear at home when performing work requiring special strength and activity. It would do away with half the weariness resulting from doing heavy work in woman's ordinary dress. The sense of lightness and ease felt in wearing such a costume no woman knows until she has tried it.

* *

If you have some worthy object of attainment in view never yield to discouragement concerning the outcome, no matter how long you have to work and wait for results. Every good thing comes by and by.

* *

"I would not for any consideration hurt anybody's feelings," says Mrs. Fanny Hallock Carpenter, president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs.

* *

Don't do things you are ashamed of; then you can never be caught at it.

* *

Perfect health of the body consists in being unconscious of it.

* *

Here is a pertinent remark from the Chicago Legal News: "It seems strange that women can be lawyers, doctors and ministers and yet, according to the laws of many states, do not know enough to vote."

* *

At last that noble Roman of a woman, Molly Pitcher, who shouldered her slain husband's musket and fought at the battle of Monmouth, is to have a monument. The heroine of the Revolution is buried at Carlisle, Pa., and while her grave is well known, it has hitherto been unmarked in any way. Now, however, fitting monument to the brave old girl—a large cannon is to be set up by the citizens of Carlisle at the head of her grave. The United States war department donates the cannon.

* *

Every woman who can work ought to do so. The obligation is on her as a human being to do something useful.

* *

A girl lately wrote a long letter to an editor complaining that she was not happy. Who is?

* *

Living, loving, learning—that is how to go through life, helping as we go others all along the way.

* *

Is it not about time for women to blow up for good and all that old hypocritical pretense of so many that they don't have to work for a living, but just do it so as to have something wherewith to put in the time? Where this is the case people don't say anything about it. When I hear a woman say she only works for entertainment I always think of the lady who once told me she kept boarders "for company." At the same time it was notable that she charged the highest market price for the unexpected food and accommodations. The thing for women to be ashamed of is that they do not do any work. Useful occupation is noble and praiseworthy. Every individual owes it to the race to engage in it.

NEW YORK SHOWS

MENELIK'S ANIMALS ENTERTAIN GOTHAMITES.

BLACK-EYE ARTIST IS GONE

Crime's Haunts Disappear Before City's Growth—The Countesses of Pittsburg—Huntington and "Hispanic Society."

NEW YORK.—By the time this letter is read I suppose that King Menelik's gift of animals to President Roosevelt may have been moved from this city to Washington.

Menelik is more correctly the negus of Abyssinia, and he is the head of the oldest continuously Christian nation in the world—though the Coptic faith of his fathers is rather a corruption of the doctrines that prevail farther west. Anyhow, he's a good judge of beasts. Menelik's zebra, which is to go with the other animals to the Washington zoological park, is called the biggest in the world. As the zebra is now almost extinct in Africa, where so little time ago it roamed by the thousands, the experiment is to be tried of crossing the animal with sturdy mares. The hybrid thus obtained promises to be valuable in subtropical climates where the horse is subject to disease. The half-zebra should be useful in the Tsetse fly districts of Africa.

The exhibition of Menelik's animals has coincided with the opening of the East side portion of the subway, which runs up pretty nearly to the Bronx park, where the pets have been boarding for the time. Not in all the world elsewhere is there such a fine animal boarding house. Something like a square mile of land is divided into spacious runs where even such wide ranging beasts as deer and elephants and bison are seen in something like natural conditions. The Abyssinian lion, the two ostriches, the two baboons of startling likeness to human beings, have attracted throngs. Ordinarily there are a few hundred people in the park of a week day, a few thousands on Sunday after church. Menelik's gift has recalled the throngs that for a few weeks after its arrival came to see little Miss Carnegie's gift, which is as nearly as possible her ideal of "the hairiest lion in the world."

New York children are well provided with free animal shows. Besides the wonderful collections in Bronx park the old Central park menagerie is maintained in fair size and condition; and in Prospect park, Brooklyn, a fine independent collection has grown up within ten years.

An Artist Mourned.

NEW YORK has lost an artist whom it deeply mourns; an artist whom in life it valued and rewarded, though it said little about him. He was Tom Keane, decolorator of "black" eyes. Tom was a wonder. He could take cases where a fist had violently collided with the muscles surrounding an eye, and so disguise it that only the most critical inspection would reveal the trouble. He had no fixed prices. The veiled lady who came to him in a carriage to conceal the effects of a husband's "carelessness," or maybe that of another lady, was allowed to pay a round price; the "professional gent" got off reasonably, all things considered.

Keane dropped into the business through being assistant to the first black eye specialist New York ever had. There are now three who do more or less at it, but Keane had the "call" and maintained an entire floor on Sixth avenue; his sign, covering the front of his rooms, was an object of curious interest to people who passed it by the thousand every day on the elevated trains. Suppose you were going uptown with a visitor from the country. You pointed out the Black Cat restaurant, Washington square, once the Potter's field, now the beginning of New York's most exclusive resident section and street; the Jefferson Market police court, the big dry goods stores the tree out of which Broker Hatch fell to his death when trying to escape a badger game, Tom Keane's sign—and so on.

Keane's establishment was a reminder of the fact that the Bowery is in these days peaceable enough beside the glittering Tenderloin, where the space of a mile to north and south and half that distance west from the center there is enough pure cussedness to keep the police busy 24 hours every day.

The Clearance of Trade.

CONSIDER the closing of the old "Tub of Blood." For years the dingy building had stood on the corner of Seventh avenue and Thirty-second street, in the midst of a tumble-down region hopelessly out of the range of real estate growth—it was supposed until the Pennsylvania station project was sprung upon the town and most of the land needed had been quietly bought up.

Many a bloody affray had happened in the old house, to give it an evil repute second only to that of the block of tenements known as "Hell's Kitchen." It might be thought that such things happened only in books; but the last day the hotel remained open, before the lease expired and the wreckers took down its worm-eaten beams, whispering their dark secrets, it was the scene of a murder—"just one more," you might imagine the spirit of the place, saying—when Henry Coakley, a gambler desperado, was killed by another of the same grim stripe in that sort of contest where the slowest to shoot is the quickest to die.

How do all the crooks live? You can see them any fine day as you go up Broadway, sunning themselves in front of the less reputable saloons between Thirtieth and Forty-second street. Curiously, these are the limits of most of the theaters, of a dozen fashionable florists, of high-class confectioners and other establishments that cater to women. The men behave on the whole rather better than less abandoned characters. They like to live in New York when not busy, and quickly return to the city after "jobs" 500 or 1,000 miles away. There is not enough robbery going on in this city to support them all. The police know them; Byrne's famous "dead line" still keeps them out of Wall street and the wholesale jewelry district on Maiden lane. But they have the Broadway habit. The "lecturer" of the "Seeing New York" coaches will sometimes indicate a group of them so that visitors may look upon them and wonder.

Somehow, the situation reminds me of Tangier, which I once visited, which is inhabited by 6,000 desperate criminals, the offscourings of all lands, in a population of perhaps 50,000; yet which is an orderly city, for the criminals have nowhere else to go if they offend against the Tangier code. So there is only one New York.

Countesses of Pittsburg.

IN THE spring, when the young nobleman's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of heiresses, another Pittsburg girl will become a countess. She is Miss Elizabeth Howe, as well known in New York as in her own town. What interests the city is that her case affords the first accurate "line" since that of Miss Alice Thaw, who became countess of Yarmouth, upon the cost of a titled husband.

In the case of Miss Thaw the bride's mother took the unusual step of telling the Associated Press the facts of the nuptial arrangement. From her statement I figured that the young man was to receive a fund which he could not touch, and whose income was about that of a fairly successful lawyer, say $5,000 a year. No one supposes that this limits the cost of being a countess. The countess of Yarmouth received upon coming of age almost exactly an even million dollars, in addition to her share of the Hecla Coke trust, which is to be kept intact for years. Really she turned over only about one-tenth of her income for the personal use of her actor-husband.

By a curious coincidence the Howe marriage will furnish information almost as definite. The noble Count di Cini, (pronounce it "de Cheenee") demanded $15,000 per year for himself, and the payment of his debts to the amount of $70,000. The Howe side refused. Di Cini flung away in a passion, but concluded to return and compromise upon $50,000 cash and a life annuity of $10,000, which at his age means a present purchase price of nearly $200,000. Such quarrels are not always so easily settled. A noble prince of France affianced to wed Miss Glendolen Caldwell, who has since become Marquise Moustiers and has fluttered the Catholic world by abjuring that faith, broke off the match because of his exorbitant demands were not met. "Do they think they can get a prince for the price of a German Graf?" this precious nobleman once remarked to his associates in a billiard room.

Huntington the "Hispanic."

WHAT is a "Hispanic society?" By waiting a little we may all find out; and I make the guess that it has to do with the cult of Spanish literature.

At any rate, Archer Huntington, adopted son of the late Collis P. Huntington, has now completed a gift of a million dollars for the beautiful building which the society is to have. The old railroad president had no children of his own. His adopted daughter became Princess Hatsfeldt after the humble-fashion in which even the most haughty American can gain the name of princess. The elder son, Henry, has financial ability, and is concerned in the management of the Huntington properties. But Archer cares for nothing quite so much as for books and study. In his early days in California he laid the foundations of a knowledge of Spanish which is rarely matched by Americans.

Associated with Mr. Huntington in the society are Charles H. Tweed, Francis Lathrop, Isaac E. Gates and the Hillhouse brothers as charter members. The building is to be a beautiful Ionic temple near Riverside drive, with spacious grounds which represent the greater part of the expense. Not one of the founders has, so far as I know, any Spanish blood. OWEN LANGDON

BOX HELD KING'S HEART.

Very Interesting Old Relic in the Cathedral Church at Rouen, France.

Paris.—In the splendid cathedral church of Rouen is a suite of three or four rooms containing what is known as the "tresor." This is a collection of very valuable and interesting relics, forming quite a little museum, to which admission may be obtained for the modest fee of 25 centimes. To an Anglo-Saxon quite the most interesting article in the collection is the plain leaden casket in which was buried the heart of the famous King Richard Coeur de Lion, who, it will be remembered, was slain by a bolt from the crossbow of Bertrand De Gourdon at the siege of the castle of Chalus. His body was buried at the feet of his father in the abbey of Frontrevault, near Tours, but his heart, incased in two leaden caskets, was placed in the Cathedral of Rouen, "the faithful city." The exact place of the burial seems to have been forgotten in the passage of centuries, but it was rediscovered in 1849, placed in a new coffer and reburied in the choir.

HISTORIC LEADEN CASKET.
(It Held the Heart of the Famous Richard Coeur de Leon.)

The inner case is in comparatively good condition, the inscription being perfectly legible after the lapse of all these centuries. The Latin is somewhat peculiar, and it is curious to find that at a period when art-working in metals was at an advanced stage the engraver of the inscription on the coffer which was to contain the heart of such a high and mighty potentate did not take the trouble to ascertain what space he required for the king's name, so that he had to carry over the terminal letter to the next line. It is noteworthy too that Richard is styled "Regis Anglorum"—"King of the English," not "of England"—while no mention at all is made of Normandy or Aquitaine. The box is nearly one foot long, eight inches wide and five inches deep.

CANDIDATE FOR A TOGA.

Congressman John J. Esch May Succeed Quarles as Senator from That State.

La Crosse, Wis.—Of the several men who are being mentioned as possible successors to Senator Quarles, who will retire next March as a result of the stalwart victory in Wisconsin, none are more favorably known throughout the state than Hon. John J. Esch. It is said that Gov. La Follette favors State Chairman Connor for the place, but many of the governor's friends are in favor of Congressman Esch, and he is a likely winner in the senatorial race. He allied himself with the La Follette forces in the closing days of the last campaign, and worked hard for the election of the stalwart ticket. He resides at this place and represents the Seventh Wisconsin district in the lower house, where he is now serving his second term.

Easy Money for Prima Donnas.

Singing for phonographs seems to be as high-paid musical exercise as there is. A phonograph company has offered a prima donna, who sings at the Metropolitan opera house this winter, $14,000 for four songs. That is $6,000 as soon as the songs are sung and $2,000 a year for four years as a reward for not singing into any other machine. Great and many are the means of income of a goddess of grand opera. She could live splendidly on what she can get for using a pill, a perfume, a piano, or a phonograph.

Pensioning Railway Employes.

The Pennsylvania railroad has a system by which aged employes are retired on a pension. This is a liberal method of providing for men of advanced years who have served the company long and faithfully. Three employes have just been retired after faithful service of 42, 45 and 48 years, respectively.

A Checking System.

In Thibet nearly every public office has two incumbents. One is supposed to be a check on the other. But at times this dual authority does not work well—in war, for example.

PRAYERS MISTAKEN FOR POKER TERMS.

Sounds That Resembled "Ante Up" Were Really Supplications for the Dead.

New York.—Detectives of the Eldridge street station will hereafter be asked to differentiate between the shouts of excited poker players and the sounds of prayers, as, according to the testimony in the Essex market court, they mistook the one for the other, thereby causing considerable expostulation in court.

A patrolman while in Chrystie street heard loud noises from No. 126 and told the precinct detectives that he believed "a big gambling game was on." The detectives hurried to the tenement house, and, after listening to the noise, raided the place.

Twelve men were found, all shouting and gesticulating. The sudden entry of the police threw them into confusion, and eight of them escaped. Four were arrested.

The police allege they found evidences of gambling in the shape of a set of dice and 22 cents which were on the mantel.

When arraigned in court Max Frank, in whose house the men were arrested, acted as spokesman.

"Your honor," he said, "my father died six months ago, and the Jewish religion says we must say 'Kaddish' for one year. All my friends and relatives came to my house each night and joined me in the 'Kaddish.'"

"Kaddish? What's that?" said Magistrate Pool.

"Kaddish," explained the prisoner, "means prayers for the dead. We were all bowed down in grief praying for my father when the police arrested us. I don't know why."

Detective Kramer took the center of the bridge at this point and in answer to questions said: "I heard loud shouting and sounds like 'ante up' and 'I win.'"

"Do you understand Hebrew?" asked the court.

He confessed he did not.

"Well, then," the court added, "you don't know whether these men were gambling or not. Men praying might shout 'Ante up' or 'Winnee' or 'Trey' or anything else in Hebrew, and you might interpret it to mean some gambling term. I have to discharge them."

The detective was unable to speak before leaving the court, but spoke freely when he reached his station again.

CHILD ELOPERS WED AFTER A DARING TRIP

The Groom's Brother Coolly Falsifies the Bride's Age to Get Marriage License

Cranesville, Ind.—Driving all night, crossing the Ohio in a skiff and completing their journey to this city by rail, two youthful elopers—Harry Reid, 19, and Victoria Walden, 15, both of Hebbardsville, Ky., were married here. Unwilling to wait until the girl was 18 and despairing of receiving parental consent they decided to elope.

The girl retired early at night and Reid came with a buggy at 11 o'clock after her parents were soundly asleep. They drove swiftly to the home of Reid's brother, Louis H. Reid at Stanley. Reid was told of the elopement and with E. W. Weddington agreed to accompany the couple to this city.

Louis Reid swore the girl was 19 and a license was granted without question. Clerk Webster, of the Ruston hotel, had been interested and the marriage was held in the parlor of the hotel by Justice Schrader. The girl admitted to the justice that she was only 15, but this was after the ceremony. She is pretty and does not look more than the 15 years she confessed.

Heard a Voice from Heaven.

Lexington, Ky.—By order of the chief of police Miss Minnie Johnson was arrested the other day. She stood with the Salvation Army in bare feet despite the frigidity of the weather. No charge has been placed against her.

Chief Reagan expressed the opinion that it was a discredit to the city to permit a woman to stand on the streets in bare feet. When questioned she stated that she had discarded shoes at the command of a voice from Heaven, which told her to imitate Christ by going about preaching barefooted.

Eggs Fresh Eight Months.

Tacoma, Wash.—A process intended to revolutionize the cold storage egg business has been perfected by two men. While the features of the process are kept secret, it is asserted that after eight months' treatment the eggs have been found as fresh as when they were packed away last spring.

HELD BOYS' SOCIAL IN A CHURCH CEMETERY

Western Sunday School Scholars Enjoyed This Ghostly Sort of Amusement.

Aberdeen, Wash.—A cemetery seems a most unpropitious place in which to hold an evening party, yet a cemetery was selected by George Nye as the place in which to hold a social gathering, attended by 13 of his Sunday school pupils, and the boys enjoyed themselves exceedingly.

The originator of the entertainment, George Nye, issued invitations to his cemetery party with the object of testing the courage of the lads.

From those who accepted he selected 13 and took them to the cemetery late in the evening. It was a dark, rainy night, just the kind of weather for ghosts to enjoy promenades, and it is said by some that numberless shadowy, phantom forms could be plainly described gliding over the wet grounds and the moss-covered grave stones. Ghost stories galore were exchanged by the boys, who displayed great courage, notwithstanding the fact that some of the tales were extremely weird. After a lunch was served at the cemetery, Mr. Nye, accompanied by his 13 guests, returned to town.

HID HIS MONEY AND DIED IN SQUALOR.

An Old Hermit Gunsmith Concealed $5,120 in Bills in Crevice in His Little Work Shop.

Kansas City.—The sum of $5,120 has been turned over to the probate court by Charles Roll. The hermit goldsmith of 18 East Missouri avenue had hidden it in a crevice beneath the show case of his store, which he owned when he died.

Theodore Stock was the right name of the old hermit and miser, but he was known here as George C. Miller. Thirty-five years ago, on account of some domestic trouble, he left his wife and four daughters in St. Louis and came to Kansas City. He opened a little store on the corner where the big Nelson building is. Later he moved half a block west, and again moved to 18 East Missouri avenue. He died at the German hospital the other day.

Stock lived in extreme penury. He dressed poorly and ate barely enough to keep him alive. When he died it was supposed that he had saved considerable money. Charles Roll was appointed administrator of his estate and W. H. Corcoran, M. Bridges and William Hintche were appointed to help appraise Stock's property. They found $1,662 on deposit in bank, the stock in the store was worth only a few dollars, but in a very old and dirty purse hidden between the showcase and the table upon which it stood was found $5,120 in bills.

The heirs of Mr. Stock who will inherit his money are Sophia Stock, his widow, of Great Bend, Kan., and four daughters—Mrs. Lena Neins, San Jose, Cal.; Mrs. Louise Moses, Great Bend, Kan.; Mrs. Julia Eastey, San Jose, Cal., and Mrs. Carrie Sears, Sedalia, Mo.

The little shop on Missouri avenue where Stock lived alone was filled with junk of all kinds. When friends found the aged man sick he was lying upon an old cot at the end of the shop and had had nothing to eat or drink for some time. He would not tell how long he had been in that condition.

Played Stud Poker in Short Pants.

Huntington, W. Va.—From a tip given the police by the mother of a boy belonging to a prominent family the police raided an alleged gambling establishment behind Will Damron's saloon and arrested five boys of 14 years and under, all of respectable families. When the police entered the place, they say, they found seven boys in knickerbockers playing "stud" poker dealt by "Finn" Wilson, who has long been suspected by the police of enticing boys to gamble.

Two boys escaped through a window, while the others were taken into custody and later released on bond given by their relatives. Wilson, in default of $500 bond, was committed to jail.

The parents of the boys arrested say they will resort to every means to have him receive the full penalty of the law.

Rich Miner Seeks Sisters.

West Chester, Pa.—Frederick Zahnd, of Colorado, once committed to the county prison as a pauper, has since his departure seven years ago "struck it rich" in the Colorado gold mines. He returned here last week in search of his three sisters who were once unfortunate as he. He hopes to find them before he returns to the west. Zahnd is now owner of a mine which is yielding a large income for himself and family.

AN INJURED HEROINE RIDES WILDLY FOR AID

Western Girl, Suffering Intense Pain, Saves Her Companion's Life by Desperate Gallop.

Whittier, Cal.—With a broken hip and her leg splintered by the kick of a terrified horse, Jessie Grey, a student in the Woodbury business college of Los Angeles, rode two miles over the hills to bring aid to Lester Seimon, her companion, who lay in the road helpless and unconscious from the kick of the runaway horse.

While they were climbing a hill in La Habra valley, east of here, the horse attached to the buggy became frightened and ran away. The horse slipped and the buggy started back down the grade. In his efforts to regain his feet the horse demolished the dashboard and overturned the rig.

Seimon sprang in front of the girl to shield her. One hoof crashed into his chest and another fractured his spinal column. He fell over unconscious, and as the vehicle was overturned the steel shoes of the horse lacerated Miss Grey's face, fractured her leg and broke her hip bone. As she raised herself from the road she beheld her companion lying as if in death. Believing him dead, she struggled to her feet and by a heroic effort limped down the road and called for help. In the distance she saw a sheep herder, but the man was unable to speak English and could not understand her. Finally, in despair, she pulled herself on to the herder's horse and rode down the valley at a furious pace. Two miles away she found men whom she told of the accident and help was hurried to the stricken boy.

WEDS FOUR TIMES; PAYS BIG ALIMONY.

A Millionaire Cattleman of Kansas Has Several Expensive Matrimonial Experiences.

Wichita, Kan.—George Theis, a millionaire cattleman and banker of Ashland, who was married three times to his first wife and divorced as often, was married again here a few days ago to Miss Jennie Michael, also of Ashland. Mr. Theis' matrimonial experiences have been as expensive as they have been numerous, and his first wife now lives as a princess in Kansas City. He was married to her when quite young, and two children were born to them. About five years after his first marriage his wife sued for a divorce, which was granted, together with judgment for $20,000. The money was paid and Mrs. Theis moved to Kansas City.

The children succeeded in bringing them together again, and they were again married about a year after the divorce was granted. Another separation came with a second divorce and a second $20,000. They were again reunited about two years ago with an elaborate ceremony in Kansas. Within six months, however, another separation came, and the third divorce was granted. No alimony was asked, but Mr. Theis voluntarily gave the divorced woman a draft for $20,000.

Mr. Theis became acquainted with a Miss Michael, a young school-teacher in the Ashland schools, and they arranged to marry in Wichita. After the ceremony here the couple left for St. Louis and will take an extensive bridal tour. The tour includes Winnipeg, Victoria and all points of interest on the Pacific coast, Mexico, Cuba and Florida, and return via New Orleans for Mardi Gras next spring.

Woman Fireman Smokes Like Man.

Harrisburg, Pa.—A woman fireman, who stokes boilers in the day and is relieved by her husband at night, and who chews and smokes tobacco, is one of the novelties at the public filtration plant in course of construction on Hargest Island, in the Susquehanna river, opposite Harrisburg.

This woman who does a man's work, is Mrs. Annie Beixel, wife of Arthur Beixel, and between them they keep the engine going that pumps the water from the ditches and furnishes it to the concrete mixers.

Beixel and his wife occupy a small shed on the island, and before starting work in the morning the woman prepares breakfast and does the necessary housework. Her wages are collected by her husband, and both are pooled for mutual benefit.

Plenty of Flowers.

All the hospitals and almshouses in Berlin are regularly supplied with fresh flowers from the public gardens, while twice a week each of the national schools receives from 100 to 150 specimens of four different kinds of plants for use at botany lessons.

A WEDDING KNOT TIED AT 1 A. M.

HAD A HARD TIME FINDING A CITY PREACHER.

An Obliging Hotel Clerk Helped Them Out and Lost the Rent on One Room—Married by Hotel Chaplain.

New York.—Nursed back to health and strength through a long illness by a blue-eyed, brown-haired girl, Frank S. Dewes, 24 years old, of Phoenixville, Pa., proposed to Miss Jessie M. Jarrett, 20 years old, of Jeffersonville, Pa., who was his nurse, and when parental objection was encountered took matters in his own hands and they eloped.

The couple came to New York as fast as steam could carry them. After three hours' of heart-breaking delay they were married by the Rev. Dr. H. M. Warren at one a. m. in the office of Manager R. L. Smith, of the Hotel Bartholdi, Twenty-third street and Broadway.

Supplied with only a small traveling bag, the couple stepped from a train in Jersey City at ten o'clock in the evening. In a secluded nook on the ferry boat the broad-shouldered young man pleaded, encouraged and exhorted his fair companion. Hurrying out of the ferry house, the couple jumped into a cab.

"To the Little Church Around the Corner," said the man.

The parsonage of Dr. Houghton was reached in record time, but when the cab drew up to the curb the prospective bridegroom met with another obstacle. Miss Jarrett's courage oozed away at the crucial moment, and she shrank back into the furthest corner of the vehicle.

"Oh, Frank," she murmured, faintly. "I don't—let's wait. I'm trembling all over."

The man's sterner nature asserted itself.

"Come, darling, come. Don't be a baby, Jessie."

"I'm not a baby," spiritedly retorted his companion.

Reluctant and trembling, she was coaxed to the door, where immediate hopes of matrimony were dashed by Dr. Hougnton, who said that it was 11 o'clock and that he made it a practice never to marry people after nine p. m.

Back to the cab hurried the couple. A few minutes later Clerk Lancaster, of the Hotel Bartholdi, was startled by a young man who rushed up to the desk and stated rather incoherently that he wanted to stop at the hotel with a young lady; that they were not married but that they wanted to be.

When the clerk recovered from his astonishment he gave them separate rooms. With the small traveling bag between them they disappeared in the elevator. In a few moments it came down again and the young couple presented themselves at the night clerk's desk.

There was a moment of silence and then the young man blurted out: "Say, is there any way we can get married right off quick?"

The clerk bethought himself of Dr. Warren, the chaplain of all the hotels of New York. With a word of hope to the girl, who now seemed as anxious for the ceremony as she had previously been reluctant, he jumped into a telephone booth and called up the minister at his home, No. 48 West Ninety-fourth street. The chaplain was not in and a messenger was sent post haste to the masonic lodge, where he was thought to be. He could not be found, but at one o'clock he returned home. He started at once for the Hotel Barholdi.

The bridegroom fairly dragged the chaplain into the office of R. L. Smith, where the knot was tied hard and fast, sealed with a kiss and celebrated with a bottle of wine, the latter at the expense of the manager.

Inquiries by the chaplain prior to the ceremony brought out the facts that she was a trained nurse and that he was the business manager of a prominent firm in Philadelphia. Then Mr. and Mrs. Dewes approached the hotel register.

"Boy," said the clerk, "show this couple to No. 51."

Early the next morning, after breakfast, the couple started off in an automobile cab for the Pennsylvania station on their way back to Philadelphia.

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Jan. 26, 1905.

Notice the price of automobiles has 'riz. Awful glad we got ours before the change came.

Tom Lawson's wail that it cost him $50,000 to write "Frenzied Finance" can hardly be heard for the chuckling of the magazine publishers as the 'steenth thousand copy comes off the presses.

Silas Dewey Drake, of real estate fame, has come forward with the request that the Piscataway township officials erect a $10,000 school at Lincoln. Silas Dewey's modesty is exceeded only by his ability to get his name into print.

The railroading of the Union and Sussex special election bill through both houses seems to verify that "the more haste the less speed." At the present rate conflictions are bobbing up the tangle will not be straightened out this side of July 4.

Correspondent writes us to tell him how to remove wrinkles from his forehead. All depends on how they got there. If they are the result of trying to figure out where we all are at in this special election mix-up there's no hope for him. On the other hand if they came about through worry over rent day the best way out of the difficulty is to meet the landlord half way.

It is to be regretted that such an admirable institution as the Plainfield Y. M. C. A. should have to note a decrease in its membership during 1904 With public spirited and philanthropic citizens at its head it has become one of the best organized in the State and has a building that is equalled by few others. It is open to the men of the city; they are welcome to make use of it and while it seeks to uplift the moral side, it aims to better the physical and at the same time offers clean, wholesome amusement. It is aimed to have the membership reach 500 during the coming year and even that figure is small enough where there are so many young men who desire to better themselves by improving mind and body.

Under the caption "The Modern Cincinnatus," the Cranford Chronicle, Saturday, spoke as follows, editorially:

"Tuesday's despatches from Trenton stated that on advice of the Attorney General special elections would be necessary in Union and Sussex counties to fill vacancies in the Legislature created by the death of two Assemblymen elect. Union County, we hasten to assert, could do itself and the State no greater honor than to give a unanimous election to James E. Martine, of Plainfield. Under the conditions that now prevail, party politics can and ought to be ignored. All branches of the State government are overwhelmingly Republican, and the increase of the numerically feeble minority by one would no more embarrass the party in power than the taking on of an additional passenger would impede the Empire State Express. But what a splendid increment to the intelligence, the disinterested patriotism and the forensic strength of the lower house would be secured by the participation in its proceedings of James E. Martine! When the Romans needed the service of their greatest citizen, they called Cincinnatus from the plow. Can the people of Union County do better, in supplying their need of a statesman at Trenton, than to summon James E. Martine from the farm that borders Cedar Brook?"

All doubts as to whether the recent candidate for Congressional honors would enter the political arena at this time were removed by the following letter sent to Editor Potter by the "Farmer Orator" immediately after noting the kind words:

"Hon. John A. Potter:

"My dear friend: I wish to thank you for the most flattering editorial regarding myself in your paper. I have always taken a deep interest in matters political, and whether my views are in the ascendancy or not I shall continue to advocate them, but I have no thought of becoming again a candidate for political honors.

"Again thanking you, I am

"Respectfully,

"J. E. Martine."

No Freight Car Advertising.

Beginning January 1 the officials of the New Jersey Central put a stop to the growing practice that shippers had of placarding freight cars loaded with merchandise until they looked like circus bill-boards. Agents are now required to remove all such advertising before the cars leave for their destination.

AMUSEMENTS.

Lillian Russell is nearing the end of her limited engagement in "Lady Teazle" at the Casino. The production has been one of the most successful of the season in New York. Matinees Saturdays.

"Fantana," the Oriental musical comedy in which Jefferson De Angelis is appearing, has duplicated its Chicago success in New York. The performance is on view at the Lyric. Matinees Wednesdays and Saturdays.

Edward Terry continues to present "Sweet Lavender" at the Princess. This play was one of the early efforts of A. W. Pinero, and on it, rather than on "Iris" or "The Gay Lord Quex," rests his reputation. Mr. Terry was the original Dick Phenyl in the comedy. Matinees Thursdays and Saturdays.

The most popular show on Broadway is "The Duchess of Dantzic" at Daly's and it is necessary to order seats away in advance. Miss Ethel Barrymore is still one of the theatrical drawing cards in "Sunday," which continues on the boards at the Hudson. At the matinee tomorrow the bill will be "Cousin Kate" and "Carrots." Arnold Daly, supported by a strong cast, is appearing in "You Can Never Tell" at the Garrick. "Cousin Billy" holds popular favor at the Criterion, Francis Wilson keeping the big audiences in continued uproar of laughter. Charles Wyndham and Mary Moore attract crowds at the Lyceum and Maud Adams in "The Little Minister" is scoring a hit at the Empire. E. S. Willard in Wilson Barrett's "Lucky Durham," is at the Knickerbocker and "Woodland," a musical forest fantasy, is holding sway at the Herald Square. At the Savoy is "Mrs. Leffingwell's Boots," which is Augustus Thomas's greatest comedy.

John Kendrick Bangs, the humorist, who collaborated, he says, with Roderic Penfield and Richard Brinsley Sheridan in writing "Lady Teazle" for Lillian Russell, is a man of domestic inclinations, and usually spends his Sundays at home. The other day he was persuaded to promise that he would accompany a friend to a Christian Science meeting on the following Sabbath. Mr. Bangs declares that his intentions were good when he made the promise, but that as the time approached his resolution weakened. It disappeared altogether when the Sunday dawned, rainy, blustering, disagreeable. Mr. Bangs took one look out of doors and then telephoned to his friend that the engagement was off.

"But you promised," returned that individual, with the persistence which characterizes friends and his Satanic Majesty. "What's the matter?"

"Well," returned the humorist, "I don't know what kind of weather you've got in Christian Science circles, but we're having a damned wet error up here!"

A new attraction now presented at the Liberty Theatre is Tom W. Ryley's production of George Bollit's comedy, "The Money Makers," which made a big hit in London last spring. The principal roles are played by Ida Conquest, Lillian Thurgate, Daisy Athrton, Emily Rigl, Cyril Scott, Brandon Hunt, Eugene O'Rourke and Edmund Lyons. The piece is staged in three acts and two scenes and is sumptuously mounted. The story is a most humorous one. Two girls, played by Ida Conquest and Daisy Athrton, are engaged to poor young men and are anxious to marry. They plan a "get-rich-quick" scheme and open a tipping bureau to impart inside information on the races. They advertise, receive a barrel of money and send out a "tip." They soon find themselves in the hottest kind of hot water, which involves their sweethearts. They have "tipped a scratched horse" and their victims clamor for the blood of the "Major," their nom de tip. On this foundation Mr. Bollit has built up a lot of funny complications which are only straightened out by a rich uncle who stands the losses with the information that the newspapers made a mistake—the scratched horse really ran and won. "The Money Makers" is humorous and well played.

TO PRODUCE "FAUST."

Local Talent to Assist Edward Waldmann in Giving Drama at the Casino.

Further plans for the production of the drama "Faust" by the members of Wetumpkah Tribe, I. O. R. M., were discussed at the regular meeting Thursday night, and a rehearsal was held. Mr. and Mrs. Edward Waldmann, of New York, under whose direction the affair will be produced, were present and had charge.

The production, which will be given on January 30 and February 1, will include in the cast local talent. These are the parts in the production as Mr. Waldmann has selected them: Joseph Martin as Valentine; E. Mortimer Slater, Jr., as Brander; Walter Emmons, as Frosch; Louis Schermerhorn, as Waggner; Miss Lotta Willard as Katterline; A. E. Willard as Young Faust; Mrs. Willard, as Marguerite; Mr. Waldmann as Mephisto, and Mrs. Waldmann as Martha.

LITERARY.

The political warfare of the immediate future, in the United States, will be between Conservatives banded together and Radicals banded together. The two kind of minds will no longer be found in the same organization. The wreck of the Democratic party, as it has been constituted for more than a decade, was necessary to this development. That wreck is now apparently complete. To attempt resuscitation would be time and effort wasted.—John W. Ryckman in The Era Magazine for January.

I will not say roses spring spontaneously to perfection in California, but it is a pleasure to labor where one's efforts meet with such ready response. Roses of my own planting have made such growth in these few years that they exceed anything I had formerly known and on those established before I came, from my chamber window now I watch the buds unfold not looking down on them but up, up,—from a tree above the chimney's height they laugh mockingly at me and smother the boughs in their embrace.—Debora Otis in Sunset Magazine for January.

One of the most conspicuous contributors to The Metropolitan Magazine for February is the Honorable Paul Morton, Secretary of the Navy. Mr. Morton has a word to say about the newer and greater Annapolis, anent the improvements and enlargements at the United States Naval Academy. Under the title of "Making Business Fighters for Uncle Sam's New Navy" many phases of the life at Annapolis, the place of the institution in our military equipments and its prime importance in the making of an efficient navy are picturesquely handled. Many striking illustrations round out the article.

The block system in its perfection simply reduces the opportunity for error to a minimum, by substituting a rigid system based on a time limit and by concentrating responsibility upon one man only—the engineer man. It is sometimes objected to the block system that the increased dependence on mechanical contrivances tends to shift from the employe that acute sense of personal responsibility which we call discipline. The argument is false. Perfect discipline is, of course, the ultimate goal. But the point is here. We never can get perfect discipline on American railways and we can get the block system, which even with the grade of discipline now enforced will produce measurable safety. All available means to enforce discipline, which can be enforced, are now enforced.—From Leslie's Magazine for February.

Readers of The Smart Set have learned to look upon the complete novel that appears in each issue of that magazine as the biggest event of the month in fiction; but even the most enthusiastic reader will be happily surprised by the story in the February number. Beyond a doubt "The Eavesdroppers," by Arthur Stringer, will prove one of the sensations of the year. The story deals with the careers of two daring criminals—a man and a woman—whose astonishing adventures the reader follows with breathless interest. From the very opening sentence the tale becomes one of rapid and exciting incident, and, moreover, it is written with that literary distinction which always characterizes Mr. Stringer's work. Different as "The Eavesdroppers" is from such fiction as "In the Bishop's Carriage" and "Raffles," it combines all the interest of those stories with a movement and intensity entirely its own.

Some of our readers are burdened with doubts as to the ownership of Everybody's Magazine. We want to dispel them now—once for all. Mr. Lawson has no interest in this magazine, either directly or indirectly. We have never paid Mr. Lawson one cent in the shape of a present or otherwise. He writes his story of "Frenzied Finance" for Everybody's Magazine without charge, gives his time, and has already spent thousands of dollars of his own money in advertising it. As explained in his advertisements, he has done this to get the largest possible number of readers for "The Facts" about "Amalgamated" and "The Remedy" which is to follow.—Everybody's Publishers.

There are 9,204,531 negroes in the United States, including Porto Rico and Hawaii. Nine-tenths of them live in the South—one-third of its population. Seventy-seven per cent. work on 746,000 farms, of which twenty-one per cent. are absolutely, and four per cent partially, owned by negroes. There are 21,000 negro carpenters, 20,000 barbers and nearly as many doctors, 16,000 ministers, 15,000 masons, 12,000 dress-makers, 10,000 engineers and firemen, 5,000 shoemakers, 4,000 musicians, 2,000 actors and showmen, 1,000 lawyers (which seems too many). Since 1890 negro illiteracy has sunk from 57 to 44.5 per cent. Statistics are rather stupid fellows, but these look bright and full of hope.—"With the Procession," Everybody's Magazine for February.

HELD FOR GRAND JURY

Jas. Gardner is Charged With Committing Misdemeanor.

CHIEF KIELY'S "GAME"

Made No Mention of Morey-LaRue Affair When the Defendant is Arraigned.

Arraigned before Justice Huff in the city court yesterday afternoon, to answer a charge of incendiarism in connection with the Morey-LaRue fire, Friday night, as he supposed, James Gardner was greatly surprised to have a complaint of an entirely different nature preferred against him by Chief Kiely. In a spirit of boldness, the boy when first arrested declared he knew who it was who had fired the barn of Michael Armstrong on East Fourth street, New Year's night, but he steadfastly refused to reveal his identity. Under the laws of the State, a person who shields another guilty of a higher crime or attempts to aid a criminal, commits a misdemeanor and it was on this charge that he was held in $500 bail to await the action of the Grand Jury, the Morey-LaRue blaze being in no wise taken into consideration.

At the time of the fire in the barn the cause was supposed to be incendiary and it was on account of Gardner's queer actions at the recent conflagration that the Chief made the arrest. In the subsequent questioning which took place at the police station, he drew from the boy grounds for the complaint upon which he appeared before the court yesterday. In the presence of Chief Kiely, Chief Doane, Mayor Buckle, Officer McCarthy and Sergeant Frederickson, as the evidence showed, Gardner made the assertion Friday night that he knew the person who set fire to the Armstrong barn and that the deed was committed to pay for a debt owed to the incendiary. The person who fired the building, Gardner said, was an employe of Armstrong, and related the facts to him about a week afterward. Though urged and argued with at the time of his arrest, the boy refused to tell the name of the fire-bug, and declined to make any statement which would lead to the arrest of the criminal.

When on the stand, Gardner said that he could not remember what was said on the evening of his capture, claiming that he was intoxicated at that time. He did, however, firmly assert that the Chief threatened him with imprisonment. It was, to a great extent, on this conflicting testimony on the part of the defendant that the Justice based his decision when he set the bond at $500. William DeMens was the young man's representative. The witnesses for the State were Chief Kiely, Chief Doane and Officer McCarthy.

WILLIAM H. POOLE DEAD AFTER A YEAR'S ILLNESS

WELL-KNOWN OAK TREE RESIDENT PASSED AWAY SATURDAY.

William H. Poole, aged fifty-five years, for a number of years a resident of Oak Tree, died at his home at that place Saturday morning, after a year's illness with a complication of diseases. Mr. Poole was born in St. Louis, but he lived the greater part of his life in Brooklyn, where for twenty-five years he was superintendent of the painting department of what is now the Brooklyn Rapid Transit. He was also a member of Franklin Council, Royal Arcanum, of that city, for twenty-five years, and he was an active member of the Hendricks Street Baptist church, Brooklyn, serving as a trustee, treasurer and deacon.

After moving to Oak Tree he united with the Park Avenue Baptist church, this city. He was engaged in the carriage painting business at his home and was a highly respected citizen. Mr. Poole leaves a wife and two sons, one in Philadelphia and the other Rev. George Poole, until recently pastor of the George's Road Baptist church, near New Brunswick. He resigned that charge to accept another one.

Wesley Randolph Married.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Randolph, formerly of Chicago, spent Sunday in Plainfield with relatives. They were married in Chicago about three months ago and are now visiting in the East, prior to taking up their residence in Washington, where Mr. Randolph has secured an excellent position as a telegraph operator. Mr. Randolph is the son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Randolph, formerly of this city, and his wife is a native of Chicago.

The date set for the Plainfield High School junior class production of "The Princess," is March 4. The affair will be produced in Franklin Hall.

MRS. BETTMAN INSANE

Final Chapter in Troubles of a Fanwood Couple.

STRAIN TOO MUCH

Friends Call for An Examination and Her Commitment to State Hospital Follows.

Another chapter in the marital troubles of Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Bettman, of Fanwood, was added Saturday when the latter was committed to the State Hospital at Morris Plains, the committing physician being Dr. Hinkley, the well known specialist of Newark, for a number of years the head of the Essex County Institution for the Insane. The commitment was no surprise to those who have known and followed the family troubles of the couple for the past two years. During the past year Mrs. Bettman's friends have known that at times she was subject to temporary fits of insanity, especially after the husband and father took the son and refused to let her have or see him.

Mr. and Mrs. Bettman, who were married in Texas while Mr. Bettman was on a business trip through the southwest about seven years ago, upon their return north settled in Fanwood. For a time the couple lived harmoniously and to all outward appearances were happy and contented. Both took an active part in the work of the Baptist church, although not members.

Nearly three years ago Mrs. Bettman suddenly left home and started with her child for her home in Galveston. Mr. Bettman, it is alleged, attempted to have her stopped in New York and examined as to her sanity. The woman was held, but soon convinced the law that she was sane, and was only returning to her home because of her domestic troubles. The couple patched up their troubles in some way and Mrs. Bettman, accompanied by her little one, resumed her journey to Texas. After a few months' residence there she concluded to return North and compel her husband to support her and the child. She was refused admittance to the home, but learning that her husband was employed by a cement company at Perth Amboy, proceeded there and demanded that he do something towards her support. She finally took up her residence in Jersey City, but in a short time again met her husband and demanded that he at least take the child and support it, as she found herself unable to do so. The couple came to an agreement, the father taking the child and sending it to relatives in New York State for a time.

The truce was only a temporary one, however, as Mrs. Bettman again returned to the borough and insisted upon seeing the child and being furnished with a home. This, it is alleged, was refused her. After several trips had been made friends became interested and it was found necessary to bring the domestic troubles before the borough authorities as the wife and mother claimed support from the borough. A consultation was held and after a week's time it was believed that a final solution was to be had of the domestic troubles. Mr. Bettman agreed to return the child to its mother, pay her passage by boat to Galveston and give her a certain sum of money, she in return promising those interested that she would return to her home and remain there. This she failed to do, as she was only away a short time when she again returned North, it is said, taking up her residence in Newark. The husband, tiring of the constant bickering, began proceedings for divorce several weeks ago. The wife put in a defense and claimed, it is said, that she had been threatened if she fought divorce proceedings, the husband would change the charge to a more serious one. The Chancellor has not announced as yet a verdict in the case, but the blow was final, and the woman's mind gave way entirely.

Several days ago during one of her spells, it is alleged, she began destroying the bric-a-brac and furniture in the Newark boarding house. This and her hallucinations led her friends to ask that she be examined as to her sanity. The result was as her friends had feared, the constant strain for the past two years had proven too much for her and she had become insane.

May Buy Hotel Property.

Jerome W. Leary, formerly superintendent of the Aluminum Press Company, is negotiating for the purchase of the Hotel Rosell. If the transfer of lease, license, etc, can be arranged in a fairly satisfactory manner Mr. Leary will assume proprietorship of this old hotel property very shortly.

Attended Reunion.

Albert and Chris Utsinger, of the borough, members of the Silver Bay Jolly Club, who have been spending their summers at Silver Bay, Lake George, joined other members of the club at a reunion held at the Marlborough Hotel, Saturday night. There were about eighteen members present.

The "LIGHTNING" WHITE WASH Sprayer and Force Pump, No. 28.

Patented June 24, 1902.

Will Fit any Pail or Bucket.

This is the only Spray Pump that will properly spray White Wash without clogging. It will do much better work than can be done with a brush, especially on rough surface, as the force with which the material is applied causes it to penetrate the small crevices and openings, thus making a complete and perfect job. It is constructed of heavy galvanized iron, with brass tops and valves, a material that is effected by the poisonous arsenites used in different formulas for spraying fruit trees, vines and shrubbery. It is made with large air chamber and has ball valves, the pressure being held in the air chamber and on the hose, so that the nozzle throws a continuous spray and is not affected by the upward stroke. The operator is enabled to keep a constant pressure on the nozzle with little exertion: will throw a continuous stream 60 feet high and one of usual value for washing buggies, windows, extinguishing fires, sprinkling lawns, flowers, spraying trees, etc. The stirrup is made of steel and the pump is provided with the best hose and two nozzles. It is very neat in appearance, being nicely painted.

AGED RESIDENT DEAD.

Cornelius Buckley Had Reached the Four Score and Ten Mark.

Cornelius Buckley, aged about ninety years, died Tuesday morning at the home of his daughter, Mrs. George Mehl, on Madison avenue, where he had been living since the death of his wife two years ago. Mr. Buckley was a native of Ireland and for many years lived at Rosendale, near Kingston, N. Y., where he was employed as a contractor at the works of the Lawrence Cement Company. He had charge of carting the cement from the works for shipment.

Mrs. Buckley died at the old homestead at Rosendale and after that Mr. Buckley came here to live. He leaves three daughters, Mrs. Julia Green, who lives in Pennsylvania; Mrs. George Mehl and Mrs. Calvin Sutton, of this city, also two sons, David Buckley, of Summit, and Cornelius Buckley, of this city.

Hunt Club's Chase.

The riders in the chase of the Watchung Hunt Club, though few in number, enjoyed one of the best runs of the season on Saturday afternoon. The course led toward Metuchen, turning just this side and checking at Oak Tree. The last check was made at Park avenue near the Lehigh Valley tracks. Those who attended the hunt were Miss Holly, Miss Noe, C. E S Bellows, R. A. Obeabbeare, Dr. M. O'M. Knott and Master Robert Bellows. Next week the chase will start at Plainfield avenue and Eighth street.

Pressman Injured.

OSHKOSH SCORES AGAIN

The Club's "At Home" in the Casino One Big Success

AUDIENCE DELIGHTED

Songs, Dances and Marches Accompanied by Music and Costumes Chase Dull Care Away.

In the main room of the Oshkosh district school, otherwise the stage of the Casino, the members of the Oshkosh Glee Club, fifty in all, were distinctly "at home" last Firday, and treated an audience which tested the building's capacity to a faithful and inspiring picture of the classes at "work." Fun, fast and sometimes furious, music, tuneful and original, fancy dances and intricate marching together with costumes that were decidedly fetching, made up a programme that sounded the death knell of ennui the moment the curtain arose. In point of detail and smoothness of action, it even surpassed last season's "International melange of song and dance," as delightful an amateur production as ever graced local boards.

Arranged in two parts, the first of which depicted the typical district school room, ample opportunity was afforded talented Plainfielders to display their abilities and expectations were more than realized. As "Professor Joshua Switchem," the monarch of all he surveyed, Leighton Calkins presided over the crowd of unruly pupils and gave a neat bit of comedy acting that placed him above the novice class. There was no overdoing and he seemed to be more "at home" than anyone else. Comprising the district educational committee, Mrs. Harry B. Lovell, Clifford McGee, Elmer E. Runyon and William N. Runyon made up a comedy quartette that was laughter itself and which spread beyond the footlights. When they were not wrangling among themselves, they were frightening everybody in the room out of what knowledge they possessed by asking questions that would have floored a Yale professor.

Harry R. Burt was clever as the dunce but it remained for Miss Mary Anderson Reinhart to make the hit of the performance. As "Lillie May Whitewash," whose complexion belied her name, she sang and danced breezily and without burlesquing, acted the "pert culled gal" in a way that would have turned anyone of Ned Wayburn's minstrel misses green with envy. "I May be Crazy But I Aint No Fool" was the title of her song and while it was not as tuneful as her "Goodbye Miss Liza Jane" of last year, it permitted her to make use of the droll dialect she has mastered and the audience seemed loath to let her go. She was encored repeatedly and obligingly responded each time.

Pretty effects were introduced in a "Poet Song" by James Dodd and a "College Song" by Willard Wadsworth, each soloist being aided by a picked chorus. They were loudly applauded and were among the to-be-remembered features. Other numbers in the first part were given by Mrs. Joseph M. Shellabarger; Miss Madeline Uhler and Harry Butler, whose voices harmonized prettily in the rendition of "You Mustn't Pick Plums From My Plum Tree;" and a quartette comprised of Messrs. Draper C. Bartlett, E. Maxwell Honeyman, George L. Schoonmaker and Charles Barlow.

In the second part, the school was "on parade," giving what the programme described as "A Friday evening in American history." There were five different scenes, each one a specialty number depicting periods in the sixteenth, seventeenth, eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth centuries, the musical numbers and costumes corresponding with the time. The first was a forest fantasy in which William N. Runyon as an Indian chief, sang wierdly while a band of braves circled about him; the second, a band of Puritans with Mrs. George S. Ring leading in the singing of a very staid but catchy song; the third, a gathering of men and women in Colonial attire which danced a minuet; the fourth, a merry group of young men who accompained Draper Bartlett in singing "Julia," first in the original and then with words fitted for Mr. Shellabarger's benefit, the while dancing with noticeable precision, and fifth, a general assemblage in which the entire cast, garbed as soldiers, marines and Red Cross nurses, led by Miss Hubbell, skipped over the best selections of the evening in a medley that brought the curtain down on a vociferously applauding house.

For the idea of the affair and its arrangements, as well as its conducting, entire credit is due Joseph M. Shellabarger, who worked unceasingly to make the "at home" a success and had the satisfaction of knowing it was. He wrote a large part of the words and music, drilled the participants and assumed the hardest tasks without flinching. Associated with him in the preparation and working otherwise as business manager, was George S. Ring, who for many weeks past has devoted his time caring for details and who was a factor in making the production so pleasing. Henry L. Hall was the efficient stage manager; George L. Schoonmaker, the assistant leader; Harry B. Lovell, the secretary; Harry R. Burt, the director of dances, and William E. MacClymont, the director of the orchestra and the composer of some of the music, including the "Oshkosh District School" march, which set everybody to whistling or humming.

The complete cast of characters was made up of the following:

Miss Elizabeth Hess, Leighton Calkins, Harry B. Lovell, Draper C. Bartlett, Mrs. J. M. Shellabarger, James Dodd, Miss Madeline Uhler, George Dupee, Miss Helen Hess, Miss Mary Hubbell, Louis Williams, Max Honeyman, Miss Titus, Arthur Peck, Harry Butler, Miss C. Hyatt, George L. Schoonmaker, Mrs. George S. Ring, Charles Barlow, Miss Fleming, Willard Wadsworth, Mrs. H. L. Hall, A. Willis West, Owen Fleming, Ray McGee, Duncan Buckley, William Rushmere, Harry McGee, Charles Dupee, Morris Dumont, Harry R. Burt, Clifford McGee, Elmer E. Runyon, Mrs. Harry B. Lovell, William N. Runyon, Miss Reinhart and Fred Goddard.

At the close of the first part, everyone of the young women were remembered by their friends with floral tributes, the soloists being exceptionally fortunate in this respect, leaving the stage with their arms full of American Beauties, carnations and violets.

Continued success marked the matinee and evening performances of the Oshkosh Club at the Casino on Saturday, the company playing to a crowded house each time. Each number on the programme was received with generous applause and appreciation and encores were the rule. After the afternoon performance, Charles J. Fisk entertained the club at supper in the Casino and this was the occasion for a happy feature of the affair. At the conclusion of the supper, Harry L. Hall, the efficient stage manager, presented to William E. MacClymont, a handsome loving cup, to be suitably inscribed. Mr. MacClymont responded with a few pleasant words in accepting the gift, which was a mark of appreciation for his untiring services as director of the orchestra and for his compositions, which helped to make the show a success.

The Oshkosh two-step, the music rendered by the "Hayseed Quartette," and the Indian dance were composed by Mr. MacClymont and they were among the hits of the programme.

The two closing performances were given entire without a hitch or break of any kind. Among those who were especially well received was Miss Reinhart in her clever impersonation of a colored girl, the duett by Miss Uhler and Harry Butler, and all of the dances in part second, encores being called for in each number. At the close of part first each member of the club was remembered with a floral gift.

MRS. POTTER DEAD.

Was Mother of Editor John A. Potter, of the Cranford Chronicle.

Mrs. Sarah M. Potter, wife of William H. Potter, of Mt. Pleasant, and mother of John A. Potter, editor of the Cranford Chronicle, died last Saturday after an illness of two months. She was the daughter of Robert C. Vail, of Mt. Pleasant, and was born and always lived at that place. She was a member of the First Presbyterian church for many years. She is survived by a husband, a daughter, Miss Mabel Potter, and Editor, John A. Potter.

Grist From City Court.

Arraigned before Judge Runyon last Monday on charges of drunkenness, sentence was suspended on Joseph Kelly and Cornelia VanLiew, the latter colored. Robert Hart, of Scotch Plains, brought up on a similar charge, was released upon signing the pledge to refrain from the use of whiskey for one year. The judge recommended an entire swear-off, but Hart refused to give up beer. The case of Lawrence Kerwin, who was ordered to appear on a charge of assault brought by John Ward, was adjourned one week upon the failure of the plaintiff to appear.

Furthering Building Plans.

J. Fred MacDonald, of East Front street, who has been improving his store property adjoining his residence, has decided to extend the building out seven feet on East Front street, and build the entire front of brick, still leaving the store on the first floor and using the two upper floors for flats.

Compelled to Wear Uniforms.

It is reported that according to a new postal regulation all rural free delivery carriers are now obliged to wear uniforms similar to those worn by other letter-carriers in towns and cities. At the local postoffice no official notification of this new order has been received.

IN MEMORY OF MR. GINNA

Impressive Services Conducted at Bethel Chapel.

MANY ADDRESSES

Pastor of Crescent Avenue Church and Others Pay Tribute to the Devoted Christian Worker.

Gathered together in affectionate remembrance of the life of the late Stephen A. Ginna, members of the Crescent Avenue church congregation and its chapels met at Bethel chapel Sunday afternoon in a memorial service, which overflowed with the expression of love and tenderness for the departed superintendent. It was especially appropriate from the fact that it was in this division of the Crescent Avenue church work that Mr. Ginna was particularly interested, and it is this chapel which will miss him most.

Not only by his financial support was Mr. Ginna dear to the hearts of the church and Sunday-school at Bethel chapel, but his diligent and tireless religious work was an inspiration and a help to all who came in contact with him. These facts and many others significant of his religious life, were brought out in the addresses at the gathering, and not only by the pastor of the home church, but by the representatives of all the fond Sunday-schools and chapels, were fond recollections given and affectionate tributes spoken.

Leander L. Lovell was in charge of the service, which opened with singing by the school. Afterward Rev. Frederick D. Tildon, pastor of Bethel chapel, led in prayer. At the conclusion of the prayer, an address was made by Frederick H. Andrews, superintendent of the Warren chapel Sunday-school. Second only to the Bethel chapel, Mr. Ginna devoted much of his time and help to Warren, and both from a personal standpoint and as a representative of the church and Sunday-school, Mr. Andrews spoke of the great loss which his death means to those in whose minds his memory will always remain dear. In Mr. Andrews' and in other addresses, the predominant thought was of the great good which a man in a position such as Mr. Ginna occupied, is capable of, and of the steadfast and unfaltering manner in which Mr. Ginna took advantage of his opportunity. Mr. Andrews said there are many men whom the chance of doing good is given, but there are few who have the broad mind and the large heart which moved Mr. Ginna in his philanthropic career.

Among the others who spoke similarly were Henry C. Squires, superintendent of Hope chapel Sunday-school; George A. Strong, superintendent of the Crescent Avenue Sunday-school; William D. Murray, superintendent of the primary department at Crescent Avenue; Rev. L. R. Howard, pastor of Hope chapel; Rev. J. O. McKelvey, pastor of Warren chapel, and Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue church. All these speakers were intimate friends of Mr. Ginna and each referred with sorrow to the recollections which to themselves and to their several departments are especially dear. The tributes of all the speakers were characterized by a generality which spoke volumes for the universal love and esteem which Stephen A. Ginna won from all with whom he was associated.

Following Dr. Zelie's address, Mr. Lovell made a brief summary, adding to and emphasizing many of the remarks which had been made upon the Christian character of the one in whose honor the memorial service was held. The singing of another hymn by the school marked the conclusion of the service. Two resolutions of condolence, one presented by Rev. Mr. Tilden, and the other from Warren chapel, read by Mr. Andrews, were approved and ordered by a unanimous vote to be sent to Mr. Ginna's family.

Will Banquet Insurance Men.

Superintendent Charles E. Ball, of the Prudential Insurance Company, and his assistants, will give a banquet at the Hotel Kensington Friday night at 8 o'clock to the Plainfield staff. There will also be present four or five officials from the home office of the Prudential Insurance Company at Newark.

Inventive Plainfielders.

The following patents have been granted Plainfielders: Mechanical movement, W. S. Huson; separating graphite from wollastonite, S. B. Krom; packet closure, R. B. Norwood. The latter is a young colored man who has several inventions to his credit.

Mr. McGee to Lecture.

Under the auspices of the Brotherhood at First M. E. church, a social and entertainment will be given Friday evening, when Henry A. McGee will lecture on the subject "Japan." There will also be solos by J. Edmund Skiff, and an orchestra in charge of Kenneth Shepp will furnished music.

PROPERTY IMPROVEMENT

Owners of West End Tract Gradually Developing Plans.

A FINE BOULEVARD

Green Brook to be Straightened and An Artificial Lake to be Located on Old Cadmus Property.

Plans for the improvement of the new tract of land in the West End of the city and Mayer N. B. Smalley, are gradually being prepared and it is expected that early in the spring the work will be started. The owners of the property, Charles W. McCutchen, W. J. Buttfield and Mayer N. B. Smalley, have decided to make the boulevard, extending from the bridge over Green brook to Stine's bridge on West End avenue, one hundred feet wide, including the sidewalk which will be ten feet wide. The driveways, one each side of a row of trees and grass plot, which is to be in the centre, will be forty feet. There will also be a row of electric lights in the centre and it is proposed to have the wires placed in a conduit underground so that there will be no unsightly poles and wires overhead to mar the appearance of the avenue.

It is also intended to have the tract used for building purposes, proper restrictions being placed in the kind of dwellings to be erected and if the plans are carried out as intended it will mean another settlement somewhat similar to that known as Washington Park.

Among the other improvements proposed is the straightening of Green brook to permit a proper flow of the water, and the location of a fine lake in that section formerly known as the Cadmus property. This lake will be at least three hundred feet wide and fifteen hundred feet in length, extending from a point near West End avenue to one near Giraud avenue. This section is filled with springs and it is believed that the building of a lake will be an easy matter. Dirt taken from the centre and sides of the brook in the process of widening will be used to fill in with. It is also the intention to lay out the rest of the ground in a park, having attractive walks and the lake will be established with a view to providing a place for boating.

A small dam will also be built at the west end of the lake. It is believed that by straightening the brook, establishing the lake and putting up a small dam, these things will be a great benefit to the surrounding property in heavy rains. At present heavy rains cause the brook to overflow the lowlands and generally results in more or less damage to West End avenue. With the improvements the water would find a sufficient outlet beneath a larger bridge which it is proposed to have erected at that point.

It is believed that with the widening of West End avenue in the borough the avenue in the city will be similarly widened, making one of the most attractive thoroughfares in that part of town. The lake and park will, of course, be of a private character, although there is no doubt but what the public will be allowed to enjoy it to some extent.

Legal Lights Will Banquet.

The annual dinner of the Union County Bar Association will be held in Old Delmonico's, now known as Cafe Martin, on Broadway and Twenty-sixth street, New York, on Saturday night. There will be a number of toasts, commencing with this one by the president, Craig A. Marsh, Esq., of this city: "He Did Look Afar Into the Surface of Time. All's Well That Ends Well." Among the other speakers will be Hon. J. Franklin Fort, Hon. Benjamin A. Vail, Richard V. Lindabury, Hon. Gilbert Collins, Allan H. Strong, Esq., John K. English, Frank Bergen.

Eagle Fair Closes.

With another record breaking crowd in attendance, the fair of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, F. O. E., in Saengerbund Hall closed Saturday night. It was unusually successful from several points of view and the net proceeds will be at least $600. The different contests of the week closed Saturday with the following winners: Eagle charm, George Carroll, of Elizabeth; set of furs, Miss Elsie House, of this city; set of harness, Hugo Maul; carving set, J. Frank Matthews, of Westfield; watch fob, James Quinn, of Elizabeth; hand painted pillow, R. W. Westcott; fox rug, William Johnson.

Next Assembly Dance.

The next assembly dance to be held at the Casino in February will be one of the most elaborate of the series. It will be a Martha Washington affair and the guests will carry out that idea in dress.

Wreck Anniversary.

Friday will mark the second anniversary of the disastrous wreck on the New Jersey Central at Westfield, when so many Plainfielders were killed and injured.

PROPERTY PURCHASE CAUSES MANY CHANGES

PARK AVENUE BUSINESS MEN SECURING NEW QUARTERS.

As a result of the purchase of several business properties on Park avenue by Charles W. McCutchen, necessitating the removal of a number of merchants, some have secured other stores, while others are still looking for a place to locate. All of the tenants will have to vacate by April 1.

Among those who have secured other stores are Mefford Giles, who will occupy W. R. Codington's building on West Second street, near Park avenue; M. C. Dobbins, the cigar manufacturer, who has secured the store adjoining his present place, which is owned by Boice, Runyon & Co., and recently occupied by H. H. Smith, who conducted a dairy and poultry store. Mr. Smith recently gave up the business here. Mr. Dobbins will probably move about March 1.

William Randolph, the barber, has leased one of the stores in Charles H. Hand's new building on Watchung avenue, near the trolley station, and will take possession when it is completed.

A. H. Knander is planning to erect a building on his Watchung avenue property, the first floor of which he will use for his business and the upper part for residential purposes. Thomas Walsh has not disclosed his plans, neither has Andrew Johnson, who occupied a portion of a store with Mr. Knander.

It is Mr. McCutchen's purpose to tear down all of the old buildings and erect modern structures. While the plans for the new buildings are not yet definitely decided upon, it is the owner's intention to build stores at least eighty feet deep and they will be provided with all modern improvements. The upper floors will be used either for offices or flats.

LIST OF DELINQUENTS TO BE FILED AT ELIZABETH

UNPAID TAXES BECOME A LIEN AGAINST PROPERTY.

Tax Collector Lee has sent out notices to all parties who have not paid their taxes on real estate for 1904, and is now making up the list of all properties upon which the taxes for 1904 have not been paid.

This list must be filed with the County Clerk in Elizabeth on February 7, and he enters upon his records the block number, lot number, name of delinquent and the amount due. The tax is a lien on the property and cannot be marked off the record until the owner pays his tax, with 10 per cent. interest, to Tax Collector Lee, secures a tax release, for which the city charges forty cents. This tax release is filed by the Collector with the County Clerk, and the lien is cancelled of record.

Since Collector Lee has sent out these notices quite a number of owners of property have paid up their 1904 taxes, and a number of them are coming in every day.

Civil Service Examination.

Notice is given that a Civil Service examination for the positions of clerk and carrier in the postoffice will be held here on Saturday, February 4. The usual rules will prevail and all applications must be received by Theodore Babcock, Jr., secretary, Custom House, New York, by 4 o'clock on Monday afternoon, January 30. Persons between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, are eligible. They must be at least five feet four inches in height and weigh not less than 125 pounds. Further information regarding the matter can be obtained at the local postoffice.

A Chimney Fire.

Two extinguishers were sufficient to put out a fire in a chimney at 304 Arlington avenue this morning. The fire was discovered at 10 o'clock and a still alarm was sent in. The house is occupied by Peter Wyckoff.

—Fresh country eggs are received by Neuman Brothers every day. The lowest market price always.

MARRIED.

SECOR—BARKER—On Tuesday, January 24, 1905, at Christ Church chantry, Brooklyn, N. Y., by Rev. Arthur S. Kinsolving, Alice Leola, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Horsley Barker, formerly of Plainfield, to Zeno Percival Secor, of Brooklyn, N. Y.

DIED.

BUCKLEY—In this city, January 24, 1905, Cornelius Buckley, in his 80th year.

MOHAN—Suddenly, at Dunellen, N. J., January 17, 1905, Peter Mohan, aged 55 years.

NUGENT—In this city, January 18, 1905, Michael Nugent, in his 63d year.

POTTER—At Mt. Pleasant (Potter Station, L. V. R. R.), on Saturday, Jan. 21, 1905, Sarah M., wife of William H. Potter.

CODDINGTON—At Mt. Horeb, N. J., Sunday, Jan. 22, 1905, Linda, wife of William R. Coddington, aged 65 years.

DEMOCRATIC "HARMONY"

Borough Members of the Party Hold Rival Meetings.

CARNEY EXPLAINS

Tells Why Hasty Call Was Given the Faithful to Gather at Headquarters.

Divided into two "factions", Borough Democrats held as many meetings in different places Monday and at one of them matters were rather rosy for a while as North Plainfield political status in connection with the coming election was discussed. The most important of the two was held under the auspices of the North Plainfield Democratic Club in its headquarters and was well attended. It was called to order by President David J. Carney, who said in explanation of this notice to assemble:

"The reason this meeting was so hastily called is because Councilman VanWinkle called at my office last Wednesday afternoon and asked me to call a few Democrats together at Codington & Swackhamer's law offices on Friday night last. This I declined to do. I offered Mr. VanWinkle the use of the club rooms for any evening the present week that would most suit his convenience. Mr. VanWinkle left me with the impression that this arrangement would be entirely satisfactory. Late Saturday evening last, it became known that a chosen few were to meet in the city on Monday night. This morning notices were printed and mailed for this meeting.

"This meeting is called," said President Carney, "for the purpose of getting the views of borough Democrats regarding the action deemed most advantageous for the party in the approaching borough election. Nothing done here tonight will commit the party. An expression of views is what is most desired at the present time."

The meeting went along smoothly and had passed a resolution that the chair appoint a committee of three to confer with the Citizen's Party and ascertain what inducements they would offer, looking toward an alliance. Just at this juncture fourteen men led by S. S. Swackhamer and Councilman VanWinkle, walked in and immediately began to take part in the meeting. This created a bit of a stir for a time. After considerable wrangling, Mr. Swackhamer stated that the faction he and Councilman VanWinkle represented had met over in the city and had appointed a committee of three, composed of himself, W. J. Conroy and W. Linbarger, who were to confer with a Citizen's committee. He strongly advised this meeting to appoint a like committee to act with the one they had appointed.

This the meeting refused to do. Finally Mr. Swackhamer agreed to withdraw the committee appointed in the city altogether."

President Carney then declared the meeting adjourned until Friday night at which time the committee he is to appoint will make a report.

The other meeting was held in the offices of Codington & Swackhamer and was for the purpose of formulating plans for the coming spring election. This meeting was called by Walter Linbarger, a member of the Somerset County Democratic Committee, and there were about sixteen Democrats who responded to the call. There was no discussion regarding candidates, not a name being mentioned in this respect.

Mr. Linbarger was made chairman of the meeting and he called for expressions of opinion as to what action had better be taken regarding a ticket at the coming election. It seemed to be the unanimous opinion that it would be best to join with representatives of the opposite party and place a citizens' ticket in the field. Remarks favorable to such action were made by J. H. VanWinkle and Borough Councilman John H. VanWinkle, Jr., Walter Linbarger, W. J. Conroy and S. S. Swackhamer. Past success as a result of combined efforts was recalled and it was believed that in view of the present condition of affairs in the borough such a ticket would be successful.

A committee comprising W. J. Conroy, S. S. Swackhamer and Walter Linbarger was appointed to confer with the Republicans with a view to uniting on a single ticket.

Mr. Swackhamer stated that it was with regret that he had learned of another Democratic meeting being held in the borough and stated that he knew of no opposition until after he had been informed of the meeting held in his office. He hoped that all Democrats could unite for one purpose whatever that might be and that there would be harmonious action for the best interest of the party.

Grand Jury Still Busy.

It is now definitely decided that the Union County Grand Jury will be in session all of this week, and it is possible that a portion of next week will be necessary to conclude the business.

Y.M.C.A. ANNUAL MEETING

Work of the Past Year Outlined in Detailed Reports.

DIRECTORS ELECTED

President Cahoone Submits Interesting Facts and Makes Suggestions for the Future.

Completing a year, which in several respects has been one of the most successful in the history of the organization, the annual business meeting of the local Y. M. C. A. was held last Thursday. It was largely attended by officers and members and was made up mainly of reports from the various departments.

Following Scripture reading and minutes of the last meeting, Stephen A. Cahoone, president of the association, read his annual report, a general account of the year's work in the different departments, complete and decidedly interesting. A decrease in the membership of the men's classes, both in the physical and in the spiritual departments, was, Mr. Cahoone said, an exception to the report that the work for the year of 1904 was successfully conducted. Though in general membership, an increase in membership is noted, it is because of the attendance in the boys' department. An eighteen per cent. decrease in the membership for the year of 1904 over the year of 1903 is the one thing which detracts from the unconditional success of the past year. In direct connection with the decrease in membership, there is a consequential decrease in membership receipts, therefore a deficiency in the treasurer's receipts over 1903. "It is in the men's department," said the president, "that the great improvement is needed. There should be at least 500 men in the association, beside the boys, instead of but 318."

The president went on further to speak of the necessity of economy, and mentioned the respects in which economy is now practiced in the association. As a great assistance to the association in a financial way, the speaker referred at some length to the work of the women's auxiliary. Organized in 1903, with a charter membership of seven, it is now, though the youngest, the largest and most successful women's auxiliary in the State. Its work during the last year, which really marks the first year of its existence, is an omen at once encouraging to the directors of the association and gratifying to the members of the society themselves.

Educational work, the physical department, the boys' work, and the religious organizations of the Y. M. C. A., were all given prominent mention in the president's report. Mr. Cahoone congratulated the new physical director, F. A. Henckel, upon his work in that department and commended also the efforts of the boys' work committee and Secretary Kenneth Robbie. Particularly mentioned in connection with the religious work was the organization of the noon-day Bible classes at the shops. This feature, conducted and started by the Y. M. C. A., has grown rapidly until it now has reached a degree where for the last year the total attendance at the shop Bible classes was 2,365.

Mr. Cahoone touched briefly on the regular Sunday services in his report, covering the religious department, referring especially to the work in foreign missions, toward which $337 has been appropriated to further the Y. M. C. A. work in Madras, India. From this he passed on recording briefly the other attractions which the association offers, including the entertainment courses, camp life, and other valuable privileges. In concluding, Mr. Cahoone spoke with great emphasis on the devoted personal work of the general secretary, J. H. Manning.

Following the president's report, the secretary read the report of the women's auxiliary, which embodied to a great extent what was included in the one previously read. All the reports, though more in detail, were substantially covered by the report of the president. For the membership committee, J. A. Powlison read the report.

G. M. Rittenhouse's report on the religious work was an interesting and an explicit one. All branches of the work were adequately covered. On behalf of the physical department, F. A. Henckel read a thorough outline, not only of the work which he himself has conducted during the four months which he has been with the local association, but also of the work conducted by his predecessor. He referred to all the classes, twelve in number, which are now in existence in the physical department, and spoke also of the basketball, bowling and social interests which make the gymnasium life attractive.

O. S. Rogers presented the boys' work committee report, one which, as President Cahoone said, was one of the most important features of the Y. M. C. A. work. In no other department has the increase been as great, both in numbers and in finances. Six hundred and sixty-five boys attended Bible classes during the year of 1904, and in conferences, entertainments and physical work the boys have made themselves the most conspicuous and the most prospering factor in the association. Mr. Rogers mentioned especially in this report a $2,000 bequest from the late James Clark, to be added to the fund for the boys' building which the association hopes some day to have.

Curtis Thorp, the treasurer of the association, reported the financial condition to be as follows: Receipts for the year 1904, $9,453, which in addition to a sum of $1,000 which was borrowed, makes the net receipts $10,453; total expenses, $10,309, which, considering the amount owed on the loan, leaves a deficiency of $850. Over $600 of this amount have been promised in personal subscription, however, which leaves the association in debt about $200. This sum, it is expected, will be subscribed.

The vacancy committee presented these names to the secretary for the Board of Directors to fill the positions of those whose terms expired this year: E. R. Ackerman, Harry Gee, A. O. LaBoyteaux, H. M. Maxson and O. S. Rogers. J. W. Gavett was nominated to fill the place formerly occupied by G. S. Clay, while the others were renominations. F. R. Stevens was nominated to fill the position made vacant by the resignation of W. S. Tyler. Motion was made, seconded and carried unanimously that the secretary cast a ballot for the appointment of the above as directors. Before concluding the meeting motions were carried expressing the thanks of the association to the orchestra and to Fred VanEps, banjo soloist, for their services, and to The Daily Press and the Courier-News for their courtesies and assistance.

SCOTCH PLAINS JUNIORS HAVE AN ANNIVERSARY

DURING EXERCISES H.R.THORN, OF THIS CITY, IS PLEASANTLY SURPRISED.

The tenth anniversary of Twilight Council, Jr. O. U. A. M., of Scotch Plains, was appropriately observed Thursday. Beside a large attendance of its own members, the council had as guests large delegations from both Franklin and Somerset Councils, of this city. The entertainment committee had spared neither expense or work in making the observance a most notable one in every way. At the close of a short business meeting, the members and their guests spent several hours together, listening to phonographic selections and speeches, while enjoying cigars and refreshments.

Past Councilor Harvey R. Thorn, of Franklin Council, has in a number of ways in the past been brought very close to Twilight Council in junior work, the local members desiring to express their appreciation of him, decided several weeks ago to present him with a solid gold fountain pen, upon the occasion of the Council's anniversary to Mr. Thorn, and he responded in a short speech of thanks.

Twilight Council was instituted January, 1895, and now numbers nearly forty members, which is a good enrollment considering the limited field of its work.

SLATED FOR CHOATE'S JOB

Rumor Says Whitelaw Reid Is to Be the American Ambassador to London.

Washington.—Persistent rumor in official circles has it that Whitelaw Reid, editor of the New York Tribune, is to succeed Hon. Joseph Choate as American ambassador at the court of St. James early in the year.

If this rumor is well founded, and there is every reason to believe that it is, the appointment will round out a life of unusual activity and variety. The able editor of the Tribune has filled many positions both in public and private life. During the civil war he served on the staffs of Gen. Thomas and Gen. Rosecrans. Previous to that he had engaged in journalistic work as legislative correspondent at Albany, as Washington correspondent and as a war correspondent. During the sessions of the Thirty-seventh congress he was the clerk of the military commission of that body, and as librarian of the house of representatives. In 1866-7 he left the public service and engaged in cotton planting in Louisiana. Since 1868 he has been connected with the New York Tribune in one capacity or another, and during the same time has served as American ambassador to France and declined a similar appointment to Germany. He is not unknown in London official circles, having represented this country as special ambassador both at the jubilee of Queen Victoria and at the coronation of King Edward.

As an author and writer he is widely known both by his editorials in the Tribune and the number of books he has contributed to American literature.

During that time he was editor of the Logansport Journal, and later of the Delphi Journal. In 1894 he was chosen president of the Indiana Republican Editorial association, and has been prominent in that organization for several years.

Congressman Landis is a native Ohioan, but has resided in his adopted state the greater part of his life. He was born at Millville, O., July 9, 1858. His present home is in this city.

A Curious Custom.

A curious custom has been celebrated at Klin, near Moscow. All the marriageable girls in the town lined up in the principal square decked out in their simple finery, many of them also having with them the stock of linen, household and personal, which forms part of their dowry. The young men contemplating matrimony then walked down the serried ranks of beauty as they moved toward the church, and selected the girls of their choice. A formal visit to the parents to arrange details was then made in each case, and a date fixed for the ceremony.

Japanese Ship Names.

In view of the periodic discussion about the appropriate naming of warships, it is of interest to learn that Japan has christened her big battleships after great mountains and the small war vessels from some well-known natural features of the country. It may also be mentioned that at the end of the name of every Japanese ship is either the termination "kan" or "maru." "Kan" means war vessel and is applied, of course, only to the emperor's fleet. "Maru," which means round, is applied to merchant vessels—why, it is difficult to say.

ROTHSCHILD FAMILY

SON OF HOUSE STUDYING FINANCE IN UNITED STATES.

Little History of the Founding of This Portentous Jewish Clan, Rise from Ghetto to Highest Eminence.

We are having as visitor in this country at the present moment Baron Alphonse Rotschild, who has come over to study American banking methods. It has been the custom of the house of Rothschild to send their young men abroad that they may become familiarized with foreign methods, but this is the first time we have been honored. A bit of compliment to the financial progress made by this country.

A most interesting house is the house of Rothschild. Once, inhabitants of a continental Ghetto, they to-day are kings of finance, controllers of fabulous wealth, their name probably as well known as that of any potentate. An article in The Idler describes their rise from obscurity to fame, after this fashion: "The members of a despised community, who lived everywhere on sufferance, they became the friends of princes, the patrons of statesmen, the arbiters, even, of war and peace."

They are Jews. Jews that have made money and that have given it away with boundless liberality. It was in Frankfort-on-the-Main they began operations on a large scale, a city than which it would seem there was none other in Europe where a Jew would have less chance to rise. In the "Judengasse," to which the Frankfort Jews were restricted, the race was held down with heaviest limitations; they were forced to wear badges, and on their houses distinctive shields were placed—Rothschild means red shield. The founder of the house was Mayer, son of Rabbi Amschel, dealer in old coins and curiosities. It was desired that Mayer become a rabbi, but his tastes led him to prefer business life and he entered a banking house in Hanover. Later he returned to the Judengasse, and, like his father, became a dealer in curiosities and old coins.

He won the title of "Honest Jew," and this reputation, as well as his experience in banking, led to the bestowal of favor upon him by William IX., the landgrave of Hesse, who appointed him his financial agent—"court Jew." That the confidence was not misplaced was subsequently proved beyond doubt. At the time Napoleon's troops were about to invade Hesse-Cassel, William gave the whole of his fortune into the keeping of the "court Jew." Rothschild hid the treasure in vaults beneath his house in the Judengasse. The soldiers plundered the Jews' quarters, too; and, in order to save the treasure of another, the "Honest Jew" allowed his own house to be despoiled without opposition. On the return of William the wealth was restored to him and interest paid for what time it was in use.

THE OLD HOUSE IN FRANKFORT.
In Which the Rothschild Financial Operations Were Begun.

Mayer Rothschild was able at his death (1812) to bequeath to his five sons an immense fortune and a great business. He left also this advice—that they remain faithful to their religion, united in business, and that they consult their mother before engaging in an enterprise of importance. The mother lived to the advanced age of 96 years, so attached to the Judengasse that she refused to leave it. Tradition does not say whether or not the sons called her into frequent counsel, but if so it must have entailed some trouble, for one son settled in Vienna, another in London, one in Paris, one in Naples, and only the eldest remained in Frankfort. This son, Anselm, was a typical Rothschild, "a man of unusual penetration of judgment, devoted to business, scrupulously observant of his faith, and exceedingly charitable."

Year by year the Rothschilds rose in importance, their various European houses consolidated in a union of great strength. Their large capital enabled them to aid various states from time to time, and their rewards for these services added greatly to their wealth. The Napoleonic wars was an ill-wind that blew them good, and they were able to assist, with eventual gain to themselves, different countries whose finances had become exhausted in the periods when Napoleon would not cease from troubling. As the first capitalists by whom government loans were issued, they are looked upon as the founders of the modern stock exchange. Later, as the credit of the government rose, the Rothschilds began to employ their capital in promotion of joint-stock enterprises. As political factors they have been of marked importance: have sometimes been enabled to obtain official news before the rulers of the countries interested were informed.

A MARVEL IN LIFE-BOATS.

Little Egg-Shaped Vessel Has Just Completed a Voyage Across the Atlantic.

New York.—Lying at the tug company's wharf at St. John's, N. F., is the lifeboat, Uraad, Capt. Ola Martin Brude. The Uraad is a marine curiosity and before long will be on exhibition in New York, for which port she will sail in a short time.

She has just been sailed across the Atlantic in the hope that she would be able to reach the Mississippi and the St. Louis exposition before the fair closed.

AN UNSINKABLE LIFE BOAT.
It Has Made a Safe Voyage from Europe to America Without Mishap.

Capt. Brude built his boat to win the prize of a million francs offered by the French government for a lifeboat which would reduce to a minimum the loss of life in marine accidents.

It was to prove his boat's seaworthiness that Capt. Brude made the voyage across the Atlantic. In construction the Uraad is egg-shaped, 18 feet long, 8 feet wide and 8 feet deep. She carries a single mast near the pointed nose, to which a little lateen sail is hoisted. In the center of her oval deck is a small tower for observation purposes, while near the stem and stern are two hatchways just large enough for a man's body to enter, and these are closed from the inside, making the little craft absolutely water-tight. She is built of steel one-eighth of an inch thick, is 4.75 tons gross and her hull is perfectly oval. She is steered by an ordinary tiller from the inside, as it would be too dangerous to attempt standing on her sloping decks, especially in a heavy sea.

The voyage across was a stormy one, says the Herald. Aalesund was left on August 7 and the boat was just a hundred days in reaching here. When about six weeks out the mast snapped off, and the little boat was tossed about in heavy seas, but not a drop of water entered the hull. She floated on top of the highest waves like a barrel. On Wednesday morning she sighted Cape Spear, and later several Petty Harbor fishermen towed her into that place.

A NEW STATUE OF MILTON

It Was Unveiled by a Descendant of the Poet's Friend and Patron.

London.—It was a particularly appropriate selection, that of Lady Alice Egerton, to perform the task of unveiling the new statue of Milton in Cripplegate. Lady Alice, who is the wife of the earl of Egerton, is also a descendant of that earl of Bridgewater who was Milton's stanch friend and patron.

It was for the entertainment of his family, a very numerous one, consisting of not less than 15 children, that the "Masque of Comus" was written. The story was founded on an incident in the life of the eleventh daughter, herself a Lady Alice Egerton. And when it was first performed at the earl's castle at Ludlow it was she who was cast for the lady.

The associations of the family are not only closely connected with the life of the poet, but with Cripplegate church, in which he found a final resting place, and near which his new statue stands. The earl who lived in Milton's day was a regular worshiper at St. Giles, Cripplegate, and often helped ring the same bells which pealed forth joyously the other day when the statue was uncovered. The town house of the Bridgewaters stood on the site now occupied by Cripplegate Institute, not far from the church, and it is supposed that Milton took up his residence in the parish that he might be near his powerful friend.

LOCAL WOMEN'S AUXILIARY LEADS STATE SOCIETIES

INTERESTING FACT BROUGHT OUT AT SPECIAL BUSINESS MEETING.

Acting upon a special summons for the purpose of considering the resignation of Mrs. Kenneth Robbie as secretary, the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A., met yesterday and transacted important business. In accordance with the usual custom, there was a meeting of the executive committee previous to the regular meeting, at which Mrs. Robbie's resignation was accepted, and in her place was appointed Miss Eleanor Sherwin. The executive committee received four applications for membership, all of which were accepted. The subjects to be considered at the regular meeting were decided upon, and the executive committee adjourned to the parlor, where the society convened.

Though the annual meeting of the Women's Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. was held in November, the report of the president, Mrs. H. M. Maxson, was read yesterday.

Mrs. Maxson mentioned in her report the fact that in 1903 the auxiliary was organized with a charter membership of seven, and that it now stands not only the strongest, but the largest women's organization auxiliary to the Y. M. C. A. in the State. This, Mrs. Maxson said, is worthy of special mention considering the fact that the local society is the youngest in the State. A detailed account of the work done through the year was included in the report, and the fair and other transactions of the society were explicitly referred to in the president's report.

These were chairmen of the various committees who were appointed yesterday by the president: Devotional committee, Mrs. G. H. Babcock; membership, Mrs. J. Harry Manning; flower and sick committee, Dr. Martha Stillman; social committee, Mrs. G. M. Rittenhouse.

The president made further reports with regard to the receipts of the auxiliary fair, which was held in November. From the $900, which was the net profits of the fair, $300 has been paid by the auxiliary toward the electric lighting plant of the association. Mrs. Maxson stated that amounts, small and large, still continue to come in from the fair sales, both from articles which are still on sale and from commission on other effects sold at the bazaar.

An important business transaction, which will be appreciated by many, was the vote to buy a portable organ to be used at the shop meetings. The next regular meeting of the auxiliary will take place on February 13, and will be open to the public. The feature will be a lecture on the subject "Opportunities of the Auxiliary," by Miss Chapman, of Montclair, an auxiliary worker for many years.

FOR NEW BUILDING.

Warren Chapel Now Has $13,000 on Hand for Proposed Structure.

Thus far about $13,000 has been secured for Warren chapel's new place of worship proposed to be erected on Watchung avenue corner of Fairview. Plans were originally prepared for a stone structure with two rooms, one for church services and the other for Sunday-school; but when estimates were made the cost was found to be so far in excess of the probable subscriptions that these plans had to be abandoned.

At present the committee in charge is undecided whether to follow the original idea, or build one room which would serve both purposes. The unpleasantness which might have arisen from the proximity of this chapel building to the First Presbyterian church has been happily avoided and the best of feeling prevails.

George E. Hall's Plans Accepted.

George E. Hall, of this city, chairman of the finance committee of the New Jersey Sunday-school Association at the executive committee meeting Thursday, presented plans for raising funds for extending an advanced line of work through securing personal subscriptions. The plans were approved, and the work will start immediately. The meeting of the executive committee at which Mr. Hall's report was presented was held at the Hotel Windsor, at Trenton.

Will Start Work Soon.

Work on the new State tuberculosis sanitarium to be located near Glen Gardner, is expected to commence February 1. The contractor will report there on that date and will bring with him 200 men and forty horses, ready to begin operations.

Ground Hog Day.

Ground hog day will fall on Wednesday, February 2, and those who believe in the annual custom of this animal, will be on the watch to see whether he shows himself or remains in his quarters.

SEMI-ANNUAL CONFERENCE

Women's Home Mission Societies Meet at Dunellen.

A PROFITABLE SESSION

Interesting and Instructive Programme Characterized Gathering of Elizabeth District.

Attended by delegates from societies in all parts of the district, the first semi-annual conference of the Elizabeth District Women's Home Missionary Society was held at the Methodist Episcopal church, of Dunellen, Jan. 18, and was characterized by unusual reports of prosperity. In all branches of the work, in the larger and in the minor societies, this condition of affairs seems prevalent, and it was with immense gratification to all who were in attendance.

There was a business meeting in the morning which was opened by a devotional service led by Rev. W. S. Newson. Following the service, Rev. S. K. Doolittle, of the Dunellen Methodist church, made a welcoming address. It was responded to by Mrs. E. Clark, Jr. The usual routine business of the societies followed, after which Mrs. C. S. Blaine made an address. Miss Effa C. Ham, of Cranford, addressed the societies on the topic "What is Your Difficulty." Her talk was an exceedingly interesting and instructive one.

At the conclusion of this service, a light lunch was served by the women of the church. The afternoon session began at 1:30, and was characterized by the attendance and speeches of the conference officers, Mrs. Charles S. Woodruff, of Bloomfield, and Mrs. Hedley Robert Woodward, of Montclair. The discussions were universally entered into, and the meeting was in every respect a general one.

Mrs. Woodruff opened the afternoon session by a Bible reading, and this was followed by conferences' pledges and a silver offering, conducted by Mrs. Woodward. A general discussion on the subject, "Valuation of Supplies," and "Day of Prayer," followed this number of the programme. A feature of the meeting was a learned address by Rev. Herbert F. Randolph, who spoke on the topic "The Privilege of Giving."

Rev. Mr. Randolph's talk was one which will be long remembered by those who were privileged to hear it. He spoke at length of the good which is accomplished by systematic and reasonable giving, emphasizing especially the privilege rather than the duty of giving.

Following this address Mrs. Thomas MacDonald, of this city, sang a soprano solo, which was much enjoyed. "Our Young People" was the subject of the exercise conducted by Mrs. F. S. Work, of this city, in which other members of the societies took part. Unique and attractive was the number which followed, entitled "A Telephone Exercise." It was delivered in a pleasing manner by Miss Frances Rittenhouse and Miss Helen Edgar, of this city. In connection with this exercise, Mrs. MacDonald sang another solo.

These are the officers of the Elizabeth District Home Missionary Society:

President, Mrs. C. S. Woodruff, Bloomfield; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Hedley Robert Woodward, Montclair; treasurer, Mrs. John McNaughton, Plainfield; district officers, president, Miss Carlton, Elizabeth; vice president, Mrs. I. A. Miller, Plainfield; secretry, Miss Mary V. Moore, Elizabeth; corresponding secretary, Miss Effa Z. Ham, Cranford; treasurer, Mrs. E. W. Bloom, Frenchtown; mite box secretary, Mrs. J. C. Pierson, Plainfield; secretary of literature, Mrs. S. K. Doolittle, Dunellen; secretary of young people, Mrs. F. S. Work, Plainfield.

SLANDER SUITS OFF.

Morris Abrams and the Silberts Settle Their Differences Amicably.

The slander suits brought by Morris Abrams against Marcus, Matilda and Anna Silbert, and against Carl Silbert, which were to have come up in the Supreme Court at the next term, have been settled. The defendants furnished retraction, paid the counsel fees and the costs. William Newcorn was the lawyer for the plaintiff, and H. C. Runyon represented the defendants.

There was at one time a countersuit for slander brought by Leo Slonim, a relative of the Silberts, but this case was settled some time ago. Craig A. Marsh represented Slonim against Abrams, who retained Mr. Newcorn as his counsel throughout the entire proceedings.

KALTENBORNS WIN FAVOR

Popular Quartette Delights Large Audience at Casino.

MISS DUTHIE, SOLOIST

Their Appearance Marks Conclusion of Series Arranged by William E. Miller.

Before an audience that completely filled the Casino, the last of the series of concerts under the direction of William E. Miller, was given last Thursday by the Kaltenborn Quartette, assisted by Miss Lena Duthie, soprano. As successful as the preceding concerts were, this one was even more so and the fine programme presented was thoroughly enjoyed. The large audience was very appreciative and each number was received with deserving approbation. The quartette comprised of Franz Kaltenborn, first violin; John Spargur, second violin; Gustave Sach, viola, and Louis Heine, violoncello, received possibly the greatest attention, but the excellent work of Miss Duthie was not slighted. From her first numbers to the last, she aroused her audience to hearty applause.

Those who have heard the quartette before were not disappointed in the slightest degree in its work of last night. The several numbers were carefully selected and as for the rendition there was nothing left to be desired. There was a delightful charm in the music as given on the stringed instruments that held the attention of everyone. It would be difficult to select any one number as being better than the other, for all were so uniformly given and the interpretation so perfect that the most exacting critic could have little choice.

The programme opened with one of Tschaikowsky's selections in D major, Op 11, by the quartette, in which the full strength and tone of the instruments were heard at their best. Miss Duthie then sang three numbers, "L'Estasi" (valse), by Arditi; "Still wie die Nacht," by Bohm, and "Vainkas Song," Stutsman.

The next two numbers, "Reverie," by Vieuxtemps, and "Czardas," by Hubay, by Mr. Kaltenborn, won great applause. This master of the violin displayed that rare ability for which he has so long been noted. The second number was a difficult one, but he rendered it with ease and precision.

Another selection by the quartette was one of Schubert's compositions in D minor, Op. (Posth), in which the sweetest harmony was heard. Miss Duthie then sang Faust's "Le Parlate D'Amor," "Cuttin' Rushes," by O'Neil, and "Afton Water," by Hume, and in all three her voice was delightful, there being sufficient strength and sweetness. She was obliged to respond to an encore and she sang that favorite selection, "Comin' Thro the Rye."

Another feature of the programme was the selections "Adagio," by Goltermann, and "Gavotte," by Popper, given by Mr. Heine on the 'cello. He at once won his audience by his fine execution and he was obliged to respond to an encore.

The programme was concluded by one of Haydn's compositions, "D major, Op. 76, No. 5," by the quartette, in which the same high standard in rendition was maintained. Altogether the concert was considered one of the best of the winter season. William E. Miller accompanied Miss Duthie on the piano in a most satisfactory manner.

New Colored Congregation.

Under the direction of Rev. E. C. Williams, a new colored church has been organized in this city, and a place has been leased at the corner of North avenue and Berckman street, where there will be preaching every Sunday morning and night and Sunday-school sessions will be held in the afternoon. The congregation hopes to buy a suitable building for a church in the near future. Joseph H. Saunders is the secretary of the new organization.

Experimenting With Lights.

For the purpose of demonstrating the advantage of a cluster of incandescent lights over a single arc light, the electric light department of the Public Service Corporation is planning to place such a cluster at the corner of Park avenue and West Second street. The action is the result of a desire on the part of many persons to introduce arc lights in the business section. The Public Service Corporation believes that the same brilliancy can be obtained with a number of smaller lights at less cost.

Past Sachem's Degrees.

For the purpose of receiving their degrees as past sachems, Messrs. Leichtentritt, Armstrong and Clark, of Wetumpkah Tribe, I. O. R. M., will attend the district meeting at Cranford on January 31. It is expected that there will be a large gathering at this meeting which will be an important one.

FRANK L. SCHOONMAKER WEDS MISS GRACE EATON

BRILLIANT CEREMONY WITNESSED BY SEVERAL HUNDRED GUESTS.

Several hundred guests attended the wedding Wednesday, Jan. 18, of Frank L. Schoonmaker, son of Mr. and Mrs. Sylvanus L. Schoonmaker, of this city, and Miss Grace L. Eaton, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bradley Llewellyn Eaton, of New York, which was celebrated in the Collegiate church, Fifth avenue and Forty-eighth street. Roses, lilies and growing plants ornamented the space about the pulpit and the chancel, and made a pretty setting for the ceremony.

The bride, who was gowned in white satin, appliqued with point lace, was attended by Mrs. Lewis E. Waring, of this city, and Mrs. Witherbee Black, as matrons of honor, in white chiffon cloth and lace, with coats of pale blue taffeta; by her sister, Miss Ruth Eaton, as maid of honor, in pink chiffon, with which she wore a pink hat, and by these bridesmaids: Miss Bety Collamore, Miss Madeline Evans, Miss Louise Vanderhoef, Miss Evelyn Ellison, Miss Mona House, of Texas, and Miss Helen Judson, arrayed in frocks of pink and white chiffon. Miss Gretchen Schoonmaker and Miss Margaret Luce were flower girls.

Frederick Bull was the best man, and the ushers were J. Frederick Byers, William C. Clark, Lewis E. Waring, Charles W. Fisk, Hastings Arnold, Henry Lowe, George S. Oliver and Frank T. Reamer.

The bridegroom's gift to the bride was a diamond pin in the design of Prince of Wales feathers, which she wore, and she carried a bouquet of white orchids and lilies of the valley.

Among the guests were relatives and friends from this city, local society being largely represented at the ceremony and the reception which was given afterwards at the home of the bride's parents in West Seventy-third street, New York.

The bride is a popular member of the younger society set in New York, and is also a favorite in local society. Mr. Schoonmaker has resided here some time, where he has been prominent in society. He is an ardent automobilist, and has been active in the affairs of the Plainfield Country Club, as well as many social events.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Jan. 29.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Heroes of foreign missions; what they teach us.—II Cor. xi, 2-8.

Religion in every age of the world's history has had its heroes. Abraham was a hero when he left Ur of the Chaldees, and again when he was willing to offer up Isaac as a sacrifice to his God. Moses was a hero when he placed himself at the head of a race that had been for several centuries in bondage and led them triumphantly, under God, out of the house of bondage. The heroism of Martin Luther, when he started for Wittenberg in spite of all the dangers that beset his way, has scarcely ever been equaled or excelled. Thus the roll of religious heroes might be called down to the sacrifices, self denials and heroic deeds of men of the present age, and they should be an inspiration to us at times when we are beset with difficulties and perplexities.

But in religious annals what men and women have been more heroic than the foreign missionaries? They have left native land, the loved ones in the home, the comforts and blessings, and frequently the luxuries of a civilization which was dear to them, and have gone into strange lands to meet strange peoples with strange customs and to face in the vast majority of cases the race and religious prejudices of those they visit, which in many instances has meant persecution and even martyrdom. Read Paul's record: "In labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, in deaths oft!" And this he follows with a more minute and detailed account of his sacrifices and hardships as a missionary of the cross. Nor is this an isolated case.

From Paul, the great missionary to the Roman world, to Paton, the aged missionary saint in the New Hebrides, those who have carried the gospel to foreign lands have been "in labors more abundant, in stripes above measure, in prisons more frequent, deaths oft."

And what should such consecrated lives teach us? Almost every lesson that the Christian can be taught. As we think of their heroic deeds and sacrifices in humility we should bow down and confess our lack of a devotion and a consecration like theirs. Next to Christ on the cross they should inspire us to self denial for Christ's sake and the world's sake. Trust, patience, endurance, hope, love—what Christian grace is there to be found that has not been beautifully exemplified on the foreign missionary fields? In a word they teach us to be like Christ, the greatest of missionaries, in that He left heaven and came to earth, knowing that He must sacrifice Himself to save the world. Their lives speak to us in the words of Paul when he wrote to the Corinthians, "Be ye followers of me, even as I also am of Christ." Let us receive the inspiration that should come from thought upon these heroic servants of God, and, "seeing we also are compassed about by so great a cloud of witnesses, * * * let us run with patience the race that is set before us, looking unto Jesus, the author and finisher of our faith."

Connecticut's President.

Rev. Russell T. Hall, D. D., of New Britain is the pastor of one of the largest Congregational churches in Connecticut. This, however, has not prevented his giving three years of successful service to the Connecticut state Christian Endeavor union as its president. The movement has a large place in his sympathies, and he is active in his advocacy of its principles. Dr. Hall is a graduate of Oberlin college and Union Theological seminary.

A Mission Word.

I believe the future of Christian Endeavor enlargement must be along the missionary line. The missionary committee is the war department, and the war is on. To my mind, therefore, it is one of the most important departments of work.

We want the same intense interest, careful study of situations, warm sympathies, thrilling patriotism and self sacrificing support in the world conflict against sin and heathenism as are manifest in the battles of nations.

Let us know the names of the magnificent and heroic leaders of Christ's armies in China, India and Africa, their problems and plans and victories at least as well as we know the same facts in reference to the two half civilized nations which are battling today for selfish interests.—Rev. Raphael H. Miller in Empire State Notes.

In Ohio and New York.

Ohio state union and New York state union each observed Nov. 13 as "state work Sunday." This is the third year for Ohio and the second for New York to thus set apart one Sunday when the work which the union is doing shall be presented in every society in the state and wherever possible an offering gathered for its furtherance.

PROGRESS OF PEACE

EUROPE AND AMERICA FAVOR ARBITRATION MEASURES.

Prospects Abroad and at Home of Settlement of International Difficulties by Other Means Than Sanguinary War.

The war in the far east continues to rage furiously; after ten months of unexampled horrors, neither combatant seeks to put a period to the conflict. It may be said that the situation shames our twentieth century civilization; but we must not expect too much from our age, and a marked development of certain political tendencies suggests that even the Russo-Japanese contest may not prove an unmixed evil to the world at large. The protagonists will emerge from the struggle with a real appreciation of the tragedy of war; they will seek peace and ensue it; and nearly all the remaining great powers are showing laudable anxiety to control the factors that make for strife at home or abroad. We cannot ignore the pacific tendency of the times when we reflect that Russia has been at war for the greater part of a twelvemonth, and no power in Europe has taken sides in the contest. Had Europe held a Napoleon Bonaparte there would have been fighting from the shores of the Atlantic to the present theater of operations; but while the two great powers have been locked together in a life-and-death struggle, Europe has been arming herself with treaties of arbitration, the modern form of insurance against war.

Perhaps Great Britain and France have had most to say about the maintenance of European peace, and in the ratification of the Anglo-French treaty by the French chamber of deputies, the sober citizen of either country must find matter for sincere gratitude to his government. It is an open secret that many forces were opposed to the Anglo-French convention. Germany feared it; Russia was covertly hostile; the forcible-feeble policy of the vatican was directed against the arrangement through the medium of the discredited royalist party; and the Combes cabinet was in such stormy waters that some Jonah had to be thrown overboard to lighten the ship. As it happened, Gen. Andre sufficed, but it may be said, without fear of contradiction, that the action of the chamber was by no means a foregone conclusion.

We have seen an arbitration treaty signed by Portugal and Great Britain, and though much has been made of the long-standing friendship between the two countries, it is well to remember now that relations between London and Lisbon were strained nearly to breaking point in the early nineties, when many questions arising in Africa threatened to develop serious trouble. There was no definite breach, but the Portuguese themselves have a proverb that says: "Peace with a cudgel in her hand is war." These difficulties were encouraged by interested parties, who realized that Portugal without British protection was in danger of losing her political life, and that Great Britain without a friendly Portugal had certain difficult complications to face in the Mediterranean in times of trouble.

Even with reference of the Baltic tragedy to arbitration, under the terms of The Hague convention, is a triumph for the peace party, and it must be left to history to do credit to the high restraint of English statesmen, who, at a moment when they might have destroyed Russia's poor remains of sea-power, allowed them to proceed upon their ill-starred way, and refused a chance that no less scrupulous country would have hesitated to seize. If opportunism were the strongest factor in British foreign politics, the Baltic squadron would lie "full fathom five" where the fishermen of the Algarve coast look out over the Atlantic waters.

People who speak with authority declare that President Roosevelt will endeavor to signalize his second term of office by a treaty of arbitration with England, and by encouraging a further conference at The Hague, that shall cover a larger ground and take a more decisive step towards the substitution of international tribunals for the unsatisfactory arbitrament of the sword.

As soon as Russia and Japan can bend their swords into sickles, there will be but one great predatory power left in Europe, a power that is forced to trouble the international waters for its better fishing, and forced to fish that it may live. Happily for Europe, the German danger is recognized and to some extent discounted; indeed, there are shrewd observers who hold that the most of Europe's precautions are taken in view of Germany's possibilities of offense and capacity for intrigue.

"Peace, justice and the Word of God," says Ruskin, "must be given to the world, not sold."

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Jan. 29: "City Evangelization"—Jonah i, 2; Jonah iv, 10, 11.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

The setting of the tides of human life strongly toward the cities has been very strikingly seen in the past few years. In this tendency there is much of encouragement and much cause for anxiety.

It is more than a curious conceit that the Christian Scriptures represent the beginning of the race in a garden and end with its picture in the great city, the New Jerusalem. It is beyond all question that the development of mankind must be in association and not in isolation. Community life is the ideal toward which we are moving. More and more must men learn to live together in peace, and only so can they realize and actualize the ends for which they were created and for which the race is still preserved.

But in the gathering together of a great multitude of people the evils of social life are emphasized, and new difficulties before unknown arise. It seems to be true that men have not yet learned how to live together in great aggregations safely, physically or morally. It has been said, with much of truth in the remark, that no great city has ever yet been governed. The revelations of gross corruption in the political affairs of many of our largest American cities in recent times present a black picture of our condition and prospects.

As disheartening as is the condition of matters of government it is probable that those who know most intimately and accurately the moral side of life in our large cities will be inclined to say that the condition of matters in this respect is no better than in the previous case. It is all too true that the moral atmosphere of most of our cities, large and small, is distressingly corrupt and vicious.

Because few of us comparatively are obliged by our duties to know the haunts of vice and still fewer have the skill to do effective work in purifying them the real condition of affairs is unknown to those under whose very eyes evils of deepest dye are constantly occurring.

There is most urgent need that the church shall recognize the state of affairs and learn her duty and opportunity and then address herself in earnest to the task of rescuing the souls of those who are in peril at her doors. The task is immense. The difficulties are stupendous. Nothing but the most fervent love of Jesus Christ can sustain a soul in the terrible depression of spirit that drenches one who goes into this pit of wickedness. But the call is imperative. Only by the doing of this work can the cause of God on the earth be saved. All our interests for eternity are at stake. Few see the situation in all its appalling features. Still fewer have the courage to make the attempt to remedy the evil.

Much of the truth can never be spoken of plainly in public, but enough can be made known and large sections of the work can be done by any one of ordinary ability and true consecration of heart.

People must take an interest in the welfare of those who live near them. There needs to be a helpful spirit and a kindly disposition. Strangers need friendly greeting. The poor need the right kind of assistance.

The church must arise to the demand of the Lord and fulfill her mission to the world. The city must be evangelized and the salvation of the world advanced until righteousness reigns over all the earth.

A Higher and Deeper Power.

It is much never to show impatience, to be always the same, under disappointment, in weariness and pain, when things go wrong and people are stupid and vexatious—to go on steadily without a sharp or fretful tone in the voice, without petulance or hasty judgment or shaken trust or slackened diligence and effort. Those who reach that point of self mastery and self possession may come to be leaders of men and do great things. But I think there is a still higher, deeper power in the patience of those who are indeed crucified with Christ, crucified to the world, and whose life is hid with Christ in God. The patience of those who as they move about in the world may set even thoughtless people wondering where that quiet, bright grace was learned, feeling somehow that, after all, they that are Christ's have hold of something that the world cannot give and have found a way better than the world's ways, and that there are reality and truth in those words which have perhaps the strongest power words can have to touch the springs of longing in the hearts of men: "Come unto Me, all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest. Take my yoke upon you and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly in heart, and ye shall find rest unto your souls. For My yoke is easy and My burden is light."—Churchman.

Our Testings.

All providences are doors to trials. Even our mercies, like roses, have their thorns. Our mountains are not too high and our valleys are not too low for temptations. Trials lurk on all roads. Everywhere, above and beneath, we are beset and surrounded with dangers. Yet no shower falls unpermitted from the threatening cloud. Every drop has its order ere it hastens to the earth. The trials which come from God are sent to prove and strengthen us.—C. H. Spurgeon.

God and a Friend.

Live not without a friend. The Alpine rock must own
Its mossy grace or else be nothing but a stone.
Live not without a God, however low or high.
In every house should be a window toward the sky.

MRS. ANDRIEDE LOSES

Fails to Recover Damages From the Sebring Estate.

THE CASE UNUSUAL

Plaintiff Claimed She Had Been Injured in Fall Over a Coal Vault Cover.

The action of Mrs. M. L. Andriede, of this city, seeking to recover damages from the Sebring estate for injuries she sustained by a fall in front of the Sebring property on West Front street, on December 5, 1902, when her leg was fractured, was concluded at Elizabeth, Thursday afternoon, and resulted in a victory for the defendants, represented by Codington & Swackhamer. The plaintiff was represented by G. W. V. Moy, Esq. The jury was out but a few minutes, returning with a verdict in favor of the Sebring estate.

Probably one of the strongest points made by counsel for the defense in closing the trial, was the production of a letter, written to Charles F. Sebring on January 5, 1903, by Mr. Moy, in which he was informed that his client, Mrs. Andriede, had had a fall in front of the property in question and had fractured her leg. The letter referred to the walk being covered by ice and snow, but nothing was said about the vault covers, one of which was supposed to have caused the fall.

Counsel for the defense claimed that the vault covers were as good as could be purchased and that in concrete walks they are used in ninety-five cases out of one hundred and that they are generally used in Elizabeth, Newark and New York. On Monday Codington & Swackhamer obtained an order from the court to have the jurors visit the scene of the accident and inspect the vault covers. This was done and W. T. Kirk, who put the covers in the walk, was a witness testifying that they are the best obtainable. They are a half inch high with a bevel edge. The case attracted unusual attention as the result was looked upon as a precedent that might be established in future actions of a similar character.

When the suit was started against the Sebring estate, the plaintiff's name was Miss Margaret L. LaRue, of 441 East Ninth street, but she afterward married, her present name being Mrs. Margaret L. Andriede.

Jacob Wagner, of South Plainfield, Says Blasting for Poles Led to His Wife's Death.

Jacob Wagner, of South Plainfield, has through his counsel, Whitfield S. Angleman, decided to institute a suit against the Northeastern Telephone and Telegraph Company, claiming that the death of his wife was due to dynamite blasting by the company near his home. Mrs. Wagner died Wednesday morning, following a severe attack of heart trouble, produced, it is claimed, by the blasting which was a part of the work in erecting poles through the township.

It is claimed that prior to the blast which damaged Mr. Wagner's home considerably and also frightened Mrs. Wagner, she had no trouble with her heart. After that she was under the care and treatment of Dr. M. J. Whitford.

Does It Cost You

TIME to read through the daily and weekly newspapers, the magazines and reviews, and the special journals that constantly clamor for attention? Can you find time to read enough of them to keep posted even on the important topics of human interest at home and abroad? Does the time demanded by so many periodicals leave you time enough for books?

DOES IT COST YOU—

MONEY to buy even a fairly representative list of papers and magazines? Can you afford to subscribe for as many as would be necessary to give you a complete survey of the world's politics, art, religion, industrial affairs, literature, etc.? Even if you had the time to read them, would you be able to buy several thousand periodicals, domestic and foreign?

DOES IT COST YOU—

WORRY to sift out the conflicting rumors concerning the Japan-Russia war, and to try to follow its progress?. Or to get at the true state of the Presidential campaign, the chances of the several candidates, the tendencies in the various states, and the probabilities as to the platforms? Does it worry or weary you to "keep posted" in this busy, hustling age when there are so few moments for quiet reading and so many demands for your money.

REV. MR. M'CREA CALLED

To Succeed Dr. Snodgrass as Pastor of First M. E. Church.

A MAN OF ABILITY

Second Announcement That Dr. Charles Parsons, of Newark, Will be Pastor of Grace M. E. Church.

Announcement has just been made semi-officially of the successor of Rev. Dr. W. C. Snodgrass, pastor of the First M. E. Church, who recently resigned his charge to accept the pastorate of the M. E. church at Perth Amboy, the same to take effect after the meeting of the Newark Conference. The congregation of the local church has extended an invitation to Rev. Abel C. McCrea, now pastor of the M. E. church at Ridgewood, to become its pastor after Dr. Snodgrass eaves. As this is the largest church of the denomination here, more than usual interest is manifested in its pastor.

Mr. McCrea is about thirty-five years old, has a wife and one child. He has been preaching about twelve years. He is a graduate of Dickinson College and Drew Seminary at Madison. Among his first pastorates was at the M. E. church, Roselle. Afterward he was pastor of Grace M. E. church, Staten Island, for six years and is now located at Ridgewood, where the denomination has a very strong church.

Mr. McCrea is known to be a man of ability, a magnetic preacher, and one particularly genial. During his ministry he has been eminently successful both as a preacher and as a pastor, and he is considered a worthy successor to Dr. Snodgrass, whose work here has been one of steady progress. There is general regret that the present pastor is to leave, for during his stay he has endeared himself to the hearts of his people and he has performed a most excellent work. However, there is much rejoicing to know that the work will be continued by an able and talented minister.

Accompanying the announcement as to the successor to Dr. Snodgrass, is one regarding the successor to Rev. Dr. E. L. Earp at Grace M. E. church. Since Dr. Earp's retirement, the pulpit has been filled by Rev. R. E. Diffendorfer, a student at Drew Seminary. Owing to his studies he will not be able to continue this pastorate, and after the conference Rev. Dr. Charles Parsons, who is now living in Newark, will succeed him.

Dr. Parsons is a man of great ability. His last charge was at the First M. E. church, Minneapolis. He has also been pastor of St. Paul's church, Newark, and the Hanson Place M. E. church, Brooklyn. He is full of vigor and power and it is predicted that he will do a good work in this field. As in the case of Mr. McCrea, Grace church has extended an invitation to Dr. Parsons to become its pastor, and with the concurrence of the Bishop, of which there seems to be no doubt, he and Mr. McCrea will be appointed to the local churches.

LOUIS MACK DIES FOLLOWING AN OPERATION

WELL-KNOWN LOCALLY AS MANAGER OF THE OLD WEST ENDS.

Louis Mack, well-known here where he had many friends, died at his home in Somerville, Thursday, following an operation on Jan. 17. He was a woollen manufacturer, having been connected with that industry at Somerville for many years. He was a son of Adolph Mack, president of the Raritan Woollen Mills. He is survived by a wife, who was a Miss Chambers, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Chambers, of Somerville, and one son.

Mr. Mack is best remembered by the baseball fans of the old Crescent and West End days. He was manager for the Somerville team, which was such a strong rival to the famous Crescents managed by Thomas H. Keller. Mr. Mack was a true sport and took great interest in the National game. He was prominently identified with the best interests in Somerville and was well liked by all. He was a staunch Republican and during the last campaign he was one of the leaders of his party.

A TRIBUTE TO MR. GINNA

Eulogistic Address at Funeral Given by Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie.

"A USEFUL CAREER"

People From All Walks in Life Attend the Services at His Late Home on Watchung Avenue Jan. 18.

The home of the late Stephen A. Ginna on Watchung avenue, was filled with sorrowing relatives and friends, Wednesday, Jan. 18, when the obsequies of this beloved citizen were held. There were present persons from every walk in life, those of the humbler class uniting with those of higher station in a common sorrow over the loss of one who was dear to them. There was a large representation from Bethel chapel, where Mr. Ginna worked so faithfully for twenty years, and where his death will be keenly felt. The entire first floor of the beautiful home was occupied with friends and neighbors, showing the highest appreciation of the memory of a prominent citizen, one who had lived a life of great usefulness.

The display of floral tributes was beautiful, including over fifteen large wreaths of galax leaves, lilies-of-the-valley, roses and other flowers. Perhaps one of most touching tributes was a pillow of roses given by the servants and employes about Mr. Ginna's home. This occupied a point of honor. The casket was completely covered with a pall of smilax upon which rested a cross of orchids. The tributes came from associations of which Mr. Ginna was a member and from business associates, many of whom were present.

Rev. J. G. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Mr. Ginna was a member, had charge of the services, which were opened with the reading of Scripture selections. The church quartette, comprising Miss Grace Carroll, contralto; Miss Davis, soprano; Mr. Greinert, bass, and Rhys Thomas, tenor, sang "Lead, Kindly Light." Mr. Zelie then read other Scripture selections, which was followed by the Apostle's Creed in which those present joined. An earnest prayer was then offered by Rev. F. D. Tildon, of Bethel chapel.

Mr. Zelie then spoke as follows:

"Them that honor me I will honor."

"The Scriptures are full of words which express for us the feelings and thoughts under whose influence we come here to this home today. Yet none seem fitter than these to express what is behind all the outpouriong of affection and sympathy which our city witnesses today. Behind all the honor which our people are moved to pay lies the sense of that life-long honor which this friend and brother had paid to his God and Father. That is the background against which this life appears to us today. Against it he had lived and moved and had his being. He had sought first the Kingdom of God and His Righteousness and all these things had been added unto him. Human hearts are never so deeply stirred—nor moved together as they are by the consciousness of what is divine and when a human life is stirred by that consciousness then it is stirred indeed.

"A man may do many things for his fellow-men, but the greatest that he ever does is what somehow makes them think of their God. The highest gladness and virtue of a life is that which exists not all by itself but has the power to make us to think of God as its source. The honor which we bring here today could not be what it is, so abundant, so spontaneous, if we could not feel that it was all bound up with the honor of our Father which is in Heaven. Them that honor me I will honor.

"I do not think that anything could be dearer to the heart of our brother and friend than to realize that his life has had this affect upon his fellow-men—God in Christ was the background of his life. The Kingdom of God was in his heart and all the things that he did for his city, his church, his home were enfolded by the greater devotion which replenished them all, his devotion to the Kingdom of God. That is why his life was so rich and why today we feel nothing wanting in his influence.

"The few words which can be spoken here today cannot sum up or express all that is in many hearts. We have ceased to expect that. There are too many lives each with its own testimony to bear, for one to do that for all. Below all the loving service which all of us knew there went on a world of secret kindnesses in obscure lives and places. Our community was full of these things and they are known to those who are blessed by them and to our Father which is in Heaven. I cannot but be impressed by thinking how wonderfully rich this life was in its relationships. These are what make a life rich, the relationships into which it enters. What makes a life poor is what it refuses to enter into them, refuses to establish them. As we look back on Mr. Ginna's life, outwardly so quiet, his is one of the things that strikes us first and most deeply, the richness and variety of his relationships. We do not realize perhaps that they are not entered into without great cost. Today we see them yielding up from every side love and gratitude and we wonder perhaps at the good fortune which had made a life to be like this. If we could have seen them at the beginning we might have seen the sacrifices of his own pleasure and convenience. Only so are such relations made. No life enters into them without cost and labor and devotion. All those costs were paid and we heard nothing of them. How good it is to think that up to the very last he was still establishing them while keeping up the older ones in full force.

"And he never said his day was done. He seems never to have thought that it was done. He had not retired, he had not retreated, and he had no thought of having done his share. His hope was that he might keep on doing it and so even to the last he was still giving himself to generous plans and services. Was not this what our Lord meant by more life and more abundantly? It had been his to the very end. If there had been premonitions of the end, if his thoughts unknown to others had turned that way all that we knew was that he made the more haste to redeem the time.

"Many interests which filled and occupied his life and made it larger crowd into our thoughts for recognition today. But save perhaps his own home none were nearer to his heart than the care and service of that well-ordered congregation of Bethel chapel which has had for twenty years the best he had to give from whom is now taken away a life whose departure must change the look of this world for all of them. Sunday was his day and his church, his chapel and his home had for years received from him on that day an almost military faithfulness. A few weeks ago we heard him joyfully sum up the work of twenty years as we celebrated with him that anniversary. If there had been hardships or sacrifices from him in those twenty years of toil we heard nothing but only of the joy with which the work for the people he loved had gone forward. He seemed to look upon it all as his privilege. Not only his church but his city had reason to rejoice in those twenty years of his guidance for the people who had come as strangers to this city. In those years no one can say how many times that congregation had changed for all over the land today are scattered the lives that he had touched and the lives he had influenced, lives that must have taken with them memories of him which have both restrained and inspired them in the battle of life. They had come strangers to Bethel chapel and in him they had met at once the best that our city had to give. We hear much of the great enterprises undertaken for the race which had his life-long interest, but here in our own city had been going on with his constant help for twenty years an enterprise of the same spirit as the greater ones with the same ideals and the same practices of order and soberness and dignity. Many lives had been refashioned and influenced by it. Its power and example has gone into is and changed the life of other churches. It was a home where men and women who were strangers and alone had found shelter and they had gone out from it to bear all the rest of their lives the marks of its influence. The increase of his own affairs never unsettled or changed his devotion to its interests. Who shall speak for all those faithful hearts who had looked to him and not been disappointed, who had depended upon him and not been ashamed, who had known such generous service at his hands? May God continue those same ideals and may those who are left stand closer resolved that things shall be the same.

"And the city. It has a tone and character peculiarly its own. It has a tradition to sustain, it has a kind of life to live. We may say that that tradition is that men should not do just as they will with their own lives, that they shall not say too proudly what is mine is mine, that they will not demand each for himself his full and absolute right, but that each shall gladly surrender much for the good and help of all and that none shall press his full right to the very end. To all that tradition Mr. Ginna brought much. By those principles he freely and gladly lived. He helped to make that tradition of life amongst us and he helped to sustain it. Through lives like his that tradition grows strong and it has become gracious and men and women come here to form their homes under the protection and inspiration of such a tradition. His life has made this a better place for us all to live in, for children to be born and grow up in, for work to be done in. The city flag hangs at half-mast for one of the first of its citizens. The city sorrows! May all the rest of us think that it depends upon to decide whether the same kind of life for which he stood shall go on. He had given all he had to give to it. It is our best memorial of him to give as generously.

"We glory in the midst of our sadness in what he was to his church. We know not how to go on without him. We shall miss him at every turn, his counsel, his character, his friendship, his quick sympathy with every good cause. We thank God for the years that have been ours of his love and faithfulness, and we cannot speak now as if all had come to an end. It is not ours to remember to speak of, to use for our encouragement as we stand on the threshold of each new undertaking. Our life has been richer in the church because of him. It will be a more sacred life because of his memory. His life has been woven in with all that has been done and his memory shall be like his presence. His thoughtfulness for his church lasted to the very end of his consciousness and strength. Freely he had received, freely he had given and we can say of him no truer thing than that he knew how to abound.

"He had not been one of the forces of this world that scatters. He had drawn and centered many. He was central to many lives, and it was this dear home, next to his God, that had centered him. It was here that he had lived beautifully and increasingly. It was here that he had taken strength for all the other relationships in these that were dearest and closest. It was from this home that his love had over flowed and it is each to this home and to those who remain in it to stand hereafter closer together if that may be, helping each other bear this great sorrow that we all come today to bring from our varied friendships of so many degrees our sympathy for those who wear the heaviest of all this burden. May the consolations of God not be small to them. The bitterness, the sting of death is not here, for the sting of death is sin, unreadiness for God, but thus husband and father has lived to Him and He has now come to the fulfillment of all the long blessed years of this home and its love.

"More easily spoken of are all these relationships, but this most sacred one of his own home which most fills all these hearts here today how shall we speak of it. God grant that through the long days to come that the strength which made this husband and father strong to love and protect and save them these many years may make their strength sufficient to this day as they move on through the remaining years to join him in the home above."

At the conclusion of Mr. Zelie's remarks, the quartette sang "I Heard a Voice." After all had been given an opportunity to view the remains, the interment took place at Hillside cemetery. The pall-bearers were John B. Dumont, John Leal, L. N. Lovell, S. S. Guion, A. W. Duxbury, Samuel Beardsley, Alex. Gilbert and Dr. O. L. Jenkins.

MOSCOW AND KOVNO AROUSED

New Governor For Capital City Appointed by Czar.

NEWSPAPER PUBLICATION STOPPED

Russian Troubles Multiply—Many Large Cities Involved—Polish City In State of Siege, Where People, Fired on by Military, Returned the Fusillade, Killing Czar's Officers.

ST. PETERSBURG, Jan. 25.—The appointment of General Trepoff, the former chief of police of Moscow, to the governor generalship of St. Petersburg was accompanied by an imperial decree announcing the creation of the post of governor general. The incumbent of this office, the decree states, will be in control of all the departments of administration of the city and government of St. Petersburg, with power to demand the assistance of the military and possessing all the rights of the minister of the interior over appointments to the municipal council and the zemstvos and also the right to forbid individuals to remain in the city.

The decree, which is addressed to the senate, says:

"Recent events have shown the necessity for the adoption of measures for the preservation of state institutions and public security adapted to the extraordinary circumstances of the times. On this account we have considered it necessary to create the office of governor general of St. Petersburg on the basis of the provisions of the law prescribing the duties of chiefs and governors general and of the following regulations:

"First.—The city and government of St. Petersburg are placed under the authority of the governor general.

"Second.—In questions where the maintenance of state institutions and public security are at stake all the local civil authorities and all the educational institutions are made subject to the governor general.

"Third.—The governor general has the right, with the assent of the minister of the interior, to enforce measures of the censorship statute.

"Fourth.—Apart from the right of making obligatory the regulations in accordance with law providing for stricter maintenance of order the governor general will be empowered to make obligatory the regulations affecting objects or property of any kind in the interests of public tranquillity and order in his jurisdiction."

A Helsingfors (Finland) special report says:

"Thousands of workmen joined in a demonstration here last night. Assembling on the huge steps of the Nicolai cathedral, they paraded the streets till midnight, waving red flags. The windows of public houses, hotels, breweries and a number of newspaper offices were broken. The police interfered rather late, arresting fifty of the workmen."

Reports are in circulation here that the prefect of police has been arrested and that he will be succeeded by General Trepoff, former chief of police of Moscow.

Cossacks while dispersing a crowd of strikers in the Nevsky prospect drew their swords and wounded several men.

Work has been suspended at the works of the Belgian Electrical company, which furnishes the majority of the electrical supply of the city.

The situation is so tense that many inhabitants of St. Petersburg are sending their wives and children to Helsingfors and elsewhere for safety.

Telegrams from Radom, Russian Poland, describe that city as being in a state of siege, with military patrols in every street, who occasionally fire on gatherings of the people, who returned the fire, killing three officers. The revolutionists there are also said to have blown up several buildings with dynamite.

At Moscow the strike is spreading rapidly. All printing works have been stopped. No newspapers will be issued there today.

The police have ordered all arms to be removed from the windows of the Moscow gunsmiths, a majority of whom have closed their shops.

From Kovno, on the Baltic sea, comes a dispatch saying that work has been stopped at all the factories and railroad shops there.

The Liberal paper Russky Viedomosti of Moscow has created a sensation owing to its comment on the official statement of the St. Petersburg shooting. The paper says:

"Arms and slaughter may avail to put down a peaceful demonstration, but force is not powerful enough to quench the aspirations of the Russian heart, ward off the consequences of Sunday's volleys and prevent the movement for liberty and a justly organized government coming to a full fruition."

The municipal council by a vote of 113 to 10 re-elected Prince Galitzin mayor of Moscow. The prince is a prominent leader in the local reform movement and resigned recently on the issuance of the government declaration condemning the reformers' propaganda.

VERDICT OF GUILTY

Charles L. Tucker's Trial Ends at Cambridge.

PRISONER UTTERLY COLLAPSED.

Was Condemned on Purely Circumstantial Evidence—Leading State Attorney Overcome by Strain. Will Be Sentenced Later.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Jan. 25.—After the jury in the Tucker murder trial had come into court and asked for information regarding the exact legal meaning of the word "malice," in the expression "malice aforethought" and for information concerning the different degrees of murder and what constituted manslaughter, which was explained by Judge Sheldon, they retired and in a short time returned with a verdict of guilty of murder in the first degree against the prisoner, Charles L. Tucker.

The last words of the trial of Tucker for the murder of Mabel Page were spoken when Judge Sheldon closed his charge to the jury which has been considering the case since Jan. 1.

The day was a long one and to many in the courtroom a very trying one. Attorney General Parker closed his argument about an hour and a half after court opened. Then came one of the most dramatic incidents in the trial, for most unexpectedly the young prisoner accepted his constitutional privilege of addressing the jury in his own behalf. Rising in his cage, he asserted at first, trembling, but later with considerable confidence, his innocence of the crime. He spoke about ten minutes, and when he concluded Judge Sheldon began his charge.

The case was given to the jury about 2 p. m., and they immediately retired.

The penalty for murder in the first degree in this state is death in the electric chair at the state prison in Charlestown, about a mile from the scene of the trial. Tucker will be sentenced later.

Tucker collapsed utterly when the verdict was announced, and his counsel were unable to revive him for some time.

The announcement of the finding of the jury, which was made at 10:10 o'clock last night, was followed by one of the most remarkable scenes that has been witnessed in a Massachusetts courtroom for many years. Tucker collapsed utterly in the prisoner's cage when the foreman uttered the fatal words, being completely overcome by a verdict which had apparently seemed to him to be an impossibility. He was led from the courtroom across the street to the jail in an exhausted condition.

But perhaps the most remarkable feature was the effect of the announcement of the verdict upon the attorneys not only for the prisoner, but for the commonwealth. James H. Vahey, the senior counsel for the prisoner, was greatly affected, and when he left the courtroom he met Attorney General Herbert Parker in the corridor. The leading counsel for the commonwealth showed the result of the strain to such a degree that he threw his arms around Mr. Vahey's neck, and both men wept on each other's shoulders, the attorney general expressing in broken words his sympathy for his brother attorney.

These two men were not the only ones moved to tears. Philip Mansfield, one of the associate counsel for the youthful prisoner, became hysterical and fell into the arms of a reporter.

The murder of Miss Mabel Page at Weston, Mass., on March 31, 1904, for the commission of which Charles L. Tucker was tried, attracted wide attention because of the unusual and mystifying circumstances surrounding the case.

Miss Page, who was forty-one years of age, lived in a small country dwelling house with her father, Edward Page, formerly a prosperous Boston merchant, and her brother, Harold. She was stabbed to death with a knife. Basing his examination upon the appearance of the wound found in the neck, the only wound at first visible, the medical examiner reported that Miss Page had committed suicide, and it was not until an undertaker had discovered other wounds that it was established that the woman had met death at the hands of an assassin.

The government's case against Tucker included the charge that a slip of paper containing the address "J. L. Morton, Charlestown, Mass.," found beside the body of Miss Page, was in the handwriting of the defendant, that a stickpin found in his pocket had been stolen by him from the Page home and that broken pieces of blade found in his home were parts of the knife with which he had stabbed Miss Page.

The evidence against Tucker was entirely circumstantial.

THE PISCATAWAY SCHOOLS

Taxpayers in a Discussion Over Township's Needs.

THE FACILITIES POOR

Those Opposed to New Building at New Market in Favor of Erecting Others Elsewhere.

The question of providing school facilities for the children in Piscataway Township, is agitating the taxpayers very much. The recent proposition to erect a $20,000 high school at New Market, which was defeated, has been followed by a general discussion of the township's needs. It will be remembered that at the school meeting the proposition was $20,000 or nothing, and the amount was voted down. There are many who believe that could they have voted on some smaller amount, or had plans for the proposed school building been submitted, the proposition would have been carried.

The taxpayers who are against the high school idea at New Market are in favor of establishing a school near Gallagher's Corner and another one at South Plainfield, thus doing away with the present method of compelling children to go from Gallagher's Corner and Dewey Park to New Market for their schooling. To be sure they are transferred in a stage, but this is quite an undertaking when the number of required trips are considered, and besides many parents object to having their children cross the railroad tracks, even in a stage. The distance is considered too far and if a school can be located near Dunellen it would save the township much expense.

The condition at South Plainfield is almost as bad as at New Market. There are nearly as many children in the school there as in New Market and the residents feel the need of increased accommodations. They say that they are willing that New Market should have a new school, one that will meet the required needs, but they want a fair division and think that New Market taxpayers should be willing to help them out as well.

Many are antagonistic to the attitude taken by County Superintendent Willis, who, they claim, planned the action taken at the school meeting. One prominent resident at New Market in speaking of the affair yesterday, said that if the school board had had plans prepared by Plainfield architects, who know how to conform to the school laws, and had presented two or three propositions from which the taxpayers could have made a choice, the new school for New Market would have been granted. It was the apparent determination to spend $20,000 at New Market that caused so much opposition.

The school board endeavored to hold a meeting a few days ago, but there was not a quorum present. It is now proposed to have a meeting soon, and prepare for another school hearing when the matter can be properly voted on. A new schoolhouse will have to be built at New Market within the coming year, as the present accommodations are not adequate as a permanent place for holding sessions, although it fills the bill very well as temporary quarters.

ANNUAL PIANO RECITAL AT THE HARTRIDGE SCHOOL

PUPILS ACQUIT THEMSELVES CREDITABLY BEFORE PARENTS AND FRIENDS.

The annual piano recital at the Hartridge School by pupils of Miss S. A. Palmer, of the school faculty, was held Friday afternoon. It was largely attended by friends and parents of the pupils who performed most creditably. Each one showed steady improvement under the approved methods taught so efficiently by Miss Palmer and hearty applause was accorded the rendition of each number.

In part first this programme was given:

"Evening," "Pussy Cat, Pussy Cat," Esty Foster; "Spanish Dance," Alma McCormick; "Song Without Words, No. 49," "Witches Dance," Gladys Chase; "Aragonaise, from Cid," Francis Foster; "Arietta," Evelyn Butts; "Star of the Sea," Gladys Brooke; "Twilight Reverie," Edith Foster; "Impromptu, No. 3," Mai Rivers.

This was part second of the programme:

"May Queen Gavotte," Arthur Wills; "Loure, from 3d Suite," for 'cello, Dorothy Burke; "Berceuse," "Novellette," Virginia Fox; "Impromptu," Dorothy Brooke; "Habenera, from Carmen," "Shadow Dance," Alice Ross; "Prelude, No. 15," Grace Otteson; "A Merry Sleighride,"—Kinder Symphony.

MANY HUNGRY BEDBUGS

Russel Hazard Says Pesky Creatures Owned the House.

ON TRIAL YESTERDAY

Jury in Somerset Criminal Court at Somerville, Finds Him Not Guilty of Assault and Battery.

Quite a sensation was caused in the Somerset County Criminal Courts at Somerville Monday by the trial of the indictment against Russel F. Hazard, of the borough, charged with assault and battery on E. Frank Vail, of Putnam avenue, in North Plainfield, on October 28, 1904. Don Quixote, that doleful knight of old, and a hungry band of bedbugs figured conspicuously in the case and caused much mirth, especially during the plea of former Assemblyman Samuel S. Swackhamer, counsel for the defense. Prosecutor Griggs appeared for the State.

Vail is a real estate man and went to the home of Hazard on October 28 last to collect a bill of $24 for rent. Hazard was at home reading a copy of "Don Quixote" and when the complainant demanded the money due him he presented a counter bill of $27 for damages done to his mattresses and beds by bedbugs, claiming these pesky creatures had for some time been in the possession of the house and not he. Hazard further told Vail the family had been obliged to abandon the upper rooms in the house and fix temporary quarters in the parlor to avoid the live-stock in the rooms above.

The landlord remarked this was only a flimsy excuse to get off paying up and made another demand for his money. Hot words ensued, and, according to Vail's story, he was slapped in the face, knocking his eyeglasses up the steps of the hallway, and his hat was ruined. He fell to the floor and Hazard jumped on him and rained blows on his head. When he was let up Hazard handed him his hat and told him to get out. He picked up his glasses and Hazard gave him a kick as he went out of the door.

Hazard's side of the story was that Vail had come into his home and insulted him without provocation; that he did not strike him, only in an effort at getting him free from the back of the door; against which he stood, to throw him out of the house.

The jury was out about an hour and returned a verdict of not guilty.

VANNESS WANDERS ON THE WITNESS STAND

ANSWERS VAGUELY WHEN QUESTIONED BY HIS COUNSEL.

"Count" John K. VanNess, of this city, appeared Thursday before Vice-Chancellor Emery as defendant in the matter of a suit brought by George W. Marsh, administrator of the estate of the late John R. Marsh, wandered so much in his replies on the witness stand, that after an all-day session, the action which is brought to foreclose a $3,500 mortgage on his farm, scarcely advanced beyond the initial stage.

VanNess admits the mortgage, but insists that several cash payments, for which he took no receipt, have been paid on it. When questioned by his counsel, W. S. Angleman, he became so vague and wandering in his replies that the judge had to interfere repeatedly. It is said that he is a paralytic, and is at times not entirely responsible. His statement that he borrowed a certain sum of $25 from John R. Marsh while the latter was sick in bed, was flatly denied by Mr. Marsh's son, George W. Marsh, who described very different circumstances under which the loan took place. The son had to admit that his father's accounts had been very irregularly kept, and that he made notes any where he happed to be, a favorite place being his barn door.

The greater part of the afternoon was taken up with testimony by many witnesses from this city and Westfield, introduced in an attempt to show that the defendant had always born a good repusation for honesty and truthfulness. Little was proved as none of the witnesses had ever heard the subject under discussion.

An adjournment was taken to February 14 in the afternoon.

Revoked 1,337 Charters.

Governor Franklin Murphy, just before he retired from office, revoked the charters of 1,337 corporations doing business in New Jersey because of their failure to pay the State tax for the year 1902 prior to January 19, 1905, as required by law. All these corporations were notified that they must pay their State tax, and that the failure to do so would mean the revocation of their charters. When they refused or neglected to pay this tax Governor Murphy took away their charters.

JURY RETURNS A VERDICT

Tems and Tunstall Guilty; Hunt and Henderson Are Not.

OCCASIONED SURPRISE

Confidently Expected That Only One of the Colored Men Would be Acquitted of the Indictment.

Deliberating on the testimony as presented nearly five hours, the jury in the Somerset County Court before which the four Plainfield colored men stood trial for assault on Marshal Walter Smalley, of the borough, brought in a verdict of guilty against James Tems and Whit Tunstall and not guilty with Thomas Henderson and Samuel Hunt. The jury retired at 2:30 yesterday afternoon and it was shortly after 7 o'clock when it returned and the foreman announced the finding.

The verdict occasioned no surprise except in the case of Hunt, as it was expected all along that he would be implicated fully as much as Tems and Tunstall. His freedom from the first charge is attributed to the splendid handling of his case as made by his counsel, William G. DeMeza, who clearly traced his movements on the night of the affair for the benefit of the jury when summing up. He is included in the other two indictments and will have to defend himself in these as well.

Winfield S. Angleman also made an eloquent plea for his client, Thomas Henderson, but the manner in which he conducted the testimony left no doubt but what the jury would acquit him. Through testimony given by Patrolman Peter Hamilton, of the city force, and Henderson's own unshakable story, it was shown conclusively that he had taken to his heels when the real trouble started and was at Front and Somerset streets when the other men and police were fighting.

In his plea to the jury, Attorney DeMeza showed where it was impossible for Hunt to have been an assailant and in speaking for Tunstall, who is also indicted, he asked that prejudiced reports be given no consideration when they retired.

Counsellor Swackhamer was the last to plead and in his remarks he seemed especially bitter toward Marshal Smalley, declaring that he had made an unprovoked assault against the colored men, practically asserting that the officer had precipitated the trouble. It is the duty of the whites, he said, to care for the misguided blacks and he asked that the jurymen give them a fair and impartial consideration.

With the counsel concluding, Prosecutor Griggs spoke for the full hour allotted the prosecution and stated the jury should have no hesitancy in finding the defendants guilty. Many of his remarks were addressed toward Counsellor Swackhamer in a sarcastic vein.

The charge to the jury was made by Judge Scbenck who said that the evidence must be considered with each individual and that if anyone was not there, as asserted by the defense, he should be found not guilty. He dwelt at some length on the facts presented respecting the manner in which Marshal Smalley had first gone out and caught hold of Tems. If it was without provocation, he said, and Tems had not been disorderly, his arrest was illegal and he had a right to resist but the others had no right to interfere. If it was found that they had, they were guilty as charged, and if the jury found that Tems had been disorderly, he was guilty. The charge took but twenty minutes.

With the retirement of the jury, a jury was secured to try the second indictment against the five—Tems, Tunstall, Hunt, Henderson and Lee Wells, "of assault with intent to kill on Marshal Joseph Finck." The body is composed of the following, all North Plainfielders being excused from serving: George Nace, Frank Alstill, J. A. Shillman, August McCullough, John Toms, A. B. Vanderbeek, Mallen C. Stelle, C. W. Wilson, W. W. Darling, J. Mingle, John Sarpner and John Ramston.

The case was opened by Assistant Prosecutor Fred J. Pope and he was followed by Prosecutor Griggs, who asked for a calm view of the indictment against Lee Wells and it was granted, thus freeing him from all complication in the fight.

The first witness called was Dr. Frederick Hughes, who told simply how he had been called to borough police headquarters after the trouble to treat Marshal Finck and he described the wound, saying that at the present time it is but three fourths healed. It was caused, he said, by a

SEVENTH-DAY BAPTIST MEN GAVE ANNUAL SOCIAL

PREPARED AND SERVED SUPPER WITHOUT FEMININE AID.

Starting with an elaborate supper, which was served from 6 until 9 o'clock, and concluding with an interesting entertainment, the annual social given by the men of the Seventh-Day Baptist church last night, was a success from every point of view, and was much enjoyed by a large number of church members and their friends. The supper was provided entirely under the supervision of the men of the church, and the whole programme was arranged and carried out by the male portion of the congregation.

At the conclusion of the supper, the audience gathered in the lecture room, when a novel entertainment took place. Between the musical numbers, which formed an attractive part of the programme, various well known advertisements were represented, to be guessed by the audience. They were given by Arthur Titsworth, F. E. Williams, James Pope and Everett Kimball, the latter appearing as "Sunny Jim."

A quartette, composed of Judge William M. Runyon, Charles Daub, B. F. Tallamy and C. B. Whitford, rendered selections, while Mr. Runyon delighted the audience in his usual humorous manner. He sang several song hits, which won much applause. H. F. Tallamy's bass solos were also enjoyed.

The committee in charge of the social was Arthur Titsworth and J. P. Mosher. These were the waiters: George Clark, chairman; Lawrence Miller, Charles Neagle, Roland Williams, J. Wendell Mosher, Milton St. John, Arthur Titsworth, Robert Mitchell and Boardman Mosher. A candy table was in charge of Charles F. Titsworth.

ENTERTAINMENT AND SALE TO FURTHER MISSION WORK

YOUNG WOMEN OF FIRST BAPTIST CONDUCT SUCCESSFUL AFFAIR.

Under the auspices and for the benefit of the Young Ladies' Missionary Society, of the First Baptist church, an entertainment, followed by a sale of home-made candy and cake, was given in the lecture room of the church, last night. The proceeds from the affair will be used by the society to further the cause of mission work at home and abroad. There was a large attendance and liberal patronage was accorded the sale.

The programme was presented by Fred and William VanKirk, banjo and mandolin, and Prof. Sheck, sleight-of-hand artist. Howard case was the accompanist. The VanKirk brothers gave several of their best selections, were obliged to respond to encores. Prof. Sheck, who appeared at the Christmas entertainment in this church, was warmly received and in addition to some of his old tricks, he introduced some new ones which mystified and pleased the audience.

After the entertainment there was the sale of ice cream, cake and candy. The affair was under the direction of Miss Ada Fountain, president of the society, assisted by Miss Florence Sorrell. At the ice cream and cake table were Mrs. J. B. Probasco, Miss Florence Sorrell, Miss May Reeves, Miss Alice Scribner and Mrs. Kenneth Robbins. Those in charge of the candy table were Mrs. W. B. Vail, Mrs. F. W. Jones, Miss Carrie Coombs, Miss Edith Cairns and Miss Helen Robins. The waitresses were Miss Pauline Denton, Miss Bessie Flanders, Miss Hattie French, Miss Mabel Cook, Miss Helen Hall and Miss Ann Kinsman. In connection with the sale there was a social time. The affair was an entire success and a substantial sum will be realized.

Partner of Judge Dillon.

George Strong Clay, of East Seventh street, who for several years has been private secretary to Judge Dillon, the well-known corporation lawyer of New York, has just been admitted to the firm as a partner in recognition of his faithful services and ability as a lawyer.

George A. Turbett, the present chief operator at the local telephone exchange, will soon be transferred to Newark, and it is expected that a member of the Brooklyn staff will be sent here to take his place.

MORE ABOUT HEARING ON COURT HOUSE AND JAIL

VIEWS OF MAYOR SMALLEY AND WM. H. RILEY ON PROPOSED BUILDINGS.

As told in yesterday's Daily Press a special meeting of the Somerset County Board of Chosen Freeholders was held in the Court House at Somerville yesterday for the purpose of considering the recommendation made by the recent Grand Jury in reference to the necessity of erecting new county buildings. The session was expressly for the purpose of giving the taxpayers a chance to express their views.

W. H. Riley, of North Plainfield, who is connected with the State Charities' Aid Association, said he had talked to many people about his home and found all favoring new county buildings.

He thought a jail should be erected for criminals so they could be kept at work, instead of talking and card playing. Men can walk out of this jail as will and convicted prisoners ought to be in jail they cannot get out of.

Mayor Newton E. Smalley, of North Plainfield, said he thought new buildings were a vital necessity and they should be erected without considerations to cost. He hoped new buildings would be erected that would not only be a credit to Somerville but to the county as well.

Former Congressman Alvah A. Clark said there was no way to properly ventilate the old Court House. It is simply unbearable with a big crowd in it. Others who spoke in favor of the buildings being erected were: A. A. Cortelyou, of Neshanic; Ira Voorhees and John Enk, of Somerville; W. V. D. Jolliffe, of Headington; Fred. McMurtry, of Peapack; C. M. Hoagland, of Griggstown; George Handsfield, of Millstone; ex-Senator Calvin Carle, of Neshanic; Wm. Vosseller, of Raritan and T. E. Gibson, of Rocky Hill. No one spoke against the proposition. Definite action will be taken by the board at the next regular meeting.

PLAN NEW ORDINANCE FOR FUTURE BUILDINGS

MEASURE TO BE INTRODUCED IN COUNCIL MONDAY NIGHT.

For uniformity regarding new buildings to be erected in the business section of the city, there will be introduced an ordinance at the meeting of the Common Council Monday night to establish a building line in this section, where such a line does not now exist. The fact that there will be a number of new buildings erected in the business section this year has led to this action. A survey is now being made for that purpose.

The Common Council realizes that in the case of old buildings it will be impossible to compel a property-owner to move his building on the line, but the ordinance will govern new work.

Assemblyman Heagland, of Somerset County, proposes to introduce a bill in the Assembly to provide for building lines in towns and cities of the State and the local ordinances will not conflict with the State law in this matter.

At present it is not known what action will be taken regarding the Martin and Marshal buildings on West Second street, but a line will be established there and W. R. Coddington is altering his building near the corner accordingly.

LARGELY ATTENDED.

Many Relatives and Friends at Funeral of Miss S. R. VanWinkle.

With her late home on Mercer avenue filled almost to overflowing with relatives and friends, funeral services were held yesterday afternoon over the body of Miss S. R. VanWinkle. They were conducted by her pastor, Rev. Dr. John Sheridan Zelie, who read an appropriate hymns in addition to the scripture. An earnest prayer was offered by Rev. W. E. Honeyman. The floral tributes were numerous.

Interment was made in the family plot in the North Plainfield cemetery, the pall bearers being six nephews: Edward T., John H., William, Charles, Jeremiah and Frank VanWinkle.

George Flagler in Business.

George Flagler, who has been employed by U. B. Crane, of East Front street, has bought out E. B. Force's shoe business and will hereafter conduct the business at the same store.

STRONG BASEBALL NINE TO REPRESENT O. F. C.

INITIAL PLANS OUTLINED AT CLUB MEETING LAST NIGHT.

With a view to the organization of their baseball team, the members of the Orange Field Club met last night at the Hotel Kensington, and discussed at some length the plans for the spring representation on the diamond.

Howard Woolston was elected manager of the team, and he will be assisted by Daniel Handolph. George Conover will act as captain and George McVoy will be assistant captain. Both are good players and capable managers. Raymond Guinn was elected treasurer for the baseball season.

Much of last year's baseball material is still in evidence, and there are several new candidates. Among the players are George McVoy, George Conover, George Liddle, Morris Brokaw, John McCullough, Peter Emmons, Daniel Handolph, Raymond Guinn and Charles Bettyer.

No definite action was taken on the subject of club rooms last night, though the rooms on the third floor of the Woolston & Buckle building were suggested and favorably considered.

FALL ELECTIONS FOR TOWNS AND TOWNSHIPS

BILL INTRODUCED IN HOUSE ADVANCED TO THIRD READING.

Assemblyman DeCou, chairman of the committee on elections, has reported in the House a bill introduced by Mr. Gibbs, of Camden county, which provides that all officers elected at any town, township, borough or other municipality shall be chosen on the general election day in November.

The amendments proposed are: "Provided, that nothing herein contained shall be construed to affect the election of any member of any board of education or school trustee, and all members of such boards shall be elected or appointed at the same time and in the same manner as heretofore;" also a new section providing that the bill shall take effect immediately.

TRUANCY CASES.

One Lad Promises to Attend School and Others to be Given Hearings.

David Allen, one of the five boys arrested yesterday afternoon in the borough by Constable William Pangborn, charged with violation of the truancy law, was discharged by Justice Scribner before whom a hearing was given yesterday afternoon. His mother and sister were present and promised that the boy would hereafter attend school every day, unless ill.

John Conshoe, Harry Hansen, Edward Seader and Benjamin Coddington, the other boys arrested, will be given another hearing Tuesday afternoon, February 7, before Justice Scribner.

FOUND DEAD IN BED.

William Brokaw Passes Away From Heart Trouble.

William Brokaw, one of the best known citizens of Dunellen, was found dead in bed this morning by members of the family. Death was due to heart trouble. Mr. Brokaw was formerly in the butchering and later he learned the carpentry trade. He was born on the Brokaw homestead at Greenbrook and always lived in and near Dunellen. He is survived by a wife, a son, Walter Brokaw, who is employed at the store of H. Schoner & Co., this city, and a daughter, Mrs. VanMiddlesworth, of Dunellen.

Miss Story's Funeral.

The funeral services of Miss Marietta Story were held from the late home, 20 Washington avenue, this morning at 9 o'clock. Rev. William Montgomery Downey, rector of the Church of the Holy Cross, officiated. The remains were taken to Red Bank on the 11 o'clock train and a short service will be held there. The interment will also be in that place.

Injuries Proved Fatal.

The funeral was held at Headington yesterday of Mrs. Augustus Shaw, age seventy-one, who died at her home there from injuries she sustained two months by falling from a train on the North Avenue station in this city. Revs. B. V. D. Wyckoff, of Headington and Isaac Sperling, of South Branch, officiated. Interment was at Clinton.

JONAS LIE'S PAINTINGS FAVORABLY CRITICIZED

HIS WORK ON EXHIBITION AT PENNSYLVANIA ACADEMY.

Jonas Lie, the young Plainfield artist whose studio is in the Babcock building, recently exhibited in the Pennsylvania Academy, Philadelphia, several pictures which have won unstinted admiration from the critics, and have brought him into as much prominence as that attained by his securing a silver medal at the St. Louis Exposition. In reviewing the academy exhibit, the New York Evening Post's critic expressed himself as follows:

"But the real sensation of the show, to one visitor at least, is the powerful realism of Jonas Lie, a young New Jersey painter. All of his five pictures display a direct and expressive method, an unusual command of actual appearances, and a sense for effective and unconventional composition. Take 'The Hillside' (271): A snow-covered, wind swept hill bulges up nearly to the top of the canvas. Ashwart it from behind the curve are thrust up the low gables of two barns. The snow is modelled in a perfectly adjusted scale of blue-gray values, dried weeds bristle through, each from its pit scooped by its own eddy, their dried fronds are weighted each with its burden of snow. All this is set forth in the simplest fashion, without prejudice to the large scale of the whole. I do not know what Mr. Lie has done in the past, but these strike me as lasting qualities, and I am confident that much may be expected from him in the future.

"The management of the Pennsylvania Academy may fairly be congratulated upon their exhibition. One can imagine a better, but hardly with the material at hand. American art was never put to any excitedly at Winslow Homers, Leonard Ochtmans, Horatio Walkers, or even of John Sargents, and youngsters like Jonas Lie and Gutzon Borglum do not grow on every bush."

SALAAM TEMPLE FREE FROM INDEBTEDNESS

POTENTATE AND PARTY TO MAKE PILGRIMAGE TO HOLY LAND.

Salaam Temple, Ancient and Arabic Order Nobles of the Mystic Shrine, met in Newark, last night, those present from Plainfield being H. W. Marshall, Caspar Bolsterie, Henry Woodland. Potentate Wiedemayer was agreeably surprised when it was announced that the entire indebtedness of the Temple, amounting to over $1,800, had been paid and that there is $3,000 in the treasury. The potentate sails on Saturday with a party of Shrines on a trip to the Holy Land, and it was the desire of the members that this indebtedness be paid before he goes away. Thirty-eight candidates were initiated, including H. C. Levy, of the firm of Levy Brothers, of this city.

It was announced that on Friday night, February 24, the Temple will hold a "ladies' night," which will include a vaudeville performance, a supper and dance. The local members will arrange to take their women friends from here by special trolley direct to the Temple on Belmont avenue, Newark.

ARRANGED FOR SHOOT.

Plainfield Gun Club to Have a Special Event on its Grounds Saturday.

The Plainfield Gun Club met last night at Harry Dreier's store on West Front street and arranged for a shoot on the club grounds, Cote's Hill, on Saturday afternoon. The shoot will commence promptly at 1 o'clock. It was decided to have three special events for which prizes will be offered and a team match between the Brookside Gun Club, of Scotch Plains, and the Plainfield Gun Club. The match will be followed with sweepstake shooting.

In the three special events the contestants will be from Plainfield and vicinity and for this reason considerable interest is being shown in the coming shoot. The trolley cars pass within a very short distance of the club grounds, and it is expected that the event will attract many interested in this sport.

COURT WATCHING, I. O. F., HAS A "LADIES' NIGHT"

ENTERTAINS GATHERING OF FRIENDS WITH MERITORIOUS PROGRAMME.

Court Watchung, No. 3971, Independent Order Foresters, entertained its women friends last night, with a programme of unusual merit. The affair was termed a "ladies' night entertainment," and in response to the invitations issued there was a large attendance of women and members of the lodge. The programme was opened with an address of welcome by Chief Ranger Charles Hayes, who explained the object of the entertainment—to interest the women friends of the lodge and to secure new members.

The programme was opened with a selection on mandolins by Samuel B. Howe, Jr., Chester Briggs and Theodore Gaveit, of the Sagamore Musical Club, followed with vocal solos by Miss Edith Howe. Miss Bertha Bender, a violinist of considerable talent, gave a difficult selection and she was encored but refused to respond to encores.

A feature was the impersonations given by Walter David. He was exceptionally clever and his recitations were received with generous applause. He was followed with selections by the mandolin trio, and then Miss Edith Howe sang two very pretty Japanese songs which won much favor. Another violin solo by Miss Bender and additional impersonations by Mr. David concluded the programme. Miss Bender was the accompanist for the soprano, while the latter accompanied Miss Bender.

After the entertainment all were invited to the banquet rooms, where refreshments were served by a committee from the lodge, assisted by some of the women, wives of the members. Everyone had a good time and the affair was considered one of the best ever given by Court Watchung.

TRACED JAPAN'S HISTORY SINCE PERRY'S VISIT

DR. SMITH GAVE INSTRUCTIVE LECTURE AT Y. M. C. A. LAST NIGHT.

Japan's history from the time of Perry's exploration up to the beginning of the Russian War, was related in an interesting manner last night by Dr. George T. Smith, at the Y. M. C. A. Dr. Smith was formerly a missionary in Japan, and is well acquainted with the history, physical condition, and customs of the "Island Empire."

The lecturer began with the history of Japan at the time when foreign nations were debarred from entering its ports, and traced the development of its people since the year in which the United States opened the empire to the outside world. He spoke at some length of the characteristics of the Japanese people, dwelling briefly and in a general way on the Japanese nations beyond the world, their distinct customs, and their enduring the courageous qualities. Dr. Smith expressed the opinion, which is now generally voiced by those acquainted with the Japanese, that they are the most humane people on the globe, and that the possibilities for Christian work in Japan are in no country to be equalled.

Dr. Smith spent part of his lecture in telling of personal experiences while in Japan, and a portion of his talk was illustrated by stereopticon views.

May Decline Nominations.

A report has reached the Attorney General's office at Trenton that Joseph Coult, Jr., and Lewis J. Iliff, the Republican and Democratic nominees respectively for the Assembly in Sussex county, under the Special Election act passed last week, had entered into an agreement to decline the nominations. This would leave the Republicans and Democrats of Sussex without candidates, and would permit the Prohibitionists, as was said by a plain spoken Republican of that county, "to step in and take the cake."

Exams May Effect Athletics.

The semi-annual examinations at the Plainfield High School will be concluded tomorrow, and the regular recitation periods will be resumed on Friday. There is considerable anxiety among the boys of the school as the outcome of these examinations and the effect upon athletics. With the championship games against Lenape's baseball team, and it is expected that all the best players are needed. A failure in one subject is enough to bar a member of the team from playing.

NO DEMOCRATIC NOMINEE

Deplore Useless Election and Refuse to Name Candidate.

MR MARTINE'S ADDRESS

Seven Plainfield Delegates Present Resolutions Being Made Unanimous—Convention Last Night.

Declaring in a resolution that they saw no need of going on with a useless election, the Union County Democrats gathered in convention at headquarters in Elizabeth, last night, failed to name a candidate for Assembly to oppose the Republican nominee, Randolph Perkins, in the coming special election. This determination occasioned no little surprise as no intimation had reached this end of the county that any such action was intended. It is asserted that this plan was first broached by the Westfield contingent from where the late O. H. Brokaw was elected and whose death occasioned the proceedings for the filling of the vacancy. As the Republican convention has been held and the nominee named, the election will go on one sided unless the Legislature again acts tomorrow night, which is hardly likely.

The meeting was called to order by Chairman Chewelt, of the county committee, and William B. Tuttle, of Westfield, was made chairman, and Fred Zier, of Elizabeth, secretary. In an introductory address, Chairman Tuttle spoke of the cause for the gathering and said that inasmuch as the opinion of the attorney general made the special election mandatory, there had been nothing to do but go on with the proceedings. Committees on credentials, rules and resolutions were then appointed and a recess was taken for ten minutes.

The committee on resolutions was composed of James E. Marrisee, of this city, Robert McAdams, of Elizabeth, and Stephen J. Cain, of Elizabeth. They held a conference which resulted in Chairman Martine being apprised of the determination not to name a nominee and a resolution was drawn up to that effect. He had gone to the convention with the Plainfield delegates, fully intending to present the name of John P. Owens for consideration, but he offered no objection when he saw it was the sense of the gathering.

When convention was again called to order, the resolution was read. In a preamble it deplored the death of Assemblyman Mebree and the need of a useless election and then asserted that the will of the people last November was for a Republican Assemblyman and that their wish should be respected. It stated that it was the sense of the committee that no nomination be made and it asked the ratification of the convention. Concluding it reaffirmed its adherence to Democratic principles, dwelling on the burdensome tariff and speaking for continued agitation for equal taxation and the support of its exponent, Charles G. Black.

A standing vote was taken on the resolution and nine delegates opposed it, seven from this city and two from Garwood. Mr. Martine at this point addressed the gathering and urged that the sense of the convention be reconsidered and the Garwood delegates joined the assenting side but the seven Plainfielders steadfastly refused to favor the resolution and the matter so stood. Mr. Martine continued his address and spoke highly of Mr. Owens, declaring that he would be an excellent choice and do credit to the party, but as he is young his chances a year from now would be just as good if no better and it would be just as well to wait. The Democrats in the Assembly, he said, are hopelessly in the minority and that absolutely nothing would be gained by the special election even if their candidate was elected.

This was the only business transacted at the convention and adjournment was made soon after Mr. Martine concluded speaking.

Cash for Trading Stamps.

The Trenton Retail Grocers' Association, Monday night, adopted a resolution favoring the passage of Assembly bill No. 3, introduced by Thomas B. Layden, of Paterson, which provides that all trading stamps, etc., must have legibly stamped on the face thereof a redeemable cash value, which amount must be paid for such redemption if demanded. The grocers seek the passage of the bill, as they claim it will benefit them and their customers.

District School Meeting.

The citizens of Piscataway township will meet Thursday, Feb. 9, at New Market, to take action on a proposition to erect a new schoolhouse.

A Worthy Memorial to Jennie June

It is a fickle and forgetful world. Humanity has so many troubles of its own that it cannot long hold in mind even individuals who have helped it. That the remembrance of "Jennie June" Croly may not pass so speedily from the thought of the living the Women's Press club of New York city has prepared a beautiful and fitting memorial to her. It is a handsome and artistic book dedicated to the General Federation of Women's Clubs of America. Mrs. Croly was the originator of the federated woman's club idea. She was, indeed, practically the orginator of the woman's club itself, Sorosis, of which she was the chief founder, having been the first incorporated woman's club. Mrs. Croly was also the founder and until her death the only president of the New York Women's Press club. After her death a committee of that club, headed by Mrs. Caroline M. Morse, made a collection of sketches of their late leader prepared by various writers, also of many of her own papers and letters to friends. These constitute the contents of the beautiful book recently published, which is called "Jane Cunningham Croly, 'Jennie June,'" Mrs. Morse, Jennie June's intimate friend of years, has edited the book with sympathetic discrimination.

Miss Gabrielle Clark of Salem, Ore., is a successful and very capable young lawyer.

Smile! Oh, yes, smile at everybody and everything, and if you can't smile, grin!

Already no doubt the majority of womankind are preparing to break their New Year's resolutions gracefully. But the following list is bold fast to for the whole year through thick and thin: "I will put forth good will and helpfulness to everybody, and I will mind my own business strictly."

Wherever a woman is really popular you will note that she has a hearty, affectionate, natural manner which puts to flight and to shame all the kangaroo hand shakings, the artificial society smiles and all the conventional small talk in the universe. The woman whose life is spent in an effort to do the conventionally proper thing shrinks into pitiful smallness beside the woman who is sincere and naturally warm hearted and sympathetic. This makes a woman magnetic—to be sincere, warm hearted and sympathetic.

Blessed be the woman who does not know what everybody else ought to do!

American girls going to France to study ought to get passports before leaving their native land or they may be mistaken for spies, as Miss Eugenie Ulrich of New York was. Miss Ulrich was an American teacher and lecturer who spent some time in Limoges, France. Soon after going into the town she was summoned to appear before the authorities and present her credentials. She had none, not thinking them necessary. But the French authorities held her under surveillance as a Russian spy, and she was not allowed to go free till the state department at Washington interfered in her behalf.

Mrs. John D. Sherman has been invited to become instructor in parliamentary law at a Chicago law school. Mrs. Sherman was official parliamentarian at the last meeting of the General Federation of Women's Clubs at St. Louis. Many of the most accomplished parliamentarians of the time are women. They are versed in all that pertains to the holding of any meeting, from a political convention to the executive committee meeting of a woman's club. Yet even so late as 1852 Mrs. Elizabeth Cady Stanton could find no woman who she thought knew enough to preside at the first woman's rights convention. Once more "the sun do move."

In a recent English magazine a wife writes to the editor asking him what she can do with a husband who drinks up all of her earnings, leaving her nothing with which to support her children. The editor can only tell her that nothing at all can be done. The law gives the husband there the right to his wife's earnings, to do with them exactly as he pleases. How would you like to live under such laws as those? American women do not half appreciate their own country.

No matter who or what you are, learn to do something useful whereby you can earn a living. Every year more and more women brought up in luxury are forced by some turn of fortune to seek employment, and they are as ignorant as a kitten of any work that the world is willing to pay for. Their condition is pitiable indeed. Remember the Tolstoi dictum that it is the first duty of every human being to do some useful work.

We have not cultivated our powers to the half of their capacity. If we had done so, all the race could achieve things that now seem within reach of only a few persons of transcendent genius. All power is latent in every one of us.

An Eccentric but Pretty Round Toque—A Demi-season Novelty.

There is a new and pretty turban toque very broad and round in shape. The outside brim is very tall, being built up with layers of white mallines. The same material is puffed and ruched at the top. Crowns are of chiffon, velvet or tiny roses. Only a tall woman should wear a hat of this type, as it has a tendency to diminish the height of a small person.

Jet is reappearing as a trimming for evening hats.

Dainty silks with white grounds covered with tiny bouquets or a single flower, such as a lovely moss rose bud, are very attractive for afternoon tea frocks.

The flowers on these silk patterns are to be found in the natural shades of the flower in the design or in pale pastel shadings.

There is a new shade of blue worn in the evening called "twilight." This shade is particularly effective in gauze and velvet fabrics.

The Parisian model hat seen in the cut is of rich white guipure lace. The brim is softened with a rouleau of twisted tulle. A full trimming of soft bronze ribbon encircles the crown and forms the stylish rosette.

SPRING STYLES.

A New Serge For Demisaeson Wear. Military Coats Revived.

A very English looking suit is made of the new blue serge which more nearly resembles cashmere than any material answering to the old name of serge. The new blue is a happy mingling of navy, Russian and cadet blue tints. A gown of this blue serge is stunning with a bright shade of red used for vest, deep cuffs and skirt strappings.

Smart tailored frocks have lost much of their air of severity. Some of the newest models are almost fussily trimmed.

Plum bloom is an effective color for a spring costume. This lovely shade is not as bright as cardinal, but has the rich, deep tones of purple with high lights of red.

A gown of plum bloom cloth is smart made with a plaited skirt stitched very tight around the hips and flaring at the foot. About the hem are swirls of silk braid. The Eton jacket is ornamented with motifs of braid and has a tiny vest of ivory silk held in place with buttons of amethyst and silver.

The up to date girl is wearing a long military coat made on the lines of the army coats of 1861.

Mingled with the feather boa and muff are to be seen in some instances ruchings of chiffon flowers and velvet. Satin flowers show up prettily against the feathers. The favorite flowers employed are forgetmenots, lilies of the valley and gardenias.

The gown shown in the picture is of light fawn broadcloth. The skirt, prettily disposed in stitched sections, is trimmed with buttons. The bolero jacket has small flat revers and tiny cuffs of green cloth.

WHAT IS WORN.

Ball Gowns of Scarlet Tulle Are Very Effective.

Red walking suits are as popular as the many tones of brown and green.

Quite smart is a walking gown of red corduroy, a rich, deep shade almost a plum. The dress is simply made with a plain circular skirt and Norfolk jacket.

Spangled ball dresses of scarlet tulle are very effective and becoming. There is certain brilliancy about a frock of this color found in no other tone when worn by the right person.

In reception gowns old rose and red are colors often employed to carry out charming creations.

Cashmere of a new and glorified weave is high in fashionable favor.

TOMATO RED CLOTH DRESS.

Skirts of this fabric worn with Louis jackets of velvet, trimmed with ruffles and jabots of lace, are very fetching.

The illustration shows a gown of tomato red cloth. The full skirt is trimmed at the bottom with bands and straps of stitched cloth. About the bolero jacket is an edging of white cloth embroidered in black. Chemisette and sleeve puffs are of white chiffon.

LAYETTE NOVELTIES.

The Modern Baby Has Lots of Fascinating Accessories.

The modern baby's layette is a thing of extravagance and beauty. Besides the dainty dresses, coats, caps and underwear, it must contain all sorts of attractive accessories.

A set of rosettes, butterfly bows and smart little ribbons must be provided for toilet basket, crib and baby carriage.

Sets of this kind made up in handsome satin ribbon are among the many presents given the new baby.

"Good luck" toilet sets of white celluloid decorated with a four leaf clover in light green enamel are new and pretty.

Measuring sticks painted with baby figures and lettered in colors "How tall will baby grow?" are to be found in the shops.

The latest fad in baby modes is to have the outside of the infant's carriage and the lining match exactly. For instance, a pink enameled "cart" is fitted up with cushions of pale pink silk or satin.

A very good substitute for the expensive fur carriage rug that has a pocket in which to slip the baby is a flannel bag made large enough to accommodate the small specimen of humanity. The bag draws up with a stout string, which is fastened just under the infant's arms.

Sets of daintily embroidered pillows, large ones for the crib and carriage and smaller ones for tucking in odd places, are indispensable articles in the layette.

The waist illustrated is of nun's veiling. The fronts, which have a surpliced effect, are shirred on the shoulders, draped about the figure and fastened with two black velvet bows. The velvet is also used to outline the chemisette of lace. The sleeves are puffed over lace cuffs.

CHIC CONCEITS.

Winter Shirt Waists Elaborately Embroidered in Colors.

One of the prettiest fancies to be recorded in the blouse world is that of hand embroidery done on the material itself, after the manner of treating the linen blouses of last summer. The materials so treated are usually French flannel, nun's veiling or fine cloth and the embroidery stitch is worked in some harmonizing or contrasting color.

A new waist of white nun's veiling has a wide center box plait and groups of small tucks on each side to give the required fullness. French knots and tiny sprays of flowers worked in pale blue decorate the front, cuffs, collar and shoulder straps. Tiny pale blue enameled buttons are sewed down the center front.

A blouse model that struck an original note by reason of its decorative treatment is of white cloth. The fullness at the top was disposed of in rather wide tucks dotted over with pale blue pin spots, the center box plait, shoulder bretelles, cuffs and collar trimmed with two inch lines of coarse machine stitching.

The illustration shows the sensation of the moment in the way of a dressy hat. It is made of violet faille, and the wide brim is faced with shirrings of violet tulle. A jeweled venetian cap lifts the hat at one side. Around the crown are several white feathers.

WHAT IS WORN.

Colors That Have Been Accepted For the Season.

White as a costume color has been gradually passing out of the sartorial world. Indications in the early fall pointed to pink as the favorite shade of the season, and the prophecy has been perfectly carried out.

Pale blue tints in exquisitely flowered silken stuffs are winning the post of honor, particularly when made up into pompadour evening frocks.

Fluffs and frills are everywhere piled upon gowns in profusion and are the central dominating idea of a costume repeated in an ever widening ripple of trimming.

At the hems the width of skirts is enormous, but materials are so cleverly managed by the expert dressmaker that there is nothing but a soft picturesque mass of fluffiness not at all complicated.

MANTLE OF OSTRICH WHITE CLOTH.

Irish crochet laces and all the French laces share honors with the sheerest of silk laces in delicate tones of pink, blue or yellow.

Evening caps are charming. An exquisitely beautiful creation is of palest sky blue velvet. There are about a dozen rows of gatherings around the shoulders that give the fullness necessary to the grace of the cloak. Over the gathering is a double row of silver ball embroidery and above this a high medici collar of ermine. This royal fur and silver embroidery ornament the front of the wrap. The sleeves are original and available—large affairs of white satin brocade outlined with silver introduced from wide openings under the arms.

The chic mantle illustrated is of oyster white cloth, with vest and cuffs of pastel green velvet. The buttons outlining the vest are of the "new art" variety carried out in emerald and gold.

FASHION FACTS.

The Mode In Sleeves—Leather Embroideries Are Smart.

La mode continues very elastic where sleeves are concerned. The gigot sleeve is much to the fore both in plain tailor made costumes and in dressy afternoon frocks. It is very pretty when shirred, gathered or plaited all the way up the arm.

The long tight fitting cuff is a distinctive feature of the new sleeves and comes as a welcome change after the enormously puffed draperies worn at the wrists. These deep tight fitting cuffs are very becoming to a well shaped arm.

Beautiful embroideries of suede and leather are among the winter's novelties. The waistcoat is playing an important part on the XV. and XVI. cutaway coats, which are mostly seen developed in handsome velvets. A number of these coats are made of a contrasting shade of velvet from the skirt worn with them and are trimmed with frills and jabots of old lace and brocaded waistcoats, which fasten with wonderfully beautiful crystal and enameled buttons.

The fashionable blouse illustrated is of peach satin. The material is drawn slightly across the figure into a pointed effect and held on each side of the front by revers-like plaited pieces of the satin. The plastron is plaited crosswise and trimmed with two rows of cluny lace medallions.

FOR WINTER DRESSES.

Chiffon Taffeta and Batiste Are Durable Fabrics For Ball Frocks.

All sorts of materials are being used this winter. For evening frocks handsome silks and the most ephemeral gauzes and chiffon are equally in favor. As usual, the middle course is the safest, and a delicate, graceful silk is perhaps the most satisfactory.

There is a chiffon taffeta which makes charming party dresses for girls. This fabric recommends itself because it does not crush and always looks fresh and dainty. Then there are any number of muslins, nets and silk batistes. They come double width and make foamy, fluffy frocks.

In pale blue, pink and yellow, batiste is very attractive and has the merit of being inexpensive, costing generally about 75 cents a yard.

The new evening frocks are long all around, but made without trains. The skirts may be as much gathered, befrilled and beruffled as the wearer can stand provided the effect is not clumsy.

A white chiffon frock trimmed with ruchings of the same fabric and a little real lace to be worn with several different sashes and berthas is a splendid investment.

The smart dress illustrated is of a dull shade of claret cloth. The skirt just touches the ground all around and is finely tucked about the waist and trimmed at the hem with silk braid applied in graduated lines and finished with conventional designs at the top. The bodice is tucked from the shoulder, and on either side of a chiffon emplacement are lines of the braided passementerie. Buttons ornament the vest. Two puffs separated by braid over a high cuff of cloth compose the sleeves.

SPRING MODES.

A Peep Into the Future—The Ubiquitous Shirt Waist.

Gravely we have listened to the authorities when they told us that separate and shirt waists are entirely out of style, but here we have in the newest of the spring garments the largest and the prettiest stock of such things I have ever seen. And the style varies with every one of them. Some have regular Garibaldi straps down the shoulders, while others show set straps all the way down the sleeves, starting from the neck band. The bishop sleeve still holds its own and is apparently better liked than any other. There are slight differences, such as wide or narrow cuffs and full gathered tops or tucked ones. Some sleeves have three and four puffs ending in a ruffle of some kind, lace generally.

The leg o' mutton sleeve is back to stay, and between it and the big baggy bishop sleeve the leg o' mutton is to be chosen. A novelty in a sleeve of this kind is shown in the illustration. The upper part of the sleeve is cut very snug, and it is therefore open from the bend of the elbow down and buttons all along. The line of buttons comes just back of the seam, and as the buttons are brighter than the material they form a sort of trimming. The waist of which this sleeve is the adjunct is of coin spotted velutina in a deep, rich damson prune. It is cut away at the neck and has a wide band of plain black velutina, this overlaid with point lace. Still above this is the chemisette of lace over an inset of cream silk. The belt is a crush affair, built on the tight foundation.

For an afternoon tea there is a dainty device in the form of a light printed silk with deliciously vague designs in tints and colors on a white ground. This has a yoke simulated by shirrings, in which fine pipings are run and drawn up in such a way as to outline the yoke. The top is finished with a lace stock, and the cuffs are made in the same way. The sleeves are plain bishop. The shirring at the top and the gathers at the bottom of the waist mold the waist to the form, and a shirred belt finishes it.

For evening there are many designs of waists of different materials. One had a short Eton of plaits of light figured silk over plain satin to match the material in the skirt. The sleeves were of the figured silk, with lace at the elbow.

Some of the street costumes have separate waists, cut in various styles. One, which was developed in several different materials and colors, had a regular basque shape and extended ten or twelve inches below the belt. The back was shirred in the center at the waist line and along the sides to the front, which was open to show a lace vest front, with a narrow pointed belt. The revers were of soft shade of tan to match the lightest shade in the brocade of the basque. This also had bishop sleeves, with lace cuffs.

For more ordinary requirements we may find hundreds of different waists, mostly on the shirt waist plan. These have plaits somehow or somewhere. In one instance I noticed a dainty waist of white wash silk, with three hemstitched tucks just above the belt running around the waist, while at the shoulders there were three lengthwise tucks. The sleeves, just at the elbow, had three tucks each an inch wide and were finished in bishop form, with lace cuffs.

In the mercerised cheviot we find many very stylish and comparatively inexpensive waists. The general plan of these is to have three tucks on each side of the front and a wide center ornamented with several fancy buttons and stitching. There are tucks at the tops and bottoms of the sleeves, which are always bishop. Stocks are made to match or fancy stocks may be worn. The plaits are narrow in these and do not reach very far down.

Another pleasing general fashion is the waist with wide box plaits which reach from shoulder to waist line—one on each side, one in the middle in front and two in the back. A plain lace stock finishes these prettily. The sleeves are bishop, and simply gathered at the shoulder and wrist. Lace cuffs, of course.

Aside from these waists there are so many that no one could tell all about them, but a woman can have any kind of a waist she wants if she will bear in mind that there is little pouching in the front. There is a certain amount of fullness, but it is evenly distributed.

Notable Women

Leaders In Various Lines of Effort

None serves the race more than he or she who finds out new and better ways of doing things. And it has happened that, taking her own ideas entirely, a member of the feminine sex has sometimes improved on methods that have been in vogue since history began to be recorded.

This Miss Anna Marks, who tames and educates wild and so called vicious horses wholly by wise kindness, seems to have done. She herself is a horse breeder and trainer and so successful with her woman's way of conducting the business that veteran horse "breakers," as they have always been called, must acknowledge her method is superior to theirs.

The young lady was born with a love of animals, without which nobody can do anything with them. The words "break" and "broken" are thrown altogether out of her horse talk. She acts on the assumption that the horse mind, so far as it goes, is not unlike the human mind, and she accordingly treats a horse like a gentleman. She talks to her horses as if they were human. To her a colt is a baby—at least an equine baby. She begins to teach it with infinite patience and kindness, showing it what she desires it to do in a sort of horse kindergarten play. So soon as it comprehends what is wanted of it the young creature does the thing of its own accord. Miss Marks has her young pets so thoroughly in training that last fall she exhibited a colt four-in-hand, the young creatures trained to perfect action and control, quite as if they had been six or seven years of age, though none was more than four months old, the youngest only two months old.

Miss Marks' theory is that in general horses are dangerous only when they have become afraid of man and his works. Remove this fear through wise gentleness and the animal comes to have such love for and such faith in man that it will do anything he wishes. Acting on this theory, the woman trainer has rendered gentle and docile several horses that were sold by previous owners because they were vicious and unsafe. A notable instance of her skill is found in the fact that she has taught two stallions to occupy the same stable peaceably and affectionately together. She says there are some mean horses, but comparatively not nearly so many as there are mean people.

The state of Missouri has a woman political orator so remarkable that her speeches recall to old timers the fiery eloquence of Anna Dickinson during the years of the civil war. Anna Dickinson did much, it was said, to carry the country for Lincoln in 1864. Anna was only nineteen years old then. In like manner it is said now that to another girl of nineteen, Miss Litta Wood, are due many thousands of the votes cast for Roosevelt in 1904.

Miss Wood is the daughter of an old soldier of the civil war. Her father did not regret she was not a boy; on the contrary, he was proud of his girl when at reunions of veteran soldiers her ringing sentences drew round after round of cheers from the old boys. Not everybody in Missouri was surprised when, a few days ago, the girl of nineteen was selected for one of the state campaign orators. Her father traveled with her as she canvassed Missouri, making speeches.

It is certain that if women would devise new business schemes on their own account they would be generally working under employers many would succeed markedly who now merely assist on low wages. Where women have attempted new enterprises they have often won nobly. One young woman at least has made a notable success with new business ideas. One of these was the publication of a pretty little weekly bulletin, giving strangers and tourists in New York city information concerning the city. The artistic title of the publication told visitors where the points of interest are, where to shop, where to dine, what is going on at the theaters—in all, just what they want to know. Merchants pay to advertise in the bulletin and hotel people subscribe for it by the hundred.

Worked in an American Factory for One Dollar a Day, and Ran Locomotive on the Pennsylvania Railroad.

St. Petersburg.—Prince Michael Hilkoff, imperial minister of railways and transportation in Russia, the genius of the Trans-Siberian railway has had a most romantic and inspiring career, beginning his working life as a day laborer in America.

When the Russian serfs were emancipated by Alexander II., the grandfather of the present czar, Prince Hilkoff's father was ruined, at least so far as available financial resources were concerned. Just at this juncture the father and son began a bitter quarrel, which ended in voluntary exile on the part of the latter. In his anger, the son, the prince of to-day, renounced all his titles and ancestral estates. He also resigned his office at court—as an officer in the guard of the Russian empress—and forthwith sailed for the United States as a common emigrant.

He arrived in Philadelphia absolutely penniless. For a week he walked the streets, hungry, cold, homeless, an alien in a strange land. One day he entered a machine shop and blurted out: "I want work at any wage." "What's your name?" asked the foreman. "Mi-kale," replied the young man, pronouncing his name in English, with evident difficulty. "My other name's John," he added, thinking that John was as good a name as any other. And thus Prince Hilkoff became John Mikale, an attendant of a bolt making machine at one dollar a day.

That machine shop was as a paradise to him, after his many days of tramping. He lived on 50 cents, and saved the remainder, until he had enough to pay for a course of instruction in mechanical engineering. After attending the bolt-making machine for two years, and having secured a good working knowledge of mechanical engineering, he went in search of a job where there would be better chances of promotion.

He found his opportunity at the offices of the Pennsylvania railway, where he was given a situation as a brakeman on a freight train. From that day forward he stuck to railway work, devoting all his spare time to the study of railway engineering. Presently he became brakeman of a regular passenger train, and later was promoted to the position of locomotive engineer.

In time he began again to look about for an opening that would afford him a still greater chance for the exercise of his talents. One day the minister of railways from the South American republic of Venezuela was a passenger on the train of which "John Mikale" was engineer. There was a breakdown and the engineer was the only man who kept his head, and the only man who knew how to fix up matters without waiting for the repair train to come. The South American visitor engaged the engineer in conversation, learned that the young man wanted a higher position, and thereupon offered him a place as superintendent of a new railway in Venezuela. "John Mikale" accepted, and went to South America at the expense of his new friend.

Then came a longing for his old home in Russia. He decided to throw up his job and return to his native land at whatever set-back to his career. Sailing as "John Mikale," and concealing his true name and title, even when he reached Russia, he applied for a situation on one of the principal Russian railways. As "John Mikale," therefore, he began his life over again in his own country as a station agent in an obscure town. "My chance will come," he said, noting that there was frequent trouble in the movement of trains at his station.

That psychical moment came for "John Mikale." The trains became hopelessly blocked day after day, and the heads of the line far away were in despair. Mikale wired: "Will you leave it to me?" "We'll try you," came back the answer. And a few hours later "John Mikale" had so arranged switches and schedules that never again were trains congested at that point. His technical skill shown in that emergency brought him to the attention of his superiors, and even to the czar himself. As a result, he was ordered to come to headquarters in St. Petersburg.

There he was given a position on the technical staff, and thenceforth was promoted rapidly higher and higher, until he occupies a position corresponding to that which he had abandoned in South America—general manager. Not until then did he reveal his identity as Russian prince and a former officer of the imperial guard. So pleased was the czar to find that this man was one of his own subjects, and so delighted was his majesty with the remarkable capacity and skill displayed by this particular general manager, that he restored to Prince Hilkoff all the estate and titles he had renounced when he emigrated to America.

WAYS TO KILL MILK GERM.

There Are Many of Them, But the Bacteria Crushing Machine Is Last.

Many ways of killing the bacteria in milk have from time to time been suggested. A recent and ingenious way is to crush the bacteria to death by pressure, as a man crushes an insect under the pressure of his boot. "A bacteria-crushing machine," said a chemist, "has been built and tried with partial success. This machine is capable of putting forth a hydrostatic pressure of 450,000 pounds to the square inch. Milk has been squeezed under it till the bacteria howled for mercy. Seriously, milk has received at the hands of this machine a pressure of 90 tons. The effect of a pressure so enormous was to make the milk keep longer—it kept for five, six and seven days. This showed that some of its bacteria, the fermenting bacteria at least, had been killed. But though the milk remained sweet it began to emit finally a strange, new odor and it had a strange, new taste. This showed that other bacteria in it had not been harmed. Prof. Wiley's poison squad's tests have proved that preservatives in milk are harmful. A pressure of 70 tons preserves milk for three or four days and there is no strange odor or strange taste. Maybe before long chemicals as a preservative of milk will be succeeded by pressure."

MUSIC AS A THERAPEUTIC.

Mental and Physical Ills May Be Believed by Its Aid—One Example of Use.

Much assistance is in many instances to be derived from the intelligent use of music, either vocal or instrumental, as a therapeutic adjunct. Melancholia, insomnia, hysteria, family affliction, business reverses, delirium, pain, fatigue, mental or physical, will all be helped by the beneficial influence of music, rightly used. As a post-operative measure it would have an undoubted influence for good in taking the patient's mind from his bodily distress. So, also, could "painless" dentistry be relieved of some of its pain and distress by the quieting influence of music, which would, as has been amply demonstrated, produce a pleasanter mental influence during the administration of nitrous oxide or other anaesthetic. A German writer recently stated (February, 1904), that in a number of test cases in which music was provided during the administration of the anaesthetic there was an absence of distress and resistance on the part of the patient: also an absence or reduction of the post-operative nausea under the same circumstances. To be advantageous the nature of the composition must be carefully selected with a view to the needs of the individual case, and the execution must be as nearly faultless as possible.

UNNECESSARY DISTINCTION

Expressions "By and By" and "By the Bye" Are Cause of Arguments as to Origin.

The two expressions "by and by" and "by the bye" are really derived from the same original word, and the words "by" and "bye" have the same general sense. But the spelling "bye" has long been used in the second of these phrases, without any real reason for the change, declares St. Nicholas Magazine. We should not speak of a bye-law or a bye-path, and yet many are careful to write "by the bye" and "by and by." In "good-bye" there might be some reason for keeping the final "e," since it stands for the word "ye" in the shortened form of "God be with ye;" but where so much has been dropped the "e" is hardly worth keeping, especially as the old meaning is seldom recalled.

MUSIC A GOOD STIMULANT.

Experiments Prove That Melody Acts on Heart Thus Causing Rapid Breathing.

The experiments of Ginet and Courtier were conducted with a view to determining the effect of music upon breathing and upon the action of the heart, writes Gustav Kobbe, in Good Housekeeping. It was found that lively major chords, without relation to melody, quickened breathing. Melodies, grave or gay, caused rapid breathing, the respiration approximat*ing its time* to that of the music. Rallentando and diminuendo effects made the breath come more slowly. Single notes without tune accelerated the heart's action, but melodies quickened it still more, operatic pieces resulting in the quickest action. These experiments would seem to show conclusively the stimulative effect of music.

Would Seek North Pole.

According to British sources, the duke of Orleans has applied to the Norwegian government for permission to hire Dr. Nansen's ship, the Fram, for the purpose of an arctic expedition next year. A Norwegian newspaper states that the admiralty will propose as conditions of the arrangement that Otto Sverdrup shall captain the ship, that the plan for the expedition shall be sanctioned by the Norwegian authorities, and that the University of Christiania shall have the benefit at least in part of the scientific results of the expedition.

Jackies Join Christian Endeavor.

Forty-one of the jackies on board the battleship Ohio, at San Francisco, have become charter members of a Christian Endeavor society, which was organized on the ship on October 31.

SWORD OF FREDERICK

EVIDENCE THAT WASHINGTON RECEIVED SUCH A PRESENT.

"From the Oldest General to the Greatest General in the World"—History of This Valuable Relic.

Washington.—The story that Frederick the Great sent George Washington a sword with the characteristic and epigrammatic message, "From the oldest general to the greatest general in the world," has been familiar from our earliest childhood. It is a plain narrative, as given by members of the Washington family, who alone have any knowledge, real or traditional, of the fact, says a writer in the Evening Star. The appraisers' list of the personal effects of Washington, made at Mount Vernon, May, 1800, contains this item: "Swords and blades. ..." Among these, which were chiefly presents, was the one sent by the king of Prussia. The personal effects of Washington were divided among the heirs, but a large proportion were left at Mount Vernon for Mrs. Washington, who was still living. Upon her death Justice Bushrod Washington took possession of the mansion, for he was his uncle's chief heir and the one to whom he intrusted his papers. Bushrod Washington lived 30 years at Mount Vernon, and bequeathed the estate and personal property, save an occasional gift, to his nephew, Col. John Augustine Washington, who also lived there 30 years. There was an immense accumulation of papers and relics—

PRESENTED BY FREDERICK.
("From the Oldest to the Greatest General of the World.")

among other souvenirs of interest was the sword of Frederick.

Maj. Lewis Washington, of Belle Air, Jefferson county, Va., visited his cousin at Mount Vernon in 1858. At this time he was the owner of two of the five swords willed by Gen. Washington to his nephews—one direct from his grandfather, William Augustine Washington; the other, that one which Justice Bushrod Washington received and had willed to his father, George Corbin Washington. Maj. Washington admired the elegant dress sword sent by the king and offered in exchange for it, being perfectly satisfied as to its authenticity, the Bushrod Washington sword. During his life this beautiful rapier was seen by many neighbors and friends at his home. Some years after his death his widow, Mrs. Ella Bassett Washington, sold it, with other valuable Washington relics, to the state of New York. These are now deposited in the library at Albany. In the catalogue will be seen: "No. 4, dress sword of Washington," which, through the courtesy of officials, I am permitted to reproduce. The sword acquired by Col. Washington in this exchange was sold a few years since by his son, Lawrence Washington, of Alexandria, to John H. Havermeyer, of New York, who presented it to Mount Vernon, being thus happily returned to its original abode.

When Col. John A. Washington disposed of the home of our first president to the Ladies' Mount Vernon Association of the Union, he gave possession early in the year 1860.

He carefully packed his valuable papers in barrels, of which there were 12. He left them in the care of his friend, Mr. Upton Herbert, first superintendent of Mount Vernon, thinking, in the disturbed state of the country, they would be safer than at any other place. Col. Washington's sad death occurred in 1861, and these papers remained at Mount Vernon until Mr Herbert left his office. In 1866 he removed them to Alexandria and stored them in an old bank building; this building in 1868 was burned and nearly all the papers and documents were destroyed.

Of documentary proof I have not found any, though the search is not yet complete. The archives of Germany may yield all we need.

One interesting item of circumstantial evidence came to me a few months ago. A German artist, vigorous and full of reminiscence, at the ripe age of 88, resented a reflection on Washington as a general and vaunted Frederick the Great. When told that old story was a myth, he replied with fine contempt: "Oh, yes, you say so in America, but I heard it at my mother's knee, and at her mother's. If false who gave it to the mothers of Germany?"

The rubber exported from the Amazon river in the season of 1903-4 amounted to 6,314,116 pounds.

TO BUILD A NEW NAVY.

American Undertakes Big Shipbuilding Contract for Russian Empire.

New York.—Mr. Lewis Nixon, of New York, will leave for Sevastopol about February 1 to undertake the gigantic task of creating for Russia a navy so powerful that when it takes the seas there no doubt will be felt at St. Petersburg as to its ability to wrest the power of the sea away from the Japanese and eventually crush the mikado.

It will be recalled that Mr. Nixon made a trip to St. Petersburg last summer, returning about July, and at that time it was reported that he was to build four torpedo boat destroyers for Russia. It is said here that he has constructed many more torpedo boats and destroyers

LEWIS NIXON.
He Has Undertaken to Build a New Navy for Russia.

than that, and in proof it is said that the contract that he brought home with him called for 90 of these small craft, says the Herald, of this city. This contract he has filled, and the mosquito fleet is ready for the czar. The boats are all either on their way or have been delivered at various Russian ports.

But Russia was not willing to stop there, or to rely entirely on the Baltic fleet, which she is now sending in two squadrons, to become a new Pacific squadron. She realized that the Japanese were splendid fighters on sea as well as on land, and she decided to have other squadrons to follow those now en route, in case these should fail.

To meet this emergency it is decided to build on the Black sea a fleet which should be able to cope with any force the Japanese could muster. Accordingly arrangements have been made for the construction, under the personal supervision of Lewis Nixon, in home Russian waters, of 100 fighting ships, ranging from torpedo boat destroyers and cruisers of all classes up to the heavily armored battleships.

This work must be done within two years, and it is to be assumed that Russia does not expect to see the war end until after the lapse of that time. To accomplish this in the given time the great ship building plant of Russia, at Sevastopol, has been greatly augmented and improved. It is now considered the third largest ship yard in the world. Much in the way of making ready has already been done. The enormous plant on the Black sea will be under the charge of Mr. Nixon, and he will take with him to fill the great order 7,000 skilled American artisans. These work*men will be transported half way around* the world to fill the largest order for warships ever given.

How the new Russian navy will get out of the Black sea, through the Dardanelles without complications with Turkey and Europe is a matter which at this time does not enter into the problem.

AMERICA'S OLDEST BUILDING

It Was Erected Shortly After the First Landing of the Spaniards in Florida.

St. Augustine, Fla.—The oldest house in America is in this city. This building, by comparison with the winter resort hotels in this town, is not a pretentious structure, but when it was built it was undoubtedly one of the principal structures of the town.

It is built of coquina rock, a mixture of sand and shell, which is the same material used in the building of the Ponce de Leon hotel and the Alcazar.

It is not known in what year this building was put up, but it was shortly after the landing of the Spanish, which was on the 8th of September, 1565.

The building is in a fairly good state of preservation. The interior is beautifully finished in highly polished wood.

It was occupied by the Spanish officials during the time Florida was a Spanish colony, and was later the home of the attorney general during the English possession. It is not now inhabited.

New Patent Law.

At present patents are granted in Great Britain at the inventors' risk, but a new act provides for a search of the patent office for 50 years back to see whether the applicant for a patent has been forestalled in his ideas. This will make British patents worth a good deal more than they have been.

THIS PUPPY WAS A HERO.

Boys and Girls About to Be Attacked by Mad Mastiff Are Saved by Little Dog.

Suffering from rabies, it is declared, and having already bitten three Italian children and several small dogs, a huge mastiff was prevented from dashing into a crowd of children and commiting greater damage by a little puppy at Plains, a village near Wilkesbarre, Pa. The puppy gave up its life, but saved the children.

The cry of "mad dog" had been raised in the street, and people were flying to shelter, as the mastiff was seen to be biting at every object in its path. The children were panic-stricken.

The puppy had been among them, barking and dancing about in the general frolic. When the panic came it seemed to regard the approaching mastiff as another source of amusement.

Trotting out from the little ones, it ran straight for the mastiff, barking furiously. The mastiff dashed straight at the puppy and its jaws snapped upon the frail little fellow.

With the body of the puppy dangling from its mouth, the mastiff dashed through the crowd of children and was finally shot some distance beyond.

The action of the puppy had sufficiently distracted the dog to cause it to ignore the little ones, and when it was shot its teeth still clinched the puppy.

The three Italian children who were bitten were treated by local physicians, and will receive antitoxin treatment. All the bitten dogs were killed.

ROUNDS UP STRAY POULTRY

Cat of the Tiger Species Catches Game Alive and Always Brings It to His Master.

Well Tuttle, of Case avenue, Winsted, Conn., has a large cat that is in the habit of bringing home all the game it catches without killing it. The cat is a good ratter, but never kills any of the rodents, but will always keep guard over any it captures until some member of the family appears to relieve.

About a year ago Tom, as the cat is called, varied its usual form of game and brought home alive and unharmed a small white Wyandotte rooster.

Inquiry among the neighbors failed to show where Tom had stolen the rooster, and Mr. Wells allowed the bird to go, thinking it might find its way to its owner.

BROUGHT HOME A ROOSTER.

The next morning Tom brought the same rooster to the house again and this time Mr. Wells kept it. Two days later Tom brought home a Plymouth Rock pullet, and diligent inquiry did not reveal from where it had been taken.

Tom was whipped for this second offense and seemed to remember the punishment until the other day, when he brought home another pullet.

It was discovered that the owner this time was J. B. Adams, of Main street, but the owners of the other chickens have never been heard from.

Tom is a large, powerful cat of the tiger species, and his strength and pluck are shown by his bringing home such large game alive and unhurt.

Live to a Green Old Age.

A long-lived family is that of Mrs. Sarah Gilpin, of Henry county, Mo. She recently celebrated her one-hundredth birthday. Her father lived to be 116 years old, her mother 115, her older sister 107; she has a brother in Oregon who is 106, and one of her sisters died at 104. Naturally, Mrs. Gilpin hopes to live to a green old age.

Six million frogs were marketed last year in St. Paul and Minneapolis. These two cities are the largest frog markets in the world.

AFTER THIRTY YEARS

SENATOR COCKRELL, OF MISSOURI, IS TO RETIRE.

First Elected to the United States Senate in 1875—Has Been a Conscientious and Hardworking Official.

Washington.—One of the most notable victims of the Roosevelt landslide is Francis Marion Cockrell, senior United States senator from the state of Missouri, whose fifth consecutive term in the senate will expire on March 4, 1905. President Roosevelt expressed the general sentiment of republicans and democrats when he said:

"I am truly sorry that my good friend Senator Cockrell retires from the United States senate as a result of the republican victory in Missouri."

Senator Cockrell has long been a conspicuous figure on the democratic side of the chamber. While the democrats held brief control of the senate during the Cleveland administration he was chairman of the committee on appropriations, and as such was playfully spoken of as "watchdog of the treasury," because of his well-known views regarding an economical expenditure of the public money. When the republicans regained control of the senate Mr. Cockrell became the ranking member of the minority on the same committee, but continued as the special senatorial guardian of Uncle Sam's strong box.

Visitors entering the gallery while the senate was in session had pointed out to them an old man, closely resembling some of the caricatures of Uncle Sam, sitting in the front row of seats on the democratic side of the chamber, following attentively the ordinary routine proceedings with the strictest attention, says a correspondent from this city to the New York Herald.

SENATOR F. M. COCKRELL.
(He Will Retire from the Senate After Thirty Years of Service.)

Spread out upon his desk was a complete file of every bill introduced in and report made to the senate. While other senators were otherwise engaged it seemed to be Senator Cockrell's mission to scrutinize every legislative proposition involving the expenditure of government funds.

Senator Cockrell came to the senate in 1875, succeeding Carl Schurz, then an independent republican. He never before had held a public office. When his present term expires he will have served 30 years as a member of the senate. He has frequently been mentioned as a presidential possibility. His friends in Missouri, to show their appreciation of his valuable aid and influence in obtaining an appropriation which made the St. Louis exposition a possibility, gave him what was declared the only genuine and spontaneous demonstration that marked the proceedings of the national democratic convention which nominated Judge Parker.

Other candidates were "boomed," but the great ovation which greeted the name of Senator Cockrell when he was presented to the convention was spontaneous and sincere.

During the 30 years he has been a member of the senate Mr. Cockrell has lived a quiet, frugal life, never exceeding his income as a senator. Many men in his position and commanding the influence he possessed might have found a way to enrich themselves, by judicious investments or otherwise. No stain of any kind rests upon the official or personal record of Senator Cockrell, and he goes into political retirement a poor man, 70 years old.

It is said of Mr. Cockrell that no minority senator is so influential with the leaders of the republican side as he.

Camera Disease Detector.

A Manchester photographer relates that he took a photograph of a child who was apparently in good health and had a clear skin. The negative showed the face to be thickly covered with an eruption. Three days afterward the child was covered with spots due to prickly heat. The camera had seen and photographed the eruption three days before it was visible to the naked eye. It is said that another case of a similar kind is recorded, where a child showed spots on his portrait which were invisible on his face a fortnight previous to an attack of smallpox.

Novel Rain Gauge.

A tipping bucket attachment has been added to the rain gauge of the weather bureau on top of the custom house at St. Louis. It accurately tells of the amount of precipitation. The rain is drained into a double bucket, so poised that it tips on receiving a certain amount of water. Every movement of this kind is registered by an electrical connection.

Emigrating from Spain.

The cost of living has doubled in Spain in the last few years and emigration is increasing rapidly.

Rapid Transit.

It takes about three seconds for a message to go from one end of the Atlantic to the other.

WAXING THE TOMB.

WEATHER WAS HARMING THE GREAT GRANT MONUMENT.

It Is Now Being Coated with Paraffine Which Is Expected to Stop Damage—How the Work Is Done.

New York.—Fresh evidence that a man's own name is the most indestructible monument a man can raise is to be found in Gen. Grant's tomb, on Riverside drive. Built of the stoutest granite at a cost of nearly $600,000, it has been found advisable to coat a portion of the solid stone roofs of the portico and gallery with paraffine wax, as was done with the obelisk 19 years ago, in order to protect the stone from disintegration and to stop the leaks which have developed. The same persons who coated the obelisk so effectively are doing the work. The tomb, which was the testimonial of the more than 90,000 persons who contributed to its construction, will be permitted to suffer injury if it is possible to prevent it. The tomb was dedicated less than eight years ago, and is one of the most costly tombs ever erected.

In the work now being done, the stone is warmed by means of a flat stove before the wax is applied, explains the Tribune, of this city. This stove is a simple affair, being practically nothing more than a sheet-iron box, about two feet square and six inches deep. One side of the box is a wire screen. This retains the charcoal which is burned in the stove, and at the same time permits

PUTTING ON THE WAX.
The Granite Is First Heated by Holding a Charcoal Stove Against It.

the free radiation of the heat upon the stone. The stove is suspended against the stone whose pores are to be filled. It almost touches the stone, and is held there for two or three minutes. That is sufficient time to heat the stone to a depth of perhaps a quarter of an inch. Then melted paraffine wax is painted on the heated surface with a brush. It soaks into the stone to the depth to which the stone has been heated, filling all the interstices between the crystals of the rock. Great care has to be taken not to heat the stone unnecessarily, as only a small portion can be heat*ed at one time. Uneven expansion of* the stone might cause it to crack. A square yard can be treated in a quarter of an hour. The work now being done on the tomb will cost $280.

There are about 8,000 tons of granite in the tomb. This was carefully examined by professors of mining schools, members of the United States engineering corps and chemists before it was accepted, and all the tests were passed. No stones were set in the winter, owing to the danger of settling. Each stone, after being laid, was allowed to lie some time before another was laid upon it, in order to make certain that it would not shift its position in the slightest degree. The tomb is 90 feet square and 150 feet high. A considerable amount of marble was used in the interior. Several slabs of this now show stains which look like rusted iron. It is said that these disappear and reappear again at different seasons of the year, and that they are due to moisture in the walls. Up to the present time none of the methods tried have been effective in eliminating them. The stones may have to be replaced. Until this year no effort has been made to heat the tomb in the winter. This year, with the idea that it may have a beneficial effect upon the stone, several radiators have been put in. Heretofore in the spring moisture has appeared on the walls so thick that it was possible to wipe it off with the hand.

Boiling Point of Water.

Water boils at different temperatures, according to the elevation above sea level. In London water boils practically at 212 degrees Fahrenheit; in Munich, Germany, at 209½ degrees; in the City of Mexico at 200 degrees, and in the Himalayas, at an elevation of 18,000 feet above the level of the sea, at 180 degrees. These differences are caused by the varying pressure of the atmosphere at these points. In London the whole weight of the air has to be overcome. In Mexico, 7,000 feet above the sea, there is 7,000 feet less of atmosphere to be resisted; consequently less heat is required, and boiling takes place at a lower temperature.

Modern Plagues.

The English Church Missionary society calls attention to the fearful ravages of pestilence in several countries in which its agents are at work. In Uganda the sleeping sickness has desolated Busoga and the northern shores of Victoria lake and is fast depopulating the Sese islands. The plague in the Punjab has been claiming as many as 20,000 victims a month, while cholera, which has laid thousands low in Palestine, is now raging in Persia.

The Constitutionalist

A DEMOCRATIC WEEKLY.

PUBLISHED AT

PLAINFIELD, N. J.

Terms—$2.00 per year.

A. L. Force, Editor and Proprietor

Thursday, Feb. 2, 1905.

Thousands of dollars belonging to the taxpayers will be wasted in holding an useless special election on Feb. 7.

Seems strange that no one seems willing to be placed on any of the three mayoralty tickets to be named in North Plainfield, and yet modesty never was a characteristic of borough politics.

Abe Hummel, famous in New York for bringing about the legal separation of mismated couples, has been indicted by a grand jury and will have to divorce himself from the charge of subornation of perjury.

The New Brunswick Times refers to State Supervisor of Roads Robert A. Meeker as the author of the Meeker election law. Reminds one of the woman who thought it strange that the man who composed "Tannhauser" should be the author of "be Simple Life."

Notwithstanding repeated and urgent requests, Robert Clark, Jr., still withholds his consent to become a candidate for the mayoralty in North Plainfield. A large and representative body of citizens favor him as Mr. Smalley's successor and believe that Mr. Clark should comply with their wishes by becoming a candidate for the office.

It is to be regretted that Mayo Newton B. Smalley declines to be come a candidate for renomination. He is now serving his third term and during the six years of his administration marked municipal improvement has been made in North Plainfield. No chief executive of the borough ever devoted so much time to furthering its interests. None has been so painstaking, and none has accomplished so much of real good. The widening of Somerset street and the introduction of storm sewers beneath that thoroughfare, the establishment of a building line ordinance, the erection of proper street signs, the opening up of Dunr street, a paid fire department and a more efficient police department as well as a new fire house, and recorder's court, jail and councilmanic headquarters are among the many things largely due to the efforts of the present Mayor. When Mr. Smalley retires from office a severe loss will be suffered by North Plainfield.

BUSINESS MEN DEFEATED BY PASSAIC SECOND TEAM

BUT ARE GIVEN GOOD TIME AFTER BASKET BALL GAME.

The fact that the second team of the Passaic Y. M. C. A. defeated the local Y. M. C. A. Business Men's basketball team Saturday night, was not enough to mar the pleasure of the occasion for the Plainfielders, who were royally entertained at Passaic and admirably treated. The game was an interesting one, the score being 38 to 25, while the reception which the local players were afforded was all that could be desired.

The game was played on the Passaic Y. M. C. A. gymnasium floor, and was won by the home team by close superior passing and team work. The game was singularly clean, and was free from all unpleasant features. The fouls were few and were undisputed, while the game was not so easy a victory as to be uninteresting. On the contrary, the Plainfielders kept their opponents on their feet, and put up a strong defense. Had the offensive game been equally good, the score would have been different. Belcher and Spicer were the strong points for the Business Men. The line-up of the local team was as follows: Belcher and Miner, forwards; Spicer, center; Lotzen and Clark, guards.

Big Men to be at Williams.

Brookholst K. Miller of class of '06, of Williams' College, who is a son of Isaac L. ### LITERARY.

The play of Cymbeline to discussed in the Shakespeare department of Madame for February, by Maude Murray Miller. Mrs. Miller is a recognized authority on Shakespearean topics, and her articles are always full of interest and instruction for Shakespeare students or lovers of Shakespeare who read this department in Madame, Published by The Ford Publishing Company, Indianapolis.

The personal narrative of the taking of Forth Arthur, told by the men who took it, is the feature of the February Leslie's Monthly Magazine. Two of the narratives, by an officer of Engineers and by a sapper, give a most vivid and picturesque idea of the actual fighting, both above and below ground, around that tremendous fortress. Some beautiful photographs of Japanese girls in this number show a more peaceful side of the national life.

President Roosevelt was elected because the people believed him to be in his declaration for the "Fair Play." Robert M. LaFollette was elected Governor of Wisconsin because he has fought the people's fight to rid the State of railroad tyranny and to estop the rate discriminations that kill individual industry and open competition. Governor LaFollette is still fighting the commonwealth's fight, but President Roosevelt has reversed his Fair Play policy and rallied to the railroads's support by appointing to the Federal bench a notorious railroad lobbyist. Collier's for January 21 contents upon the President's surprisingly bold and open affront to Wisconsin.

Pearson's Magazine for February contains an especially interesting assortment of short stories and wide-awake special articles, numbering in all nineteen. The leading article is an up-to-date history of that "wild and woolly" recent State, Washington, one of our most promising States and already well under way in taking the lead in agricultural productions. The startling decline of our New England mackerel and lobster fisheries is the subject of another live article which points out the reasons for these failures and suggests remedies that will add millions to the wealth of the world-renowned Gloucester men. How the famous playwrights place their plays and the trials and tribulations of a playwright is another article, by Bryan O'Malley. Still another is the vivid pen picture of the life of the late Louis Delthler, the headsman of Paris, a social outcast, a man foredoomed as the executioner of men, yet a man with intensely human feeling.

AMUSEMENTS.

Satisfying indeed were the results last season of William Faversham's first engagement at the Grand Opera House. Mr. Faversham's popular star appeared in his success of former seasons, "Lord and Lady Algy," and enjoyed the most prosperous week of his career since leaving the Empire Theatre Stock Company. With "Lesty" Mr. Faversham is expected to outdo last season's proud record, and set a standard for all of the Frohman attractions. He is the attraction at the Grand Opera House this week. There are those who claim that Pinero has never written a better play than "Lesty," in the conspicuous success of Mr. Frohman's many 1904 05 productions and is destined for long life in American theatres. Mr. Faversham is most congenially placed in "Lesty" and the sincerity of his acting in the strong scenes of the play has won over the few critics who were wont to claim that his art was confined to a limited sphere. It was a long struggle for Faversham to win his way into the hearts of certain conferes, but his sterling ability emphasized itself during the recent engagement at the Hudson Theatre, and now he firmly occupies his undeniable place as a leading New York favorite.

"The College Widow" is still playing to crowded houses, and the Garden Theatre, New York city, has never in its history sheltered such large audiences as during the run of this fanciful Ade comedy which began last September. The whimsical humour, the quaint character drawings interpreted by the excellent company, and the shafts of satire directed at American life in general, and life at an inland college town in particular, make "The College Widow" one of the most pleasing offerings on the stage. Dorothy Tennant, Frederick Truesdell, Gertrude Quinlan, Amy Ricard, Lida McMillan, Edgar L. Davenport, Stephen Maley, Edwin Holt, Morgan Coman, Frederick Burton, George Bryant and Dan Collyer continue in the leading roles. The "town girls," who lend a fetching presence to the climax of the third act when a football game is shown, are an attractive feature.

T. E. F. RANDOLPH DEAD

Wealthy Retired Merchant Passes Away Suddenly.

AGED SEVENTY-TWO

A Sincere Christian Whose Life Was Full of Good Deeds—Funeral on Monday.

Thompson E. F. Randolph, of 530 Central avenue, died suddenly at his home Friday at the age of seventy-two years.

Mr. Randolph was born in Plainfield May 25, 1832. In 1859, after a period of travel in other lands, including a visit to Palestine, Mr. Randolph entered active business after reaching the age of twenty years. He was thus a merchant for nearly half a century, retiring a few years ago. He had a high sense of honor and his word and personal undertaking were always known to be good and beyond question.

After his retirement from active business in New York he returned to his old home in Plainfield and to the very house in Central avenue where he lived many years ago.

Mr. Randolph was a sincere Christian and his life was full of kind and charitable deeds. He was active in the building of the First Baptist church edifice now standing at the corner of Front and Grove streets.

In politics Mr. Randolph was a Republican and was universally beloved for his genial and kindly manners. He died last evening very suddenly and very peacefully, surrounded by his loved ones.

In 1857 Mr. Randolph married Marie Antoinette Ireland. She and five daughters survive him.

The funeral was held Monday afternoon at 2:45 from the house.

FIRST PRINTING PRESS IN NEW JERSEY IN 1751

JAMES PARKER STARTED A SHOP IN WOODBRIDGE.

The first printing press in New Jersey was established in the town of Woodbridge in the year 1751 by one James Parker, a native, and for many years a resident of the town.

The printing office is believed to have been situated on what is now known as Parth Amboy avenue, from the fact that in cultivating the land in that locality—in years past—mineral types have frequently been ploughed up.

The legislative proceedings at that time and many public documents were printed on the Woodbridge Press, also the laws of New Jersey.

It was about the year 1758 when the New American Magazine was published in Woodbridge. It was the first periodical ever published in the State. It was issued monthly; the publication continued about two years, when the Press was removed to Burlington, to accommodate "Smith, the Historian," in the issue of his History of New Jersey.

The Press was afterward brought back to Woodbridge, and the printing office—press, etc., were burned to the ground by a band of Tories, during the Revolutionary War.

It may be of interest to note in this connection that through all the intervening years we do not hear of a Woodbridge publication until January 6, 1866, when the first issue of the Woodbridge Gazette appeared under the management of James E. Barry. The paper was ably edited and was in every respect a first-class local paper, but the publication was continued for only about two years. He was succeeded by Colonel Alfred Jones, who edited the Woodbridge Independent Hour for a brief period, when it passed into the hands of Peter K. Edgar, and was a successful local paper for several years.

In March, 1897, the Woodbridge Register made its first bow to the public, edited by J. H. Rollinson in Woodbridge, but printed in Rahway. Republican in politics, but liberal with all parties, it was greeted with a large patronage, which has continued to the present day.

J. R. Rollinson was succeeded by his brother, H. B. Rollinson, in the editorial chair, but owing to a pressure of other business Mr. Rollinson withdrew, and was succeeded by R. D. Uhler, the present editor, who has the honor of being the editor of the longest-lived local newspaper ever in circulation in Woodbridge.

Another paper, The Woodbridge News, is now in circulation, printed in New Brunswick, edited by William Lansley. This is the history in brief of Woodbridge journalism.

H. A. Bonn's millinery establishment on West Front street is one of the best equipped in the city. All is tastefully and carefully selected that is found on the counters at Bonn's. Hats trimmed at Bonn's are the most stylish.

DEMOCRATS WRANGLING

Carney Deposed as Chairman at a Noisy Meeting.

A WORDY WAR

Chairman Bodine Mounts His Desk in Effort to Enforce Order—Lively Scene.

Opposing factions in the borough Democratic party met again, last Friday, and one of the liveliest sessions that has ever taken place over the rook was the result. It was held at Democratic headquarters and started out with David J. Carney as chairman, but before the big gathering had dispersed, he was deposed and David Bodine was elected in his place. The change was made amid a demonstration that resembled Bedlam and for a time it was impossible to tell "who was who."

President D. J. Carney, of the North Plainfield Democratic Club, called the meeting to order, and stated that its specific purpose was to receive the report of the committee of three appointed last Monday evening to confer with a number of Republicans who had agreed to place a Citizens' ticket in the field at the coming March election. He declared that it had been impossible for the committee on either side to get together so soon, and he called upon David Bodine, a committee member, who said he had been informed that Messrs. Honeyman, Place and other Republicans were to hold a meeting tonight for the purpose of selecting a committee to confer with the Democratic one. At this point a motion was made to discharge the committee appointed at the last meeting but the chair declared it out of order and a spirited cross-fire between Charles Lyman and David Bodine took place, the former favoring a straight Democratic ticket and the latter a Citizens'.

At the conclusion, former Mayor W. L. Saunders addressed the gathering, also favoring a straight Democratic movement and pointed out the advantages it would bring. Andrew E. Kenney spoke similarly but there was an evident intention on the part of the majority to let the meeting pledge itself to the Republicans who oppose Mayor Smalley's administration. Former Assemblyman Swackhamer spoke in favor of an independent ticket and urged those present to enter into a union with the "breakaway" Republicans.

The meeting by this time had been in progress about an hour and as the former Assemblyman sat down, there came a lull. It was broken by Chairman Carney, declaring the meeting adjourned for one week and announcing that the committee appointed at the last gathering, composed of David Bodine, Lorenzo D. Townley and himself, would be able to present some tangible report. This brought on the gathering storm and one of the straight Democrats soberly stated today that the scene resembled "a riot demonstration." Nearly every man was on his feet and as the majority insisted on talking at the same time, it was impossible to get at anything. All manner of accusations were made against Chairman Carney because of his wish to adjourn and it was some time before any semblance of order was restored.

From the chaos there emerged another meeting with David Bodine as chairman. He jumped on top of a desk and calling for quiet, finally got the majority down to business again. It was then decided to enter into a Citizens' movement and a committee consisting of Mr. Swackhamer, George Kirob, Charles Harding, William Rickert, John T. Case and Walter Bennett was appointed to confer with the leaders from the Republican side. The meeting adjourned with no time set for another and the matter now rests in the hands of this committee.

This morning, both sides of the Democrats had something to say about the gathering.

D. J. Carney said this morning: "There will be a Democratic ticket in the field in March, notwithstanding the efforts of those who are attempting to force upon us a Citizens' ticket. Everyone of the leaders who participated in the riotous proceedings last night, excepting Messrs. Swackhamer and Van Winkle, have been read from the party in the past. This was noticeably so in the Wilson-Smalley campaign."

The leaders of the faction which placed Bodine in the chair, assert that it was Carney's intention to entertain no motion that would oppose his views and that he had to appear in the meeting indefinitely without saying being done. Walter Limbarger, one of them, said to a Daily Press reporter:

"We didn't, or don't intend to submit to any gag rule."

Thrown Into Snow Drifts.

Mr. and Mrs. Kalmon Rostberg, of West Third street, were thrown from their sleigh into deep snow drifts through their horse running away at Scotch Plains, yesterday afternoon. Neither was hurt, but the animal continued on for several blocks and wrecked the sleigh before it was caught.

LEGAL LIGHTS AT FEAST

Union County Bar Association Holds a Banquet.

AT CAFE MARTIN

C. A. Marsh Acts as Toastmaster—C. A. Reed One of the Speakers—List of Plainfielders Present.

Plainfield was well represented at the second annual banquet of the Union County Bar Association held at Cafe Martin, New York, on Saturday night, there being present Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh, president of the association; former Senator Charles A. Reed, former City Judge W. A. Codington, former City Judge H. Coddington, former Assemblyman S. R. Swackhamer, William Nevers, Francis J. Biats, members of the association, while Sheriff B. Frank Cornell and County Registrar F. H. Smith, of this city, and County Clerk J. G. Calvers, of Elizabeth, were guests.

Mr. Marsh spoke to the toast "He Did Not Look Afar Into the Surface of Time. All's Well That Ends Well." He also noted as the toastmaster. Mr. Reed also spoke. He dwelt upon the importance of every member of the bar becoming a member of the association which aims for its chief object the elevation of the bar.

Among the other speakers were Hon. J. Franklin Fort, Richard V. Lindabury, Hon. Gilbert Collins, John K. English, Frank Bergen, J. G. Connolly and Judge Wilbur A. Heisley, of Long Branch.

Although the association is but two years old it has a membership of about seventy, yet it is the desire that this list be increased materially during the coming year. It was noted that here there are about thirty lawyers, yet not more than a dozen are members of the association.

MAKES PLEA FOR WORK AMONG THE ISRAELITES

MARK LEVY DECLARES JEWS SPIRITUAL WELFARE MUST BE CONSIDERED.

Mark Levy, a native of London, who is a Christianized Jew, delivered an address in the Church of the Holy Cross, yesterday morning, in the interest of his work. An able and interesting speaker, his discourse dealt in the main with importance of missionary work among the Israelites, dwelling on the fact that in ages past, these people had labored unceasingly for the spiritual welfare of the Gentiles.

In his remarks, Mr. Levy said: "Sometimes Christians say, 'We are glad you came over to us.' My reply is, 'No, you have come over to Israel, and I by the grace of God have simply entered into the spiritual inheritance of my forefathers, for Christ, the Messiah said, 'Salvation is from the Jews.' Our worship in this Episcopal church tonight is the spiritual expression of the ancient tabernacle and temple worship. The Psalms, the prophets and New Testament came through Israel and if we show no consideration for the spiritual welfare of the Jewish people, we display the spirit of the ingrate.

"Neither Jews nor Christians clearly understand how near they are to one another in the faith. Both worship one God and believe in the Trinity, that is, Ayinu (our Heavenly Father); Messach (Christ) and Ruach Hagnodesh (the Holy Spirit.) Let us by kindness, personal testimony, and the gifts of tracts and New Testaments, present the claims of Israel's Messiah to His own brethren and give no offense to the Jew, the Gentile, nor the church of God."

MISS S. R. VAN WINKLE DEAD.

Passes Away After Long Illness at Her Home in Scorough.

From the effects of a paralytic stroke which she suffered several months ago, Miss Susan Roome Van Winkle died Sunday afternoon at her home on Mercer avenue at Dunr street. She was the daughter of the late Daniel G. and Rachael Roome VanWinkle and was born in New York city, January 4, 1837. She had been ill for more than a year but her suffering had been borne without a murmur and with a Christian fortitude that made her still more lovable to those about her.

Miss VanWinkle was a member of the Crescent Avenue church. She is survived by four brothers, former Mayor John H. VanWinkle, William H., and Daniel VanWinkle, of the borough, and Jacob R. VanWinkle, of this city.

BRUNSWICK TO JOIN UNION CO. BALL LEAGUE

MIDDLESEX COUNTY CLUB WANTS TO PLAY BALL IN UNION.

The New Brunswick Bicycle Club is desirous of joining the proposed Union county baseball league, and for that purpose Samuel R. Manning, of that city, came here yesterday to secure some information about the new organization. He called at The Daily Press office and stated that there are a number of good ball players in the club and it is proposed to place a first-class team in the field this season. Among those who will probably play are Cox, who was shortstop for Alts, and James S. Manning, who has made an enviable record as a pitcher. The other positions will be filled with strong men.

Mr. Manning says that the club will be represented at the meeting of baseball managers to be held at the North Avenue Hotel, Westfield, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock, and an effort to join the association will be made. The New Brunswick athletes believe that their team will compare favorably with those from Westfield, Rahway, Plainfield and Cranford and they will make a strong bid for the championship if admitted to the association.

Eagles Incorporated.

Papers have recently been filed through its counsel, H. C. Runyon, with the Secretary of State, effecting the incorporation of Plainfield Aerie, No. 866, Fraternal Order of Eagles. The officers named are as follows: President, Daniel V. Force; vice president, Samuel O. Terry; secretary, Horace G. Adams; treasurer, Jacob Hilmm, Jr.; trustees, Louis D. W. McIntosh, Lawrence Powers, Frank Mathews.

Thimble Club Social.

Those having charge of the Thimble Club, of the First M. E. church, conducted a literary and social affair Saturday afternoon in the Vincent chapel on Saturday. Dorothy Lyon, Ruth Beal, Elizabeth Winn, Nellie Cresser, Ruby Taylor and Anna Lee entertained the members and invited friends with songs and recitations. Refreshments were served and a social hour followed.

Will Play at the Inauguration.

Joseph Sattels, of East Sixth street, has received official notice of his appointment as a member of the orchestra which will play at Washington during the inauguration of President Roosevelt in March. The honor is one of more than passing interest as the orchestra will be composed of 125 men, selected from among the best musicians all over the country. Mr. Sattels will play the violin.

Trolley Patrons Want a Change.

Persons who live along the line of the West Front street trolley, it is said, are anxious to have the through cars put back on that line instead of stopping at the Watchung avenue stand. The small cars now used are inadequate to carry the people and some of the cars it is argued should be in the shops for repairs.

TIGERS ASK FOR A GAME

Princeton and Columbia Likely to Cross Bats With P.A.C.

ARRANGING SCHEDULE

Game Arranged With Chatham—Strong Contests to be Booked by Manager Woolston.

Already Manager Charles E. Woolston, of the Plainfield Baseball Association, is commencing to schedule games for the coming season, and judging by the applications for contest a strong list of attractions will be presented to the fans during the summer. Manager Woolston has also received a letter from the manager of the Princeton College team asking for a game here on Saturday, May 30, and it is likely that this contest will be arranged.

Saturday, May 30, is reserved for the Columbia 'Varsity team, which is being coached this year by "Billy" Lauder. The boys from Morningside Heights have one of the strongest teams this season in the history of the University and they will give the locals a hard fight. Tyler will be in the box for Columbia, and he is one of the best twirlers in his class. It will be remembered that he defeated Plainfield last year, pitching for the Murray Hills.

Saturday, April 25, has been reserved for the Chatham team, and this may be the opening match here. Those who followed the game last season know the strength of Chatham. This team defeated the locals to the tune of 7 to 0 and not once through the contest did the home boys have a show to win. Charley Speer, pitching for Chatham, had his opponents at his mercy. The manager for the Chatham team writes that he will bring along the "goods" this year and hopes to again whitewash Plainfield.

It is the purpose of the local management to schedule only the best teams, those that are recognized to be strong aggregations and no chances will be taken with teams of unknown strength.

REV. A. E. FINN'S SERMON ON "THE PETRIFIED MAN"

A STRONG APPEAL TO RESIST HARDENING FORCES OF THE WORLD.

"The Petrified Man," in the Christian life, was the subject of the sermon by Rev. Albert E. Finn, at the Park Avenue Baptist church Sunday night. It was a strong and an earnest appeal to those whose lives have become hardened by the contact with the world, to turn and seek again the Kingdom of God.

Rev. Mr. Finn spoke of the many worldly influences which combine to harden the life of one who, though a professing Christian, may be far from a true Christian. His sermon dealt with the three forces in man which are petrified: the heart, the will and the conscience. The preacher referred to several stories illustrative of his subject, showing the spiritual petrification of the heart, will and conscience, and how eventually the whole being becomes like an adamantine stone. To draw further and further away from right and religious influence is, the speaker said, to become more and more immuned to unrighteousness and evil.

The man who seeks religion, yet in his heart is hardened toward everything that is holy and Godlike, is like a man in a nightmare, who seems unable to attain that for which he yearns. In conclusion, as an antidote for the petrification which, as Rev. Mr. Finn said, is becoming more and more prevalent, the preacher urged upon his hearers that they let preeminently the spirit of God control their hearts, will and consciences, and act as a shield against the forces which tend to harden and to make the petrified man.

Narrowly Missed Accident.

In a letter to a friend in this city, Miss Ida Hoop, who is now spending the winter at Daytona, says that she was at Ormond Beach the day that Frank Croker was fatally injured, and it was only a short time after Miss Hoop left that Mr. Croker met with the accident, which resulted in his death. Miss Hoop also says that thousands of dollars worth of oranges have been frozen by a recent cold snap. Fires were built in the orange groves, but the frost was too heavy to save the fruit in this way.

To Open Ballot Boxes.

Justice Fort granted an order Saturday to County Attorney Wm. H. Codington, of this city, to open the ballot boxes for use at the primaries and the special election on Feb. 7. Under the general election law the boxes must be closed for a period of three months after the election preceding the special one. It is not quite the three months from Nov. 5 to Feb. 7, and consequently an order of court is necessary.

3 MAYORALTY NOMINEES

Republican, Democratic and Citizens' Tickets in Borough.

POSSIBLE CANDIDATES

Overton, Buchanan, Clark and Swackhamer Suggested by Citizens Other Parties Are at Sea.

With Mayor Newton B. Smalley's emphatic declaration that he will not accept a re-nomination as a candidate to succeed himself, the mayoralty boom has been booming in the borough as it never boomed before. With the approach of the March election and both parties divided among themselves, names for the place have been suggested without number during the past few days but most of it has been done by friends and in many instances without serious intent. At the present time neither Republicans, Citizens or Democrats, have any idea as to where their choices will rest.

The name most often mentioned in connection with the nomination is that of former Councilman Robert M. Clark, Jr., who has been urged repeatedly to head the Citizens' ticket but only to have him refuse.

When interviewed today Mr. Clark said that he had been approached by a number of citizens on the subject and that delegations from various organizations had waited upon him but that he had declined to allow his name to be used in connection with the mayoralty. Mr. Clark's business interests in Newark demand his entire time and he has stated several times that it would be impossible for him to become a candidate. Former Councilman Clark is considered one of the most popular men in the borough and the Citizens' party realizes that he would be the strongest candidate they could name. Efforts are being made to get Mr. Clark to reconsider his determination not to run.

In addition to Mr. Clark, other names that have been mentioned in connection with the Citizens' movement are those of Edward A. Overton, president of the Board of Education, former Assemblyman S. S. Swackhamer and Dr. J. H. Buchanan, though neither has as yet been approached directly.

The Republicans are practically in the dark in respect to mayoralty timber and on the many names mentioned, none have loomed very high. At the present time the leaders are active and matters will assume a definite turn within the next week. Mayor Smalley and Charles A. Reed profess to have no knowledge of a candidate, and others who have been interviewed speak in a similar strain.

The wrangle between the Democrats at the gathering Friday night and the sense of the meeting that the party should ally itself with the Citizens' has led to the belief that those not in favor of this move, will place a straight Democratic ticket in the field. At the gathering Friday, former Mayor Wm. L. Saunders was one of those who favored a straight Democratic ticket and when spoken to today reiterated what he had said at the time. He continued, however, that though he and several others took this view, nothing had been accomplished since the meeting and he did not know that any action would result this week. He expressed the opinion that of all the possible candidates, Robert Clark, Jr., is the one to succeed Mayor Smalley.

U. S. COURT DISTRICT NOT TO BE DIVIDED

PLAN IS TO MAKE SENATOR CROSS JUNIOR JUDGE OF PRESENT COURT.

The pending bill before Congress to give New Jersey another United States District Judge is for the double purpose of relieving Judge Lanning of much work and at the same time allowing United States Senator John Kean the pleasure of paying his political debts to Senator Joseph Cross, of Elizabeth.

There will be a new District Judge, but the district will not be divided. Such Judge, it is thought, will be of equal jurisdiction, but they will so divide the work that there will be no conflict of authority.

At first it was thought wise to divide the State into two districts, but at that would necessitate another district clerk, with assistants, as well as another circuit clerk, with assistants, the Attorney General's office in Washington counseled otherwise. The pending bill had passed the Senate, and will likely pass the House before March 4. It is said that the measure has the approval of the President.

Cross is now President of the New Jersey Senate, but his legislative labors will be over by April, so that he can then resign and go on the bench. He is to his last year of Senatorial term.

TEACHERS ARE INELIGIBLE

Only 6 of 36 Qualified for the Teachers Office Tenure List.

LABOR UNIONISM?

Mr. Townsend's Argument Against Adoption of Proposed System—Mr. Wightman's Admission.

Holding its regular monthly meeting, Monday, the Borough Board of Education transacted business of little importance, but dispensed at great length the teachers' permanency of office proposition introduced by Mr. Joy at the December meeting. It resulted in the matter again being laid over but brought out several interesting facts, one of which was that of the thirty-six teachers in the borough's schools only six would be eligible for the permanent list were it established. This statement was made by Superintendent Wightman and of course, means in efficiency, as that is really the requisite in tenure of office.

The resolution as offered was opposed throughout by Mr. Townsend, who declared that the establishment of a permanent list really narrowed down to the introduction of labor union methods in the schools, that is, the one rule would govern all teachers alike and the best would have to be placed with those not so good. In this and other arguments his objections were frequently sustained and the original resolution was greatly altered to meet the arguments. The majority of the board seems to favor the plan and there is every likelihood of its passing at the next regular session. Mr. Joy was not present last night or the measure might have been brought to a head.

Superintendent Wightman reported that Miss Mary Edna Leonard, of Boston, who is really a Plainfield young woman having gone away from the city to teach, had been engaged as assistant instructor in the kindergarten department to succeed Miss Morris. Miss Leonard has had several years' experience in this class of work and it is thought that her methods will have good results. She was selected from a large number of applicants for the position.

The request of J. E. Skiff, the school music instructor, to have the board finance his plan to give a large musical production in a local hall, aided by borough pupils, was reported upon in the negative by the committee appointed to consider it. The chairman stated that the arrangements for the musical were rather elaborate and that it would cost $301 for one night's performances and $356 for two nights, an expense they thought the board would not care to assume even though there were indications of a profit.

LEALS WILL COMPETE IN BIG ATHLETIC EVENT

TO BE REPRESENTED IN POLYTECHNIC INSTITUTE GAMES ON FEB. 18.

Leal's School track team will be represented in the annual races and track meet to be held on February 18 by the Brooklyn Polytechnic Institute, at the Twenty-third Regiment Armory at Brooklyn. The affair is a big event for the Greater New York schools, and on that occasion the High Schools and academies of New Jersey are invited to compete. Leal's has not been represented in an affair of this kind for many years, and the members of the track team are already preparing for the meet.

Captain Edwin Daniel, winner of the city athletic inter-scholastic championship last year, has called out his team and has begun training for the test. He has selected the following to represent Leal's School in the meet: William Glassey, Edgar Lawrence, George Hooton, Roger White, Edward Saffern and J. Manning. Nearly all the above named are prominent in Leal's School athletics, and have been in training during the basketball season. The events as announced by the management of the Poly Prep. track team will be: 60 yard dash, 440 yard run, 880 yard run, one mile run, one mile relay race, (four men team), pole vault and shot put.

The competition is of particular importance to the New York and Brooklyn schools, as the championship of Greater New York is determined at the meet. The three rival schools in Brooklyn, Erasmus Hall, Boys' High and Poly Prep. schools, will run in a one mile relay, not open, in addition to the one conducted for the other schools. The prizes in the events will be gold, bronze and silver medals, and the relay races silver cups will be presented to each member of the winning team.

When you want to give your best girl an engagement or wedding ring make your selection at J. Hervey Deane's jewelry store in Park avenue and it is sure to be all right.

AGAINST SALOON INVASION

Ministers Meet to Plan Fight Against License Applicants.

IN THE WEST END

Three Congregations to Present Petitions to the Common Council.

For the purpose of meeting any further invasion by the saloon in the West End, pastors of Hope Memorial chapel and Monroe Avenue M. E. church and the rector of the Church of the Heavenly Rest, met Sunday afternoon and took preliminary steps towards effecting an organization of those who are opposed to the saloon, especially in that end of the city. Another meeting was held last night when Rev. George Mooney, Rev. L. R. Howard and Rev. Robert T. Walker, representing the religious organizations named, decided a definite course, means in efficiency, as that is really the requisite in tenure of office.

The resolution as offered was opposed throughout by Mr. Townsend, who declared that the establishment of a permanent list really narrowed down to the introduction of labor union methods in the schools, that is, the one rule would govern all teachers alike and the best would have to be placed with those not so good. # TROLLEY CAR CRASHES INTO GROCERYMAN'S RIG

HORSE IS SO BADLY INJURED THAT A PATROLMAN HAS TO SHOOT IT.

While being driven along West Front street near Mariners place, early Saturday night, a horse belonging to Edward J. Goers, who conducts a grocery at 1216 West Front street, was struck by a west-bound trolley and so badly injured that it had to be shot. Just what caused the animal to get on the tracks is not known as the boy who was in charge claims that it turned suddenly as the car approached but the motorman insists that it was running away. The horse went down beneath the fender and it was impossible to get it out, causing a blockade of that track for some time.

Word of the accident was telephoned police headquarters and Patrolman Higgins went to the scene. He ended the animal's misery by shooting it at once, as the head was crushed and one leg broken. When the collision occured, the sleigh attached was forced into a snowbank and the boy occupying the seat was pitched out but escaped harm.

razor, knife or a piece of glass. He was followed by Marshal Smalley, who told the story of the fight almost as he had done in his own case, except that he declared emphatically that he had seen Flack stabbed by Tunstall. Special Marshal Klein said that he had seen Flack stabbed and when asked, "what happened then?" he replied that he was stabbed himself. In the previous trial any testimony about stabbing where it was not directly connected with the officer named in the indictment, was not admitted, but this statement of Klein's was allowed.

Continuing his story when court opened this morning, Klein said he first came on the scene when he heard a marshal's whistle and ran up Somerset street to Craig place. He was positive that it was Tunstall who had stabbed Flack. The clothes worn by Flack at the time were put in evidence, with the blood clots and cuts showing plainly.

When placed on the stand, Marshal Flack said he had been attracted to the colored men by their disorderly conduct at Somerset street and Lincoln place and that he was about half a block behind them when placed under arrest by Smalley. The latter had only called for assistance he hurried forward and seeing that trouble was ahead, he blew his whistle and Chief Weiss responded. The latter ordered Flack to place handcuffs on Toms and he was leaning over him to do this when he was stabbed in the back. At the time he was wearing a heavy police coat, an overcoat, cardigan jacket, vest shirt and two woolen undershirts, the knife blade penetrating all these before it entered his body, showing that it must have been driven with terrific force. The prosecution laid stress on this fact to bear out the second part of the indictment, "with intent to kill."

As Flack concluded, Alfred Tranchand was placed on the stand to verify the time of the occurrence after which court adjourned until this afternoon. The testimony will not be heard fully until tomorrow and it will probably be late tomorrow afternoon before the case goes to the jury.

AMUSEMENTS.

The countless friends and admirers of "Buster Brown," who have made the acquaintance of this precocious youngster principally through the pages of the Sunday colored supplement, will be delighted to learn that he has been realized in the flesh on the stage in Melville B. Raymond's cartoon farce of the same title, at the Majestic Theatre. From all the numerous Outcault cartoons, clever playwrights have selected the most comical episodes suited for stage productions; costumers have copied the familiar "Buster Brown" suits in all possible variations, both juvenile and feminine; artists have painted picturesque scenes, and popular composers have supplied catchy songs and choruses—including a topical number founded on "Buster's" favorite "Resolved." It remained only to vitalize the character in the person of some player capable of carrying the strenuous role of "Buster" to the life and Manager Raymond found exactly the person in Gabriel, the midget comedian, well-known in vaudeville. Of course, "Buster" would not be himself without his celebrated smiling dog "Tige," and this intelligent canine has found an expert interpreter in the person of George Ali, long popular as the "animal" actor in all Weber & Fields productions.

REALTY TRANSFER.

The Schepflin Building Sold to E. Schloss for $20,000.

Emil Schloss, who, with his brother, Moses Schloss, is associated in the management of the S. Schoner & Co. store on West Front street, today purchased the Schepflin building on West Front street, owned by Morris Abrams.

The property is that part from J. W. Garvit's building west to the corner of Grove street.

It is understood that the consideration was about $20,000.

Mrs. Force's Nineteenth Birthday.

Mrs. Mary L. Force, one of the oldest members of the local Hicksite Society of Friends and the mother of A. L. Force, is quietly celebrating her nineteenth birthday today at her home in Watchung avenue. Despite her advanced years she possesses general good health. Her children, grandchildren, nephews, nieces and immediate neighbors called to offer congratulations and to wish her "many happy returns of the day." She received numerous remembrances in the way of flowers, fruit and other suitable presents.

Infant Boy Dead.

Wesley Albert Brokaw, infant son of Wesley B. and Albertine A. Brokaw, died this morning at the home of the parents, 349 East Front street, aged five months, two weeks and four days. Notice of funeral will be given later.

PLEA FOR HIGHER MORALS

Dr. Whiton's Lecture Before Monday Afternoon Club.

RELIGIOUS WORK

Editor of The Outlook Says Moral Questions Make Turning Points in History—Cites N.J. Race Tracks.

Taking for his subject "The Need of Moral Renaissance," Dr. James Whiton, one of the editors of The Outlook and a brother of John M. Whiton, of Central avenue, interested a large audience at the Monday Afternoon Club's meeting in the Casino Monday.

His lecture was devoted to the need of a higher standard of religious morality or moral religion in the church. A wide distinction was made between conventional morality which led to self satisfaction and real morality which was full of aspiration and unselfish endeavor.

The moral ideal, according to Dr. Whiton, is a flying goal, without conformity to any present standard. He illustrated this statement by reference to a time when dueling lotteries, slavery and universal rum drinking were considered less immoral than at the present time. Dr. Whiton claimed that business methods were egoistic and not altruistic and that the social conscience needed to be awakened so that the aim should be the out-put instead of the in-take. Even charities, he said, were not based on the justice of prevention of crime and poverty.

At variance with the general thought, the lecturer said that man was born into a state of duty, not of rights: that moral crists should be met with a moral revival and that moral questions made turning points in history like the American Revolution and the Civil War. On the ground that moral weakness imperils church and state, Dr. Whiton pleaded for the extension of righteousness.

At the close of the lecture in reply to a query whether individual effort could not improve the tone of morals without the church, Dr. Whiton replied that no reform could be made without religious stimulus and referred to the overthrow of race track gambling in New Jersey as showing the growth of public opinion, starting with the individual and ending with the church. A similar agitation on the subject of child labor in New Jersey he said was desirable.

In reply to another query, how to cultivate the moral judgment, Dr. Whiton made answer by emptying one's self of prejudice and self-interest, having a desire to know the right and do the right—the pure mind finding its reward in the beatitude "Blessed are the pure in heart for they shall see God."

Preceding Dr. Whiton's talk a paper was read by Mrs. Isaac L. Miller on the subject: "Value to the Member of a Club Devoted Exclusively to Intellectual Culture." This paper was prepared for the State Federation of Clubs and read at the semi-annual meeting in the autumn.

T. E. F. RANDOLPH BURIED AT HILLSIDE

REV. DRS. ZELIE AND KITTREDGE OFFICIATE AT THE FUNERAL SERVICES.

The funeral services of the late Thompson E. F. Randolph were held Monday afternoon at 2:15 o'clock from the home, 230 Central avenue. There was a very large attendance of relatives and friends, including many former business associates of Mr. Randolph, who came from New York. The services which consisted of Scripture reading and prayer, were in charge of Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and Rev. Dr. Abbott E. Kittredge, Mr. Randolph's former pastor in New York. The Lotus Glee Club, of New York, sang "O, Still, Still With Thee," and "Beulah Land."

There were many floral tributes, the casket being completely covered and surrounded with flowers. The interment was in Hillside Cemetery.

NEW JERSEY'S FAMILIES

Statistics Compiled by Federal Government of Interest.

SOME COMPARISONS

Result of Investigations Among the Families of Wage-Earners in This State—Cost of Living, Etc.

The Department of Commerce and Labor has issued a volume on the cost of living and retail prices of food in all the States and in many of the cities throughout the country. It is brimful of statistical matter of great value.

The investigation for the preparation for this report was limited to the families of wage-workers and to persons on salaries not exceeding $1,200 per year, no attempt being made to cover families of persons engaged in business on their own account. Both the native and the foreign-born elements of the population were covered, the nativity of the husband of the family, for the purpose of this investigation, being accepted as determining the nativity of the family. All schedules cover a period of one year.

In New Jersey 994 families were investigated, 699 of the heads of these families being natives of the United States and 255 of foreign birth. The data here presented was gathered by experienced special agents sent to New Jersey by the department, the information being given generally by the housewife, who was often assisted by other members of the family. The agents began this work in the localities of the State to which they were assigned by making themselves thoroughly acquainted with the prevailing prices of all staple necessaries, thus enabling them to verify, to a certain extent, the statements as to cost of living.

In New Jersey during the year there was 50.51 per cent. of the heads of families not idle and 49.49 per cent. idle. This is a much better showing for New Jersey than New York State. New Jersey is also above the average shown for all the States, 50.19 per cent. of the heads of families in the thirty-three States investigated being not idle, while 49.80 per cent. were idle.

In New Jersey 82.70 per cent. of the families occupy homes that are rented and 17.30 per cent. own their homes. New Jersey is slightly below the average of the thirty-three States investigated, which is 18.97 per cent. of the families owning their homes. Of those in New Jersey who own their homes, 83.73 per cent. have them unincumbered and only 16.26 per cent. have their homes mortgaged. Of the great manufacturing States New Jersey is far in the lead in this respect.

In New Jersey 39.29 per cent. of the families who own homes that are encumbered did not make any payments on the principal sum, while 60.71 per cent. of such people in New Jersey did make payments on the principal. New Jersey ranks above the average for the entire country, which is 58.58 per cent. who did pay on the principal sum, and 41.42 per cent. who did not pay.

The per cent. of families the heads of which are foreign, who live in rented homes in the United States, is 76.71 per cent. and 94.29 per cent. who own their homes. Less Italians own their homes than any other class of foreigners, and more foreigners from the Netherlands own their homes than any other class, the percentage being for Italy 11.73 and for the Netherlands 46.15.

In New Jersey 639 native families were investigated, the heads of 626 of these families being at work for wages also, and there were thirteen of the families investigated without husbands and ten without wives. There were also 585 foreign families investigated in New Jersey, the Irish outnumbering any other foreigners and the Germans coming next, the English third, with respectively 216 families, ninety and forty-eight. The heads of 390 of these foreign families are at work, two are idle and nine of the wives of these families are at work and three of them are without husbands and fifteen without wives.

In the number of American families investigated, as quoted above, eighteen of them had 107 children at work for wages and 316 of them families had 893 children at school, and 243 of these families had 603 children at home, nearly all of the latter number being too young to attend school.

Of the foreign families investigated in New Jersey, seventy had 106 children at work, 148 had 231 children at school and 204 had 368 children at home. It will be seen that the foreigners in New Jersey have a greater percentage of children at work than the Americans, and they also have a greater percentage of children at school. The figures for these New Jersey families are: American children at work, 1.23 per cent.; foreign, 1.51 per cent.; percentage of American children at school, 3.62; foreign, 2.17; American children at home, 1.76 per cent.; foreign, 1.80 per cent.

Of these 639 American families in New Jersey, 15.03 per cent. of them keep 155 boarders to assist in the support of the family, while 1.73 per cent. of them keep eleven servants to assist in the household work. Of the 255 foreign families investigated in New Jersey, 21.41 per cent. of them keep 188 boarders and 1.13 per cent. of them four servants. It should be borne in mind that these families are of the working class as noted above.

The families of New Jersey applied 90.08 per cent. of their total expenditures for rent, 4.37 per cent. for fuel, 1.33 per cent. for lighting, 14.75 per cent. for clothing, 18.79 per cent. for sundries, making a total of 59.70 per cent., the remainder, or 40.80 per cent., having been expended for food. The per cent. of the income of these families expended amounted to $90.88. In New York this same class of families expended 97.72 per cent. of their income for living expenses. The average for all these States is 94.90 per cent. of the total income expended for living expenses, so it will be seen that the wage-earners of New Jersey spend a less percentage of their income for living than in most of the States.

All kinds of vegetables have increased very rapidly in price in New Jersey during the period named.

COUNCILMAN TYLER IN THE ROLE OF SLEUTH

INVESTIGATES A "HOLD-UP" AND UNRAVELS A MYSTERY.

Since his appointment as chairman of the police committee, Councilman William S. Tyler has demonstrated to the members of the force that the position is not a secondary matter with him. Beside visiting headquarters frequently to "learn the ropes" he has made himself personally acquainted with each officer and this week became a sleuth himself and unearthed a little mystery that was baffling the department.

While the Oshkosh performance was in progress at the Casino, Saturday night, a coachman in the employ of a Steile avenue family, came back to the place and reported that an attempt had been made to "hold him up" as he was driving through Field avenue off West Eighth street, on his way to the barn. He said a man had ordered him to stop and when he whipped up his horses, had thrown a huge rock a him which had crashed through the front window of the coach. The broken window was to be seen but there was no rock inside the carriage and nothing to show where it had gone out. The coachman also said that the rock had bounced around somehow and struck him on the back of the head.

When the police took up the matter, Chairman Tyler became deeply interested and afterward went out on the case himself. After questioning the coachman and following up the tracks of the carriage through Field avenue, which is very seldom used except by this same coachman, he became convinced that the "hold-up" was a concoction to hide a slight collision with a pole in which the carriage window became broken. The coachman evidently believed he would lose his position if he told the facts and the "hold-up" seemed the best way out of the trouble. The occurrence might still have been a mystery but for Councilman Tyler "getting busy" recent developments have proven his theory.

CARS SMASHED.

Airbrakes Fail to Work and Disastrous Wreck Narrowly Averted.

A collision, which might have proved disastrous, occurred on the New Jersey Central Railroad at the county line near White House Friday. Two cars of the paper train, westbound, were thrown over the eastbound track by a broken rail.

As soon as the accident happened, a man was rushed back to signal an eastbound local from Phillipsburg which was known to be due. The engineer of the local saw the signal and threw on the airbrakes, but they failed to work properly, and the big engine crashed into the cars in front of it. Its whole side was torn off and the cars were smashed. The passengers of both trains escaped injury, except for severe shocks. Many of the passengers and the engineer and fireman jumped into the deep drifts of snow when they saw that a collision was unavoidable.

No Race Track on TenEyck Farm.

Col. J. S. Frelinghuysen, of Somerville, who recently purchased the TenEyck farm, near Somerville, will not build a race track there, as reported. He will maintain it as a good old fashioned farm with no fancy equipment.

Engagement Announced.

Announcement is made of the engagement of Miss Louise Patten, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George D. Patten, of East Seventh street, and Edward McKay, of Cleveland, Ohio

MRS. C. W. FAIRBANKS

SHE IS THE MENTOR OF THE VICE PRESIDENT-ELECT.

His Speeches Are Submitted to Her Before Being Given to the Public and Changed as She Suggests.

Indianapolis, Ind.—The election of Senator Fairbanks to the vice presidency has not only created great public interest in him, but also in Mrs. Fairbanks, who played an important part in influencing the senator to accept the nomination. At no time did she attempt to conceal her delight that the honor should come to him.

Of the two, indeed, Mrs. Fairbanks is the more ambitious for honor and power. She is fond of society, and she recognized the fact that it would be a distinct social gain to her to return to Washington as the wife of the vice president. A close friend of the family said some time ago that she was very anxious for the senator to accept the party nomination, and that he was governed largely by her wishes when, though not seeking the nomination, he gave his friends to understand that he would not refuse it.

Mrs. Fairbanks has long been known here for her fondness for entertaining and at the same time for her fondness for elegance, says an Indianapolis correspondent of the New York Herald. She treats all persons with courtesy and consideration. While possessing a fine instinct for the best in human nature and a certain shrewdness in her judgments of men and women, Mrs. Fairbanks has an artlessness and a childlike naivette that render her especially charming in her home and among her children. She enjoys their full confidence to an unusual degree.

While democratic in a rare degree in her manners, she is always careful and dignified, but her dignity is softened by a tact which is always at her direction. She exercised a commanding influence in her home, and this influence extends to her husband in all matters political. He has great respect for her judgment, and she is a counsellor as well as a wife.

All of his public speeches, it is said, are first submitted to her, and her advice is asked on important points. Nor do the criticisms fall heedlessly. Manuscripts are revised if Mrs. Fairbanks so advises. The senator makes it a practice to read his speeches to his wife in the quiet of the home library, and if passed upon favorably they are delivered to the largest audiences in the senate or on the political platform.

Mrs. Fairbanks cannot be called a domestic woman in the sense of personally superintending her home, but she is brimful of hospitality. A housekeeper is in charge, and she is made responsible for the corps of well trained servants, after the fashion observed in large English establishments. Mrs. Fairbanks is a very busy woman, her large mail making heavy demands on her time, aside from multitudinous social duties.

The question of dress cannot be said to be an all absorbing one for Mrs. Fairbanks. Always dressed in excellent taste, Mrs. Fairbanks renders her gowns in keeping with her position rather than as a matter of superlative importance. New modes and the latest wrinkles of fashion trouble her not at all, nor will she consent to being made uncomfortable. Certain limitations there are for her dressmaker, otherwise they are at full liberty to make her gowns as handsome and becoming as their ability permits. White is her favorite color.

Mrs. Fairbanks is the mother of five children, viz.: Mrs. Wm. Timmens, Warren C., Frederick C., Richard M. and Robert. No society demand upon her was ever sufficient to cause her to take one moment from her children when they needed her attention, and they have grown up invariably like the mother, kind, affable and popular. One of the striking characteristics of the family circle is the respect for one another that is manifested in a thousand ways.

Late Beginning.

Sir Walter Scott began to write his celebrated novels at 40. Milton began "Paradise Lost" at 50. When "Ben Hur" appeared its author, Mrs. Henry Wood, was 45. Cromwell was 41 when he began his public career. The year of the Hegira was the fifty-third of Mohammed, and Marlborough reached his independent command at the same age. In spiritual examples Abraham was 75 when called out of Charan, and Moses was 80 when he stood before Pharaoh as the champion of Israel.

COTTON EXPERIMENT

RUSSIA AND GREAT BRITAIN STIMULATING CULTIVATION.

The Two Great Nations Endeavoring to Make Themselves Independent of the American Yield of This Fabric.

Just as the vagaries of the American cotton market have stimulated the cultivation of cotton in various parts of the British empire, so also has Russia for years past been endeavoring to render her mills independent of the United States, remarks, with sturdy pride, one of the prominent journals.

The district chosen for the experiment, which district is here illustrated, is the Khanate of Kokand, and especially the valley of the Zarafshan, lying to the west—the most fertile and best-watered part of Central Asia. According to the account given by Shrine and Denison Ross, in their standard work, "The Heart of Asia," a large proportion of the Zarafshan valley is now under cotton raised chiefly from American seed. The seed is sown in April, and towards the end of September the ripe pods are picked and exposed in heaps for sale. In average years an acre yields 1,400 pounds, and gives a net return of $27.50, considerably more than other crops.

Several years ago there were 45,000 acres under cotton, but the prospects for extending the crop are not encouraging, the area of land suitable for cotton-raising being limited in extent, and the soil, though naturally rich, having been exhausted by centuries of cultivation, needs much manuring.

Kokand was the last of the Central Asian Khanates to fall under the Russian yoke. The capital was seized in 1876 by a force under Skobeleff, who subsequently became the first governor of the Khanate which was annexed to Russia under its ancient name of Farghana. The town lies on the railway connecting Samarkand with Andijan, and has a population of 82,000. It is inclosed by a wall 12 miles in circumference, constructed, like many Central Asian towns, by beautiful gardens. The most noticeable building is the old palace of the Khans, similar in architecture to the mosques of Samarkand. The inhabitants of the provinces are chiefly composed of the cross-bred Sarts and the nomadic tribes of Uzbeks and Kirghis, men of swarthy complexion and short and sturdy in build. They are great mutton eaters, and their favorite drink is brick tea. Their chief relaxations are music and dancing, especially on the festivals of their saints.

India, ages ago the great cotton-producing country, might add greatly to the amount of cotton now grown in her broad confines, and, to an American, it is a matter for wonder that Great Britain has been so slow to adopt the latest approved systems for the cultivation of this most important crop. Methods that have been followed for centuries still continue to obtain among the ignorant small farmers that generally grow cotton in India. To be sure, recent experiments have been begun in this portion of King Edward's domain towards improving existing conditions. Agricultural experiment stations have been established for the study of the needs of the cotton plant, but as yet no great progress has been made towards the goal of independence of American cotton.

It is in India we have the earliest notice of cotton, a record of 450 B. C. referring to trees of India that bore as their fruit fleeces more delicate and beautiful than those of sheep, and reference is made to the use of the "tree fleece" by the Indians in the manufacture of cloth. The Indian cotton is famous, and even to-day with their primitive hand-looms the natives turn out most beautiful fabrics. We get our word calico from India, a material that in the original was not the common stuff now known by that name. The muslins made in the city of Calicut—hence calico—was described as so fine you could hardly feel it in the hand, and the thread when spun could hardly be seen.

GEN. LEW WALLACE.

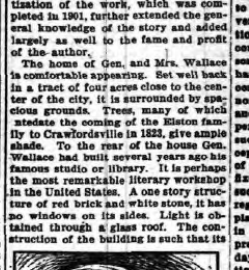
HEALTH OF VETERAN AUTHOR NOT AS BAD AS REPORTED.

His Unique Workroom at His Crawfordsville Home — How He Got the Idea and Characters for "Ben Hur."

Crawfordsville, Ind.—Gen. Lew Wallace, who, according to the press dispatches is in imminent danger of dying, is in not nearly such poor health as many of the correspondents would have the public believe. He is 78 years old, and these years, together with an aggravated case of dyspepsia, accounts for his present ill health, but he is not suffering from the effects of a surgical operation for cancer of the stomach, as the correspondents have repeatedly reported.

As the author of "Ben Hur" Gen. Wallace is known in practically every country of the globe. No other book since the days of "Pilgrims Progress" has been so widely read. An estimate indicates that from the total number of editions of the book that have been sold at least 4,000,000 people have read and enjoyed the Hoosier soldier's beautiful tale of the lowly Nazarene. The dramatization of the work, which was completed in 1901, further extended the general knowledge of the story and added largely as well to the fame and profit of the author.

The home of Gen. and Mrs. Wallace is comfortable, unpretending. Set well back in a tract of four acres close to the center of the city, it is surrounded by spacious grounds. Trees, many of which antedate the coming of the Elston family to Crawfordsville in 1823, give ample shade. To the rear of the house Gen. Wallace has built several years ago his famous studio or library. It is perhaps the most remarkable literary workshop in the United States. A one story structure of red brick and white stone, it has no windows on its sides. Light is obtained through a glass roof. The construction of the building is such that its



GEN. LEW WALLACE.
He Is Not Nearly Death as the Correspondents Would Have Us Believe.

occupant can shut himself entirely apart from the outer world and pursue his literary labors unmolested by the slightest sound. It is in this workshop that Gen. Wallace has done much of his best work. What has not been accomplished there has been done beneath the shade of an aged beech tree which stands beside the library. It was under this favorite tree that most of the chapters of "Ben Hur" were written. The tree has come to be known historically as the Ben Hur beech.

Of the writing of "Ben Hur" Gen. Wallace told an interesting story to a Chicago Chronicle correspondent. It has been told that the inspiration for the tale of the Christ was given to Gen. Wallace by the famous agnostic, Robert G. Ingersoll. Gen. Wallace denies that he ever conversed with Col. Ingersoll had anything to do with the beginning of "Ben Hur." It was, however, due to a conversation between Gen. Wallace and Col. Ingersoll that the research which made the book the marvel of its age in all lands began.

This conversation occurred during the course of the journey from Cincinnati to Indianapolis. Ingersoll had made the speech which nominated James G. Blaine for the presidency. In the car on which both were returning Col. Ingersoll occupied the stateroom. He invited Gen. Wallace to join him and have a talk. Gen. Wallace replied that he would do so on the condition that he be permitted to fix the topic of conversation. To this Ingersoll assented, asking him:

"What is your text?"

Gen. Wallace replied: "Is there a God?"

"I don't know. Do you?" was Ingersoll's reply.

"Is there a hell?" asked Wallace.

"I don't know. Do you?"

"Was Jesus Christ the son of God?"

"I don't know. Do you?" Ingersoll answered in the same tone.

Ingersoll then took up the entire subject of the Bible and displayed such a thorough knowledge of the book, its characters and scenes that Gen. Wallace became deeply interested. He studied the new religion and the life and sayings of Christ with the result that he came to believe absolutely in the Bible. He gave up all doubt of the existence of a God and accepted the story of the divine origin of Jesus Christ. His conception of the Nazarene and the almost perfect portrayal of scenes in Palestine, which he had not yet visited, were the result of this conversation. Had it not been for "Bob" Ingersoll it is doubtful whether the world would have had the "Ben Hur" as it is known to people of all lands. Certain it is that Gen. Wallace would have lost much of the fame and wealth which the book brought him. For without the awful terror aroused by the conversation of Ingersoll Gen. Wallace would never have studied so deeply into the subject as he did.

TEXT OF ELECTION LAW FOR FEBRUARY SEVENTH

BILL AS PASSED BY THE LEGISLATURE AND SIGNED BY GOVERNOR.

The special law passed by the Legislature for the special election on Feb. 7, is as follows:

1. That whenever a writ of election shall be issued by either the Senate or House of General Assembly of the State of New Jersey for the purpose of filling vacancies which shall arise from the death, resignation or otherwise of any members of either of said bodies, the advertising of the writ of election in at least four newspapers, if so many there be in said county, said advertising shall be published as nearly as may be equally in newspapers of the different political parties so as to afford the widest possible information to all voters of every political party, and shall be published as often as required by the writ of election, shall constitute a sufficient notice of the holding of such election to the legal voters therein. The convention or body making such nomination shall certify to the clerk of the county the name of the person or persons selected as a candidate under the hand of the presiding officer of the convention or other body making such nomination, together with an acceptance of such nomination signed by the person selected as a candidate, and such certificate of nomination and acceptance shall be filed with the clerk of the county six days before the time fixed by the writ for the holding of such election. The local boards of registry and election shall meet at the place where such election is to be held in the respective voting districts or precincts, on the Friday preceding the day set for the holding of such election, at 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and remain in session until 8 o'clock in the evening, for the purpose of revising and correcting the registers of voters by adding thereto the names of persons entitled to vote whose names do not appear thereon. The registers of voters used at the last preceding election shall be used at such special election. The clerk of the county in which such election shall be called shall provide official ballots and envelopes of the same kind and under the same regulations as are provided for in the law to which this is a supplement. The local Boards of Registry and Election shall make return of the result of such election to the clerk of the County Board of Registry and Election within twenty-four hours after holding such election. The County Board of Registry and Election shall meet on the Thursday following the holding of such election and shall canvass the vote and certify the result to the clerk of the county, and the clerk of the county shall within three days after such election deliver a certificate of the determination of the County Board of Registry and Election and the certificate appended thereto to the successful candidate and transmit another copy of the same to the secretary of State, at Trenton. The clerk of the county shall issue to the successful candidate a certificate of election immediately after the vote shall be canvassed by the County Board of Registry and Election. Official ballots shall be supplied to parties applying for them under the same conditions and regulations as provided in the act to which this is a supplement. Except as herein provided such special elections shall be conducted in the same manner and under the same conditions, restrictions and penalties as general elections for members of Assembly.

2. The members of the Boards of Registry and Election shall each receive ten dollars and no more for all services rendered under the provisions of this act.

3. This act shall take effect immediately.

Approved January 25, 1906.

DEAD IN LIMOGES.

American Woman Was Recently Arrested There as a Russian Spy.

Rev. Walter T. Griffis, of this city, consular agent in Limoges, France, sent a cable message Thursday that Miss Eugenie Ulrich died there in a hospital that morning. Miss Ulrich was editor of the magazine "The Christian Mother," and secretary of the Guild of the Infant Saviour, an organization which cares for foundlings. She went to Europe a few months ago for study at Oxford. On her way there she met an exiled nun from France, who told her of the dearth of teachers to take places of banished religious. So she went to Limoges and took a place in a convent school as teacher of German and English.

After a few weeks in Limoges the Chief of Police summoned her before him and asked to see her passport. She told him she was an American woman student and did not have a passport. He charged her with being a Russian spy and gave her ten days to prove her identity or be deported. In repaired cable messages between Consular Agent Griffis and the State Department at Washington to prevent her banishment from France.

HOTEL ROSELL IS SOLD

John A. Staats Becomes New Owner.

THE PRICE, $40,000

Policy of the House Will be Changed to Make it Modern and Up-to-Date in Every Respect.

For a consideration stated to be $40,000, John A. Staats, proprietor of the Hotel Kensington, Friday purchased from Mahlon and Burgess, the Hotel Rosell property, for many years known as the City Hotel, as Park avenue and Second street. By the terms he secures the building and the grounds in the rear and assumes full ownership, subject to the present lease held by A. B. Rosell. This will be up within a short time when Mr. Staats will take possession himself and conduct the hostelry with the idea of making it the best in the city.

The new owner came to Plainfield from Elizabeth several years ago, leasing the Hotel Kensington, then called the Grenada. He made numerous changes in its policy and it has gradually grown to be one of the most popular hostelries in this part of the State.

The property is owned by J. Harry Campbell and though he was agreeable, many changes which Mr. Staats wished to make could not be, brought about through lack of space. He grew to like Plainfield so much that he decided to make it his permanent home and since he could not branch out at the Kensington, he began the negotiations for the Rosell which ended in its passing into his control. He has not fully decided what he will do with the Kensington but the chances are that he will give his entire time to the new place.

The Hotel Rosell is advantageously situated and furnished for a good class of trade, but it has changed proprietors many times within past years. The ownership has rested with O. R. Maltby and William B. Burgess for a long time but lately it became known that they would receive offers for it and there were several applicants. Beside Mr. Staats, Jerome W. Leary, formerly superintendent of the Aluminum Press Works, was anxious to secure it.

TRINITY MEN ELECT.

Frank F. Storr Chosen President of Association.

Though there was a small attendance at the meeting of the Men's Association of Trinity Reformed church Thursday, officers were elected for the coming year.

Those were the officers elected: President, Frank F. Storr; vice president, R. E. Bohen; secretary, Charles M. Dolliver; treasurer, M. F. Gano. The newly-elected officers will convene in the near future, when the necessary committees will be appointed and the plans for the men's club entertainments will be outlined.

No arrangements were made for an entertainment on account of the small attendance. The next meeting will be held on Thursday, Feb. 23.

Co. K's Committees.

Following the annual election of civil officers, which took place two weeks ago, Captain W. B. Martin, chairman of Company K, has appointed the committee which will serve for the coming year. They are as follows: Finance—Corporal Conkling, Private Bond, Private McDonald; recruiting—Lieutenant Lewis, Corporal Miles, Corporal Jennings, Private DeCamp, Private Meeker; ways and means—Sergeant Littell, Corporal Agar, Corporal Phillips, Private Ford and Private Winter; entertainment—Sergeant Peterson, Sergeant Horr, Private Weaver, Private Judson and Private Pearsall.

Rehearsing for "The Princess."

S. B. Howe, Jr., of the faculty of the Plainfield High School, is conducting the rehearsals for the Junior class production of Tennyson's poem, "The Princess," which has been dramatized by Miss Elizabeth Winter. The play will be given in Franklin Hall on March 4.

In Big Realty Concern.

J. Wesley Johnson, of this city, is named as one of the incorporators of the Cranford Realty Co., which filed papers with the Secretary of State last week, with a capital stock of $50,000. The other incorporators are Henry R. Heath and George Sackett. The concern will do a general real estate business.

Power to Enforce Penalties.

A bill has been introduced in the Legislature which amends the act relating to and providing for the government of cities having less than twelve thousand inhabitants, so that the common councils thereof may prescribe penalties of imprisonment not exceeding ninety days, or of fine not exceeding $200, for violations of ordinances which they shall have authority to pass.

Ormond VanNess, of Mariners place, has recovered from an attack of the measles.

ELECTION LAW SIGNED

Gov Stokes Affixed His Signature to Measure.

NOT MUCH INTEREST

Certificate of Nomination Were Filed by Assemblyman Coyne on Tuesday—Amendments to the Bill.

Just before he went to the Trenton House to attend the reception of the newly re-elected United States Senator, John Kean, Governor Stokes signed the bill providing for special elections in Union and Sussex counties, February 7, to choose successors to the late Assemblymen-elect George Embree, of Union, and the late Jackson R. Decker, of Sussex.

Little interest is being taken in the election.

As soon as it was learned that the bill was a law, Assemblyman Edward H. Coyne, chairman of the Republican county committee of Union, announced that the primaries of his party in Union would be held Saturday night, the nominating convention on Monday night.

The certificate of nomination of the successful candidate at the primaries were filed Tuesday.

The bill as it became a law contained two amendments.

The first amendment corrected the defect in the notice of the elections by providing for specific publication in at least four newspapers in each county, the papers to be divided as nearly equal as possible politically.

The other fixed the pay of election officers at $10 each for all the services to be rendered under this act. The amendments were concurred in and then under suspension of the rules the bill was passed as amended.

TRAIN IN WRECK ON DISASTER'S ANNIVERSARY

EASTON EXPRESS, NO 13, FIGURES IN ACCIDENT AGAIN FRIDAY.

There was a beaden collision at North Branch on the New Jersey Central Friday morning between the paper train going west and an Easton train leaving the latter place at 6 o'clock. The paper train was nearly an hour late.

A singular fact in connection with this wreck is that the Easton train, known as No. 14, going east, is No. 13 on its return trip in the afternoon. Train No. 13 was in collision with the Reading flyer at Westfield two years ago, when so many Plainfielders were killed and injured.

In the collision one man was slightly injured. By noon the tracks were cleared.

7,820 Autos in State.

Attaches of the secretary of state's office at Trenton, believed that automobiles were given quite generously last year for Christmas presents. They base their assertion upon the fact that beginning the day after Christmas there was a small-sized rush on the part of the part of the new automobile owners to register cars. The total number of cars registered up to December 31 is 7,820. These figures represent the entire number of automobiles licensed in the state since the approving of the state automobile law in March, 1903. When the law was first passed the machines registered were mostly of the light runabout type. Steadily that type of machines has disappearded in the applications for licenses being sworn to in the office of the secretary of state, until now there are practically none of these being registered.

Sons of Temperance Election.

Officers of the New Jersey Sons of Temperance elected Wednesday at the annual session at Trenton were: G. W. P., William P. Compton, Metuchen; G. W. A., Mrs. Ruth E. Blessing, Camden; G. S., Ross Slack, Trenton; G. T., Henry B. Howell, Trenton; G. C., the Rev. C. H. Elder, Trenton; G. C., Frederick W. Wommelsdorf, Metuchen; G. S., William N. Watson, Trenton; G. S. of Y. P. W., Mrs. Mary F. Slack, Trenton; representative at large, Mrs. Rachel Ellis, Camden.

Miss Minnie Brokaw, of this city, has been visiting her parents, Mr. and John N. Brokaw, of Harlingen, Somerset county.

Blue Island, Ill., Jan. 14, 1901.

Messrs. Ely Bros.:—I have used your Cream Balm in my family for nine years and it has become my family doctor for colds in the head. I use it freely on my children. It is a Godsend to children.

Yours respectfully, J. Kimball.

Messrs. Ely Bros.:—I suffered greatly with catarrh and tried different remedies without effect. After using one bottle of your Cream Balm I found relief and I cannot praise too highly such a remedy.

MISS SALLIE M. JETER IS NOW MRS. BININGER

REV. DR. CHAMBLISS OFFICIATES AT THE WEDDING CEREMONY.

Miss Sallie Mae Jeter, daughter of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. A. Jeter, of Lynchburg, Virginia, and Irving Whitney Bininger, of Westervelt avenue, were married Thursday night at 7 at the home of the groom in the presence of a large number of guests from New York, Brooklyn and this city. The ceremony was performed by the bride's pastor, Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss, of the First Baptist church.

The home was attractively decorated with greens, smilax, carnations and roses. In the parlor, where the ceremony was performed, there was a profusion of smilax, and it was in front of a bower of flowers and greens that the bridal party stood. In the dining room the table was garnished with smilax and cut flowers, while in the hallway the greens were used almost exclusively.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Ida Jeter, and both were gowned in white Parisian mull over white taffeta. The bride carried a bouquet of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley, while her sister carried pink LaFrance roses and asparagus ferns. The best man was Ernest A. Wilmarth, of Brooklyn, brother-in-law of the groom.

After the ceremony the couple received congratulations, followed by a wedding supper. During the evening Mr. and Mrs. Bininger left on a wedding trip which will include Washington and Old Point Comfort. Upon their return they will live at 70 Westervelt avenue, the groom's home.

The bride received many presents of value and use. From her husband she received an upright piano and from her Sunday-school teacher at the First Baptist church she received a handsome lamp. Other gifts included cut glass, silver, bric-a-brac, while the bride and groom each received a check for a substantial amount.

Mrs. Bininger although a native of Virginia, has been a resident of Plainfield for several years, and since coming here has made many friends. She has been an active worker of the First Baptist church. Mr. Bininger has been a resident of this city for some time. He has been connected with the local office of the Prudential Insurance Company eight years. He was pleasantly remembered by his associates in business.

In the exchange of gifts among those of the bridal party, the best man received a pair of gold link cuff-buttons with the initials of the bride and groom inscribed and the bridesmaid received a gold bracelet from her sister.

A pleasant feature of the reception which followed the ceremony was the piano selections by Prof. William M. Miller. He also played the Lohengrin Wedding March, as the bridal party entered the parlor.

ARION CLUB DANCE WELL ATTENDED AFFAIR

YOUNG PEOPLE BRAVE THE ELEMENTS TO HAVE A GOOD TIME.

Snow drifts and high winds proved no barrier to the friends of the Arion Club, Thursday, and when the orchestra struck up the first waltz at the opening reception and dance in former I. O. T. Hall there was a large number of young people in attendance. Before the midnight hour when refreshments were served at an intermission, the gathering was equal in size to those seen at similar affairs when the elements were more favorable. The dance is the first of a series which the Arions will give during the present season.

The committee which had the affair in charge comprised Vincent W. Nash, Jr., chairman; Berlin Banks, Alexander Muir, William Baker and Edmond Texier.

P. S. C.'S GIFT.

Fire Deprtment Allowed Free Use of Gas As Well as Electric Light.

Through the efforts of W. R. Cansebrook, agent for the P. S. C., the fire department houses will continue to have the use of gas for cooking, heating and bathing purposes. The corporation decided at the first of the year to cut off the use of gas, and allow only the free use of electricity as before. The fire department houses will be allowed 250,000 feet of gas a year.

Approaching Nuptials.

Invitations have been issued for the wedding of Miss Ida May Tallamy, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Tallamy, of West Front street, and Robert Humpston, of Dunellen. The ceremony will be performed at the home of the bride's parents on Wednesday, February 8, at 5:30.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 5: "The Enlarging Kingdom"—Ezek. xlvii, 1-12.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

Ezekiel was a Jew who had been carried captive into Babylonia before the city of Jerusalem and the temple were destroyed. He may have known Jeremiah before the captivity and certainly seems to have kept in communication with him, the two prophets exchanging their writings and agreeing in the main points of their teaching and opposing many of the religious teachers of their times among the Jews.

Jeremiah in Jerusalem and Ezekiel in Babylonia both denounced the wickedness of the Jewish people and declared that Jerusalem should be taken by the king of Babylon and the city and temple destroyed.

Both of them predicted after this had taken place and the land lay in desolation that the city and temple should be builded again and a more glorious kingdom should arise, in which righteousness should be as conspicuous as iniquity had been in the previous one.

Fourteen years after the fall of the city and in the twenty-fifth year of his captivity he has a special vision. He appears to be transported to the site of the holy city and sees in vision the new temple rising from the ruins of the older one.

Our lesson is taken from this part of his prophecy. He has seen the various parts of the edifice measured by the divine messenger who reveals to him God's intentions, and now he has come outside the whole series of buildings and sees a little stream of water trickling from under the temple walls on the eastern side and running down the valley and through the Kedron gorge until it reaches the Dead sea.

Several notable things appear in his description of this stream. Its source is in the holy mountain and under the very temple itself. It is an insignificant stream at first and increases as it flows, being in this very unlike real rivers unless they receive tributary streams. This has no other brooks pouring into it, yet it grows steadily greater the farther it flows.

It has wonderful powers of purification. The Dead sea has ever been so salt that nothing can live in its waters, and almost nothing can grow on its banks. But when this river mingles its waters with those of the Salt sea healing and sweetness are communicated, and the waters, lifeless always before, now teem with a multitude of fish of many kinds. It becomes through its whole extent a place of industry and traffic because it has such an abundance in it of food fish.

More than all this, trees of the very finest, trees of all varieties fit for food, grow where hitherto nothing has been able to grow. The fruit never fails, and the leaves have medicinal virtue.

This message was needed to encourage the Jews of that time. Their nation had been wiped out. Was it because their God was weaker than other gods and so unworthy of further worship? Not this, say Jeremiah and Ezekiel, but your sins have caused your God to punish you. If you will now obey Him, He will build a more glorious kingdom, and you shall build Him a better temple.

The new nation shall increase as the waters from the temple increased and shall bring fertility and all blessings man can wish. This meant more than the return of the Jews from the captivity in Babylon. It finds its real fulfillment in the coming of Jesus Christ and in the foundation of His church as the evangelizing agency of these latter ages.

Note how exactly and gloriously this has been and is still being verified. How the spirit of Jesus is winning its way among men! How wonderfully the teachings He gave are molding the lives of men and shaping the course of national affairs! What benefits in place of miseries, what wealth and comfort, what security for life and possessions, what relief for sickness and want, what a great transformation the coming of the gospel works in the affairs of men! Truly these are the waters of the river of Life.

And we have not yet reached the fullness of the river. All the benefits we now have are but the beginning of the fulfillment of the promises. Through the ages God has been keeping covenant with His people. His kingdom is enlarging, and we still pray in all earnestness, "Thy kingdom come and Thy will be done, as in heaven, so in earth."

Touching Only.

Some time ago in one of our magazines there was an article entitled "I Have Touched the Gold!" the exclamation of a deep sea diver who had just come up from exploring a wreck lying in the depths. The writer of the paragraph alluded to the circumstance that often thus in religious life persons "touch the gold" without seizing, possessing and using it. How true this is! We frequent the sanctuary, hear and handle the word of life, get a vision of the cross, put the sacramental bread to our lips—we "touch the gold" and still leave it unrealized from year to year. For want of a little more resolute faith we miss "the unsearchable riches" of personal fellowship with Christ.—Rev. A. A. Ramsey.

Your Guide.

Look within! You know that in your highest moments an ideal of purity, honesty, sincerity, loveliness, shines within you. Let that be your constant guide and companion as you work day by day, molding your life into its likeness.—Abby McDuffy.

The Wine of Love.

Once o'er this painful earth a Man did move,
The Man of griefs, because the Man of love.
The wine of love can be obtained of none
Save Him who trod the wine press all alone.

—Archbishop Trench.

RACE-WAR IN HAWAII

IMPORTED PORTO RICANS NO ADDITION TO ISLANDS.

Refusing to Work, the Emigrants Beg and Steal, and Recently They Have Resorted to Highway Robbery.

Since the recent murder by a Porto Rican of a very prominent white man in Hawaii, the Porto Ricans in "the Islands" have been looked upon with increased disfavor; and to-day it is a very difficult matter for a member of the despised immigrants to get any sort of a position, any work at all.

The present state of affairs leads one familiar with Hawaii to meditation on the almost ideal conditions that prevailed there a short time ago, when there existed so little of race prejudice and hatred. Formerly, white man and brown, native and oriental, oriental and westerner, dwelt together in a degree of harmony remarked far and wide. Of course, there was political friction, some employer-and-employe misunderstandings, but on the whole life in the land of constant summer flowed on smoothly and pleasantly.

Then came the overthrow of the monarchy, and the feeling between native and white man ceased to be of the early character, then there was less and less of the fraternal aspect, trusting dependence on a sort of elder brother basis. A decided anti-haeole (against-the-whites) tendency sprang up and waxed strong. Next, annexation came, and the feeling increased in bitterness; haeoles and natives for awhile saw no community of interests.

Annexation brought in also, along with its admixture of good and ill, a body of Porto Ricans, laborers imported to take the place of the excluded Chinamen; the projector of this solution of the labor problem arguing that the inhabitants of Uncle Sam's new dependency over in the West Indies doubtless would fit in well with the sub-tropical land of Hawaii. But the Porto Ricans proved very different indeed from what was desired of them.

In one way they resembled the natives of the land they had invaded, they were not overfond of work, but in every other respect—and perhaps in the matter of industry, too, for the Hawaiian can work effectively when he does work—they were very much inferior to that gentle savage known as the Sandwich Islander. The Hawaiians are naturally, and of habit, amiable, hospitable, tractable people, simple, inclined to good fellowship. Perhaps it is no exaggeration to say of them that revolting crime is scarcely known among them, murder by a Hawaiian being most unusual. In addition, they are in their way a proud, independent people, beggars among them as few as real criminals.

The Porto Ricans that came over we trust were not typical of their country, for if so, Porto Rico can have small cause to boast of her common people. The ones thrust upon Hawaii were lazy, thieving, ill-tempered, quarrelsome folk. The first thing they did when they were landed was to beg, and stealing soon went hand in hand with their begging. It was hard to get any real work out of them, and they scattered about the islands, a menace to a locality. Proximity to a camp of Porto Ricans inevitably led to the annoyance of petty depredations; they became as unwelcome as once were bands of gypsies to the English. Hawaiians regarded them from the first with amusement and contempt. Now, after a few years of the infliction of their presence, they have decided to ostracise them utterly.

The Chinamen, too, have grown weary of them, both John and the Hawaiians having been preyed upon by the newcomers. As a consequence of the universal detestation, the Porto Ricans now find themselves in very bad shape, and it is rumored many of them are on the verge of starvation throughout the islands; people fearing to employ them as well as thoroughly disliking the character won by them in their short residence. Many have become brigands and taken to the hills, and the Porto Ricans in Hawaii detract from public peace and safety.

A few years ago, and a woman could ride alone with perfect security up and down the steep gulches, over the lonely mountain passes of Hawaii, but now even a man traveler feels a bit of risk in making a long journey unattended or undefended. In the past he has been wont to meet on his way only such pleasant interruption as "Ohio" from the Jap foot-traveler, "Goo Mawlin'" from John Chinaman (riding along like a sailor). Aloha from Hawaiian horseman; all either kindly intentioned, or afraid to appear otherwise. Now, even before daylight fades, needy Porto Rican is on the warpath against the wayfarer, after plunder, and a highwayman that is ready with his knife if he meets opposition.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 5.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—What I owe to Christian Endeavor.—Ezek. xlvii, 1-12; Ps. xxxvi, 8. (Christian Endeavor day.)

On last Thursday Christian Endeavor was twenty-seven years old. A quarter of a century and two years ago Dr. Francis E. Clark and a few of his young people were gathered together in Williston church, Portland, and in the providence of God organized a young people's movement that has been the religious wonder of the world for over a generation. And on this twenty-seventh anniversary we are asked to consider our indebtedness to Christian Endeavor. That we owe a debt to this great movement, if we are a part of it, cannot be doubted. Indeed, this is so whether we are a part of it or not. The world is indebted to Christian Endeavor. Outside the Christian church itself few movements in the world's history have had such a widespread influence as Christian Endeavor, and it has always stood for the betterment of the world in the conservatism from evil and consecration to good of millions of its young people. The world's moral, spiritual, intellectual, social and political life has been touched and uplifted by this marvelous movement of God. The church is indebted to Christian Endeavor. Christian Endeavor has been in the church, of the church and for the church, and almost every aspiration of the church at large and every department of local church work has been blessed and advanced through Christian Endeavor. And who can doubt the personal blessings that have come to those who have been a part of this great work? Millions could rise in their places in the Christian church today and say, "We are indebted to Christian Endeavor."

Our indebtedness to Christianity may best be realized by a recollection of what Christian Endeavor has stood for and what it has done. It may well be likened to the stream in Ezekiel's vision. In this vision the prophet saw a stream of water flowing out from under the temple of God. It ran in all directions—north, south, east, west. It ever increased in depth and volume—ankle deep, knee deep, to the loins and at last a great and impassable river, bearing blessings to every form of life the world over. This has been the history of Christian Endeavor. A stream of beneficent influence in the beginning, it has ever increased in depth and volume until it has spread to the nations of the world and has been for the preservation and the healing of the nations. What blessings have flowed from this ever advancing and increasing stream—definite pledged service, deeper devotional life, increased loyalty to Christ and His church, personal participation in public services, new missionary zeal and inspiration, helpful interdenominational affiliation and co-operation, denominational enthusiasm, new ideas and methods of religious work and with countless other blessings, a new meaning to consecration, which has revolutionized the lives of thousands of those who, while Christians before, knew not the joys of consecrated personal service to their Lord and Saviour Jesus Christ! And the stream is ever widening and deepening, and may it continue to do so until the whole world is won for Christ!

But debts should be paid. Do I owe Christian Endeavor a debt? Then I should pay it. And how? What better way than by a still deeper and truer consecration of ourselves to the Master and His service in Christian Endeavor? As we have received let us give out. Thus the desert paid the stream, and the trees the desert, and the people the trees. Everywhere life produced new life, and blessings became the channels of increased blessings. "Freely ye have received; freely give." Thus best can you pay what you owe to Christian Endeavor.

Making a Vacation Count.

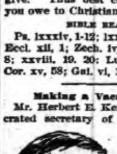
Mr. Herbert E. Kendall is the consecrated secretary of the New Hampshire Christian Endeavor union. Granted a month's leave of absence from his work as a reward for faithful service, he chose to use it for the advancement of Christian Endeavor, spending the time in visiting smaller societies in the Granite State. He traveled 1,400 miles and made forty-four addresses, besides holding a number of conferences. Not a few young people will date from these meetings their start in the Christian life.



HERBERT E. KENDALL.

A Finnish Convention.

The Finnish Christian Endeavor union is now six months old. It has just held its first convention with notable success. There are now fifteen societies in the union, with a membership of 500. Thirteen of these societies sent delegates to the convention.

The fall campaign began immediately after the convention. The Endeavorers have taken up work in Tolo, one of the suburbs of Helsingfors. A lady living there has given 500 marks ($100) to the Finnish and Swedish societies for this work and promises to build a house. At present a schoolhouse is being used. They are organizing a Sunday school and hope to have an Endeavor society.

SENATOR KEAN RE-ELECTED

Legislature in Joint Session Choses U. S. Senator.

CROSS. CHAIRMAN

Kean Received 57 and Stevens 19 Votes at the Joint Meeting of House and Senate.

Speaker Avis called the joint meeting of the Legislature to order which re-elected John Kean, United States Senator at 1 o'clock Thursday afternoon, and Senator Cross, president of the Senate, was made chairman.

The journal of the Senate for Tuesday was read, relating to the proceedings taken by that body in the election of a United States Senator for New Jersey. The House journal for the same day was also read.

These showed that John Kean, of Union County, had received a majority of votes in both houses, and Senator Cross thereupon declared him elected for a term of six years, dating from March 4 next.

The vote as recorded was: Senate, Kean 14, Edwin A. Stevens, Democrat, 6; House, Kean, 43, Stevens 13. Total, Kean 57, Stevens 19.

John Kean was born at Ursino, Union County, in the house in which he now resides, Dec. 4, 1852. After attending private schools a Stockbridge, Mass., and Sing Sing, N. Y., he entered Yale in 1872. He studied law at Columbia College and was admitted to the bar in 1877.

In 1882, Mr. Kean was elected to Congress and was re-elected in 1886. In 1892 he was defeated for Governor. He defeated James Smith, the Democratic choice for United States Senator in 1899. His present term expires March 4, 1905.

KEAN ENTERTAINS STATE LAW MAKERS

RECEPTION AT TRENTON IN HONOR OF HIS RE-ELECTION

In honor of his expected re-election to the United States Senate for another term of six years, Senator John Kean brought a congressional party from Washington to Trenton Thursday, and after the election by the Legislature entertained the Jersey lawmakers, State House officials and Mercer County Republican leaders at luncheon at the Trenton House.

It included, besides Senator Kean, Congressman Ira Wood, of Trenton; John J. Gardner, R. Wayne Parker, William H. Wiley, Henry C. Loudenslager and Allen Benny. Senator Dryden was kept in Washington by a cold.

The Congressmen were given the privileges of the floor during the joint meetting of the Senate and Assembly and witnessed the re-election of Senator Kean.

The reception took place and luncheon was served in the colonial room at the Trenton House.

BRIDE IS SIXTEEN; GROOM SEVENTEEN

MISS PEARL DE NISE AND HARRY SHEPHERD SECRETLY WEDDED.

Miss Pearl DeNise, daughter of Mrs. Mary DeNise, of West Front street, and Harry Shepherd, of Watchung avenue, the borough, surprised their friends, Thursday, by announcing that they had been married. The ceremony was performed in New York on October 13 last and was kept a secret between them because of anticipated parental objection on account of their ages. The young man is not eighteen and his bride is sixteen.

Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd have since been living at their respective homes but they will go to housekeeping within a short time.

Former Mayor Dead.

Theodore Ayers, Sr., a retired business man of Morristown, died at his home in Franklin place, Morristown, Wednesday evening, aged eighty years. He was born in Basking Ridge, his father, David Ayers, having been one of the early settlers of that section. David Ayers's father came from England and the family trace their ancestry in a direct line back to William the Conqueror. The deceased was mayor of Morristown for two terms.

Report of Death Unfounded.

The report in circulation last week that Rev. William Vincent Dawson, formerly rector of St. Stephen's church, had died, is untrue. He is curate in St. John's church, and vicar of the Chapel of the Incarnation at York, Pa. Mr. Dawson did have an attack of the grip, but has recovered and is doing a good work in his parish.

PLANS FOR FINE BUILDING

L. L. Manning's New Structure Will be Strictly Modern.

DECIDING DETAILS

Sebring Estate Also to Put Up a Flat Dwelling on West Front Street, Near Central Avenue.

L. L. Manning, of West Front street, who has plans for a handsome building which he proposes to erect corner of West Front street and Central avenue, is preparing to move his marble-yard from the corner to the property adjoining his and owned by John Abbott. The proposed new structure will be one of the finest in the city, and according to the plans the interior arrangement of the flats will be equipped with the very latest improvements.

There are some details regarding the plans which have not been definitely decided upon by Mr. Manning, but as soon as suitable weather arrives work will be started on the structure. With a view to erecting this building, Mr. Manning and Mr. Abbott asked the Common Council to establish a building line on West Front street as far as New street, at least. This was done at a recent meeting of the Common Council. According to this line the sidewalk and the street will remain at the present width, but it will govern the line on the new building so that uniformity will be maintained in the future in case other buildings are erected.

There will be two entrances to Mr. Manning's flats. One to those facing on Front street and another to those facing Central avenue. Each flat will probably contain six or seven rooms, together with the modern improvements. The building will probably be faced with brick and marble, presenting an attractive appearance.

Among the other improvements to be made on West Front street, probably during the present year, will be the erection of a building on the Sebring property, adjoining the Babcock building. Just at present the estate is making preliminary arrangements for such a building. This building will probably contain flats in the upper stories and two stores on the ground floor. Several out-of-town business people have been seeking information about the probable erection of stores on this property and no trouble would be experienced in leasing them.

Charles Sebring is now engaged in erecting a one story building on West Front street, adjoining the Manning flats and later he may run this structure up two more stories for flats. Just now there is a "flat craze" in Plainfield and vicinity, many preferring them to separate residences. That this is true is shown by the fact that before W. M. Stillman's New Madison was completed nearly all of the flats were leased and Mr. Manning is having the same experience in his plans for his new building.

SONS OF TEMPERANCE IN ANNUAL SESSION

GRAND DIVISION OF NEW JERSEY HEARS GOOD REPORTS.

The sixty-first annual session of the grand division, Sons of Temperance of New Jersey, met in Concordia Hall, in Trenton, Thursday, and representatives from nearly every section of the Satte were present, listened to the reading of reports, which showed an increase in membership and the body to be in a flourishing condition financially, and assisted in electing the following officers:

Grand worthy patriarch, William C. Compton, Metuchen, re-elected; grand worthy associate, Ruth Blessing, Camden; grand scribe, Ross Slack; grand treasurer, Henry B. Howell; grand chaplain, the Rev. Charles H. Elder; grand sentinel, William H. Watson, Trenton.

The officers were installed by Past Grand Worthy Patriarch Edward K. Drake, of Elizabeth.

The session was presided over by Grand Worthy Patriarch William P. Compton, of Metuchen.

Grand Worthy Patriarch Turner and Grand Scribe Fannie Mount, of the grand division of Pennsylvania, were introduced at the morning session and delivered short addresses.

FRUIT STORE DESTROYED

Mr. and Mrs. Ramozetti Escape in Their Night Attire.

MYSTERIOUS BLAZE.

Department Works Hard to Prevent Spread of Flames to Boehm's Store—Loss is $1,000.

Awakening to find their apartments on the second floor filled with thick, heavy smoke, Mr. and Mrs. David Ramozetti, were forced to flee without street attire from a fire which destroyed the former's fruit and confectionery store at 126 Park avenue at 1:30 Saturday a. m. Their escape was made barely in time as both were nearly overcome when they were taken into the apartments of S. H. Sobieff on the same street. They had been breathing smoke for an extended period when Patrolman Dennis Keeffe discovered the blaze and aroused them before turning in an alarm from box 12.

When the department arrived, the interior of the store was a mass of flame and fed by a lot of combustible material gave the department a hard fight. The chemical engine and one hydrant stream were used but it was nearly forty-five minutes after they were brought into action that the recall was given.

Ramozetti's place is in the same building with the Park avenue side of I. H. Boehm's big department store and the firemen worked like Trojans to keep the flames from getting through to the latter. They succeeded in doing it and also in keeping them from going up to the second floor.

The total damage will reach nearly $1,000, of which $200 is on the building, half-owned by Mrs. John Johnston. The other half is owned by I. H. Boehm, the dividing line running up the stairway in the center. Ramozetti states that his stock was valued at $1,400 and that his insurance was $1,000.

The origin of the fire has been placed in the "mystery" class which has been prevalent in the past six months. Ramozetti informed Chief Doane that it must have caught from a stove situated back of a partition, which divides the store. Going through the place carefully today, Chief Doane could find nothing to bear out this belief as the fire was on a different side of the partition than the stove when his men arrived.

BOULEVARD WORK DRAGGING ALONG SLOWLY

THOROUGHFARE WILL LIKELY BE NAMED MYRTLE AVENUE.

The work of opening a boulevard from Compton avenue, in the city, through Dunellen avenue to Green brook to connect with Myrtle avenue, in the borough, has been progressing steadily, the storm of last week being the only drawback to the improvement. The land has been cleared of trees and other obstructions and everything is now in readiness to make the boulevard. During the past two weeks workmen have been carting way the trees and debris. It was necessary to make several blasts to remove the stumps of trees.

This street will extend from Compton avenue one thousand feet north to the brook, and it is quite likely that it will take the name of Myrtle avenue, when connected with that avenue in the borough. In opening this avenue between the city and borough it will, of course, be necessary to place a bridge over the brook. It has been suggested by those interested in the improvement that it would be wise to take the bridge on West End avenue, now spanning Green brook and use it to connect the two municipalities and then place a new bridge on West End avenue.

The extensive improvements planned in that section of the borough and city will certainly demand a new bridge on West End avenue as the plans of Messrs C. W. McCutcheon, W. J. Battfield and N. B Smalley call for a boulevard on that avenue one hundred feet wide and the present bridge would be far too small for such an avenue.

As soon as the spring weather arrives the work of building the boulevard from Compton avenue to the brook will be started. The borough will do the same, although it will not have as much work to do in extending Myrtle avenue to the brook. All the preliminary work, such as the appointment of commissioners to assess benefits and damages, has been completed and the actual work can now be done.

Death of Mrs. Henry.

Mrs. Abraham Henry died at her home on West Third street Saturday, aged seventy years. Funeral services over the body will be held from Calvary Baptist church Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

NEW JERSEY EXHIBIT BACK FROM ST. LOUIS

WILL BE PLACED IN STATE HOUSE MUSEUM AS SHOWN AT FAIR.

New Jersey's exhibit at the St. Louis exposition, filling several cars, has arrived in Trenton, and under the direction of Curator Morse is being unloaded and placed in the museum at the State House. When completely installed it will make a splendid addition to the museum. Several of the handsome glass cases in which portions of the exhibit were and in these those parts will be placed in the museum just as they were at the fair.

The insect exhibit, which won a grand prize, will be one of the main additions to the collections at the State House. Some of the animals and birds have already been unpacked and mounted. Among them is a splendid specimen of the bald eagle. A striking group is one showing the various species of swallows found in this State. This is a portion of a shed showing the interior of a section of the chimney, and the barn swallow, the chimney swift, the eave swallow and the martin are mounted true to nature, with their nests shown just as the birds build them.

NO IMMEDIATE CHANGE AT THE HOTEL ROSELL

NEW OWNER CANNOT GAIN POSSESSION UNTIL LEASE EXPIRES.

The purchase of the Hotel Rosell property by John H. Staats, of the Hotel Kensington, was a much discussed matter and by many it is considered one of the most important local realty deals in years. The place is one that has been greatly sought after, the Plainfield Trust Company making a determined effort to secure it before buying on the opposite corner and there were several others who had cast longing eyes upon it. It was said today that the Trust Company was blocked by Proprietor Rosell refusing to dispose of his lease, at one time turning down an offer of $12,000 for it.

When Mr. Staats was seen by a Daily Press reporter today, he said that matters will rest just as they are at present as the Rosell lease holds for seven more years. At the conclusion of that time, he will take possession and one of his first acts will be to enlarge the structure and make it one of the finest hotels in the State.

Railroad Merger?

Rumor has it that the Pennsylvania will soon put the Baltimore and Ohio, the Reading and the Jersey Central all under one management and that President Baer, of the Reading, will be put in charge of the allied roads. It is pointed out that Mr. Baer has shown remarkable ability in bringing the Reading from a receivership to a position where it can pay dividends. Moreover, the centralization of the three systems under one control would simplify the management and insure the continuation of the Pennsylvania influence in each.

Wreck Narrowly Averted.

A disastrous wreck was narrowly averted on the New Jersey Central near Raritan, Saturday. The Harrisburg flyer was running at a fast clip, when the tire slipped from one of the engine wheels and bounced under a Pullman, disarranging the brake rigging. The train was soon brought to a stop and the terrified passengers piled out. Word was sent to Dunellen and another engine was secured from there to pull the train to Jersey City. It is considered a miracle the train did not leave the track and cause a big wreck.

SCOTS CELEBRATE BURNS' ANNIVERSARY

BIRTHDAY OF THE IMMORTAL POET OBSERVED BY THE THISTLE CLUB.

The one-hundred-and-forty-sixth anniversary of the birthday of Scotland's immortal poet, Robert Burns, was celebrated as jolly Scots can by members of the Thistle Club at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Kenney, of West Third street, Friday night. (The event really occurs on January 25, but the weather conditions Wednesday night caused a postponement which evidently had no adverse effect in the final affair.

The gathering numbered thirty and the enjoyment beginning shortly after 8 o'clock continued without cessation until midnight. Songs familiar to those from the "Land of the heather" were sung again and again, and there were numerous contributions of "Hielan' reels" and instrumental selections. Among those who participated were Mrs. William L. Gieck and Mrs. William Gray, who sang; William Wilson, with violin selections and Mrs. William Gray and John Kenney on the piano.

Chief McDuff presided during the affair and gave an excellent address on the life of Burns' and paid tribute to his memory. When supper was served with all its Scotch delicacies, he cut the haggis, at the same time reciting the Selkirk grace of Burns' composition:

"Some hae meat and canna eat,
And some wad eat that want it;
But we hae meat, and we can eat,
And sae the Lord be thankit."

The celebration closed with the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," in which the entire gathering joined with instrumental accompaniment.

Again Appointed Chairman.

The Republican City Committee has again appointed Dr. C. L. Jenkins chairman, making his fifth term. Ernest R. Ackerman is vice chairman and William Newcorn secretary and treasurer. The committees are to be announced at a later date.

GRAND DUKE VLADIMIR TALKS

"Army Is Ready, as I Am, to Die For the Czar."

ZEMSKYZABOR MAY BE GRANTED

Situation Throughout Poland Increasingly Serious—Warsaw Streets Barricaded—Continued Riots and Street Fighting—American Consul Wires Mobs Pillaging Stores—General Strike On—Three Hundred Dead.

ST. PETERSBURG, Feb. 1.—The latest reports from Warsaw depict the situation throughout Poland as increasingly serious.

A condition of civil war exists in the Polish capital. The rebels have erected barricades. Hundreds of shops have been plundered. The rebels wrecked the telephone exchange, poured tons of petroleum in the streets and have set fire to it, and it is said complete anarchy prevails.

A woman posted on the balcony of her house picked off the Cossacks who were trying to drive the strikers from the streets. A Cossack finally shot the woman, but his own life paid the penalty. The mob fell upon him, dragged him from his horse and beat and kicked him to death. Fighting around the barricades continued during the night.

GRAND DUKE VLADIMIR.

In one section the rebels are masters of the situation. The police have fled. Huge placards have been posted announcing the establishment of a revolutionary municipal régime.

Minor collisions between the troops and police and the populace continue to swell the number of dead.

Trade and industry are completely at a standstill, and the presence of thousands of idle workmen, who have been out of employment for months and are starving and desperate, adds a factor of the greatest danger, which is not present to the same extent in St. Petersburg, where the government orders for war purposes have kept the factories busy.

At St. Petersburg last night the police surprised a meeting of strikers in a tavern and fired, killing a girl and wounding four persons.

It is said that the responsibility for the insertion of grape in front of the saluting charge, when grapeshots were fired at the czar, has been fixed upon Bogdanoff, a private of the Seventeenth battery of the First horse artillery of the guards, who was serving the gun. Bogdanoff, it is said, is a former student and a member of a revolutionary association.

The American vice consul at Warsaw, Witold Fouchas, telegraphs that many stores, chiefly Russian, have been pillaged by mobs and that the shops and factories without exception are closed. A general strike is in effect. Those who are not willing to walk out are compelled to join the strike by threats. Mr. Fouchas saw no improvement in the situation and reported the receipt of bad news from Lodz and Itsdom.

It is conservatively estimated that the number of killed or wounded at Warsaw is about 300.

The rioting in Poland will largely affect the economic situation. The factories at Warsaw, Lodz, Petrokoff and other industrial centers in Poland have been compelled to gradually reduce their output and decrease their working forces since the outbreak of the war, which has almost entirely closed the Siberian and Manchurian markets.

The result has been that thousands of workmen have been thrown out of employment for many months past, furnishing a horde of hungry, dissatisfied, desperate men, among whom the news from St. Petersburg produced an outburst of a riotous and incendiary spirit. It is feared that a large proportion of these thousands may be utilised by the revolutionary organizations in Poland, which is the hotbed of Socialism.

At St. Petersburg Grand Duke Vladimir, uncle of Emperor Nicholas and commander of the imperial guard, granted an interview this morning at the duke's palace in Quay de la Cour, adjoining the Winter palace. A correspondent was received in the grand duke's private study, into which he was ushered by the grand duke's aid-de-camp, Prince Belaselsky.

"You must remember," said the grand duke in French (for, while he knows English perfectly, he prefers the Gallic tongue to any except his own), "you must remember I am a grand duke and a subject of the emperor. As such I am extremely loyal to him, and I am a Russian from the crown of my head to the tip of my toes," accompanying the words with a sweeping gesture. "What information can I give you?"

"The newspapers abroad," suggested the correspondent, "have made many statements regarding the events of Jan. 22."

"I know. I have read accounts in the foreign press. I have stood aghast at the frightful stories of the butchery of innocent people which they have printed. I know they say well intentioned patriots, with a priest at their head, coming peacefully to place their grievances before his majesty, were ruthlessly shot down in the streets, but we know that behind this peaceful procession was an anarchistic and Socialistic plot of which the overwhelming majority of the workmen were merely innocent tools. We know from examination of the dead and those arrested that some alleged priests were actually revolutionary agitators and students in disguise. We had to save the city from a mob. Unfortunately, to do so innocent and guilty suffered alike. But suppose 140,000 men had reached the gates of the Winter palace. They would have sacked it as the mob sacked Versailles. From the palace they would have gone elsewhere, and the whole city would have been delivered over to anarchy, riot, bloodshed and flames. Our duty was the duty of every government.

"The same situation has confronted cities in other countries. Why, because this occurred in Russia, should the whole world point the finger of scorn at us? In the midst of our difficulties, why should we be turned upon? Why should America especially misinterpret and think ill of us? We have always been friends—friends of a century, friends when America needed friends. I remember when America was our great friend. Why has all this changed? What has Russia done to deserve it? What has Russia done to America? Why should the foreign press, especially that of Great Britain, not hesitate before any calumny? No invention seems too horrible for them to print. They do not explain that on Saturday every dead wall in St. Petersburg was placarded with warnings to the people not to assemble. No, but they tell that thousands of innocent people were killed and other thousands wounded and paint the streets as running red with blood. They even say the dead were pushed under the ice of the Neva at night. It is infamous. They say nothing of isolated officers set upon by mobs in the streets and hammered into insensibility or of policemen killed or wounded. As a matter of fact, complete returns show that exactly 126 are dead. Several hundred were wounded. I can't give the precise figure of the wounded, but you shall have an opportunity to see the full reports."

"They say that Gorky will be hanged," suggested the correspondent.

"Nonsense!" replied the grand duke.

"It is asserted that some of the troops refused to obey commands," was the next suggestion.

"There is no question of the loyalty of the troops," asserted the grand duke. "They did their duty. They are ready, as I am ready, to die in the streets for the emperor.

"People speak of a constitution," said the grand duke. "A constitution would mean the end of Russia, as the state would be gone, anarchy would supervene, and when it ended the empire would be disintegrated. Finland, Poland and perhaps other frontier provinces would have broken away. Russia is not ripe for a constitution. Go out among the peasants, who comprise the vast bulk of the empire's population, and try to explain to them government by suffrage. The peasant knows nothing of government. He does not even know what the word means. He knows his emperor—for him the emperor is everything. Give the peasant a vote and all would be anarchy. Still there is necessity for reforms, and they will be granted by the autocracy."

"Maintaining the principles of autocracy, then, the people will have an opportunity to be heard in the government?" questioned the correspondent.

"Yes," was the reply, "they can, and I am sure they will be given a voice. Of that I am certain," and he repeated the words emphatically, "I am certain," and continued even more deliberately, "They will be given the means of presenting their needs and grievances direct to the sovereign."

With these significant words, foreshadowing perhaps the immediate granting of something in the nature of the zemskyzabor (land parliament), the heir presumptive to the throne of the Romanoffs ended the interview. He then turned to Prince Belaselsky, instructing him to give the correspondent every facility for independent investigation.

A dispatch from Breslau says that a general strike is expected in the industrial towns of Russian Poland. Shippers in Sosnowitz have sent out circulars warning against sending goods to Warsaw or Lodz.

A press dispatch from Lodz, the greatest manufacturing center of west Russia, says the town looks like a besieged fortress. Soldiers in detachments of fifty are patrolling the streets to preserve order. All the stores are closed and their windows boarded up. Hundreds of people are waiting before the bakeries for bread.

At Grodno there have been disturbances, in consequence of which troops were called out. A mob of 2,000 strikers destroyed the postoffice and telegraph lines and looted the wine shops.

DIARY OF EUROPEAN TRIP

Brotherhood of First M. E. Church Hear Instructive Talk.

BY HENRY A. M'GEE

Written in Form of Daily Journal, His Experiences Were Vividly and Brilliantly Portrayed.

Henry A. McGee, of Orchard avenue, read an account of his travels in Europe during the winter of 1904 at the meeting of the Brotherhood of the First Methodist church Friday, the narrative being in the form of a dairy, complete and exceedingly interesting.

Starting with the departure on board the Oceanic, Mr. McGee took the audience with him through the various experiences which he encountered; introducing them to the peculiar types of people with whom he associated and made them feel with him the home-sickness, which one travelling alone on a business trip, must necessarily undergo. Combined with the humor with which Mr. McGee presented his picture of certain phases of European life, in its peculiarities, its grotesqueness, and its amusing features, the reader dwelt with force upon the beauty and the impressiveness of some of the scenes, and described picturesquely the color schemes, which none but the snow capped mountains of Italy can afford.

Though in his travels Mr. McGee went into Russia and Japan, he left off last night at what he called "the end of the world," the eastern border of the Black Sea. Mr. McGee has an outline of each day's proceedings during his trip, and throughout, the diary abounds with novel and original impressions which the writer has entered on nearly every page of his "European story."

An orchestra conducted by Kenneth Shupp furnished music before the talk and during the social hour which followed. Refreshments were served by the committee. At the short business meeting which followed the entertainment, thirteen new persons were received into the club, which now, with a membership of seventy-five, has awakened to new and far-reaching activities. It was unanimously decided to continue the publication of the church paper, "The Bulletin."

The following chairmen of committees were appointed by the president, Nelson A. Miller: Music, Kenneth Shupp; devotional committee, S. H. Tugwell; programme committee, Fred A. Martin; lead-a-hand committee, William Simmons; membership committee, Dr. Frank French; finance committee, A. H. Atwood. President McGee in a brief address stated that the organization was founded on April 10, 1901, one year before any other men's organization in the city.

ENTERTAINED CHOIR.

Miss Grace Emmons Was the Host at Trinity Church Affair.

A congenial gathering marked the reception given by Miss Grace Emmons, of Jackson avenue, to the choir of Trinity church, which took place Friday. There were about twenty-five present. Miss Grace Emmons is a member of the choir. Her guests included others in addition of the choir. The evening was spent with games. The first prizes were won by Mrs Arthur Titsworth and Arthur Smith, while the consolation prizes were awarded to Miss Eva Dunavan and Charles Delliver. The prize winners were the ones securing the greatest number of points in the several games. Music and dancing brought the entertainment to a conclusion, and refreshments were served at midnight.

Those present were Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Titsworth, Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Martin, Mrs. J. P. D. Kirch, Miss Della Johnson, Miss Nettie Kreitling, Miss Davenport, Miss Harriet Randall, Miss Anna Randall, Miss Eva Dunavan, Miss Dora Wilson, Miss Abbie VanCliet, Miss Ada VanDeren, Charles M. Delliver, Arthur Smith and Mr. Apgar.

Performed Difficult Operation.

Miss Laura Rae Warnock, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William W. Warnock, of Craig place, underwent a difficult nasal operation, Thursday, at the hands of Dr. F. O. Ard, assisted by Dr. Adams. It is thought to have been entirely successful and the patient is recovering nicely.

Fishermen's Missionary to Talk.

Under the auspices of the Boys' Mission Band, of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, Dr. Wilfred Grenfell, of the English Mission to Deep Sea Fishermen, will tell of his work at a meeting to be held in the chapel of the church on Thursday night, February 16, at 8 o'clock.

Chase Was Postponed.

On account of the deep snow and impassable drifts, the weekly chase of the Watchung Hunt Club was postponed from last Saturday. If possible the chase will be held as usual next Saturday afternoon. This makes the third weekly chase which has had to be put off on account of the weather.

DR. YERKES 80 YEARS OLD

Venerable Minister Celebrates Birthday.

SKETCH OF HIS CAREER

Pastor of the First Baptist Church for Thirty-Nine Years—Fifty-Four Years Married.

Rev. Dr. David J. Yerkes, pastor-emeritus of the First Baptist church, quietly observed the eightieth anniversary of his birth last Friday. While no celebration was planned for the affair, the venerable minister received the congratulations of his many friends upon the completion of eightieth year and wished him many happy returns of the day.

Dr. Yerkes is the dean among the Plainfield ministers and has the honored distinction of having served as pastor longer than any of the others here. He served the First Baptist church continuously, as pastor from 1863 to June 15, 1902, doing a great work. He only retired because of his inability to continue pastoral duties, which was regretted by the members of his church and congregation.

The venerable minister is still able to attend the services at the church occasionally and take some part. A little over a year ago he was succeeded as pastor by Rev. Dr. J. A. Chambliss.

Dr. Yerkes was born in Philadelphia, January 27, 1825, and at an early age went to Hatsboro, Pa., where he spent his boyhood days. He attended the Hatsboro Academy where he prepared for Columbia University, Washington. He was graduated from the university in the class of '48. He was ordained in the First Baptist church at Holidaysburg, Pa., where he served a short time. He then became pastor of the First Baptist church at Pittsburg, where he remained until 1856.

Dr. Yerkes then accepted a call to the First Baptist church in Brooklyn, remaining there three years. In 1863 he assumed the pastorate of the First Baptist church here, continuing as such until June 15, 1902.

On March 15, 1900, he and Mrs. Yerkes observed their golden wedding anniversary and they received a purse of $1,250 in gold from the church and congregation.

R. A. MEEKER'S MOTHER DEAD AT 88 YEARS

WIDOW OF C. O. MEEKER FOUND DEAD IN BED AT OCEAN GROVE.

Mrs. Margaret A. Meeker, aged eighty-eight years, the only living charter member of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, and the mother of Robert A. Meeker, of 671 West Front street, State supervisor of roads, was found dead in bed at her home in Ocean Grove last Friday. Death was due to advanced age. She was a native of this State and had lived here all her life.

Mrs. Meeker was the widow of Corra O. Meeker, who was for many years one of the leading merchants here, his place of business being on East Front street, opposite the Plainfield Trust Company. He conducted a hardware store. He also served the town in an official capacity, holding several offices.

Mrs. Meeker leaves a son, Robert A. Meeker, a step-son, John Meeker; and two nephews, A. W. Anderson, of East Second street, and Robert W. Anderson, of Honolulu.

The funeral services of Mrs. Margaret Meeker, mother of Robert A. Meeker, were held Sunday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock from the residence of the son, in West Front street. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, of which Mrs. Meeker was the only surviving charter member, was in charge. He read the Scripture and then spoke of the life and character of Mrs. Meeker, referring to the fact that she was the last of the charter members to pass away. He also stated that she was the third member of the church that had died within a short time. Following Dr. Zelie, Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor of Trinity Reformed church, read Scripture selections and offered prayer.

After the prayer, Rev. Dr. Zelie read a poem, appropriate to the death of Mrs. Meeker.

There were many floral tributes from relatives and friends, the casket being completely covered with beautiful flowers. The interment took place in the Baptist Cemetery in Plainfield avenue. The pall-bearers were Otto Moeck, B. Frank Coriell, Andrew J. Gavett, George M. Macintyre, H. W. Marshall and Henry Woodland.

Amends Road Act.

Assemblyman Irving Hoagland, of Somerset County, introduced a bill in the Legislature which amends the road act so that any person suffering damage by reason of the change of grade of any road or street, may have a right of action because thereof.

VETO AWAITS TYLER ORDINANCE

Measure Restricting Saloon District to be Passed Over Mayor's Head.

STRONGLY DENOUNCED

His Honor Declares Emphatically That He Will Not Sanction Novel Excise Bill Becoming a Law.

Mayor James F. Buckle, who vehemently denounced William S Tyler's measure to restrict the sale of liquor to the business section of the city when the proposed ordinance was before the Common Council on Monday night, declared to a reporter for The Daily Press today that if the bill is passed by the city fathers he will have no hesitation in vetoing it. There is no mincing of words in the Mayor's utterances regarding this excise measure and he is backed by the Republican leaders in his attitude.

His Honor's ringing speech against the restriction of the sale of liquor to a defined territory, on the floor of the Common Council, caused a sensation for it is very rarely that a chief executive has asked permission to protest in such manner against the will of the Councilmanic body.

When seen by The Daily Press man today, Mayor Buckle said: "Certainly I shall veto that obnoxious ordinance when it comes to me and I presume it will come for it was passed to second reading you know. It is not a square deal. The workingman should have just as much right to get a drink as the wealthier citizen. Those men pushing it through Council can get their liquor at the hotels and at the clubs in New York during the day. Then why shouldn't the plain workingman be allowed to go into a saloon somewhere near where he lives here and get his glass of beer. As I said before I have drunk with nearly every member of that Council and I don't like the way they are acting in this matter. It's all bosh."

"Why should the present Common Council," continued Mayor Buckle, "bind future Councils. It's a reflection on future governing bodies. Those who will be elected in years to come will be just as capable of looking after the saloon question as the present members are. You can say I will veto that bill and they can then pass it over my head."

It will not be necessary to secure a two-thirds vote to pass the ordinance over the Mayor's head.

An Arion Club Dance.

The second reception and dance of the Arion Club will be held in I. O. T. Hall on Thursday night, February 23. The committee in charge consists of Raymond L. McVey, Berlin Banks, William Baker, Harry Keen, Alex Muir, and V. W. Nash. Jr. Music will be furnished by Eugene O'Reilly's orchestra.

Strawride to Mt. Bethel.

The Arion Club will enjoy its second strawride of the season tomorrow night, the destination being Mt. Bethel Hotel, where there will be a dance. There will be twenty couple.

Gen. Donnelly's Condition Worse.

Quartermaster-General Richard A. Donnelly, who has been ill at his home in Trenton for some time, is worse, and his condition is now considered critical.

Alexander Muir, of Mercer street, is detained at his home by illness.

MARSHAL SMALLEY RESIGNS FROM FORCE

GAVE HIS SHIELD TO BOROUGH MAYOR AFTER MONDAY NIGHT'S AFFRAY.

Preferring not to wait for official investigation into his conduct, Marshal Walter Smalley, who was trounced by Peter Dooley and then ejected from borough police headquarters, Monday night, has tendered his resignation to Mayor Smalley. His action came shortly after the trouble occurred and was at once accepted, the Mayor taking his shield and equipment. His successor will be appointed at the next Council meeting.

The trouble which led to Monday night's affair really began two weeks ago when Smalley became abusive to Chief Howard Woolston, of the fire department, because he had not hired his horses to be used extra during the time the streets were made heavy with snow. At the time he was ordered from the fire house and Monday night he entered and renewed his argument. He was ejected summarily by the Chief and went from there to police headquarters and began an attack upon Dooley, who has been doing special night work. The latter requested Chief Woolston's action, only a little more vigorously.

It was stated by Mayor Smalley yesterday, that Smalley had been drinking Monday and that the Council would have considered his case had he remained on the force. Smalley was one of the three policemen hurt in the Christmas eve fight with the Plainfield negroes and during the trial he was severely criticised by the defending counsel, who claimed that it was he who had precipitated the trouble.

GERMAN UNIVERSITIES, PROF. WALKER'S TOPIC

LECTURE BEFORE THE MONDAY AFTERNOON CLUB.

Professor Williston Walker, Ph. D., D. D., of the Divinity School, Yale University, gave a very delightful lecture before the Monday Afternoon Club at the Casino Monday on the subject "German University Life." Dr. Walker stated that universities were not German in origin, for the first university was established in Paris, in 1200 A. D. The medieval universities, he said, had four faculties similar to those of the present day, arts, theology, law and medicine.

The German universities, according to Dr. Walker, are twenty-one in number and rank in size with the following American universities: Berlin, the largest, with over 6000 students, is about the size of Harvard, that of Leipsic numbers about the same as Yale and the one in Munich bears the same comparison with the University of Chicago.

In contrast with similar institutions of this country, Dr. Walker said that foreign institutions are not the recipients of gifts but are State institution, receiving large grants from the government; they have no dormitories and give no guarantee to graduate students. In securing a degree it is necessary to prepare a thesis showing original work.

The meagre salaries of the professors greatly increased by student fees for professional services; the simplicity of the university building, the students' home and club life, the singing and beer drinking, the skill in fencing, the lack of admiration for muscle simply and the earnest character of the students' work were pleasantly touched upon by Dr. Walker, who said in conclusion that an American student going to a German university would find the companionship of the foreign students kindly and helpful.

Dr. Walker is a relative of Col. and Mrs. Mason W. Tyler and was entertained by them at their home on West Seventh street.

Bridge Collapsed.

The bridge in course of construction over the canal at South Bound Brook, fell in yesterday. It was being swung into position when one of the anchor posts gave way, letting one end down in the water. Much of the timber and sheer poles were smashed. It is believed it will be necessary to take the framework apart to get it out. J. K. Tantum, the chief builder, says the loss is about $2,000.

COUNTRY CLUB ELECTION

George P. Mellick Again Chosen President.

PROSPEROUS YEAR

Meeting at the Casino Last Night Largely Attended by the Club Members.

Report were presented, trustees and officers were elected and a nominating committee was appointed at the annual meeting of the Plainfield County Club, held at the Casino, last night. There was a large attendance of members and much interest shown in the club's affairs. It was reported that the past season was one of the most successful in the history of the club, both financially and from a social standpoint and the coming season is quite likely to be even more so, as plans are underway to increase the interest in tennis and golf.

Elliot T. Barrows, Thomas R Van Boskerck and Leighton Calkins were elected trustees for three years and after the club meeting the trustees met and organized as follows:

President, George P. Mellick; vice president, Ernest R. Ackerman; secretary, Leighton Calkins; treasurer, Stuart H. Patterson. This nominating committee was appointed for next year: S. St. John McCutchen, Townsend Hutchmore and J. Whitney Baker.

Just as soon as the president appoints his committees definite plans for the coming season will be formulated and the work of preparing the course for golf and the courts for tennis will be commenced.

P. H. S. INVITED TO ENTER DUAL MEET WITH NEWARK

ACCEPTANCE WILL DEPEND UPON SUCCESS IN INTERSCHOLASTIC EVENT.

Depending upon the outcome of the interscholastic athletic meet which will be held in the Y. M. C. A. on March 4, will be the possibility of a dual meet between the Plainfield and Newark High Schools. The members of the latter institution, who have a track team, have requested a meeting, and though no reply has been sent, it is under the consideration of the board of directors.

If a dual meet is proposed, to be held either here or in Newark at the choice of a committee of members of both schools. The usual athletic events will comprise the programme. The High School athletes are only waiting the outcome of the local championship meet in order to decide upon the offer. If the degree of success in the approaching meet warrants a dual contest with Newark, the local school will accept.

A meeting was held in the school yesterday presided over by H. H. Craig, president of the P. H. S. A. A., for the purpose of determining the names of those who will enter the interscholastic meet. A try out of the candidates will be held within ten days of the meet and three men will be selected from the results for each event.

REACHES FOUR SCORE.

Aaron Bradford Karner is Today Celebrating His Eightieth Birthday.

Aaron Bradford Karner, of 1406 Bradford avenue, is celebrating the eightieth anniversary of his birthday, today. Despite his advanced years he is quite rugged and daily attends to the work on his small farm. He is a member and regular attendant of the First Presbyterian church and a strong Prohibitionist.

One of the most pleasant features of today's celebration is the recovery of Mr. Karner's wife from a severe illness. He has three children living: Rev. George N. Karner, of Brooklyn; Miss Clara I Karner, a trained nurse, and Miss M. Louise Karner, a teacher, both of Plainfield.

Principal Travell to Talk.

Ira W. Travell, principal of the Plainfield High School, will go to Somerville Thursday evening, Feb 9, to make an address at a reception tendered the parents of the pupils of the High School in that place by the principal and teachers in the public school building.

Archdeacon to Speak.

Archdeacon Alexander Mann, of Orange, will conduct a special service at Grace church Sunday night under the auspices of the Men's Club. The archdeacon has been, on several occasions, recently strongly supported as a candidate for vacant bishoprics.

ELECTION FIZZLE

Perkins' Majority Equals the Number of Votes Cast for Assemblyman.

The estimated total vote in Union county at the special election yesterday for a successor to the late Assemblyman Embree was 1,500. The total normal vote of Union approximates 19,500. Mayor Randolph Perkins, of Westfield, secured these 1,500 votes as the Republican nominee. The Democrats refused to nominate, and deplored the fact that a special election was necessary.

In Elizabeth there were 462 votes cast, the smallest vote being three in the First district of the Second ward. Two of these votes were cast by Republican officers.

In Plainfield only 176 voted. The vote in Rahway was eighty-six and in Westfield 198.

The returns from the other parts of the county are not complete, but they are known to be very light.

Mayor Perkins will be sworn in at once.

NO ELECTION, MAYBE, IN NORTH PLAINFIELD

BILL ABOLISHING SPRING ELECTIONS PASSES ASSEMBLY.

Assembly bill No. 7, abolishing spring elections in townships and boroughs throughout the State, passed the Assembly yesterday by a vote of 43 to 4.

It was afterward sent to the Senate and action was expected today. When the bill was presented the Senate laid it on the table.

It is believed that the bill will pass, which means that there will be no spring election in North Plainfield.

The Senate adjourned today until Tuesday.

NEW ORGANIZATION OF AMATUER BOWLERS

PICKED MEN FROM THREE CLUBS FORM "THE TRIANGLES."

A new bowling organization has recently entered the field of amateur sports under the name of the Triangles, being composed of picked members from the Y. M. C. A., Fanwood Suburban and Alte bowling clubs. The organization was recently effected at a meeting of these representatives, with eight charter members. It is the purpose of the club to pick from local bowling teams good players, and to form either a ten-men team, or a chosen five-men representation.

Obadiah B. Koons, the organizer of the affair, has been elected president and F. A. Neal is treasurer and manager. The Fanwood bowling alleys are used by the new club, though it is entirely independent of the Suburban aggregation. Friday night is the regular bowling night for the club, which at present consists of these members: O. B. Koons, F. A. Neal, M. C. Stephen, of the Y. M. C. A. team; Augustus Sheelen, A. C. Stewart, of the Fanwood Suburban team; R. T. Phillips and Alfred Egan, of the Alte team, and possibly Alexander Aitken, George Ortlieb and Gilbert Stephen, who are expected to join the club.

Manager Neal is preparing a schedule of games, which will be rolled off before the season closes. It is his object to get a series of three games with the Dunellens, Bound Brook, Somerville and other teams in the vicinity. The first game of the schedule will be rolled on Friday night against the Saengerbund's.

Muhlenberg Auxiliary Tea.

Mrs. Samuel Huntington, of Franklin place, has issued invitations for a tea to be given for the benefit of the Women's Auxiliary Board of Muhlenberg Hospital, at her home Friday afternoon, February 17.

WILLIAMS' INQUEST ON

Coroner's Jury in Murder Case Case in Session Today.

AT MAUL'S HOTEL

George Bird, Counsel for Wood, the Suspect, to be Associated With Another Lawyer—No Developments.

George W. Bird, the local lawyer who has been engaged by Mrs. George H. Wood to defend her husband in the murder charge that will be preferred against him, stated to a Daily Press reporter last night, that he would engage a prominent criminal lawyer to assist him in the case. He would not divulge his name but he is said to be one who has had wide experience in matters of this nature.

There were no further developments in the case today and those interested are looking forward to the coroner's inquest being held at Maul's Hotel, Watchung, this afternoon.

A large number of witnesses have been called and the hearing will probably take all afternoon.

Coroner Thoms arrived at Watchung in ample time for the inquest but some delay was occasioned and the session did not begin at 2 o'clock, the hour set.

George Ball, counsel for Wood, was on hand to familiarize himself with the facts of the case.

NO PHYSICAL COURSE FOR THE FIREMEN

POLICE ALONE TO UNDERGO GYMNASTIC TRAINING.

Coincident with the proposition of the police committee to establish regular physical exercises for members of the police department, under the direction of the physical director of the Y. M. C. A., the same proposition was considered by the fire and buildings committee, in the interest of the physical improvement and benefit of the regular members of the fire department.

Owing, however, to the fact that every member of the present force is constantly needed on active duty at the several fire houses, the plan has not been found feasible to the members at this time. Mr. Bullock has intimated himself in this matter with Chairman Tyler, of the police committee, and it was hoped that the firemen could get the benefit of the physical exercise as well as the policemen. Perhaps at some future date such an arrangement will be made possible, it being the belief that the firemen need this exercise fully as much as the police.

According to the plans adopted for the police, the regular members of the force will be required to put in part of their discipline to visit the Y. M. C. A. gymnasium three times a week and take such exercise as shall be planned by the physical director. At other times the men can visit the gymnasium under the direction of Chief Kiely's order. While the regular Y. M. C. A. fee for these privileges is $8 a year, a concession is made to the police department, and a fee of $5 for each man charged.

To be a Hong Kong Dentist.

Dr. Emerson C. Currie, the dentist, of West Front street, will leave Sunday for SanFrancisco, where he will sail for China, to practice dentistry with Dr. Joseph Noble, formerly of Carlisle, Pa., who has been in Hong Kong eighteen years. Dr. Currie is a native of Woodstock, Canada, and is a graduate of the dental department of the University of Pennsylvania. He came to Plainfield several months ago.

Bell Gets the Limit.

David Bell, arrested by Patrolman Overbaugh last night, and entered on the police blotter as guilty of "general disorderly conduct," was sent to jail for fifty days and fined $50 beside by Judge Hampson this morning. Bell has been making a nuisance of himself about the streets for several weeks and his arrest was ordered by Chief Kiely.

To Talk to Fellow Barristers.

Prosecutor James L. Griggs, president of the Somerset Bar Association, has secured R. V. Lindabury, of Newark, to make the chief address at the dinner to be given by that organization in Somerville in the near future.

Death of Miss Campbell.

Miss Jessie Campbell, of Hillside avenue, died yesterday afternoon at the hospital from heart failure. Miss Campbell was born in Scotland and has lived for many years in Canada, before she came to this city.

SCHOOL BOARD WANTS CITY PARK IMPROVED

MEMBERS DECIDE UPON NAME OF STRUCTURE IN COURSE OF ERECTION.

Planning to beautify the spacious grounds about the new High School, the city Board of Education at its meeting, last night, discussed the advisability of asking the Common Council to join with it in the movement by improving the southerly side of the city park. The idea is to make the park and the school grounds uniform in appearance and it is proposed to secure the services of a competent landscape artist to prepare plans and submit them at the next session. In the meantime, Mr. Abbott, of the Board, will consult with Mayor Buckle regarding the city side.

It was announced at the meeting that the official title of the new building is to be "The Plainfield High School" and it was decided to have the name placed in front on a terra cotta base at a cost of $105. The present High School is officially known as the Stillman building, although it is nearly always called the Plainfield High School.

A motion was passed at the meeting that Professor Maxson attend the meeting of the National Superintendents Association at Milwaukee, Wis., the latter part of this month, representing the Plainfield schools. John Ebberly and Isaac Kennedy applied for the janitorship of the new building and the matter of a speaker for the June commencement exercises was discussed but no action was taken. Mr. Lovell made an unusual suggestion in favoring no speaker at all but the majority of the Board did not acquiesce.

CONGREGATIONAL WOMEN GUESTS OF MEN'S CLUB

INTERESTING LECTURE ON NEW YORK A FEATURE OF PROGRAMME.

"New York City, Its Past and Present," was pictured by Professor L. P. Gratacap, of the American Museum of Natural History, of New York, at the "ladies' night" of the Men's Club, of the Congregational church, last night. A feature of the programme was the rendition of a number of old Scotch and Irish selections in a delightful manner by Miss Grace Carroll, contralto of the choir of the Crescent Avenue church. She was enthusiastically appaulded.

In his history of New York, Professor Gratacap was complete, yet entertaining, and as he traced the growth of the Metropolis from the settlement by the Dutch in the seventeenth century up to its present condition, stereopticon illustrations were thrown on the screen, which made his portrayal even more vivid.

He divided his lecture into three divisions, the settlement by the Dutch, the English, and the modern condition. He showed pictures of historical points about Manhattan, pointing out the places of colonial interest. Maps of the city showing its growth at various periods made the lecture an instructive one as well and an interesting story of the rise of America's largest city.

At the conclusion of the talk, a social hour was enjoyed and refreshments were served. There were a large number of the women of the congregation present, the affair being given for their benefit.

TAX RATE $1.50.

Bill Introduced in the Legislature to Make That the Maximum Amount.

Thomas J. Hillery, Senator from Morris County, has come to the front in the Legislature with a bill fixing a maximum tax rate throughout the State of $1.50 on each $100. This is in the line of the recommendation made by Governor Stokes in his inaugural address, and the prospect of its passing without a struggle is not overbright. Mr. Hillery thinks that the enactment of his measure will tend to the equalization of taxes throughout the different counties.

He also thinks that it will compel the assessor to discover the personal property which in many cases now escapes taxation altogether.

Seven Per Cent. of Normal Vote Represented in Local Assemblyman Election.

FULL VOTE IS 4,100

In Second District of Second Ward Three Votes Were Registered—At Last General Election 3,600 Were Cast in This City.

There were just 176 voted cast in this city as the special election held yesterday, which is about seven per cent. of the normal vote, and it is estimated that each vote cost the taxpayers about $5. There was little or no interest in the election and the members of the boards of election and registry had hard work to put in their time.

The largest vote in the city was polled in the Third district of the Fourth ward, where fifty-two ballots were cast. Next came the Second district of the same ward with thirty-two votes and then the First district of the First ward with twenty-nine votes. The Second district of the Second ward polled the smallest number of votes, there being only three ballots placed in the box there.

The large vote in the Second and Third districts of the Fourth ward is accounted for by the fact that many men employed in the shops in that section of the city are near the polls and it was not difficult for them to spare the time to cast their ballots.

When it is considered that the number of voters in the city is about 4,100 and that 3,600 voted at the last general election, the vote of yesterday seems very insignificant. The absence of an opposition candidate to Randolph Perkins, the Republican nominee, was largely responsible for the lack of interest in the election, although the general public seemed to disapprove of the election anyway. However, there are many who believe that had there been a Democratic nominee he would have stood an excellent chance for election as the Republicans did not make an effort to get out the votes, and there would probably have been as little interest on the part of the Republicans had there been opposition.

All of the returns reached the office of City Clerk J. T. MacMurray before 8 o'clock, the first returns arriving at 7:30 and the others in quick succession. There was not even the usual crowd of interested ones about the office to learn the size of the vote.

The vote by districts was as follows:

First ward—First district, 29; Second district, 11.

Second ward—First district, 3; Second district, 3.

Third ward—First district, 17; Second district, 7.

Fourth ward—First district, 12; Second district, 33; Third district, 52.

FANWOOD TOWNSHIP.

Union County paid about $8 per head for votes cast at the special election for Assemblyman, held at Fanwood yesterday. Out of a registry list of 315 only 20 exercised their right of suffrage and voted. But little interest was manifested by even the party leaders, no effort being made to get out the voters as at a regular election. This was partly due to the fact that but one ticket was in the field, although the rank and file behind that the whole thing was a needless expense thrust upon the taxpayers. The vote in the borough was also very light, only a small number of the 100 voters availing themselves of the opportunity to cast a ballot.

Oil Stove Makes Trouble.

Mrs. Parsons, a boarder at the home of Mrs. Mary Kitchell at 309 West Second street, left an oil stove burning in her bed-room when she went out yesterday afternoon and a little later a girl in the house discovered that the room was full of smoke. Thinking that the house was on fire she ran across the street to the fire house and gave an alarm. Captain Daly, accompanied by Fireman Freeman hastened to the house and an investigation proved that there was all smoke and no fire and they opened the windows to allow free ventilation. The oil stove was left burning too high. The only damage was to the ceilings and walls and the furnishings, all of which were blackened.

Notable Women

Annie S. Peck, Mrs. Taylor and Others

Among feminine achievements of the past year none is more remarkable than the mountain climbing of Miss Annie S. Peck of Chicago. Her record for 1904 includes the scaling of two great Andean heights, Mount Sorata in Bolivia and Mount Huascaran in Peru. Both the trips are to be classed among the world's notable climbing feats without even the addition of that condemnatory phrase "for a woman." Sorata Miss Peck ascended to a height of 22,000 feet, certainly to within 500 to 800 feet of the very top. There her guides turned coward and refused to follow her, to her infinite chagrin. Indeed, she went on alone to a considerable distance before she discovered that the one last Indian who had agreed to accompany her up the perilous steep had slipped out of the other end of the safety rope which bound him to the intrepid American girl and left it dangling loose upon the snow. At the same instant, to her horror, Miss Peck found herself upon the very brink of a crevasse that might have been a mile deep for aught any human being knew. The only thing to do was to retreat, that, too, with the utmost circumspection, for only the frozen snow crust was between her and the unfathomed depths of that crevasse. When she reproached the Indian for his desertion he merely said he did not know why he should risk his life because she was determined to risk hers. So the woman mountain climber took the back track and returned to the foot of great Sorata. She did not rest long, however. So soon as she could make preparation she journeyed to the foothills of Huascaran and made a try at its summit. She reached an altitude of 19,000 feet on this mountain, which she believes to be the highest in the western hemisphere.

She climbed Huascaran farther than any other explorer has gone. Its scenery she found indescribably beautiful, incomparably finer than that of the Alps, and she is certain it contains mineral deposits of untold richness.

MISS ANNIE S. PECK.

Next summer Miss Peck declares she will try again to climb Huascaran and this time will succeed.

Women Art Bookbinders.

Chicago is the home of another lady in the public eye of late, Mrs. Hobart Chatfield Chatfield-Taylor. Heretofore she has been known chiefly as an ornamental lady of society, and it was a surprise to society when Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor suddenly declared that she thought every woman ought to do something useful and accordingly opened an art bookbindery in Chicago. She believes a book may be made a work of art as to its outside, and she will endeavor to show the American people what can be done in that line.

Associated with Mrs. Taylor in her bookbinding shop are Miss Enid George, an English lady whom Mrs. Taylor met while studying art bookmaking in Paris, and Miss Streeter of Chicago. At first Mrs. Taylor took up bookbinding as an artistic fad, then became so much interested that she determined to engage in it as a business enterprise.

"Of course I wish to make money," says Mrs. Chatfield-Taylor, with refreshing honesty.

A Russian Patriot.

Not long ago there landed in America one of the most remarkable of living women, Mme. Katherine Breshkofskaya, a Russian. Twenty-two years Mme. Breshkofskaya spent as a political exile in Kara and Baikal, Siberia. Few men even survive such an ordeal, yet this woman, now sixty-one years old, is still in the prime of physical and mental vigor. She was the first woman to be sentenced to hard labor in Siberian mines. She comes to America to make propaganda for free speech and free government in Russia.

DORA BELLE DENISON.

THE SENTIMENTAL GIRL.

She Is a Bore Both to Men and Women.

The sentimental girl! Who does not know her?

She makes trouble both for men and women and all because she cannot keep her fluttering little heart under control.

A friend of mine took to live with her a very charming young girl, and every one was surprised at the end of two months when the partnership was dissolved with every sign of relief on the married woman's side.

"ONE LAST FAREWELL."

"I simply couldn't stand it!" she explained to her intimates. "That girl nearly drove me wild. Sentimental? Why, good gracious, she was forever imagining all sorts of silly things, not to speak of falling in love every other day. It got so that in self defense I positively had to keep my attractive men friends away from the house, for whenever one came she would do nothing but talk about him for three days afterward and nearly drive me out of my senses by her repeated questions as to whether I thought he liked her and was he in love with any other girl! There was one awful week I shall never remember without a shudder when she learned that Billy Blinks was engaged. She passed her nights in sobs and her days in going around with a face that would have made a dying man's look cheerful by comparison. Oh, no, thank you, I have had enough of that budding, blushing type of maidenhood. Give me a girl who is blase enough to conceal her likes and dislikes."

Now listen to the man's side of the story. "Oh, the dickens! Here is another note from that girl, saying she is going away forever on Wednesday, and won't I call for one last farewell between 5 and 6! I'd rather be whipped than go, but I can't very well refuse. A fellow must be decent. I know perfectly well what it will be like—a funeral filled with mute reproaches and unshed tears. Upon my word, I haven't given her the slightest encouragement. What is a man to do when a girl does nothing but invite him and plant herself in his path? I went as little as I possibly could, considering she is a friend of my family, and now she finds that I have broken her trusting heart and blasted her young life."

A PRETTY ROOM.

Handsome Effect May Be Produced by Papering or Painting.

Nothing makes a room more inviting than appropriate wall decoration, and no method of achieving this effect is productive of a better result than when paneling is applied. The panels are divided either by paper or molding, gilt or otherwise. A plain background of some restful color covers the panel to begin, and upon this background decorative designs are placed. Sometimes the design is floral; sometimes it is in the form of a landscape; again it is conventionalized. Really artistic wall panels can be made from combinations of wall paper patterns. Beautiful panel patterns are also obtained by painting the walls.

CHECK CIGARS IN GOTHAM

Strange Custom of Depositing Lighted Weed Before Entering New York Stores.

Everyone knows that you can check a trunk, even if it be to San Francisco. You also receive a check to your hansom cab when you drive up to a restaurant, or for your $20,000 motor car at the country club. Even the good housewife, when she goes to the up-to-date department store, says the New York Press, may check her baby while she makes her round of the counters. It is known to very few, however, that in a certain wholesale dry goods house in this city you can and must check your lighted cigar before entering the building. This dry goods house is the largest in this country, if not in the world. It covers an entire city block, a few minutes' walk from Broadway, and everyone, no matter whether he be a big buyer with a carload order, or a diminutive messenger boy with a telegram must leave at the door his cigar, cigarette or pipe. It is the most stringent rule of this great firm that no one, from the $50,000 a year salaried president down to the three dollar a week office boy, may smoke when inside the building. At the entrance stands a neatly uniformed man, who is big enough to make one think twice about argument. As you enter he politely touches you on the arm and says: "Pardon me, are you smoking?" and should that be the case, he will say "I must ask you to leave your cigar here." He will then hand you a check and with gloved fingers carefully deposit the perfecto or pipe on a small brass rack provided for the purpose, and which bears the same number as the check you have received. When you leave the building you present your check and receive your cigar or pipe and a match to light it with and go on your way.

TOOK BACK MINOR CHARGES

Methodist Insisted on "Presbyterian," But Retracted "Robber" and "Liar" Statement.

In a certain town of western Massachusetts, relates Harper's Weekly, two of the most prominent citizens are a Methodist brother and a Presbyterian brother. These are neighbors and, for the most part, dwell on good terms, except when they try to effect an exchange of horses or to talk religion. On one occasion the two had traded horses and although the outcome rankled in the breast of the Methodist they met and started a discussion on the subject of predestination. As usual, an altercation ensued, when the Methodist lost control of himself. With mixed emotions concerning horse trades and John Calvin in his mind, he suddenly exclaimed:

"You are a robber, a liar and a Presbyterian!"

This proved too much for the Presbyterian, and a fight began, in which the Presbyterian got the best of it. As he sat upon his prostrate opponent, bumping his head against the ground, he said:

"Take it back, take it back, or I'll bump your foolish head off!"

"I'll take it back," gasped the vanquished Methodist, "on the first two counts. You're not a robber nor a liar, but you're a blamed old Presbyterian, if I die for it!"

SHE REBUKED A CONDUCTOR

He Ordered an Aged, Infirm Woman to "Step Lively," But Soon Retracted Words.

It was on a League Island car going south, says the Philadelphia Press, the time was high noon, and as usual there was a variegated assortment of persons inside, while out on the front and rear platforms passengers stood huddled together like sheep. The conductor, a tall youth, who had evidently not been ringing up fares for many months, was in bad humor because people did not step lively enough when leaving or entering the car at the various stops. At one of the street crossing the car stopped and an aged woman, careworn and feeble-looking, got up and slowly, with the aid of the backs of the chairs, started toward the rear to get off. "Come, come, there, lady, step lively; we can't wait here all day," impetuously shouted the conductor. The old lady glanced up at the tall youth in a kindly manner as she passed him and in a low but pathetic voice replied: "I am moving as fast as I can, my boy, and would step livelier, but I have been sick all summer, and this is the first time I have been out since last May. Didn't you ever have a mother, lad?" It is needless to say the conductor was humility itself for the rest of the trip.

Meat of Porcupine.

It is not generally known that the common porcupine is an inhabitant of both southern Italy and Spain, and that its flesh is a regular item of consumption. As the animal is a very clean feeder, the meat is of fine quality and has a taste something between that of chicken and of pork. It is believed to have been naturalized in Italy by the Romans, just as they probably brought the rabbit to England. In South Africa porcupines are regularly hunted at night with dogs.

To Keep a Horse Down.

When a witness in an English court the other day remarked that it was necessary to sit on a horse's head when he was down to keep him quiet, the judge replied: "Nothing of the kind. People don't seem to understand that the only thing necessary to keep a horse from kicking when he is down is to get hold of his ear and keep his nose up in the air. I have seen a lady keep a horse quiet in that way without soiling her gloves."

JAPS SERVE COUNTRY WELL

No Danger Appalls the True Subject of the Mikado, Ardent About Success in War.

The Japanese soldier knows that he shall be honored if he of the his country well. "Man lives but one time; his name is the lives to posterity," says Nouanaga Ansedounci, in Atlantic. This has been Nom and from his childhood. He believes that ancient heroes of his race are watching him and guiding him. The bad ner of his regiment has characters written by the emperor, and was given to his regiment by the emperor himself, the chief's brush of his face. Such being his banner, and, consequently, the inborn memories of the race twining round it, the soldier sees with the eye of his faith his ancestors marching before the standard to the rising sun. He knows he has the deep fellow feeling of his living countrymen, and that if he dies he shall be honored, for endless generations with offerings and festivals by his countrymen yet to come. Nothing so real to him as what he feels; and he feels that with him are united the past, the present and the future generations of his countrymen. Thus fully conscious of the intense sympathy of his compatriots, both dead and living, and swelled with lofty anticipation of his glorious destiny, no danger can appall, and no toil can tire the real Japanese soldier.

TYPES OF MACHINE GUNS.

Hotchkiss Uses Larger Ammunition Than the Gatling Device—Nordenfeldt Very Simple.

The first machine gun of any note was the Gatling. The original Gatling had ten barrels placed in a circle, with a breech mechanism so arranged that by turning a crank these barrels were successively fired, the cartridges being placed in a small hopper situated on the top of the gun. The Hotchkiss was a similar gun, having a similar arrangement of barrels, but a totally different form of mechanism. The Hotchkiss system, however, was used for a larger type of ammunition than the Gatling. The French mitrailleuse had 20 barrels. They were all loaded at the same time and all fired simultaneously. The recoil was so great that it had to be mounted in the same manner as a field piece, on a heavy carriage, requiring six horses. The apparatus was clumsy, difficult to operate and had a comparatively slow rate of fire. The Nordenfeldt gun consists of a series of barrels arranged side by side, like organ pipes. The Nordenfeldt gun generally has five barrels, and the mechanism is worked by a lever, the cartridges falling down from a hopper on the top of the arm into position, where the mechanism thrusts them into the barrel, fires them and extracts the empty case. This gun is of great simplicity, and for a time went into extensive use.

HAVANA NEWPORT'S ANNEX

Capital of Cuba, with Its Rare Beauties, Promises to Become a Resort of Fashion.

Havana promises in a few years to become one of the spots of fashionable resort of which Newport is the hub—not because it possesses any attractions of itself, but entirely because of the rare beauty of many of its women, according to the New York Press. The girls of the Martinez family are perfect types of the splendid creatures depicted in Moorish art—the soft, languorous eye, the faint red glow beneath the olive skin, the swelling bust, the perfect curve in the shoulder outline and true cupid-bow mouth, which all Spanish poets declare a heritage of the daughters of Castile alone. It is certain there is abundance of this form of feminine loveliness now in Havana, or on its way there. The most striking and statuesque beauty perhaps is the wife of Regino Truffin, Russian charge d'affaires. Silvia Alfonso, the wife of Emilio Terry, is one of the most beautiful brunettes in Cuba. The Spaniards raved over her. Many of the nice old men in the Millionaires' club are going down to Havana this winter, and it is probable they will pave the way for turning the Cuban capital into an annex of Newport.

TROLLEY FOR SHOW PEOPLE

Electric Lines Compete for Business with the Steam Railroads in New England States.

One of the latest developments of the rural trolley system is the making of bids for the transportation of theatrical companies. Through New York state and in New England the trolley companies have been extremely active in this new field of late, particularly between cities and towns where the distances are not so great that the members of a company would be unduly fatigued by the length of the ride. The agent of a company supporting a "star" that was playing in Albany, N. Y., recently was approached by the manager of a trolley company with a proposal that his line would carry the entire company to Schenectady, their next "stand," at the rate of two persons for five cents. In addition to this low rate the trolley line offered the "star" the use of the directors' parlor car and also two "flat" cars to carry the scenery. As the run took only three hours, the deal was arranged on the spot. The regular railway fare for each person for the same distance was 28 cents, with no parlor car thrown in.

Say Conqueror Was a Jap.

Some Japanese historians aver that Genghis Khan, the Asiatic conqueror in the thirteenth century, was a Japanese by birth.

RICH HOLIDAY GOWNS.

Velvets and Velutinas Are Trimmed With Jet and Lace.

Just at the present moment womankind are too busy thinking about the holidays now upon us to care very much about the newest of anything except such gowns as are to be worn to the different dinners and receptions. They have all arranged their winter wear for the street, and the evening dress is more necessary just now. Naturally this means those women who are like the one of whom we once read—the one who sat on the cushion and sewed up a seam and ate nothing but strawberries, sugar and cream. So let us relegate the useful to the background while we talk a little of the purely ornamental.

In the first place, velvet is the preferred material this season for fine gowns for young and old women, but the younger ones, or, rather, the single ones, must be content with lighter stuffs, though not much less costly. For indoor wear the velvet must be of the regulation silk face, and the richer and heavier the piece the more admirable it is and the more desirable. For outdoor wear the velutinas are preferred in almost every case. The colorings and appearance are exactly the same, and the wearing qualities are excellent, at one-quarter the cost.

Nothing trims a velvet gown or indeed any other garment so well as jet in almost any manner, whether in cords, applique or laid on in set designs. On one superb gown shown in a leading store there were large arabesques made of fine cut jet sewed directly on the velvet. Another had a series of cords and tassels across the front of the skirt from top to bottom. The waist was made with a deep point that might have been worn in the days of Queen Elizabeth. Around the low cut neck there was a bertha of heavy vandyke lace. The whole was a picturesque and splendid gown. It was for a young matron to wear at a grand dinner and at the opera afterward. To wear with it was a long cloak with sleeves containing enough cloth to make a suit for a girl of six. They were big, clumsy, baggy things, but the material was a brocade so rich and fine in ivory and old rose, bordered with a line of fluffy white fur, that one thought of the old farmer who when he saw a modern parlor for the first time asked the owner if she thought she could have all that and heaven too. What with the velvet gown, the proper allowance of jewels and this magnificent long coat one wonders where the "simple life" comes in.

To return to our dinner dresses, every kind of thin, soft silk is considered just right, but crepe de chine and chiffon have the first place. Crepe is best for some gowns and chiffon for others. Chiffon is as well liked today as when first presented to our admiring gaze. The illustration shows a beautiful dinner gown for one of the elite who knows how to dress well. The slip is of a rich, vivid blue, and the chiffon overdress is a delicate pink. This makes a combination most exquisite, for combined in this way the shades form elusive purple tints varying in depth according to the closeness of the gathers. The waist is a corselet of ivory lace over the blue undertint, and this is in turn run with red and gold threads, following the design of the lace. Around the shoulders is a graduated bertha of chiffon edged with gold and red castle braid. The sleeves and skirt are shirred, and at the foot a vandyked design of the lace is added as an inset. Around the edges of flounce and sleeves is a narrow shirring of the chiffon, which finishes it beautifully.

CHIFFON DINNER DRESS.

I discovered the cause of the peculiar flare of the skirt and will tell my kind readers who do not know how to achieve that effect that they may reproduce it. There is another skirt still beneath the blue silk slip, and this has a flounce six inches deep. Where it joins the skirt is set a row of crinoline with one row of featherbone piping woven into it. It is sewed fast to the skirt, not to the bottom of the flounce, and that is what makes it stand out so stylishly.

Daily the trend of the shapes in gowns and other garments comes nearer to those worn long ago, and some of them are strangely familiar. The skirts are full around the waist and flounced or otherwise trimmed straight around the bottom. The waists, too, are much easier to make. Princess shapes are again making their appearance, and the tight postilion waists are often seen with the tailor suits. Vest fronts are among the best liked of all the styles for tailor made basques and waists.

OLIVE HARPER.

EVERYDAY NEATNESS.

Twins Who Do Not Seem to Belong to the Same Family.

Alma and Alice are twin sisters. They have a small cottage in the country and live together. They keep a cow and chickens and do nearly all their own work indoor and out. It is not very heavy, not even the care of the pretty little cow. Alma attends to the cow and chickens usually, while in the division of labor the housework largely falls to Alice, because she prefers it.

In the morning both rise at the same time, early, of course. Alice makes the fire and prepares the breakfast. Alma milks the cow and feeds the chickens. At breakfast time they sit opposite each other at the table, partaking of the delicious puffy rice cakes and maple sirup, fresh eggs and fragrant coffee Alice's handy fingers have conjured up. Alice is a boss cook, no mistake.

But, although the twins are about of the same height, breadth and thickness, although both have dark hair, a little sprinkled with gray, and dark eyes, you would never guess they belonged to the same family. Alice looks certainly ten years older than Alma. Although the morning task of Alma has been more difficult than that of Alice and has taken more time, yet Alma sits there neat as a pin, for all the world as though she was dressed for a caller. Her hair is combed and done up in a tidy manner. She has deftly slipped off her overshoes and big overall milking apron and sits dainty and erect in a well made house dress, with pretty cuffs of the same material and having a white ruffle at the neck. In brief, Alma looks like a lady, as she is, every inch of her, though she does work for her living—a living obtained from the proceeds of a cow and a chicken yard.

Now look at Alice.

Alice has sat down to that delicious breakfast with unkempt hair, tousled and tumbling about her neck and ears. It looks a fright. Alice has "not time" to comb it before breakfast, she says, though if the early morning hour is not for the purpose of making oneself look a respectable human being one would like to know what it is for, that's all.

Alice has her sleeves rolled up above her elbows, and she leans her left elbow upon the table and sits sideways. Her gown is only half closed at the neck and is wrinkled and unsightly. She wears her kitchen apron at the table, and that apron is even not overclean. Her shoes are untied and sloppy. She is as uninviting an object to sit opposite to at mealtime as can be imagined, and she is an eyesore to her clean and comely sister, who has remonstrated with her for thirty years in vain. Alma never looks at her sister at mealtime.

"I can't bother with little fool things," says Alice. "I've no time to waste in that way. And what difference does it make at home anyway?"

Just there is where Alice makes the mistake of her life. How a woman looks in her own home is really one of the most important matters in life. No mother who lets herself run to seed and become a slouch can retain the respect of either husband or children. Many a man has been turned away from his wife simply because she neglected her teeth. I remember the horror with which as a child I regarded a woman relative who used sometimes to appear before us young ones without her artificial teeth. Her mouth made me actually shudder with repulsion. The recollection of that makes me imagine how unpleasant it must be to live in the same house with a woman who "lets her teeth go," as they say. America is full of the best dentists on earth, and there is no excuse for facial disfigurement through lack of their care.

THE TWO SISTERS AT BREAKFAST.

Most of the women and girls in our land at least profess to hold to a religion of some kind; many belong to and dwell in families where thanks are audibly expressed before each meal. It looks somehow like a very poor way of showing thankfulness for food to sit down and partake of it with unkempt hair and untidy clothing, doesn't it? Just when a woman's little children are growing to maturity around her is the very time when she should set them an example of neatness in shoes and stockings, in hair and clothing. Half an hour spent on herself daily will keep her trim and tidy, and it will be the most profitably spent half hour of the working day. Such trimness and tidiness in the woman at home is an absolute necessity to a sound civilization.

PHYSICAL CULTURE HINTS.

Simple Exercises For Making the Body Graceful and Supple.

It is a fine compliment to American women that an English teacher of body culture has come to this country to study into the reasons why our women are superior physically to British women. American women are in general undoubtedly taller and at the same time better developed in the bust and hips than Englishwomen, though not larger around the waist. English people say our women are more graceful than their British sisters; also that they carry themselves better. Foreigners believe the difference in this respect is due to the American system of physical culture.

It is true that we have excellent physical culture systems for the feminine sex in America, so excellent that the only pity is more women do not learn and practice these. Good looking as we are, there are still "oceans" to be desired along the line of physical training. We need not throw bouquets at ourselves because we are so beautiful and superior physically. The compliment to our good looks, on the contrary, should make us humbly resolved to perfect ourselves in this respect.

VALUABLE WALKING EXERCISE.

To be well, graceful and handsome a woman must breathe well, walk well, hold herself absolutely erect and keep her muscles limber as a child's. All this is within reach of the average woman in town or country, no matter how hard worked she is.

How to Breathe.

A very little time given daily to the pursuit of physical perfection will achieve great results. To begin with breathing, correct breathing always commences with having the clothing so loose that a woman can fill her lungs with air to their utmost capacity without having her sides feel cramped by her garments. That test being applied, let her then breathe slowly and deeply from the waist upward and toward the armpits. She should commence to fill the lungs with air at the waist line and inhale till she can feel herself breathe in her back as well as in front. The lungs extend well around to the back. The air should be exhaled slowly and rhythmically. This slow, deep breathing is an excellent exercise for rendering the mind serene and tranquil, as well as for purifying the blood and insuring a good complexion. Practice it till it becomes habitual.

Next let us consider an exercise to make a girl or woman walk well. Look a moment at the lady in the picture. Observe how she holds her umbrella—across her back and under her arms. Try this for yourself. A cane or any old stick will do. Hold it as the woman in the illustration holds her umbrella. Note now how it lifts the chest and the sagged muscles about the waist, how it causes the head to be held erect, the spine straight as an arrow. As an exercise in walking this is invaluable.

The Bending Forward Exercise.

For preventing the muscles of the back and abdomen from becoming stiff and unwieldy, for limbering them out after they have become stiff, also for reducing the fat stomach, no exercise is better than the simple, old fashioned one of bending forward from the hips and touching the floor with the finger tips. The right way is as follows:

Stand perfectly erect, knees and heels together. Now raise the arms above the head, stretching them up as far as possible, and clasp the fingers together. You will notice that this lifts the whole front of your body and gives a splendid sensation of lightness and freedom. Now, without bending the knees a particle, let your arms slowly down out in front of you, unclasp the fingers and with the tips of them touch the floor. Remember the knees must not be bent in the least. If you practice this exercise a few times twice a day you will find your stomach becoming smaller and your body more limber. By and by you will be able to stoop forward in this way and lay the whole palm of your hand flat upon the floor.

Still another exercise, also one of the best, one which, as is generally the case, old women need more than young ones, is to crawl about the floor on all fours like an infant. It may seem laughable; if so, so much the better.

HOUSE AND SENATE SOON TO ELECT PRESIDENT.

ATTRACTING MEN TO NAVY

Interested Spectator in Senate Gallery—Curiosity Lessens in Regard to Mormonism — Other Gossip from National Capital.

WASHINGTON. — Theodore Roosevelt and Charles Warren Fairbanks will be elected president and vice of the United States on Wednesday, February 8. This may sound strange to those who thought these men were elected to these offices on November 8 last. They will not be officially elected, however, until the senate and house of representatives get together in joint session on February 8 and count the electoral votes and declare the election of the candidates receiving the highest number of votes. When congress ascertains from the official electoral ballots, filed with the president pro tem of the senate and with the secretary of state, who received the highest number of votes, they will enter the result on the record of the joint session and the election of president and vice president will have been completed.

The senate and house goes about this business as solemnly as though their count of the vote was to be the first announcement to the country of the names of the next president and vice president, although 70,000,000 or 80,000,000 people knew on the morning of November 9 last that Theodore Roosevelt and Charles W. Fairbanks would fill the offices of president and vice president for four years, beginning on the 4th of next March. The votes which will be counted on February 8 were cast on Monday, January 9, when the successful electors met in each state and cast their ballots in accordance with the instructions of the conventions which nominated them. These electoral votes have now reached Washington and the last impressive ceremony of electing the two highest officers in the government will take place February 8.

Men for the Navy.

SECRETARY of the Navy Morton is advocating a new method of attracting young men to enlist. There is a desire on his part to make the service attractive and the inducements offered to likely young men throughout the country are put in as alluring form as possible. There has been no falling off in the enlistments in the navy and it is desired that there shall not be. For this purpose it is intended that the most favorable knowledge of the navy shall be disseminated in those parts of the country remote from the sea coast, where the naval recruiting parties are at work.

Hitherto much dependence has been placed in bill posters and a considerable sum of money has been expended each year in thus advertising the advantages of service in the navy. These bill posters are familiar objects throughout the country and represent almost life size figures of sailors and marines in natty uniforms, while the text of the poster describes the character of the service, wages paid and some of the attractions of the life. It is now proposed to reach young men through the mediums of books and newspapers. A handsome illustrated pamphlet has been favorably considered, and Secretary Morton expects that it will appeal to the intelligence of husky young fellows who want to sail the ocean blue and get on Uncle Sam's pay rolls.

It is proposed to have this pamphlet contain a full account of the duties exacted of an enlisted man on board a ship of war, together with the rates of compensation and the chances of promotion. The covers of the book will bear half-tone designs; the front cover to include that of the officers and crew of a battleship and the back cover to have a picture of a modern man of war. It is proposed also to have pictoral advertising in the newspapers published in the localities where recruiting parties are periodically working.

The Two Dollivers.

THERE can be seen almost daily in that section of the senate gallery set apart for the accommodation of the families of senators an old gentleman of strong, rugged features, but showing the signs of very advanced years. He is assisted by the doorkeeper, as he has to walk on crutches, having but one leg. The old man's gaze is frequently centered upon a stalwart, black-haired, black-moustached young senator who sits near the center of the republican side. When this young senator arises to make an address the eyes of the old gentleman are never taken off of him, and the young man often turns and looks up at the front pew of the senatorial gallery to meet the gaze of the venerable occupant. The eloquent young senator is Johnathan P. Dolliver, of Iowa, and the old gentleman in the gallery is his proud, venerable and venerated father.

The elder Dolliver spends the winters with his son in Washington and seldom misses a day to look down upon the latter from the senate galleries. He is far advanced in years, having long since passed the four score years limit. His form, a few years ago as erect as that of his sturdy son, is becoming shriveled by age and he is bowed with the weight of years. He is a fine type of the sturdy frontier circuit rider of more than half a century ago. The Rev. Dolliver for nearly 60 years was one of the most eloquent divines in the Methodist church and rode over the mountains of West Virginia, in which state his son, Johnathan Prentiss Dolliver, was born. The boy comes honestly by his talent for oratory, as his distinguished father was noted for his eloquence and power as a preacher. There is no one in the big audience that frequently gathers in the senate chamber to listen to the junior senator from Iowa, for whose approval young Dolliver cares so much as he does for that of his aged father.

Women Attend the Smoot Hearings.

FOR some reason the hearings in the Smoot case before the senate committee on privileges and elections are not so largely attended now that the defense is having its innings, as they were when the prosecution was presenting its case. It has been suggested that there is not so much of the salaciousness in the testimony now being taken as there was when Mormon men and women were questioned regarding the mysteries of Mormonism and the domestic life of the polygamist. There were some pretty "racy" episodes in the early part of the session and the committee room was always crowded to its limit by a throng of the curious.

There are still many women who attend the hearings, but for the most part they are representatives of women's organizations who are doing their utmost to secure the expulsion of Senator Smoot as a rebuke to the Mormons and as a vindication of the purity of the home. When the testimony on the part of the prosecution was being taken, however, there were throngs of the fair sex that drifted to the committee room every day to hear what was said. It was noticed that after a day when the evidence had been unusually sensational and "tart" these crowds increased, presumably in expectation of hearing more of the same kind of testimony.

The examination of witnesses for the defense is now of a more quiet and humdrum character. The witnesses called are testifying for the most part to the good character and good points of the Mormons. This does not seem to interest a certain class of the morbidly curious. The committee, however, is just as keen to get the testimony of those who see the best side of the Mormons, as it was to elicit all possible information regarding the evils of that strange religion. The mass of testimony taken was such as to make it improbable that the committee can digest it all and prepare its report within the next month.

Career of Postmaster-General Wynne.

POSTMASTER General Wynne is understood to be slated for another good position when he retires from the cabinet on March 4 to be succeeded by National Chairman George Bruce Cortelyou. President Roosevelt is very fond of Mr. Wynne and wants to give him a place in the government service in which dignity and a munificent compensation are united. He has offered the post*master general the position of consul*ate general at London. This place is now held by ex-Congressman and ex-Pension Commissioner Henry Clay Evans, of Tennessee. From the standpoint of compensation it is the most desirable berth in either the consular or diplomatic service. While the salary is but $5,000 a year, the consul general receives in addition the notarial fees of the office, which amount from $12,000 to $15,000 a year. This makes the pay of that official greater than the salary of the American ambassador to the court of St. James, which is but $17,500 a year.

Some two years ago Mr. Wynne was a newspaper correspondent in Washington, but one of the best and most widely known. He was selected by the late Postmaster General Payne as first assistant postmaster general, and upon Mr. Payne's death was promoted to be head of the department. The record of Mr. Wynne's life is an illustration of the possibilities before every energetic and intelligent American boy. From a messenger boy in a telegraph office to a seat in the cabinet of the president of the United States is almost as great an achievement as was that of the late James A. Garfield, who began life as the tow path driver and died president of the United States.

GAMBLERS BEATEN

NEW YORK'S DISTRICT ATTORNEY PERSISTS IN FIGHT.

WHAT HE ACCOMPLISHES

Not Yet Through—May Get After the Speculators — National Academy Exhibition Mediocre—Other New York Gossip.

NEW YORK.—"Jerome has got the gamblers."

This tribute to the powers of the district attorney of New York county is about the most interesting thing in town. You hear it everywhere; and unlike so many things you hear, it is true. Gambling is nearly done for in this county—unless a gamblers' district attorney can be elected, which isn't so ridiculous a suggestion as it sounds. It has been done before now.

The funny part of it is that Mr. Jerome himself comes of an old New York family of men who didn't mind a quiet game now and then; and the present-day Jerome would not care much whether or not gambling went on "on the quiet." It is the police corruption that it shielded which he cannot stand for.

Abram S. Hewitt once said that it takes ten years to do anything in New York; but it is much less time since Reginald C. Vanderbilt, while he was still a student in Yale, began the anti-gambling crusade by losing a large sum, rome tried to compel Lewisohn, a gambling place. As the law then was, a man could not be compelled to testify in a gambling matter, but Vanderbilt stayed out of the state for two years, including his wedding day, to avoid publicity. Jerome tried to compel Lewisohn, a gambling copper magnate, to testify against Canfield, and failed. Then he went to Albany to get a law passed to compel testimony in such cases.

The virtuous rural assemblymen who are responsible for most of the deviltry in the city, laughed at the idea of passing such a bill. But Mr. Jerome wasn't born yesterday. He built such a fire under the assemblymen that their church-going constituents took to writing letters to them. Then the word to the gamblers' lobby was: "Sorry, old man, but if I vote against this bill it's good-by to Albany for me."

Mr. Jerome's "Invitation."

ARMED with this measure, Mr. Jerome simply "invited" Mr. Canfield to come down and see him. In a few days Canfield was in court pleading guilty. He was fined $1,000—ridiculously inadequate, but he is out of business, and that's something. Why did he plead guilty? Because Jerome has the call. Because Jerome is honest. Because the gambling house proprietor must protect his patrons from the disagreeable task of giving evidence against him as they can be compelled to do.

Jerome asked a police captain to serve a subpoena on "Honest John" Kelly, famous as poolroom man, prize fight referee and faro dealer. The captain couldn't find John. The captain has kept a man for four mouths in front of John's old house warning people against it, while John was running his new house two doors away, with hundreds of people daily entering. John was a friend of two police inspectors, and had not been arrested in nine years. So Jerome sent his own men up, and again issued a simple "invitation" to Kelly to come and talk to him. Kelly went. While the two talked Jerome's men broke into Honest John's place and captured the tables, chips, etc.

"Lou" Ludlum's turn came next. The gamblers began moving their "stuff" over into New Jersey. "Shang" Draper, an old-time associate of burglars and bad men, shut up his place. "Business was strictly on the blink."

The gamblers voted for Mayor McClellan in 1903 on the understanding that there would be a quietly "wide-open town," especially after election. No one supposes, however, that Mayor McClellan was personally a party to such a bargain. Jerome is a democrat, but not a Tammany man. His term is four years, holding over from the Low administration. The chance that he would get a new law from the legislature and actually work under it was the one thing that Charley Murphy, the "boss" of Tammany Hall, could not control. All these things will figure in the election this fall.

Jerome in Wall Street.

NOONE would be surprised to see Jerome make a flying leap into Wall street. Apparently he cannot interfere in the scandalous backing given by the National City bank to the stock "washing" frauds of Munroe & Munroe, which concerns the federal government. But when the Shipbuilding trust was founded false prospectuses were issued in New York state, although the company was formed, of course, in New Jersey, to influence investors. Gov. Odell was one of those who bit. He "unloaded" part of his bonds upon Judge Alton B. Parker. Others were taken by Mrs. Wood, widow of Fernando, the old-time Tammany mayor, who invented the maxim that it is "sometimes necessary to pander to the moral sense of the community."

Jerome has been looking into the Shipbuilding matter. The trouble is that there are so many new kinds of mischief let loose in New York in 24 hours that it is hard even for the liveliest district attorney to look after old offenses. Jerome has a great staff of assistants. Many of his assistants are young men of property, who have taken office mainly to be of use to the community. All are bright young fellows. The office is called the largest law office in the world. It is one of the ablest in intellect, one of the cleanest in character. Don't judge it by murder trials. New York is not the only town where it is hard to convict a pretty girl of killing a man whose whole record says "serve him right."

Pictures and Buyers.

THE national academy of paintings and a few sculptures is now on. The productions shown are average. That means that a hundred people and more have dabbed away at little bits of paintings not to big to go into a parlor, in the hope that some one will buy them. Nobody ever does, except occasionally a rich relative. The best artists, with few exceptions, live either by illustrations for magazines or newspapers, or by portrait painting. Even here they meet competition by foreigners who come over for a few months and carry off the best commissions. Madrazo, the famous Spaniard, is coming in a few days for this purpose. Sir Philip Burne Jones has left an amusing account of his experiences here in a book so frank that it is evident he does not mean to return. When he left, a sharp auctioneer held a "studio sale" of Jones' effects. Only one or two articles had Jones ever seen, but it was a great success. Chartran was another great success in society. He painted two or three members of the Roosevelt family.

There are no better portrait painters in the world than Alexander, Eakins, Sargent—Americans. The two former are represented this year in work as fine as is seen anywhere. Alexander's study of a girl's head shows genius, a quality sufficiently rare to attract attention. Eakin's portrait of a slouchy looking rumpled, ungainly professor evidently every inch a man, carried off the year's honors in portraiture, here and in St. Louis. It is a welcome change from the sugary pictures of fine ladies with lackadaisical hands and cruel, supercilious faces, that alternate with office pictures of bank presidents in the long lists of portraits.

The Child Labor Troubles.

NEW YORK, with one of the best child labor laws of any state, is backward in its enforcement. That is one result of vast size and of rotten politics.

The law prevents children under 14 years of age from *working in fac*tories. It prohibits children under 16 from working more than nine hours a day. Both provisions have been constantly ignored. The governor has been enlisted in the fight through the efforts of the child labor committee to oust State Labor Commissioner McMackin. The state child labor committee is in close affiliation with the national committee that is investigating conditions in cotton mills of the south, in New Jersey glass factories and in jute mills everywhere.

A great mill was working with child labor in this city. The labor inspectors had certified that it was doing as well as it could to enforce the law. Neighbors complained that little tots of ten were made to work long hours. It proved to be true. Children of eight work far into the night in canning factories.

The children who are put to work so early by their parents are almost without exception of foreign birth. In the south similar cases are charged against men and women of pure American stock. Public sentiment here is almost unanimous for the law. The difficulty is with the enforcement. Naturally, the labor unions are strong in its support, as they have been in the support of most reform legislation for many years. The problem will be solved. Meanwhile, New York is abashed.

NEW YORK LETTER

SOME EXTRAORDINARY THINGS THAT HAPPEN IN GOTHAM.

THE PATRICK MURDER CASE

It Has Many Peculiar Features—Many Poisoning Cases That Attract Attention—Society's Annual Flight to the South.

NEW YORK.—The most extraordinary things that happen in all the world find their match in New York. Take, for instance, the Patrick murder case, which will soon claim the attention of the court of appeals.

William M. Rice, a Texas millionaire, came to New York to avoid the Texan law that permits a wife by will to dispose of half her husband's property. His will, made in 1896, left the greater part of his fortune to found the Rice institute in Houston, Tex. There were a few small bequests to relatives.

Rice lived in New York a lonely life, dependent upon the service of his valet, Jones. On the day he died two checks signed by him were presented by Albert T. Patrick for payment at a bank. A slight irregularity in one of them caused the teller to call Rice up by telephone. Jones answered the call and, after some hesitation, told the bank officers that Rice had just died. There were found in the old man's effects a new will dated 1900. It gave only $250,000 of his five millions to the Rice institute, increased the bequests to relatives and made Patrick, a former Texas lawyer, residuary legatee. Patrick also held an assignment of Rice's estate, and checks for $250,000.

The amazing part of this story came out on the trial which followed. If Valet Jones told the truth on the stand as a witness for the state, Patrick could have had but slight acquaintance with Rice. The 1900 will was a forgery; that much has been established in surrogate's court, and the original will of 1896 stands. So the old man's money is likely to do some good by making a sort of Cooper Union in Texas.

The Amazing Poison Plot.

FIENDS from hades itself could not have framed a more amazing murder plot than *that in which Pat*rick was the leading spirit and Jones, according to his own story, the accomplice. Day by day the old man, absolutely dependent upon the valet, the smooth-shaven, soft-voiced, immobile young fellow whom the doctors knew, was slowly poisoned by the constant administration of a virulent mercurial poison. He wore out his days in agony; he lived a long while, he was stronger than the conspirators had counted upon. At times, according to the valet's story, they even discussed the use of violence to hurry matters. The checks were forgeries, to provide means of defense, preparation, if necessary, flight.

When the old man died, immediate preparations were made by Patrick, as next in interest, to have the body cremated. The body was embalmed, in itself a circumstance that makes poison detection difficult. However, because of the little misadventure of the checks, suspicion grew, the funeral was stopped, the body examined in autopsy. Traces of mercury were found. Both Patrick and Jones were arrested and the latter turned state's evidence.

Patrick had made his plans with considerable skill. He had become a regular attendant of the Fifth Avenue Bap*tist church, known as J. D. Rockefel*ler's; he spoke often in the Young Men's Christian association. He had little law business, but made some efforts to get into politics, and ran for assembly on the state democratic ticket. All this gave him a certain prominence. When the time came there were plenty of people who could have testified to his regular habits, apparent piety and quiet daily life. Not the smallest proof of his cunning was the fact that the will which he forged gave the Texas relatives a larger share of the estate than they received under the genuine will. Patrick calculated that this would range the heirs on his side in any probate trouble. He erred, as such cold-blooded murderers are apt to do, in assuming that others were as vile as himself. The Texas relatives stood for the genuine will and were of great use in furnishing testimony as to the past of both men. It is rather a disgraceful commentary upon the law's delays in New York that Patrick should have lived two years and eight months in Sing Sing under sentence of death.

New York's Poisoning Cases.

IT is said that poisoning is, of all forms of murder, the hardest to detect and convict upon. Yet the city of New York has had pretty fair luck in executing poisoners. Carlyle Harris was a medical student and very skillfully made his arrangements for poisoning his girl wife, Helen Potts. But he had the folly to boast to a fellow-student of his skill in such matters. He bought from a druggist certain harmless powders in capsules. Into one of these he put deadly poison; two he retained. The other four, including the poisonous one, he gave his wife. His idea in retaining two was that an analysis of them after the murder would show them harmless and clear him of guilt. His precaution worked the other way. It was a suspicious proceeding, to begin with; then, too, the well-known manner in which druggists put up drugs makes it practically impossible that one powder should differ in constituents from another put up at the same time. Harris was hanged, as the law then was.

Dr. Buchanan was an even more skillful poisoner, but he went the same road. Molineux, the handsome young chemist, whose trial cost New York in one way and another nearly half a million dollars, was convicted but received a new trial by order of the court of appeals and was *upon this occasion ac*quitted. The judge and the district attorney were in the second trial convinced of the futility of dragging out proceedings, as much of the testimony used in the previous case was unavailable, and the rulings of Recorder Goff at the first trial had suffered severely in the appeal.

The Year in Florida.

THE exodus to Florida is the spring sensation in society, as it has been for some years. At the end of the Lenten season a hundred private cars, mostly rented ones, are grouped about the stations in Florida, waiting to be hauled north. And many a fine quarrel is begun by rivalry as to which cars are hauled first, and which ones get the best position in the train, and which refuse to let the servants from other cars pass through to reach some other portion of the train.

The death of Frank Croker has made little difference in the Florida season, though it did sadden the gayety in Ormond for a time. Croker was a son of his father in character, though refined by an education that the elder never enjoyed. He had the true Croker will of iron, the imperiousness that brooked no opposition. He was hardly a favorite in society, but men at least admired his magnificent nerve. His fortune apparently was ample; work was with him merely occasional. He had an interest in a steel firm that does considerable business with the city of New York through the continuing Croker influence; but he paid as little attention to it as the elder Croker *paid to the real estate auction busi*ness of Peter Meyer, which was the ostensible source of his vast wealth.

The beach at Ormond must be one of the finest race course in the world. It is composed entirely of crumbling coquina stone, a product of insects of the coral tribe. Like the coral cliffs of Bermuda, it hardens upon exposure to the air. The fine sloping beach, which elsewhere would be of yielding sand, is here a plane surface of solid stone, a natural macadam that offers but the slightest resistance to the wheels.

The Gayety of Half Society.

THE half of society that remains is gay as ever. It represents perhaps the soberer element, the elder element. The society ball is its public farewell to brilliance before the coming of Lent. But about that time-honored festivity are grouped a number of private affairs like the costume party which young Mr. Hyde has just given, where society matrons and men appeared in extraordinary garb. There are still to come the balls of the Orme Wilsons and the related Gerrys. The "marrying Wilsons" the former are called. By marriage in one generation this family is bonded to the Vanderbilts, the Gerrys, the Astors and to the aristocratic Herberts in England.

The mention of the Astors recalls the matrimonial misadventures of a daughter of the name who was Mrs. Coleman Drayton. The absurd duel talk between her husband and Hallett Alsop Borrowe was followed by her divorce, and, some years after, by her remarriage to an Englishman. As Mrs. Haig she is now one of London's "smart" matrons. Young Coleman Drayton, who recently married Miss Knower, of New York, is of this Drayton family. The young Mrs. Drayton is one of the prettiest brides of the season and popular in her set.

When Miss Catherine Morgan Dix, a daughter of the venerable Dr. Dix, of Trinity, was married in her father's church to Mr. William H. Wheelock, two unusual features were much noted. One of the attendants upon the church wedding was Aunt Millie Gardiner, a colored woman who has been for 65 years a servant in the bride's family. And in the blazing heap of wedding presents at the house a pincushion mounted in silver was prominently displayed. It came from Kitty, the applewoman, who for many years has had a stand in front of St. Paul's church, which belongs to Trinity parish.

Well-wishers like these are worth having.

SPORTS AND ATHLETICS

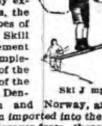
The ancient game of curling has gained many devotees during the present winter. The game is becoming more popular each year, and although of Scotch origin, is now participated in by men of all nationality. Chicago curlers recently began a movement for the organization of the Central Curling association, which will answer the same purpose in the north central states and that part of Canada bordering on the United States as the Grand National Curling *association in the east and the North*western Curling association in the northwest. Like golf and bowling, curling can be participated in, and thoroughly enjoyed by men from 15 to 80 years of age, a feature which largely accounts for the popularity of games of Scotch origin. It is one of the most inexpensive of games to play, the greatest expense being the curling stones, which cost about $18 a pair. Only one pair is needed, and they will last for five or six years. Most of the curling stones used are imported from Scotland. In shape they resemble a small convex cheese and are about a foot in diameter. The bottom of the stone is slightly hollowed out, thus giving the stone an edge on which it runs on the ice. The stones are provided with handles to enable the player to hurl or slide them on the ice with the proper degree of force. Each stone weighs from 35 to 50 pounds, and each player has a pair. The game is played as follows: Sides, or rinks, are made up, consisting of four against four, with a captain, styled a "skip," for each four. A hog line is drawn 21 feet from the tee. If the stones do not pass this line they are dead and pushed off the ice. The brooms, which are in part an emblem of curling, are used to indicate where a stone is to be played and, of course, to sweep the ice. If a stone lacks force the sweepers labor in front of it trying to make the surface so keen and clean that the slight momentum will carry it over to where it is wanted. The principle of the game is simple. The stones of either party are played from one tee to the other, and those found at the conclusion of the round to be nearest the tee count as shots. A game is generally considered 16 ends, but more or fewer may be played. Sixteen ends means playing from from end to end 16 times. The players on one side are followed alternately by the players on the other side, until all of the eight contestants have cast their stones. The efforts of each player are directed by the skip. He indicates what is best to play for and directs the sweeping; he himself plays the last shot at each head. The skip is supposed to be one of the best and most experienced players in a club.

A curler.

Before the invention of dirigible balloons the nearest approach to flying that had been consistently achieved by mankind was found in the long leaps made by experts on skis, the long snowshoes of Scandinavia. Skill in the management of these implements is one of the prized assets of the athletes of Denmark, Sweden and Norway, and the sport has been imported into the United States by emigrants from those countries. National ski tournaments have been held in this country for several years, and the 1905 events are scheduled to be held at Ishpeming, Mich. "Ski races," as conducted at the national tournaments, are not running contests nor long distance walking tests of endurance. A series of hazardous leaps off a "bump" comprise the tests, and the one covering the greatest distance and landing on his feet in good form is adjudged the winner. The Ishpeming slide is constructed so as to allow of a jump of 100 feet. The entries already made for the big tournament give assurance that the best ski riders in the United States will participate. Many of these men have been prize winners at similar contests, conducted under royal auspices, in Norway.



Ski Jumping.

New world's records were established in a ski tournament at Red Wing, Minn., recently. In the long jump, stand or fall, George Thompson, of Red Wing, covered 118 feet, and in the long jump, standing, Gustaf Bye, of Ishpeming, Mich., went 106 feet, both being ahead of all previous records. There were 51 entries from the local club, Ishpeming, Stoughton, Ironwood, Grand Rapids, Ada, and Frederick, Wis. Track conditions were the finest and the ordinary tournament marks were excelled in the trial run.

Pat T. Powers has been reelected president, secretary and treasurer of the Eastern baseball league.

Clark Ball, pugilistic promoter and former manager of Bob Fitzsimmons, is out with a proposition to bring Fitzsimmons and Philadelphia Jack O'Brien together in a finish fight, to be pulled off in Panama. Ball guarantees the fighters $25,000, and says he will deposit a good part of the purse at any time the men agree to sign articles of agreement.

The record of the Legislature for four weeks is less than ten hours' work. Not the hardest part of their task was receiving their salaries in advance. What better argument is there for biennial sessions of the lawmakers?

Yes, "Anxious Reader," those handsome piles of snow through the business section of North avenue, are still where you saw them. All we can say in answer to your second question is that you should not bother Councilman Wilson, chairman of the street committee. He means well.

The advertising man of today must, if he would succeed, take his nose out of collar-boxes and bolts of cloth, stick his head up through the scuttle of the store, and take a good, long look around. If his vision across the housetops encounters the head of his competitor down the street, also sticking through the scuttle, he will realize that he has a fight on his hands.—Store Life.

The requirements for a position on the New York police force seems to be to look wise and not to worry. Criminals are in the habit of surrendering themselves and no extra effort on the part of the sleuths is necessary. The suspect in the Williams murder case, knowing the ironclad rule of the department not to trouble itself, had the courtesy to surrender himself at headquarters. When once under arrest the suspect is honor bound to unburden himself of his crimes as did the nineteen-year old youth who made a clean breast yesterday of the hold ups he had committed during the last six weeks.

Governor Samuel W. Pennypacker, of Pennsylvania, a dignified and learned man who has made himself ridiculous by his insane attacks on the press, has been "called" at last by the Philadelphia Record which offered to allow him to run the paper for twenty-four hours in order to demonstrate to the newspaper fraternity the class of news that should be used. The man who urges the suppression of newspapers declined the offer. It is safe to say that the Governor would be as much of a success as an editor of a daily journal as was the minister who made a fizzle of running a Topeka paper some years ago.

NEW APPLICANTS FOR LIQUOR LICENSES

JOHN GOFF, JAMES SHAY AND JEROME LEARY FILE PETITIONS.

There were three new applicants for liquor licenses at the February meeting of the Common Council, Monday—John Goff, for his hotel on West Front street, and John Shay, for a place on West Third street, which was formerly licensed to Mr. Turner, who at that time was connected with the Eastern Bottling Company. Jerome W. Leary, who was trying to lease the Hotel Roseli, made application for a liquor license for that place, and A. B. Roseli, the present proprietor, also applied for the same place. It is believed that if Mr. Roseli gets a license it may be transferred to Mr. Leary, in case a lease for the hotel can be obtained from the new owner of the property, J. A. Staats. The Shay application for a license was unexpected.

The applications are as follows:

Jerome W. Leary, Charles Schantz, Michael Watson, Jacob Blimm, Bernard Clark, J. A. Staats, Henry Windham, Henry Haurand, A. B. Roseli, John Shay, John J. Goff, A. D. Findlay, Chris. Gloeckler, John Rafferty, Eastern Bottling Company and Frank Linke.

The applications were all referred to the police committee and they will be advertised according to the ordinance governing them. Action will be taken on them so that in cases of renewals or the granting of new licenses business can be commenced on March 1.

Charles Schantz, who now conducts a saloon at 216 Park avenue, applied for a license at 136 Park avenue, the building owned by Marcus Silbert. It appears in the application that Mr. Silbert is one of the signers.

Not D. L. Darby.

In justice to D. L. Darby, correction is made of the report that judgment had been obtained in Justice Clark's court by Stonewall Jackson against C. A. Wood as maker of a note and Mr. Darby as endorser. The Mr. Darby against whom judgment was gotten was Elston Darby and D. L. Darby had no connection with the case.

AMUSEMENTS.

London must be suffering from a painful dearth of theatrical entertainment just now, if one may judge from the list of important English actors at present in America. Edward Terry has closed Terry's Theatre, temporarily, and is appearing at the Princess, New York, in "The House of Burnside," "Sweet Lavender," and "Love in Idleness." Sir Charles Wyndham, Mary Moore, Mrs. Patrick Campbell, Forbes Robertson and Gertrude Elliott all are in this country, and E. S. Willard is on his way here. Beerbohm Tree, Lewis Waller, Arthur Bourchier, George Alexander and Sir Henry Irving have signified their intention of coming. Of the stars who remain in the "right little, tight little isle," a round dozen are touring the provinces. None of the English actors in New York are to return before April, and Mr. Terry remains until June. This comedian, by the way, has scored a genuine success on Broadway, and will stay at the Princess until Spring.

A more than ordinarily strong bill is announced for Proctor's Newark Theatre this week, where the headline position is occupied by the noted actor, Robert Hilliard, who, assisted by a company of clever performers, will present Richard Harding Davis' dramatic sketch, "The Littlest Girl." The Oberstein Tyrolean Troupe, a company of twelve capable musical artists, who have just arrived from Switzerland, should create a sensation. Blind Tom, the phenomenal negro pianist, will make his first appearance in Newark in some years, and will doubtless be found as acceptable as ever. The Brothers Bright, hand-to-hand balancers; Matthews and Ashley, Hebrew comedians; Leo Carillo, a Chinese mimic; Carter and Blueford, singers and dancers; Will Dockrey, a black-face comedian, well known in Newark, and the motion pictures will round out a programme rich and varied.

Among the many and varied theatrical entertainments now going on in the New York theatres, that which seems to have caught the popular fancy more emphatically than any other is the new play, "The Woman in the Case," in which Blanche Walsh has scored a personal triumph at the Herald Square Theatre. "An ovation of such spontaneity and force," says the New York Sun, "has not been heard this season—perhaps in many a season." The reception of the play by both public and press has been one of unanimous enthusiasm. It is conceded by everyone to be the biggest success Clyde Fitch has written since "The Climbers," and it is the general impression that in "The Woman in the Case" Mr. Fitch has really written his greatest play. It has the happy distinction of pleasing all parts of the house, the applause from the gallery on the first night being just as vociferous as that from the lower floor. It is splendidly staged by Managers Wagenhals and Kemper and is presented by a brilliant cast of players which includes Robert Drouet, Dorothy Dorr, George Fawcett, Samuel Edwards and Eleanor Carey.

Robert Edeson has scored a popular success of unusual dimensions in William C. DeMille's comedy drama, "Strongheart," at the Hudson Theatre. The popular enthusiasm has been more than equalled by the critical approval bestowed upon star, play and production. "The best piece of acting that Mr. Edeson has ever given—'Strongheart' a real romance," is the praise bestowed by the Evening Sun. "No warmer greeting was ever given a new drama—'Strongheart,' the most attractive hero in town—Mr. Edeson made a distinct and the play scored," is the enthusiasm of the Evening Telegram.

William Burress, who, as Dr. Popoff, in "It Happened in Nordland," at the Lew Field Theatre, New York, is supposedly very deaf, says to Mr. Field: "So! You can't convict me, because I don't know what you say!" Lew Fields replies: "Of course not! You are too deaf!" Burress says: "Can't you send a deaf man to prison?" Fields says: "No. It is against the law to convict a man without a hearing." The other night they got the conversation twisted. Burress said: "A hearing is against the law, isn't it?" Fields replied, impromptu: "A hearing is usually a very long brief, which nobody hears and nobody reads. Brief is the legal name for something which is so long and gets so tired that you can't get it or the judge awake with an alarm clock." Former Judge Alton B. Parker, who occupied one of the boxes with Simeon E. Baldwin, of the Supreme Court of Errors of Connecticut, admitted afterward that Mr. Fields' definition was very accurate.

Camp Wolfe Founder Dead.

George E. Wolfe, president of the Fresh Air Mission that has for several years conducted the Fresh Air Camp for city children at Westfield, who died at his home, in New York, Sunday, was buried Thursday. His death will be a severe loss to the Fresh Air Camp enterprise.

LITERARY.

A few features stand out prominently in the Review of Reviews table of contents for February: the editorial treatment of the Russian situation up to and including the outbreak of January 22 at St. Petersburg; the review of the Russo Japanese war, apropos of the fall of Port Arthur and the close of a full year of hostilities; the discussion of Panama Canal problems by Minister John Barrett; the article on "Theodore Thomas and the Development of American Music," by W. J. Henderson; "Street Railway Fares in the United States," by Edward Dana Durand; "The Industrial and Commercial Outlook in Venezuela," by G. M. L. Brown; "Baltimore, One Year After the Fire," by Day Allen Willey; "Manhattan Bridge: A Lesson in Municipal Aesthetics," by G. W. Harris; "The Japanese Art of Jiu-Jitsu," by H. Irving Hancock; "What Justifies Intervention in War?" by Amos S. Hershey; "General Stoessel: Russian Defender of Port Arthur," and "What the People Read in Scandinavia." There is the usual comment on topics of the day in "The Progress of the World," and the department of "Leading Articles of the Month."

The announcements for the March Red Book promise a most attractive issue of that attractive magazine. Among the authors whose names will appear are William Hamilton Osborne, Elizabeth Starr Chetfield, E. F. Stearns, Wilbur D. Nesbit, Una Hudson, Neil Munro, Constance Morris, Roy E. Norton, Harriet A. Nash, Julia Truitt Bishop and several others equally well known.

Frederick Palmer, writing in Collier's for February 4, refers to William H. Taft by saying he combines with a rare sense of justice and executive simplicity an urbanity that seems to impress upon transplanted Spanish civilizations the wisdom of things which they would resent if proposed by others. He can grant a concession in a way that immediately gets a concession in response. We may yet provide the Secretary of War with a transport and expect him to make an annual tour of our new possessions as a Secretary of Peace. In Panama he heard everybody's story! ministers', generals', officials', merchants'. Then he and President Amador "got together." The Dingley tariff was taken off the zone, and amicable agreement was arrived at.

The Era Magazine for February contains the true story of Tom Lawson, the surprising facts in the picturesque career of a remarkable man, written without prejudice or bias. The article is illustrated with a score of beautiful photographs of the magnificent Lawson country home, and the interesting family of the financier. The fourth of the series of Life Insurance exposures by Henry Shedd Beardsley is more sensational, and contains information more appalling than any previous installment.

Collier's calls attention to the inaugural address of Governor Stokes of New Jersey on January 17, in which he showed that New Jersey had a balance of $2,940,918 98 in the treasury at the close of the fiscal year. She collected from corporations $3,351,543 69 or nearly 78 per cent. of the entire revenues of the State. She did not raise a single cent by direct taxation; yet she was able not only to meet all the usual expenses of a State government, but to develop a road system embracing one-third of all the macadamized State roads of the Union.

The February number of The Era, contains the best fiction of the month. Among the notable contributions is a story by Edith Rickert, author of "The Reapers," "Strayed a Princess" is the name of the charming tale by this author in the February Era. Other attractive features are "Slivers," a story, by Maitland Leroy Osborne; "The Penalty," by Joe Woodworth; "A Quotation of Honor," by P. Hamilton Goodsell; "Viola Allen—the Woman," by a member of her company; "Without Benefit of Training," by Rita Soberman, and others.

The number of depositors in the savings banks of the United States has doubled in the last seventeen years. The total amount of their deposits has increased from $1,235,247,271, in 1887, to $2,935,204,845, during the year 1903. The official statistics, for 1903, show 7,305,228 individual depositors. About one-half of the amount deposited represents the savings of the wage-earning class. The figures here given not only show an increasing prosperity among those of small incomes, but they also indicate an increasing frugality. Of the total deposits of the entire country not less than 38.5 per cent. are in the State of New York.—From "Success."

Mr. Watts Not a Rev.

In reporting the funeral of George Williams at Watchung, Sunday, George Watts, of Chatham street, who offered prayer, was referred to as a reverend. Mr. Watts is not a clergyman and took part in the service to represent the Gallia Council of Junior Americans.

ALL WIRES UNDERGROUND

Seek to Make P. S. C. Bury Its Light Wires in Borough.

DISCUSSION IN COUNCIL

Charles A. Reed Requested by Mayor to Present Line of Action Against Company to Bring About Remedy.

In the line of other improvements of which he has been an advocate of, Mayor Smalley, at the regular Borough Council meeting, Friday, recommended that immediate action be taken towards the removal of the unsightly electric light poles in the principal thoroughfares in the borough. He thought that the Public Service Corporation should be asked to place its electric light wires underground.

Mr. Smalley referred to the heavy voltage carried on the wires and the danger to life possible in high winds and storms. He also stated that there are many times during the year when lights are out in various parts of the borough and that the residents are not getting what they pay for.

He argued that if the Public Service Corporation would not make the improvement the borough could give a contract to another company that would and he thought the time had arrived for prompt action. Councilman Humble contended that if the Public Service Corporation was compelled to put the wires underground a higher rate would be charged for light.

Counsel Reed said that he believed the corporation would be glad to get its wires underground, and that while the first cost is heavy, the expense of maintenance is far less than under the present system. He cited an illustration in the work of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company which is now busily engaged in burying its wires, making it less likely for competition.

In concluding this discussion, the Mayor requested Mr. Reed to prepare some line of action to be presented at the next meeting of the Borough Council, which will be on Feb 24.

MUNICIPAL LIGHTING BEING AGITATED HERE

COUNCILMANIC COMMITTEE TO CONSIDER SUBJECT THURSDAY NIGHT.

Thomas Watson, city clerk of Passaic, in a communication, to the Common Council Monday requested co-operation in securing favorable legislative action permitting cities in the State to establish municipal lighting plants and for the placing of electric light wires in conduits underground.

A resolution adopted by the Passaic Common Council and giving cities the right to issue bonds for this work, accompanied the communication, and an early reply was requested. The matter was referred to the committee on public affairs and the committee will hold a meeting Thursday night to discuss the question.

BOAT CLUB TO DINE AT HOTEL ST. GEORGE

WANAMASSA BOYS TO HOLD ANNUAL BANQUET IN NEW YORK.

The Wanamassa Boat Club, of which several young men of this city and the borough are members, has arranged for a meeting and banquet to be held at the Hotel St. George, Broadway and 12th street, New York city, on Thursday night, February 16, at 7:30. The banquet will be served after the meeting in a private dining room! During the summer he club has a camp at a place near Asbury Park called "Camp Wanamassa," and it has been a great success. The Plainfield members are Fred Martin, Richard F. Randolph, G. Howell Whitney, Edward Hardingham, Edward Hobby, Percival Phillips, Walter Sampson, Stryker Hoagland and Robin Hamilton.

Fire Losses Covered.

The occupants of the double house on Manning avenue, which was partially destroyed by fire Sunday night, were Mrs. Lydia G. Larisen, in No. 79, and Mrs. Mary E. Layman, in No. 81 Mrs. Layman's furniture, which was totally destroyed, was insured for $1,500. Mrs. Larisen's loss was fully covered.

Salvationists Plan Barracks.

The Salvation Army is securing funds to purchase a two story brick building on Second street to be used as a barracks. Already $1,500 has been subscribed and when $1,800 more is collected the Salvationists will get possession of the building. Charles W. McCutchen has subscribed $300 and William S. Tyler $50.

HOSPITAL DONATION CUT

Common Council Reduces the Appropriation on Request.

SALARIES ARE RAISED

Overseer of the Poor and Fire Captains Get Increase in Pay—Kelly a Regular Patrolman.

The Board of Governors of Muhlenberg Hospital in a communication to the Common Council at its regular meeting, Monday, made a request for the withdrawal of the recent proposition whereby the hospital was to care for the city's indigent poor for the sum of $1,500 annually and another proposition offering to do this work for $1,000 was substituted and adopted in accordance with an ordinance, also passed, which provided for the manner in which the patients should be cared for and treated. Such persons going to the hospital must have an order from the city physician, mayor or city judge.

Residents of Belvidere and Leland avenues petitioned the Common Council for an extension of the sanitary sewer in that part of the city, and John Ross, owner of the building corner of North avenues, where a large plate glass was broken one Sunday some months ago, as he claims by a stone as the result of city employes working in the street nearby, asked the Common Council whether it proposed to settle for the damage. He desired this information before starting a suit through his counsel, Charles J. McNabb. The city previously denied being responsible for the break in the glass and so informed Mr. Ross. Both of these petitions were referred to the proper committees for further consideration.

Constable John Manley's bond was received, approved and filed, and the appointment by the Mayor of John W. Kelly as a regular patrolman was confirmed. Building Inspector Doane reported that during January nine building permits were granted.

Mr. Tolles, chairman of the finance committee, reported back several petitions asking for the cancelling and adjustments of taxes, but acting upon the advice of the corporation counsel, he moved that they be refused. Such petitions were received from Brooks Carson, Francis B. Thorn, Mrs. L. C. Hurtt and Alfred H. Lawton.

Mr. Higham, chairman of the committee on public affairs, presented a letter from Col. E. W. Hine, of the Public Service Corporation, in which his attention had been called to a violation in the ordinance under which trolley cars are operated. Blanchard Huntington Turner had complained that the conductors would not stop the cars at the corner of East Second street and Raymond avenue, and Mr. Hine replied that the violation would cease.

On a motion offered by Mr. Murphy lights were ordered placed at the corner of Dunellen and Compton avenues and at the corner of Hunter and Evona avenues.

Mr. Tolles offered a resolution, which was adopted, providing for an appropriation not to exceed $100 to purchase a typewriter for the use of the city clerk's office. Another resolution by the same member, requested that Assemblyman E. S. Coyne arrange with Assembly Clerk D. E. McIntyre to have copies of all new bills sent to the city clerk's office as soon as passed, the expense for this work not to exceed $25. This resolution was also adopted.

Still another resolution by Mr. Tolles fixed the salary of Overseer of the Poor Ayers at $600 a year and those of the captains of the fire department at $840. The other salaries, except those of the assessors, which were previously fixed, will remain the same as last year. This resolution was adopted.

Mr. Tolles called up the ordinance providing for the appointment of sewer commissioners to assess benefits and damages and it was adopted. A resolution offered by Mr. Wilson and adopted, provided that all money in the hands of the city treasury, not to exceed $800 and which is not otherwise appropriated, be used for the work of removing snow from the streets.

Another resolution by Mr. Wilson authorized the street and sewer committee to make such repairs to streets and sewers which shall not exceed in expense the amount appropriated to it by the Common Council.

A petition from residents of McDowell and West Third streets asking for a hydrant there, was referred to the fire and buildings committee.

Instructive Course of Lectures.

A course of instructive and entertaining lectures has been arranged to be given at Truell Inn on the dates March 8, 16, 23 and 30, beginning at 3 o'clock each afternoon. They will be given on different topics by Mrs. Maude Howe Elliott, Mrs. Hugh Frasee, Miss Katherine Johnston, who will recite, and Mrs. Florence Howe Hall.

AMUSEMENTS.

"The Money Makers," George Rollett's amusing farce comedy in which Ida Conquest scored very strongly at one of the Broadway playhouses within the past several weeks is to be the offering of the Proctor Stock Company at the Fifth Avenue Theatre next week. The original scenic equipment has been secured and many original effects will be added by the artists employed by Mr. Proctor, and the performance will be one well worth seeing. The piece will be cast with all the favorites including Edwin Arden, Miss Isabelle Evesson, Edmund Lyons, Miss Annie Ward Tiffany, Wallace Erskine, H. Dudley Hawley, John Westley and many others. The vaudeville numbers before and between the acts will be unusually strong and will include the twelve "Wood Nymphs," who created such a sensation at Mr. Proctor's Twenty-third Street Theatre several weeks ago, with their clever singing and dancing, and by the elaborate scenic setting of their act. The Atnos Family, four European jugglers and head-to-head balancers have a unique specialty which is greatly enhanced by the fact that two of the performers are children. Hughey Dougherty, the famous oldtime minstrel who is today even better than ever, will offer a monologue over-brimming with original and up-to-date humor.

New Retail Firm.

Leonard B. VranCamp and John A. Franklin, who have been employed by Hill & Shupp, have formed a partnership under the firm name of VanCamp & Franklin and have leased the store and basement, at the corner of Front and Somerset streets, formerly occupied by the Courier-News, and as soon as alterations are made, which will be about March 1, will open a carpet and upholstery store. Mattress making will be a specialty.

CENTRAL RENUMBERING ALL PASSENGER CARS

JERSEY ROAD GETTING RID OF ITS ANCIENT EQUIPMENT.

The Central Railroad of New Jersey is about to start the work of renumbering its passenger equipment. This is no easy job to handle, but it has finally been decided to use a metal plate with the new number painted on same and place the plate over the old number of the car; this will be allowed to remain on the car until it is sent to the shop for general repairs, when the number plate will be removed, and the number applied direct to the car The equipment will be numbered according to class. Men were started out on the road February 1 to change all the cars that they can get hold of, and others will be changed at the shop. The work will be in charge of the mechanical engineer of the road, B. P. Flory. The Central Railroad is getting rid of some of its old passenger equipment that has seen better days. These are bought up generally and fitted up as "Jim Crow" cars for use in the South.

E. B. Maynard, of North avenue, has the reputation of conducting one of the best barber shops in the State. Every effort is made toward absolute cleanliness.

Charles L. Stanley, the North avenue florist, secures all his flowers from his own greenhouses on South avenue, which are among the largest in this section of the State.

WOOD IN CUSTODY, IDENTIFIED

Jacob Blimm, Jr., Recognizes Pollack's Grandson Who is Suspected of Committing the Crime, as the Man Who Left His Hotel on Morning of the Murder.

MOTIVE BELIEVED TO HAVE BEEN ROBBERY

Extradition Papers Are Now Being Secured — When Locked up in Police Headquarters Physician's Examination Shows Prisoner May be Suffering from Aphasia.

Telling a disjointed story and with his mustache removed, George H. Wood, who is wanted in connection with the murder of George Williams, on the Coontown road, Thursday, was locked up in New York Police Headquarters Friday. Wood seemed to be mentally disordered, and Dr. George M. Ball, after an examination, said he was not under the influence of drugs, but was apparently suffering from aphasia.

Chief Kiely and Jacob Blimm, Jr., went to New York on the 2:14 train the next morning, the latter positively identified Wood as the man who registered at his father's hotel as "George H. Wood" and who disappeared from the place on the morning of the murder.

Accompanied by his wife and a brother-in-law, Frederick Bischoff, of No. 447 West Twenty-seventh street, Wood walked into the West Twentieth street police station at half-past 9 o'clock last night. A sergeant called up the Central Office Detective Bureau and asked if Wood was wanted. The Detective Bureau called up Chief of Police Kiely, in this city, who read off a description of the alleged murderer of Williams. It tallied with the description of Wood except as to age. Wood says he is twenty-four years old, but the men who saw the supposed murderer of Williams thought the man was thirty-five years old. The murderer was described as having a mustache. Wood was clean shaven, but he said he removed his mustache on Monday.

Wood, his wife and brother-in-law were put in a patrol wagon and taken to Police Headquarters. Wood said that last week he met a man named "Mac," an ironworker, who asked him to go to Scarsdale, Pa., where $1,000 could be obtained for business purposes. Wood said he started for Scarsdale, but does not remember reaching that place, but felt positive he was in Trenton.

It was thought Wood was under the influence of drugs, on account of his disconnected way of talking, and he was taken before Dr. Ball. The latter said Wood had not been drugged, but that he seemed to have some mental disorder not unlike aphasia.

When the police asked Wood what became of his valise and the slouch hat he wore when at Watchung, he said he had lost them. There is no doubt but what the valise found in Blimm's hotel belonged to Wood, yet he insists that he has not the faintest recollection of being in Plainfield. The case against him will have to be proven by the Somerset County authorities and the chances are that the suspect will be brought to Somerville as soon as the legal formalities have been gone through with.

The case now rests with County Detective Totten, of Somerville, and he is taking steps to have the prisoner extradited, without requesting him to waive the legal formalities.

In Watchung and Warrenville, yesterday afternoon, it was claimed by the residents that they knew Wood was the man that drove Williams, early Thursday night, but there is little doubt but what the first he was connected with the case was when Eugene Wood, a local hackman, informed Chief Kiely about driving a man to Warrenville Tuesday. Wood said he had read of the murderer's description in the papers and that it tallied in every respect with a fare that he had picked up at Blimm's Farmers hotel on Somerset street and taken over the mountains. Proceeding to the hotel, the chief was informed by Proprietor Blimm that the hackman's passenger was George H. Wood, of New York; also that he had not returned but that his valise was upstairs. The chief appropriated this and searched it at headquarters early yesterday afternoon. Almost the first thing that caught his gaze was a box partly filled with .32 calibre cartridges and a bundle of letters heads with the heading: "Wood & Stevenson, iron setters and erectors; residence 576 West 131st street."

Convinced that Wood was the man wanted, the chief immediately sent out a general alarm for his arrest and though the New York police said they would look out for developments on their end, they treated his request as though they were putting themselves out to do him a personal favor. Even last night when word was brought to them by an enterprising newspaper reporter that Wood could be found in the Twenty-seventh street house, they asserted they had no authority to arrest him and that it was none of their business. When he walked in the station of his own accord it was not until they had called up Chief Kiely that they decided to hold him.

After sending out the alarm, Chief Kiely proceeded to Watchung and informed all the searchers to look for Wood and by every possible means spread his description. It was an easy task for the latter as Wood is known throughout the entire section, being a grandson of Mrs. Pollack, whose place he was trying to reach, and having been born and raised at Warrenville. It was believed near Millington that the murderer had never gotten far away from the scene of the crime and the posses remained out until word that Wood was in custody reached them this morning. A strange thing in connection with Wood's being known in that section is the fact that he was not recognized by Williams when he was asked to act as driver. Williams belonged in Warrenville originally and the one knew a great deal about the other.

Coroner Toms empanelled a jury Thursday and in its presence made an examination of the body at Williams' home, assisted by Dr. William Long, of Somerville. It was found that the bullet had entered the back on the left side, sped through the lung and then directly through the heart, showing that death must have been almost instantaneous. The bullet was taken out and found to be of .32 calibre, the same as those found in Wood's valise. The jury took no further action and adjourned indefinitely. It is composed of Israel V. Adams, Peter B. Friday, John B. Mundy, Frank Winn, Frank Jennings and William Miller, nearly all of whom are Warrenville residents.

Chief Kiely declares that his theory of the murder is robbery.

"Wood needed money and he started for Pollack's to get it some way. He believed Williams was a prosperous grocer; that he must have money on his person and shot him. He evidently was frightened off before searching the pockets. When he left Watchung he wore a fedora hat; when captured he had a cap which he told me today he bought in Plainfield. He must have carried it with him and if so, why? unless he was up to deviltry."

Wood was born and raised at Warrenville. His father, George H. Wood, now dead, was respected highly by his neighbors, who had no such liking for his son. Fifteen years ago Wood left Warrenville and went to New York. He came back to Plainfield from time to time, and spent two years working on his grandmother's farm.

That was three years ago. Seven years ago he married Viola Whitten, the daughter of George Whitten, who used to be the village schoolmaster. Whitten hasn't seen much of his son-in-law since and hasn't got along with him very well, according to the story he told.

The A. Berry's Entertain.

ROUTINE WORK OF COUNCIL

Policemen Injured by Negroes Are Allowed Full Pay.

ONE APPOINTMENT

F. J. Emmons Named As a Marshal —Hospital Paid for Caring for Officers—Cost of Cleaning Snow.

Marshals J. William Klein and Joseph Flack, who through an assault committed on them Christmas Eve by four negroes, Mayor Smalley announced at the meeting of the Borough Council, Friday, have been provided for by the borough. Marshal Klein is allowed $60 for the month and a half he has been off duty. He is now ready to go to work again, having recovered from his injuries. Mr. Smalley also stated that the borough would pay the hospital $10 for ambulance service on Christmas Eve and $10 for the care of Klein at the institution. Out of the sum allowed Klein he is to pay his doctor's bill.

In the case of Marshal Flack, he is allowed regular pay while off duty. His physician, the Mayor stated, said that it would be another month before he could return to work.

Councilman VanArsdale offered a resolution, which was adopted, which provided for the payment of the bill presented by Muhlenberg Hospital for the service of the ambulance and the care of Marshal Klein.

Councilman Arnold, chairman of the street committee, reported the expenditure of $196.68 during the month for the removal of snow. In reply to a question by the Mayor relative to the trolley company's share of this expense, he said that the had sent the company a bill for its share of the work on Somerset street.

Mayor Smalley appointed Fred J. Emmons a regular marshal and the appointment was confirmed by the Council.

Councilman Lee reported on the request of residents for an electric light at the corner of Jefferson avenue and Greenbrook road and on his motion the light was granted.

As chairman of the commitee on marshals, Councilman VanArsdale stated that during the past month there was one arrest and $8 collected in fines. Mr. Arnold offered a resolution providing for the payment of one Somerset street improvement bond of $500. This was adopted.

The question was raised by Mr. Lee as to whether it would not be well to pay off some other borough notes, after the bills are paid, inasmuch as there is now a balance of $1,000 on hand. Mr. Arnold offered a resolution to that effect, but it was not seconded and nothing was done about it. However, this money can be used for that purpose without the adoption of a resolution.

In conclusion Mr. Arnold moved that when the Council adjourn it be to meet on Friday night, February 24, at which time the annual reports will be presented and the annual budget for the coming year fixed. Mr. Lee wanted to know if there would be any *farewell speeches, and the Mayor re*plied that there would be a meeting of the Council in March, prior to the spring election, March 14. and that unless all signs fail there would be something doing at the first meeting in March.

Mr. VanArsdale made a suggestion that it would be wise to place red glass about the electric lights wherever fire alarm boxes are located, similar to Plainfield's system, and the other members believed that such an improvement would be an excellent one. It will be discussed at the next meeting.

Fifteen Years Married.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Leithenser, of East Second street, observed the fifteenth anniversary of their marriage on Thursday night and in honor of the event about fifty friends and neighbors were entertained. The celebrants received a number of gifts. Mr. and Mrs. Leithenser were married in this city Feb. 2, 1890. Mrs. Leithenser was formerly Miss Christina Denckian and she is the daughter of Mrs. Charles Denckian, of Fairview avenue.

Co. K's Washington Trip.

Major James E. Bell, of the District of Columbia National Guard, has requested General George H. Harries to make provision for the accommodation of Company K, Second Regiment, of this city, commanded by Captain William B. Martin, and Company L, Second Regiment, of Princeton, for the inauguration. Both organizations will take part in the inaugural parade.

Prize for Essay on Patriotism.

Continental Chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, at its meeting held at the home of Mrs. David P. Hall on Wednesday, voted to give a prize of $5 in gold to any pupil in the public school writing the best essay on some patriotic subject. The Chapter anticipates holding an entertainment in the spring for the benefit of the Washington Rock fund.

INDICT WILCOX

Westfield Man Who Shot Young Darling Must Answer Manslaughter Charge.

HIS BAIL IS $5,000

Thomas Wearren Held for Obtaining Goods From Boice, Runyon & Co., Under False Pretense.

The prisoners against whom indictments were found by the Union County Grand Jury were arraigned before Judge Vail at Elizabeth, last Monday, to plead to indictments found against them.

Among those were Harold M. Wilcox, of Westfield, indicted for manslaughter in the shooting of young John Darling on Hallowe'en. Darling and a number of other children were playing about the Wilcox home at the time of the tragedy.

Mr. Wilcox plead not guilty and was released on $5,000 bail to appear for trial on Tuesday, February 21.

Thomas Wearren, of this city, charged with fraud in obtaining goods from Boice, Runyon & Co., on false pretences, was also arraigned and plead not guilty. His trial was fixed for February 21.

There were thirty-nine indictments in all.

PARK AVE. WIDENING PETITION IN COUNCIL

Property Owners Ask That Width of Street From Second to Bridge Be Increased.

HEARING DAY IS SET

PUBLIC TO VOICE VIEWS ON SUBJECT ON MARCH 6.

Sycamore Street Between Fourth and Fifth Streets May Also be Widened—New Building Lines.

The Plainfield Trust Company, in view of its proposed action to erect a handsome new building at the corner of Park avenue and Second street, as well as Charles W. McCutchen and Boice, Runyon & Co., also interested propery-owners in that vicinity, petitioned the Common Council, last Monday, to take up the question of widening Park avenue from Second street to the railroad bridge, allowing an additional ten feet on the southwesterly side of the avenue. They asked that commissioners be appointed to assess benefits and damages and that the street and sidewalk be laid to proper grade. In doing this the petitioners stated that it was not their intention to waive their rights to receive benefits and they did not intend to donate land for the purpose without due compensation.

Later in the evening Mr. Wilson, chairman of the street committee, offered an ordinance affecting this petition, but at the request of the corporation counsel, it was referred back to the street committee after the first reading, that it may be corrected in a few particulars before final adoption. This ordinance also provides for the establishment of a building line.

In this connection Mr. Wilson offered several ordinances which will establish building lines on Watchung avenue, and West Second street, between Park avenue and Liberty street. Public hearings will be granted on these at the meeting to be held Monday night, March 6.

In the case of Watchung avenue from the railroad to East Sixth street and Crescent avenue, the side-line is established sixteen feet from the curb line, allowing a twelve foot sidewalk and in West Second street, between Park avenue and Madison avenue, the side-line is established 12.25 feet wide, and from Madison avenue to Liberty street, the side-line is established 12.75 feet from the curb line, allowing a width of 9.75 feet for the sidewalk.

Mr. Wilson also presented a map and an ordinance of providing for the widening of Sycamore street, between Fourth and Fifth streets, to a width of fifty feet, twenty-five each side the centre line of the street. The lands to be taken in making this improvement are owned by Elizabeth Chapin and Charles H. Hand. The ordinance was adopted on first and second readings and ordered advertised, and a public hearing will be granted on Monday night, March 6.

Another matter introduced by Mr. Wilson provided for the preparation of plans for installing additional sewage beds at the sewage farm, owing to the great number of connections being made to the system. He stated that the cost of preparing plans would not cost over $25.

TWO FIRES IN SAME HOUSE

Second Blaze Entirely Destroys Chas. Harris' Home.

THE LOSS IS $2,200

Occupant Supposed to Have Perished in Flames Until He is Located a Mile Away.

Five hours after Chief Doane and No. 3 hose company had left the home of Charles Harris on McDowell street, Saturday night, where they had extinguished a slight fire on the first floor, caused by the nearness of a stove to a wall, flames again broke out and the entire structure was destroyed. No one was in the house when the second blaze began but for nearly an hour it was believed that Harris had been burned to death and it was only when he was located a mile away that Chief Doane and the supposed victim's friends breathed easy.

The first fire was discovered by the family at 10 o'clock and a telephone alarm was sent in to headquarters. Chief Doane and No. 3 company responded. They found the blaze to be smoldering in a partition which had become overheated from a stove, and took every precaution to extinguish it thoroughly. They ripped out the wall all about the spot and thoroughly drenched with water and chemicals the woodwork in the vicinity. The Chief is positive that not a spark remained when he went away but as a safeguard he advised Harris to keep a close watch through the night for any further outbreak.

Harris and his family were about to retire when the former became uneasy and he decided to take his wife and children to the home of a relative on West Fourth street. near Rock avenue. It was 1 o'clock Sunday morning when he returned to McDowell street and the house was all right then, but at that time he, too, decided not to remain and he went back to where he had placed the family. Patrolman Saffron passed the house twice before 3 o'clock and it was all right but at 3:30 a neighbor was awakened by a crackling and looking out of a window, saw that the structure was wrapped in flames.

A telephone alarm was sent from John Haskard's home across the street and Chief Doane and No. 3 company again went to the scene. No. 3's combination wagon became stuck in a snowdrift within one block of the blazing house and it was not until No. 2 hose wagon came up in response to an alarm sent in from box 49 by Patrolman Saffron, that any water was thrown on the flames. Thirteen hundred feet of hose had to be laid in and the pressure was strenghtened by the steamer, but to no purpose. The fire had such headway that only the brick chimney was left standing.

The building was owned by former Senator Walsh, of German Valley, and was valued at $1,200, fully insured. Harris carried $1,000 insurance on his furniture, which was also a total loss.

Neighbors who knew that Harris had taken his family away but had decided to come back, told Chief Doane that he must certainly have been burned to death, as he could not be found. This was the supposition, until Chief Howard Woolston, of the North Plainfield department, and John Kriney volunteered to go to the West Fourth street house and see if he was there. Harris answered their ring on the door-bell to receive the news that his home had been destroyed.

MISSION BAND ELECTS.

Trinity Reformed Church Society's Annual Meeting.

Miss Lillian A. Force was re-elected president of the Young Women's Mission Board, of Trinity Reformed church, at the annual meeting Thursday afternoon. The other officers are: Vice president, Miss Mabel Wilson; recording secretary, Mrs. H. F. Crawford; corresponding secretary, Mrs. William Olmsted; treasurer, Mrs. Frank Pearson.

The regular routine business was transacted and the reports were received for the year. The treasurer's report was an exceedingly gratifying one, showing a balance on hand of $86.69. Among other business considerations, the arrangements were made for a supper to be held on February 23 and 24, in the church parlors. More definite plans will be formulated at a future meeting.

Rev. Dr. Cornelius Schenck, pastor, was present at the meeting and made an address of congratulation and commendation upon the work of the Band.

Employing Union Labor.

Owing to the inability of S. P. Hoffman, of Duer street, who had the contract to erect the new buildings on Watchung avenue, near Second street, for Charles H. Hand and J. P. Homan, to complete the same, he being quite ill, Mr. Hand has taken up the work and will complete it with union mechanics. Mr. Hoffman was a non-union mechanic and he employed similar assistants.

NIGGERS, NOT GENTLEMEN

So Prosecutor Griggs Stigmatizes Four Colored Prisoners.

NOW AWAIT SENTENCE

New Trials to be Asked for by the Defendants Counsel on Friday.

Convicted for the second time on a charge of assault with intent to kill, *together with a third for simple as*sault, James Tems, Whit Tunstall, Lee Wells and Thomas Henderson will appear for sentence in the Somerset county court before Judge Schenck, Friday. A long term of imprisonment stares Tunstall in the face while the others may get off with easier and varying terms through the recommendation of the juries for mercy in the two graver convictions.

The color line was so tightly drawn in the trial that because Mr. Swackhamer referred to the negroes as "the gentlemen charged with the crime" and designated them as "Mr. Tunstall, Mr. Tems, Mr. Hunt and Mr. Henderson," in pleading their case to the jury, he was rebuked by County Prosecutor James Griggs, who said to the jury: "They are not gentlemen. They are only four common Southern niggers, who brought their blood lust to the North with them and sought to kill four white men because they were courageous enough to stop their disorderly conduct on a public thoroughfare."

The return of the jury with a verdict Monday afternoon, practically ended proceedings against the Plainfield colored men who attacked the North Plainfield policemen, Christmas eve, but there is a possibility that they may be commenced all over again. The negroes are represented individually by three local lawyers, Messrs. Swackhamer, DeMeza and Angleman, and it was said by all that an application for a new trial would be made on the ground that new evidence in favor of the prisoners had been secured. If Judge Schenck deems it of enough importance and grants the request, the proceedings just ended will be set at naught; if not, sentence will be pronounced and they will begin their terms.

SHURTS RESIGNS.

Dungan and Frech Candidates to Succeed Him as Democratic County Chairman.

Chairman Jacob Shurts, of Somerville; John S. Everett, of Neshanic, and M. Mount Oorle, of Branchburg, resigned as members of the Somerset County Democratic Executive Committee, held at Somerville, on Saturday. Mr. Shurts resigned because of ill health.

Former Freeholder Hoagland was elected to succeed Mr. Oorle and Nelson Y. Dungan and John A. Frech were nominated for the chairmanship. The vote was a tie and further action was deferred until a larger attendance of the committee. James Flynn was elected a member to succeed Frank D. Cramer, of North Branch, who died recently.

Police Seek Beggers.

The attention of the Organized Aid has been called to the case of a strong looking white man begging from house to house and having cards which read as follows: "Being sick with consumption and in destitute circumstances, I am forced to ask for charity. Hoping you will please assist me. I am, yours truly, John B. Stafford." Any one to whom he makes an appeal will confer a favor on the public by at once sending word to the police station that he may be arrested for begging. The city provides a home for such people that are compelled to beg.

When you buy coal of V. W. Nash, of Park avenue, you always get the best and at the lowest market prices.

An inspection of Marchant Brothers' plant will assure you of the fact that the best care is taken with the preparation of their milk and dairy products. The delivery system is perfect.

ON TRACK OF THE MURDERER

No Motive Yet Found for George Williams Being Slain, Neither Robbery Nor Revenge Considered As the Purpose of the Crime Which Arouses the Community.

POLICE NOW SEEK TO ARREST GEORGE H. WOOD

General Alarm Sent Out for a Cousin of William Pollack, Whose Description Tallies With the Murderer's—Suspected Man's Movements—Clever Work of Chief Kiely, Who Hunts Murderer.

(From Daily Press, February 3)

Cleverly working up a clue that had been furnished him by a local hackman, Chief Kiely this afternoon reached the conclusion that the murderer of George Williams is George H. Wood, of the firm of Wood & Stevenson, iron workers and riggers. New York, and that his residence is at 376 West 131st street. He had been staying at Blimm's hotel on Somerset street for the past week and going to the hostelry at 2 o'clock this afternoon Chief Kiely appropriated his valise and all other belongigs.

Wood's valise contain half a box of .32 calibre cartridges and other articles which convinced him that Wood is the man. A general alarm is now being sent out for Wood and the New York police have been instructed to go to his home.

Again later today it was learned that Wood is a cousin of the Mr. Pollack, whose place the murderer said he was trying to reach.

Apparently without motive or previous intent, the cold-blooded murder of George Williams, the Watchung grocer, on the Coontown road yesterday morning, is the most mysterious case of its kind the Somerset County authorities have ever had to contend with. Seated in his sleigh, driving a stranger to the Pollack place near Millington, a revolver of heavy calibre was pressed against his back on the left side and a bullet was sent through a vital spot in the region of the heart, killing him instantly. Robbery was evidently not the motive, as his overcoat had not been unbuttoned and money and checks were still in the inside pockets; there is almost positive certainty that there had been no quarrel and up until the time that Williams was engaged by his slayer to carry him on the trip, it is an assured fact that they had never met before.

While the echoes from the pistol crack were still resounding through the deep woods wherein the crime was committed, the murderer leaped from the sleigh backwards and walking this way for perhaps fifty feet, strode up the road to the Pollack place a mile off, entered the barn on the premises, came out again in the rear and made his way to the Millington station of the D. L. and W. Railroad, where all trace of him was lost. Who is he? Where did he come from? Why did he kill Williams? How did he know of the Pollack place and the way to the Millington station unless he was acquainted in that section? And why should he have wanted to get to Pollack's? are questions that no one can answer at this time. Watchung residents and those at Warrenville, where Williams' parents and relatives have always resided, declare he never had an enemy in the world and in the pretty Plainfield suburb, where he conducted the general grocery store for two years, he was popular with everyone. The young widow, lying prostrated at her home, can throw no light on the mystery and County Detective George Totten and his assistants are hopelessly in the dark.

The murderer first made his appearance at 10 o'clock yesterday morning at Hugo Maul's Washingtonville hotel, at the head of Somerset street. He was served with a drink of whiskey by the bartender, Edward Marfins, who noted that he was about forty years old, of light complexion and with sandy moustache, five feet ten inches in height and to all appearances a business man. His clothing consisted of an ordinary light suit and he wore a dark overcoat and a brown fedora hat. After being waited upon, he casually mentioned the fact that he had come up on a Somerset street trolley car from Plainfield and he asked if there was anyone about the hostelry who would drive him to "Pollack's." Marfins informed him that he knew of no one there but if he went up the road to William Demler's he might be accommodated.

The stranger departed and then appeared at Williams' store directly in Watchung, which was kept by the Demlers for many years. The request for a rig was repeated after inquiry had been made for Demler, thus establishing the point that Williams was not being sought. Demler was not in and Williams volunteered to make the trip and went across the street to get a cutter, turning the care of the store over to his wife. He was just hitching up when Demler appeared and asked where he was going.

"This man wants me to drive him to Pollack's," said Williams, "and I am coming right back."

That was the last he was seen alive in Watchung and nothing further was heard from him until shortly after 1 o'clock when a man named Jennings came into the village and asked Demler how he could inform the county physician that he was needed at John Miller's place on the Coontown road as a man had been murdered. Naturally asking about it, Demler at once concluded the dead man was Williams and he hurried friends off to make certain. It was he who broke the news to the wife and though it was done as gently as possible she collapsed immediately.

Williams and the stranger drove along the valley road through Warrenville up to Coontown and they were seen to pass John Miller's place on the Coontown road at 11:30 by his hired boy, George Cruse, who was playing in the road with a dog. The two were sitting talking in the cutter and Cruse noted nothing peculiar about them as the horse jogged along.

Two hundred feet from the Miller residence a stretch of woods begins and the road bends just after entering them. Hardly had the sleigh disappeared around it when Cruse heard the report of a pistol and then what he descried as a "moan," but which was evidently Williams' death cry as the murder occurred 500 feet from where he stood and a moan could not be distinct at that distance.

The boy did not attach much importance to it and thought nothing further of it until Eugene Pope, a former resident of this city, came hurrying down and reported that he had come upon a horse and sleigh standing in the road, with a dead man sitting bolt upright in the seat. He had tied the horse to a tree, he said, and asked that the men about Miller's place go back with him and investigate. The body was then still warm but none of the party knew that murder had been committed until the pistol shot was spoken of by Cruse and looking over the clothing, a hole was discovered in the back of the overcoat with burned powder marks about it.

The truth flashed upon the men and roused to the highest pitch, they secured rigs and notified every resident in the vicinity. A few feet back from where the horse stood, the murderer's tracks were found in the snow. He had jumped out of the sleigh backwards and walking this way in a circle had crossed over the road, then to it again after getting about the rig. He was traced straight up to the Pollack barn, which he had entered, and which was surrounded by farmers armed with shotguns. Some of them entered but there was no one there and then in the rear, the same tracks were discovered again, this time leading to the road that goes to Millington. The pursuers separated and those who went to Millington learned that a man answering the murderer's description had been there and made some inquiries about trains but had gone out without purchasing a ticket. Whether he had struck off in the country again, or had waited about and boarded a New York train which came along at 3:30, from the opposite side of the station, are mooted questions. At any rate, he was seen at the "Stone house corner," just this side of Millington by Adolphus Giddes, who offered the stranger a ride. This he declined and he was trudging along when Giddes passed by.

The greater part of the posse continued scouring the woods and fields until last night and had they come upon the murderer it is doubtful if he would have been taken alive, as grim determination was marked in the face of each. Those who returned to the scene of the crime waited about the sleigh, which remained with its ghastly occupant just as Pope had placed it, until the arrival of Coroner Thoms at 4 o'clock. County Detective Totten, accompanied by Plainfield newspapermen, came up at 5 o'clock and then for the first time, the body was carefully examined and the pockets searched.

In the trousers' pockets were bills and silver amounting to $5; in a coat pocket, a wallet containing several checks on Plainfield banks and numerous papers, but nothing had been touched. The powder marks on the coat showed that the revolver had been pressed against it and was evidently done quietly while Williams was driving, totally unconscious of his impending fate. With the arrival of County Physician Taylor, of Millstone, shortly after 6 o'clock, the body was removed to Miller's home and from there to Watchung.

When Detective Totten was pressed for his opinion in regard to a motive, after the clothing had been searched, he ejaculated:

"Motive? That's the question. This is the most puzzling case I have ever encountered. I don't believe it is robbery and at the present time I can venture no explanation."

One point that will be investigated thoroughly is the murderer's evident desire to reach Pollack's and whether he knew the family. The Pollack place is occupied by Mrs. Pollack and she could not be seen in order to learn if she knows anyone answering the stranger's description or how he came to know the name. Mrs. Pollack has a son, who is a New York business man, and if the stranger came from New York, it is just possible that he may have secured it in this way. There are several other clues that are to be followd up and may reveal something. At the present time, the police throughout the State and New York city are on the alert, the very mystery of the case seeming to arouse every officer to more than ordinary action.

Williams, the murdered man, was thirty-two years old and was the son of Peter Williams, of Warrenville. He had worked at various times in this city and Dunellen and two years ago came from Brooklyn, where he had been conducting a bakery, to Watchung, purchasing the grocery business from the Demler family. He leaves one child and is survived by five sisters, Mrs. Paul Reusch, of Dunellen; Mrs. Elmer Jennings, of Newark; Mrs. Schnelter, of New York; Miss Lena Williams, of Warrenville; Mrs. Skellenger, of Elmwood place, this city; also a brother, Peter Williams, Jr., of Warrenville. There are also numerous cousins in this city. He was a member of the Gallia Council of Juniors and the president of the Watchung Social Club. The latter organization was to have given a dance in Texier's mill last night and he was chairman of the committee of arrangements. Young people from distant points who had not heard of the tragedy, were gathering at the place as his body was brought home, but the event was not held.

Funeral services over the body will be held from his late home at Watchung Sunday afternoon at 1 o'clock and from the Coontown church at 3 o'clock. The interment will be at Coontown.

Coroner Thoms and county officials were at Watchung today and the former is taking steps to empanel a jury that will pass upon the cause of death as soon as possible. The search for the murderer near the scene of the crime still continues and County Detective Totten remains in charge.

Rumors that the murderer had been caught at Millington early today were proven untrue by The Daily Press this noon, in telephone communication with Postmaster Baker. He declared that a close watch has been kept about the place since yesterday afternoon and that nothing has developed. He added that he had been at the Millington station when the New York train came in yesterday and that he saw no stranger get on, although he heard it stated that one had boarded it at Lyons station, just below.

The detectives on the case received an important clue when it was declared by a Watchung resident this morning that the murderer had said in Maul's that "Mr. Pollack had sent him out from New York to see about working his farm on shares." Mr. Pollack is well known personally to Mr. White, of Watchung, and the latter went to New York this morning to learn what truth there is in this statement.

COSSACKS OF RUSSIA

A MILITARY ORDER THAT IS WIDELY SCATTERED.

They Long Maintained Independence of the Iron Rule, But Now Are a Changed People — Not Such Soldiers as Formerly.

Cossacks? The word is a synonym for cold-blooded cruelty, brute strength, unsavory police duty. Are they so black as painted?

Cossacks may be shortly defined as a military people inhabiting the steppes of Russia along the lower Don and about the Dneiper, and in lesser numbers in eastern Russia, Caucasia, Siberia and elsewhere. Which locating would lead one to infer that Russia was pretty generally inhabited by Cossacks. Their origin is an uncertain matter, "but their nucleus is supposed to have consisted of refugees from the ancient limits of Russia, forced by hostile invasion to the adoption of a military organization or order, which grew into a more or less free tribal existence." Their position in Russia has been a peculiar one, at least until recently they have been looked upon rather as "allies than as subjects of the czar."

To the refugees that may have formed the nucleus of the Cossack order were added, in the course of time, all sorts and conditions of men; those fleeing from religious persecution, fugitives from cruel masters, criminals, outlaws, deserters, and also men fond of adventure for adventure's own sake. Though calling themselves Russians, they held their independence of Russian rule. Living in southern Russia, close to quarrelsome border people, they developed more and more of a martial spirit.

This people did not submit tamely to the rule of absolutism, their numerous revolts obtained for them certain privileges, which of late years, however, have been much curtailed. Russia has found them of great service in protecting her frontier line, and in time of active warfare they have proved very valuable in skirmishing operations.

In guarding the frontier, the Cossacks in their fighting with Turcomans, Circassians and other hostile frontier folk, had opportunity to call into play feats of horsemanship, half the fighting consisting in the work of capturing the enemy's steeds. Cowboy bar excellence has been the Cossack; he could ride and throw a lasso with any of that ilk. F. D. Millet, who campaigned with the Cossack, declared he was very like our own western frontiersman; independent in spirit, self-reliant, and full of resource, with little of the servility of the ordinary Slav; and declared further he was not quite the fire-eater reputed.

But the Cossack is no lamb; he is a fighter by birth and by trade. If ordered to make war on peasants, he makes war to a finish, with a thoroughness that has won for him his hateful reputation. His ancestors lived for ages by raiding on weaker ones, and he does likewise; he steals without a scruple; he drinks vodka to excess, and yet the Cossack is religious to a degree; ever observes grace before eating, sings hymns and prays devoutly. One of the Cossack's superstitions generally believed in is to the effect that one must enter Heaven with a clean body, and on the eve of battle the Cossack makes a careful toilet. Very superstitious is this man vowed to bloodthirstiness, afraid of his own shadow, always on the lookout for signs and wonders. He wears an amulet blessed by the village priest, and if he lose this his courage forsakes him; with its charm he can ride boldly into the face of danger—unless the danger happen to wear the form of a Japanese soldier.

Poultney Bigelow, writing in 1894, says that under the scepter of the czar the Cossacks are losing their best attributes, through administrative stupidity, cupidity and the various other idities associated with Russian officialism; and to-day Mr. Bigelow must be rather proud of his prophesy of ten years back, wherein he remarked: "The next great war will probably find the Cossack as incapable of meeting the demands upon him as the Turco and Spahi, who figured so dramatically in the war of France against Germany. But though not equal to European warfare, with his knout he still is formidable enough at home; lashing Russians daring to hold orthodox religious meetings, rounding up strikers, humbling the Pole.

SEED DISTRIBUTION

AMUSING INCIDENTS RELATED BY CONGRESSMEN.

Government Sends Out Each Year About 45,000,000 Packages of Garden and Flower Seeds.

One of the seemingly popular features of governmental action which smacks of paternalism, but not strongly enough to create serious alarm, is the free distribution of seeds through congressmen by the department of agriculture.

At its recent session congress indulged in its expected annual debate over the appropriation. It was denounced by some as a "steal" and an outrage. The cost was shown to be $300,000 per annum.

During the present year the distribution is in the neighborhood of 45,000,000 packets, few or none of which differ in respect from the seeds which may be purchased at any retail store.

In spite of protests and arguments the appropriation was made for 1905, and the distribution will continue. It is not for us to determine whether or not the people desire this distribution to be kept up. That matter rests entirely in their own hands. They can stop it whenever they desire to do so. This is a government of public opinion, and so long as that opinion does not vehemently object the custom will probably continue. Meantime, some ludicrous incidents illustrate how anomalous and exceptional the function is. Congressional records are burdened with peculiar episodes thrown out in discussion, and the mails of congressmen are loaded with strange applications from constituents who misunderstand the purpose and scope of this gratuity.

A Virginia farmer who omitted to give his name and consequently wrote in vain, recently applied to the house document room at Washington for some "seede-popcorn." The letter, after appealing for popcorn, adds:

"Please send some flat Dutch cabbage, and the hollow crowned parsnips, and the long red beets, and the latest cucumber, and the long redish, and some good acron squash."

THE RECIPIENT WAS IN GREAT DISTRESS OF MIND.

When a district consists of nothing but houses in a large city where there are not even back yards for a bunch of radishes to grow the seeds are often exchanged with other congressmen for public documents. One representative from New York city, however, concluded that he would send a few packages to his constituents as an experiment. Some of the seeds went to people living in a model tenement. A few days later he received a protest from the owner of the tenement. "Please do not send any more seeds," he wrote; "the people in my building have converted all the bath tubs into gardens. The scheme is all right as far as irrigation is concerned, but it is hard on the tubs."

An Iowa congressman sent a package to a rural constituent in a franked envelope bearing the usual "Three hundred dollars penalty for private use." The recipient was in great distress of mind, and wrote: "I cannot put the seeds to public use, and I cannot afford to pay $300 for using them myself."

A member of the Georgia delegation in congress received the following remarkable communication:

"Dear Mr. Kongressman: Sum time ago I writ yu asking is there anything the government cud do to make a fitin' wife behave herself. I ain't herd from yu, and things is no better. Will yu please let me no if yu kin git me one of them poison snakes from Afrika at the cultural department. I hav allers voted for yu, and this is a mitey little to ask, specially wen a man's wife is allers peckin' him."

The agitation for abolishing the seed distribution causes annual discomfort to at least one citizen who operates each year in a different cangressional district in the south with distinguished success. His name is unknown, but he makes a practice of traveling over the country, and whenever meal time comes he calls at the home of some farmer, to whom he represents himself as being a special friend of some influential official at Washington. For a small consideration in the form of a single meal the visitor will cause to be sent to the farmer a large variety of garden and flower seeds. To the average farmer this proposition seems reasonable enough, and the negotiations are usually closed on the spot. The tourist writes to the congressional representative of the district for the seeds. Of course, the farmer might have secured the seeds without this intervention, but this some farmers do not know. Each member of congress has the distribution of approximately 12,000 packets of seeds, and is enabled in this manner to personally remember 12,000 of his voting constituents.

INTENDED TO KILL POLICEMAN

Four Negroes Are Convicted of Murderously Assaulting Marshal Joseph Flack, of North Plainfield, on Christmas Eve.

THE VERDICT IS SOMEWHAT OF A SURPRISE

Tems, Tunstall, Hunt and Henderson Will Go to State's Prison—Fought Borough Officers—Supposition That Henderson Would Escape Punishment on This Charge.

While the trial of the four negroes charged with assault with intent to kill upon Marshal J. William Klein was in progress Thursday afternoon, the jury returned a verdict of guilty in all four cases on the Flack indictment. Counsel for the defendants asked for the mercy of the court in the cases of Tems, Hunt and Henderson. The four men will probably be sentenced next week.

This verdict was another unexpected one that has been rendered since hearing in the indictments began. It was generally supposed that Henderson would be acquitted by the jury but now as it is he will in all probability go to State's prison with the others. The maximum sentence on this conviction is not more than twelve years imprisonment or a fine of $5,000 or both.

After the new jury was empanelled Thursday, Charles A. Reed, who is now assisting the prosecution, placed Marshal Klein on the stand. The officer, at the request of the counsel, disrobed sufficiently to show the wounds he received Christmas Eve, and Mr. Reed attempted to offer in evidence a photograph of Somerset street, showing the county line, but the court sustained the objection of the defendant's counsel to its admission unless the photograph was proved by the maker of it. The prosecution also placed on the stand Marshals Walter Smalley, Joseph Flack and Dr. Albert Pittis, John P. Powers and Edward Smalley, Jr., after which it rested its case. The evidence brought out by these witnesses was more or less similar to that given in the preceding trial.

Lawyer W. G. DeMeza, counsel for the defendants, then opened his part of the case by placing Thomas Henderson, one of the four accused negroes on the stand and his examination concluded the afternoon session of the trial.

LOTS OF AMUSEMENT AT VINCENT CHAPEL

MADAME JARLEY'S WAX WORKS WAS THE ATTRACTION.

"Madam Jarley" and her wax works received a flattering reception at Vincent chapel, Thursday, their appearance being under the direction of the Ladies' Aid Society, of the First M. E. church. Miss Etta Raybert made a most excellent Madame Jarley, and all of the many characters presented were very amusing. Assisting Madame Jarley were Charles L. Lewis and Elmer D. Cutting, also Miss Whitney, who helped to arrange the affair. Mr. Lewis and Mr. Cutting set the figures in motion and otherwise assisted in keeping the large attendance in good humor.

First were given the Mother Goose characters as follows: "Mother Goose," Miss Martha Coddington; "Bo Peep," Miss Mary Robley; "Babes in the Wood," George Rittenhouse and Albert Coddington; "Little Miss Muffett," Miss Edna Kennedy; "Simple Simon," Elden Miller.

A Shakespeare group was the presented as follows: "Lady Macbeth," Mrs. Shurman; "Queen Elizabeth," Miss Alberta Waterbury. Among the curiosities were "Chinese Giant," Phillip Smith; "Mrs. Winslow," Miss Edna French; "Giggler," Miss Huber; "Bearded Woman," Wesley Messersmith; "Mrs. Allen's Hair Restorer," Miss Williams; "Woman who refused a new hat," Miss VanPlank. In the miscellaneous group were these: "Maniac," Miss Marguerite Ostrom; "vocalist," Mrs. Stephen H. Tugwell; "Jack Sprat and his wife," Enoch Hardingham and Miss Helen Whitney; "Cassie Chadwick," Miss Frances Rittenhouse; "expressman," Arthur Humble.

Madame Jarley was in charge and she read the story telling of the various characters.

Prior to the entertainment, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society gave an oyster supper and this was well patronized by members of the church and congregation. Mrs. Nelson A. Miller, as president of the society, was in charge, and those presiding at the tables were Mrs. George M. Rittenhouse. Mrs. Henry A. McGee, Mrs W. C. Snodgrass, Mrs. G. H. Whitney, Mrs. C. L. Jenkins, Mrs. Erastus Clark, Mrs. J. C. Peck and Mrs. J. Hervey Doane. Assisting them were a large number of young women of the church, many of whom took part in the entertainment which followed.

During the evening there was on sale home-made candies and this table was in charge of Miss Grace Webster, Miss Rita Nash, Miss Perle Ruckman, Miss Grace Martin and Miss Fanny Chandler.

Charles L. Lewis, assisted by Miss Whitney, was largely instrumental in arranging the entertainment and a substantial sum will be realized as profit to make some of the necessary improvements in the basement and chapel of the church.

MICHAEL FLYNN BURIED.

Requiem Mass at St. Mary's Church Saturday Morning.

The funeral services of Michael R. Flynn were held Saturday from the late home, on West Third street at 8:30 and from St. Mary church at 9 o'clock, where a requiem mass was said. Father Delehanty, assistant pastor, officiated. There was a very large attendance of friends and neighbors and a large delegation from the T. A. B. Association, of which Mr. Flynn was a life-long member. There were a number of handsome floral offerings.

The interment was in St. Mary's cemetery and the pall-bearers, some of the oldest members of the T. A. B. Association, were Jeremiah Callahan, Edward Lynch, John Walsh, John Hickey, Michael Callahan, John J. Carney.

MRS. DRAYTON'S TEA FOR INDUSTRIAL SCHOOL

MISS MYRA KELLY TELLS OF HER WORK IN NEW YORK.

Under the direction of Mrs. J. Gilmore Drayton and for the benefit of the Grace Church Colored Industrial School, of which she is the head, a delightful tea and sale was held at Mrs. Drayton's home on East Ninth street, Thursday afternoon from 3 to 6 o'clock. Miss Myra Kelly, author of "The Little Citizen," told of her work in the Eastern side of New York.

Mrs. J. Gilmore Drayton, Miss Sarah Drayton and Miss Agnes Smith received the guests in the parlor. Those who presided in the dining room were Mrs. Benjamin Drake, Mrs. Stuart H. Patterson and Mrs. E. F. Feickert and those assisting were Miss Grace Wilcox, Miss Glen, Miss Margaret Holly, Miss Charlotte Finch and Miss Margaret Drayton. In addition there was a candy table in charge of Miss May Holly and Miss Marie Finch. Miss Imogene Bass was in charge of a fancy table, the articles being made by the colored children in the Industrial School.

There was a silver offering received at the door by Harold Robert and the proceeds will go toward the work of the Industrial School.

Y.M.C.A. DIRECTORS ELECT

J. W. Gavett is Chosen President of Association.

MR. CAHOONE DECLINES

E. L. Bonny Selected as Vice President and A. B. Beers as Treasurer—The List of Directors.

Joseph W. Gavett was elected president of the Y. M. C. A. at the annual meeting of the Board of Directors, Thursday, succeeding Stephen A. Cahoone, who declined another term. Mr. Cahoone has been president for seven years, and has won the gratitude of his co-workers in making the Y. M. C. A. what it is today.

Working in conjunction with Mr. Gavett, the following men will serve in the offices of the association: Vice presiden, E. L. Bonny; recording secretary, A. B. Beers; treasurer, Curtis M. Thorpe; general secretary, J. H. Manning; boys' secretary, Kenneth Robbie; physical director, Fred A. Henckel.

These are the directors: Stephen Cahoone, J. H. Case, George S. Clay, Harry Gee, A. C. LaBoyteaux, H. M. Maxson, William D. Murray, H. C. Newmian, R. H. Radford, G. M. Rittenhouse, O. S. Rogers, Nelson Runyon, F. R. Stevens.

A committee composed of William D. Murray, Joseph W. Gavett and John Valiant was appointed to adopt a resolution of appreciation for the services of Mr. Cahoone, as president of the association. The regular routine business of the board was transacted and the meeting adjourned.

MISS THAYER WEDS.

She Becomes the Wife of Chauncey K. Pennington, of Westfield.

Miss Mildred William Thayer, daughter of tee late Charles T. Thayer, and Chauncey K. Pennington, of Westfield, were married Wednesday afternoon at 5 o'clock at the home of the bride on Webster place. Rev. Dr. J. S. Zelie, pastor of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, performed the ceremony. Only the near relatives and friends of the couple were present.

The bride, unattended, was gowned in a traveling dress of blue broadcloth. She was given in marriage by her uncle, Pliny T. Sexton, of Palmyra, N.Y. The wedding march was played by Miss Daisy Kline, of this city. The bride is well-known here and a favorite in the younger society. Mr. Pennington is a contracting electrician and is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank R. Pennington, of Westfield. The couple has gone south on a wedding trip and it is possible that they may locate in Florida, where the groom contemplates starting in business.

BOWEN TO RETURN.

United States Minister Wants Relations With Venezuela Severed.

Despatches received from Caracas at the State Department at Washington yesterday from Minister Bowen, a brother of H. E. Bowen, of this city, indicate that the rupture with Venezuela which President Roosevelt has been trying to stave off until after Congress adjourns is imminent.

Mr. Bowen's patience is at last exhausted, and he has recommended that he be recalled, and that diplomatic relations with Venezuela be severed. He says that the attitude of the Castro Government remains uncompromising to the last degree, and that he can see no encouraging indication of a peaceable settlement of the American claims. He advises that force be applied as the only means of bringing President Castro to terms, and that, as the first step, a formidable naval demonstration be at once made at La Guayra, the port of Caracas.

REALTY BOOMING.

Several Transfers of Property Made by A. D. Thompson in the East End.

A. D. Thompson, real estate dealer, has sold a lot on Belvidere avenue and two lots on Woodland avenue to Sidney S. Schuyler. One lot on Belvidere avenue and one lot on Woodland avenue he has sold to Albert B. Davies.

Samuel St. John McCutchen has purchased one lot on Belvidere avenue and one on Woodland avenue, and to Roland D. Armstrong, the Brooklyn millionaire, Mr. Thompson has sold the fine building site adjoining his residence on Belvidere avenue, consisting of 425 feet. There is a lively boom in realty in that part of the city and during the coming year it is expected that a number of handsome residences will be erected.

Surprised Mr. Teeter.

Thirty friends of Albert Teeter, of Grove street, tendered him a surprise party, Wednesday night. The affair was arranged by Miss Jennie DeCamp, of Linden avenue, and Albert Schmeyer, of Prospect place.

MILLION DOLLAR CONCERN

Vacum Cleaning Company to Locate Here Incorporated.

VANDERBILT IN IT

William G. Besler and David T. Kenney Also Interested in Enterprise Which Has a Site Here.

The Vacum Cleaning Company, with David T. Kenney, of North Plainfield, named as agent, was incorporated at the office of Secretary of State, at Trenton, Thursday. The registered office is North Plainfield and among the incorporators is William K. Vanderbilt.

According to the papers filed at Trenton the capital stock is $1,060,000. The par value of each share of stock is $100. The company will manufacture, operate and deal in vacum and other cleaning apparatus.

In addition to Mr. Vanderbilt, the incorporators are Vice President William G. Besler, of the Jersey Central, and David T. Kenney, both of North Plainfield, and Harry B. Hollins, Robert W. DeForest and Thomas Ewing, Jr., all of New York.

As already stated in The Daily Press the company has purchased a large tract of ground in the East End as a site for its plant.

CHAUNCEY B. KOONS BOWLING CHAMPION

WINS ANNUAL Y. M. C. A. EVENT WITH LOW AVERAGE.

Chauncey B. Koons, captain of the Y. M. C. A. bowling team, and president of the bowling organization, is the winner of the individual championship, which has recently been completed, and will be presented with a handsome medal. The last bowling in the tournament took place last night.

Koons' bowling was characterised by his usual steadiness, though the scores were all lower than in former years. Having concluded the individual tournament arrangements are being made for a team tournament among association members, and for a handicap individual tourney. These events will not take place at present however. Two medals will probably be offered for the handicap match.

The averages in the individual championship tournament were as follows: C. B. Koons, 147; Wiltse, 143; Morris Sutphen, 141; Frank A. Neal, 133; Jeffries, 132; Beisel, 124; French, 123; Dayton, 104 These are the averages of six games. Sutphen's score was not up to his usual standard and to the score by which he won the trophy last year. Neal had a poor start, though he improved toward the end. The highest individual score was 176, made by Jeffries.

WHITTIER SCHOOL WINS JUNIOR CHAMPIONSHIP

CAPTAIN BRIGGS' WORK INFLUENTIAL IN SECURING MORALLER CUP.

Whittier School is the holder of the Junior scholastic basketball championship, its team winning that title in the final game of the season in the Juvenile basketball league at the Y. M. C. A. Thursday afternoon, by defeating the second team of the Plainfield High School. The victory was a decisive one and was accomplished by better all round playing, team work, and individual excellence included. By winning this game the Whittier School has secured permanently the possession of the silver cup offered by Moraller & Son.

At the end of the first half the score was 7 to 6. The victory and championship was won largely through the work of the captain, William Briggs, who, in spite of a lame shoulder, made 11 out of the 17 points. Woodhull was also strong, while the entire team played together well.

It was an exciting contest and was watched by an enthusiastic gallery. All knew that the result of the league and the junior cup winner was to be determined by the match, and the cheering on both sides was inspiring. Doane, of the P. H. S. team, played a strong game, as did also Caldwell, but the guarding was too loose, and the High School boys were unable to shoot goals.

This was the lineup: Whittier School—Briggs and Loughlin, forwards; Alpaugh, center; Fountain and Woodhull, guards. P. H. S.—Doane and Caldwell, forwards; Mackay, center; Lambert and Freeman, guards. Goals from the field—Briggs, 3; Woodhull, 2; Doane, 2; Loughlin, Lambert and Caldwell. Goals from fouls—Briggs, 5; Doane. Referee—Paul R. Collier. Umpire—Francis K. Anderson.

EPWORTH LEAGUE.

Feb. 12: "Christ a Servant, and We Are Servants"—Phil. ii, 5-12.

By REV. WALTER J. YATES, Ph. D.

It is not an easy task to learn that we must work if we would enjoy the things of this world. But we have to master it if we ever get our own. It is possible to so apply ourselves that finally we enjoy working and prefer it to leisure unoccupied. There is also a sense of elation as we come to mastery of things. We may also get to the state where we enjoy mastery over men.

But these are not the labors that tax all the best that is in us in their accomplishment. To know the mystery of things, to have the leadership of men—these are great accomplishments and stamp those who acquire them as great among men and as worthy of honor. But there is a more difficult and worthy work for us to do.

If this world is God's world and He has a purpose in sustaining it, if men are the children of God and capable of working with Him in the accomplishment of His ends, if Jesus Christ has been here and has shown us the perfect life and opened the gates into the eternal good for us, then the best task for us is the putting ourselves to learn the things of God and study how to lead men into the likeness of Jesus Christ.

This means the very prosaic effort of serving our fellow men instead of trying to find some way to make them serve us. It is a reversal of the ordinary thought of life. It is doing service instead of the getting of service from some other.

If this were a duty that gave no promise of pleasure in the doing, but was simply necessary in order to obtain the favor of God, an arbitrary requirement for which no good reason could be discovered, but only the purpose to test our obedience, even then it would be worth our striving to perform it.

But the fact is there is no pleasure in this life greater than that of feeling that we have helped some one beside ourselves. The hearty approval of one's own conscience gives a glow of happiness that no commendation from the lips of the greatest of earth can produce.

Somehow the taint of selfishness that clings to all that we do for self alone takes away the keen edge of enjoyment from effort and one feels a sense of dissatisfaction as if this is not as good a thing as one is capable of doing. Only when we throw all our power into the effort of helping some one in need and feel every faculty working to its utmost does interest grow intense and the will imperious in its demands. Only then do we rise to the full height of our moral nature and know that we are at our best.

Still better than all this is the consciousness that in such doing of service for another we are obeying the example and command of our Master, Jesus Christ. We are assured that He will approve and will help us to reach the desired end. The high sense of delight that comes to a soul that is knowingly and gladly working for and with Jesus to accomplish His desires is the most completely satisfactory emotion which we ever experience in this life.

If you want to reach the heights of life then follow the Lord and serve. He was here as one that serves. Exaltation lies along this road and is reached by no other.

Let us never forget that we are servants—servants of God and servants for, as well as with, our fellow men.

So Loved That He Gave.

A story is told of a child in Luther's time who had been taught to think of God only with dread as of a terrible judge. In her stern home the name of God had been mentioned only to terrify and frighten her. But one day in her father's printing office she picked up a scrap of paper and found on it the first words of this verse, "God so loved the world that He gave"— The remaining words were torn off, but even in this mere fragment there was a revelation to her. It told her that God loved the world—loved it well enough to give something. What He gave she did not know, but it was a great deal for Him to give anything to it. The new thought brought great joy to her heart. It changed all her conceptions of God. She learned to think of Him as one who loved her, as her friend, ready to give her His rich gifts and all good, and this brightened and transformed her life.—J. R. Miller, D. D.

The Pearl.

Every man who desires the pearl of great price must sacrifice his all to buy it. It is not enough to see the beauty and the glory and almost to taste the joy of this wonderful life. You must become the possessor of it. The man had found and seen, desired and rejoiced in the pearl of great price, but he did not have it until he gave up everything and bought it. Some Christians may be holding fast some doubtful thing, not being willing to surrender and leave behind the whole of wilderness life.

Do you expect that religion is so cheap that without giving time you can find close fellowship with God? You cannot. This pearl is worth everything. If you find there is a struggle within the heart, by God's grace deliverance will come.—Rev. Andrew Murray.

Who Can Doubt It?

Skepticism as to things spiritual and celestial is as irrational and unphilosophical as it is degrading. Who that sends his eye over this immense creation can doubt that there are orders of beings superior to ourselves or can see anything unreasonable in the doctrine that there are states in which mind exists less circumscribed and clogged by matter than on earth—in other words, that there is a spiritual world? —W. E. Channing.

BOYS OATH-BOUND TO SLAY POLICE

PLEDGED "LIMBS, VITALS AND SOULS" NOT TO BETRAY.

IN THE NATIONAL CAPITAL.

The Robbing of a Belated Cab Driver Leads to the Arrest of Four of the Gang of Young Toughs.

Washington, D. C.—Four boys were arrested by the police of the First precint the other night on charges of highway robbery. Their names are William Tobin, "Joe" Carega, George Hardy and Bernard Weismiller. None of the quartette is over 22 years of age.

These boys, it was discovered by the police, are members of a regularly organized band, bound together by an oath which carries with it a penalty of death in terrible form to any traitor. The complaint which resulted in their downfall was made by William Everett, of No. 2025 G. street, N. W. a driver of the Herdic Cab company, who was knocked down in the Mall on the night of December 23 and robbed of a watch and pocketbook.

A copy of the oath, written in a cramped hand in red script, which is thought to be blood, was found on one of the prisoners. The oath pledges every subscriber thereto to eternal fealty to the interests of the band, which are specified to be the obtaining of plunder and of the extermination, by fair means or foul, of policemen, detectives and their ilk.

To this end the members pledge their "limbs, vitals and souls." The penalty attached to a violation of this solemn obligation is that the offender "shall have his skull broken, his brains removed" and other equally pleasant things.

From the four members of the band it was learned that a regular initiation is required of all recruits, who are forced to subscribe to the oath in the presence of all other memoers.

From statements made by the prisoners, the police knew of 30 members of this organized band, and they have hopes that other arrests will follow.

TAKING THE OATH.

In their confession the boys said that they had thrown the watch and the rifled pocketbook in the sewer trap at Sixth and G streets, N. W., and the chain in the trap at Sixth and F.

The gang was only recently organized and in drawing up their oath the leaders were undoubtedly influenced by recent testimony concerning Mormon oaths which has come out in the senate hearings in regard to the expulsion of Senator Smoot.

Mother Sued by Her Baby.

Bloomington, Ill.—Alleging neglect at her birth, Lenore Skinner aged three years, a ward of Bethany Home, at Rock Island, has begun suit for $10,000 damages against her mother, Mrs. Myra A. Smith. The plaintiff is probably the youngest in the court records of the country, while the case is thought to be without a parallel. When the child was but a few hours old she was put in a basket and sent to the Bethany Home. The eyes of the babe were affected by exposure and she may be partially blind through life. The mother is said to have ample means, owning considerable property near Watertown. The suit filed by the child is through her next friend, Dr. Eli Bradford, who is connected with the Bethany Home. He will try to obtain a judgment which will enable the child to be brought up in comfort.

Sells Wife to His Brother.

Pender. Neb.—William Dean, of York, eloped with the wife of his brother, Levy Dean. The couple were wed and came here to live. The husband of the woman pursued them and swore out a warrant for their arrest. The woman declared that she loved the man with whom she had eloped better than she did her husband, and the man with whom she eloped offered his brother $150 if he would consent to give up his wife. The husband thought the matter over and finally announced that he would accept. He returned home with the money, and his wife will continue to live with her brother-in-law.

CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

Prayer Meeting Topic For the Week Beginning Feb. 12.

By REV. S. H. DOYLE.

Topic.—Christ a servant, and we are his servants.—Phil. ii, 5-11.

A servant! The word has a distasteful sound. To be the personal helper of another or, worse still, in complete subjection to him or his slave has always been most repugnant to the natural human heart, and yet this word has a large place in the religion of Jesus Christ and has thereby come to have an exalted significance and to designate a relationship that is most desirable. Indeed, after all has been said the position of servant has always been a dignified and exalted one. The highest ambitions of men, rightly considered, have been to serve the person or the cause to which they were most deeply devoted. Love has ever desired to find its expression in service. "Ich Dien" (I serve) is not only the motto of one royal household, but the true insignia of all possessed of real kingly characteristics. Real royalty lives to serve God and its subjects, no matter where it may be found.

In our lesson Paul exhorts the Philippians to cultivate the Christian grace of humility that finds expression in a desire to serve rather than to be served. He exhorts them to unity of heart and mind by having a true conception of their proper relations to each other. Strife and vainglory are to be omitted from their lives. Each person in true humility is to consider every other person better than himself and to consider the interests of others before his own. Could the world have such a true and unselfish humility it would be transformed, and it should be the desire and aim of every Christian to practice, preach and spread such real Christian conceptions of man's relation to his fellow men. Such a condition of heart and mind will result in service, the true and final goal of the Christian religion.

As a spur to the possession and exercise of such a spirit Paul uses the example of Christ, "Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus."

1. Christ was a servant. He came into this world to serve it. In His own language He came "not to be ministered unto, but to minister and to give His life a ransom for many." He came to serve and to die a ransom for those whom He served. Though He was in the form of God and could claim equality with God and not do injustice to the Father, yet He "took upon Him the form of a servant!" And to what lowliness His service descended. "He humbled Himself and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Humility, obedience—obedience even to death, and that the despised death of the cross—these were the characteristics of Christ as a servant. Can we, then, refuse to serve Him and one another in His name and for His sake?

2. Christ's humility led to His exaltation. "Wherefore God hath highly exalted Him." We serve ourselves best by serving others best. The man who seeks happiness in selfishness misses the mark, while the man who unselfishly lives for the happiness of others finds the secret of his own happiness. The road to exaltation is not through vain personal ambition, but through humble self sacrificing service. Service exalts the king in the eyes of his people, the soldier in the eyes of his countrymen, the disciple to his master and the child of God in the sight of his Heavenly Father. "He that exalteth himself shall be abased, but he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." Service, therefore, is not only a Christian duty, but it is profitable. Let us therefore serve Him who served us by serving those who are His.

Notes at Random.

In Rayner's supply stores, Hampstead, Ireland, is a Christian Endeavor society that meets at 10 p. m. Its members are unable to attend the Christian Endeavor meetings in their churches and so have formed a society at their place of business.

New York city Endeavorers gave last year to missions $9,340.58 and to benevolences $4,850.63. This was at the rate of $2 a member, a magnificent record.

California Endeavorers have undertaken to support an Endeavorers' hospital, and the Santa Clara Endeavorers start the good work by maintaining a room for a year.

Next Christian Endeavor day every Endeavorer in Great Britain is expected to give an "Endeavor penny" for the extension of Christian Endeavor at home, on the continent and in India. If all give that little sum the total will be $5,000.

Baltimore Rally Song For the 1905 Convention.

[Tune, "O Mother, Dear, Jerusalem."—Materna.]

O Baltimore, in Maryland,
Fair city of our state,
A privilege is granted thee
In which can all partake.
A mighty host, with legions strong,
A consecrated band.
Will visit thee, with purpose true,
From o'er this great broad land.

Sweet fellowship and thoughts of God,
Communion of His saints,
A deepening of the spiritual life,
To grow like Him in grace,
Will be the wish of every one
Expressed in song and prayer,
And may our hearts be tuned to sing
And speak His praises there!

Endeavorers, then, of Baltimore,
Prepare for this great feast,
Be worthy of the name you bear
And join in labor sweet
That Jesus Christ may reign supreme
In hearts of young and old,
And our dear city may receive
Great blessings yet untold.

MICHAEL R. FLYNN DEAD

Well - Known Citizen Succumbs to Typhoid Fever

AN ACTIVE DEMOCRAT

Member of Shoe Firm of Flynn Brothers—On Registry Board for Many Years.

Michael R. Flynn, one of the best known men in the city and a member of the shoe firm of Flynn Brothers, of West Front street, died suddenly at the home of his sister, Mrs. George McClusker of Berckman street, Feb. 1, from typhoid fever. He was taken ill two weeks ago, with what he thought was the grip. Early in the week his condition was considered quite favorable, but Wednesday there was a change for the worse and he had several sinking spells.

Mr. Flynn was born in this city about forty years ago and has always lived here. By his genial manner he always made friends. He was a staunch Democrat and was active politically. He was a member of St. Mary's church and was identified with the T. A. B. Society, having joined when the Catholic Cadets disbanded to form the other organization.

Mr. Flynn was a member of old Warren Engine Company No. 3, when the departments of the city and borough were under one head and he was an assistant chief for some time. He was also a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association.

Mr. Flynn always took a lively interest in city, county, State and National affairs and was well informed in political affairs. For nearly fifteen years he was a faithful and efficient member of the city Board of Registry and Election in the Fourth ward. While he was active in politics he never sought office, although these honors had been offered him.

Several years ago he and his brother, Peter Flynn, Jr., engaged in the retail shoe business on West Front street. He is survived by a father, Peter Flynn, Sr., a brother, Peter Flynn, Jr., and two sisters, Mrs. George McClusker, of Berckman street, and Mrs. Robert Gardner, of Watchung avenue.

"COAL BARRENS" FEAST

Third Annual Dinner of the Twelve Held at Pedeflous'

MEMORY OF COAL STRIKE

Women as Guests—Eleven Members of Organization Which Started in 1902.

The annual dinner to the women friends of the Coal Barren XII was given at Pedeflous' Hotel, Thursday, and this being the first time that the fair sex have been extended the courtesy, the affair was all the more enjoyable. The feast was followed with a flow of good fellowship that kept the party in continuous merriment until 2 the next morning. Besides the wives of the married members there were present Miss Cady, of Brooklyn; Miss Gilligan, of Jersey City; Miss Mooney, of New York, and Miss McInness, of this city.

Mr. Pedeflous prepared one of his best menus, and nothing but praise was accorded it and the excellent service. The menu:

Celery Olives Radishes
OYSTERS
Blue Points, half shell
SOUP
Cream Celery
RELISH
Canopie Duc de Clarence
ENTREE
Broiled Mushrooms on Toast
ROAST
Chicken
Mashed Potatoes Green Peas
Coal Barren Punch
SALAD
Lettuce
DESSERT
Ice Cream Coffee Crackers
Cheese

The Coal Barren XII is a unique organization. It is composed of eleven members and the manner of its formation is peculiar. In 1902 when the coal strike was most acute, J. Russel Knowlton inadvertantly mentioned one morning on the 8:09 train that he did not care how long the strike lasted for he had twelve tons of coal in his cellar." That night ten men who now constitute the coal barrens swooped down on Mr. Knowlton, every man carrying an empty coal scuttle and then and there demanded enough of that costly fuel to cook a breakfast with.

The evening was pleasantly passed and thus was the beginning of the Coal Barren XII. Once each month during the winter months since that period in 1902, one of the members must entertain the Barrens. There are only eleven of them and the twelfth one is the hostess of the house where ever they happen to meet. They have been dined in luxurious places during their existence.

Lots were also drawn for the next meeting, and it fell on one of the bachelor members, who immediately declared that the whole party present must meet in New York early next month.

This is the roster of the organization: John J. Kenney, W. J. O'Keefe, Charles J. Ward, John O'Keefe, Matthew J. Cashin, David J. Carney, Andrew E. Kenney, Joseph F. O'Keefe, J. Russell Knowlton, M. J. Whalen, J. M. Hillmann and The Hostess. They were all present last night together with the women whose names were previously mentioned. The trip to and from Pedeflous' Hotel was made in a large box sleigh.

Francis Wood's Home Sold.

Armstrong Mulford, the North avenue real estate broker, has sold to William T. Gough, of West Eighth street, Francis Wood's handsome residence on Franklin place. The deal was made Thursday and Mr. Gough with his family will soon take possession of the property. Mr. Gough has been a resident of this city eight years. He is a large manufacturer of jewelry in Maiden Lane, New York.

New Brunswick Club's Dance.

A large number of Plainfielders have received invitations for the dance to be given by the New Brunswick Bicycle Club on Wednesday, February 15. The affair will be the largest which the club has yet conducted, over seven hundred invitations having been issued.

HITS BOARD OF HEALTH

Borough Council Plans to Compel Body to Present Report.

ASKS FOR STATEMENT

Mayor Smalley Makes the Surprising Disclosure That Health Board's Finances Are Not Made Public.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley caused quite a surprise at the February meeting of the Borough Council, last Friday, when he announced that he had been informed that the Board of Health had $1,000 to its credit in the bank and that when Borough Treasurer George F. Brown called upon Rev. Dr. W. E. Honeyman, the former secretary of the Board, for a statement of its finances, Dr. Honeyman replied that he could not tell how much money was on hand, whether it was $200 or $1,000.

Mr. Smalley added that if the Board of Health has $1,000 to its credit he saw no reason why next year's annual appropriation should not be cut out and thus save the taxpayers some money.

Councilman Arnold was prompted by the Mayor's remarks to ask why the Board of Health never made a report to the Borough Council. He believed that this should be done inasmuch as the Board is a corporate body. Treasurer Brown was present and he confirmed Mr. Smalley's statement as to his visit to Dr Honeyman, and it then developed that the Mayor had requested Mr. Brown to make the inquiry.

Councilman VanWinkle with a view of discrediting the intimation that Dr. Honeyman would wilfully refuse the desired information, questioned the Mayor and suggested that Dr. Honeyman was not prepared offhand to give figures.

Corporation Counsel Charles A. Reed stated that under the law the Board of Health could ask for such sum as in its judgment is needed, but it is not compulsory for the Common Council to make the appropriation. He said he thought the Board of Health ought to be glad to have a statement of its finances published and suggested that a request be made to the Board to give this statement for publication in the annual report issued by the borough.

This suggestion was put in the form of a resolution offered by Councilman Arnold that the Board of Health be requested to make a financial statement to the Council and that the same be published with the other reports. This resolution was adopted.

OVERHEATED STOVE CAUSES $1,200 FIRE

BOROUGH DEPARTMENT HAS LIVELY BLAZE TO FIGHT ON MANNINIG AVE.

Probably originating from an overheated stove, flames broke out in the No. 81 side of a double house at 79 and 81 Manning avenue, shortly after 9 Sunday night, and caused damage to the extent of $1,200. The fire had spread from the first to the top floor when the department arrived in response to an alarm from box 139 and three lines of hose had to be laid in. The blaze was mostly confined to the starting place and on the other side the damage was nearly all caused by water.

No. 79 is occupied by J. P. Hapenny and No. 81 by a widow who was preparing to move out. Neither was home at the time and the latter's fur*niture was completely destroyed.* The house is owned by Mrs. Ruckman, of Somerset place, and is covered by insurance.

When the alarm was sent in, the bell failed to work and only the men who were at headquarters', numbering eight, were made aware of the fire. This handicapped Chief Woolston, but despite the drawback the men had the blaze out inside of an hour. While on the third floor, two of the department, Peter Dooley and Clarence Mundy, fell through to the second floor, but escaped with bad bruises

Rev. T. E. Davis Accepts.

Rev. T. E. Davis, of West Fifth street, who recently received a call to become pastor of the Presbyterian Memorial church, Washington, D. C., has forwarded his acceptance and will take charge of the church this week His family will remove there about April 1. Last week Mr. Davis resigned as treasurer of the New Jersey Christian Endeavor Union. At his request, the Presbytery of New Brunswick has dismissed Mr. Davis and he will unite with the one in Washington.

MRS. GROGGIN RECOVERS AT LAST ON MORTGAGE

J. F. DALY'S GOODS AND CHATTEL,S COVERED BY THE INSTRUMENT.

The decree in the case of Mary E. Groggin against James F. Daly and J. Fred MacDonald, assignee, has just been filed, in which Vice Chancellor Stevens decrees that the complainant is entitled to the relief sought in her bill and that there is due her by virtue of her mortgages the sum of $2,116 with interest from February 11, 1904.

The decree orders that J. Fred MacDonald, the assignee, in the first place pay to the complainant from the moneys in his hands as such, the amount received by him for the goods, chattels and accounts mentioned in the mortgage which bears date of April 28, 1902, and which were in the store on December 16, 1902, and any accounts in favor of Hirst & Henderson which remained uncollected when the assignee took possession and which he has since collected. The decree also directs the payment of the costs in the suit and that after deducting the expenses the assignee shall allow the complainant to come in and share with the creditors of Daly whose claims had accrued prior to October 9, 1903. This will give to Mrs. Groggin most of the money due her on her mortgage, while some of the creditors of James F. Daly will probably receive twenty per cent. on the amount of their claims and others will receive less.

Several years ago Mr. MacDonald sold his grocery in East Front street to a man of the name of Mattlage, who in turn sold to H. P. Hirst & Co., Mrs. Groggin, the complainant, putting up the money. This firm then sold to Hirst & Henderson, Mrs. Groggin taking a mortgage to secure her for the money due her, the mortgage covering the goods, chattels, book accounts of the concern. Later Hirst & Henderson sold their interest in the business to James F. Daly, subject to the chattel mortgage which was assumed by Mr. Daly. He continued the business until a year ago and then made an assignment to Mr. MacDonald.

Mrs. Groggin then filed a bill to foreclose her mortgages and the defendants, Mr. Daly and Mr. MacDonald, through their counsel, W. S. Angleman, filed an answer, claiming that the chattel mortgages were void, and that there was about $800 due the complainant, instead of $2,300 claimed.

Mrs. Groggin, through her solicitors, Codington & Swackhamer, obtained an order from the Court of Chancery, permitting the assignee to sell the goods in the grocery and directing him to hold the money therefrom until further order of the court. The defendants attacked the validity of the mortgage and insisted that it was not a lien on any of the goods and chattels

Agriculturists Meet.

The Union County Board of Agriculture met Friday afternoon in Emerson P. Beebe's office, in Elizabeth. Five new members were enrolled and one additional candidate was proposed. President Beebe presided. Former President Headley and Secretary Woodruff presented their reports as delegates to the recent State Agricultural Society. Various topics were discussed and much valuable information was imparted in regard to the spraying of fruit trees to get rid of the San Jose scale.

Another Criterion Dance.

The Criterion Club, which conducted a successful dance in the Casino last week, is making arrangements to hold another. It will take place in the Casino, March 2, and invitations are to be issued within a short time.

SOCIETY EVENTS FEW BEFORE LENT BEGINS

UNUSUALLY ACTIVE SOCIAL SEASON HAS SUDDENLY WANED.

The Lenten season this year will begin on Wednesday, March 8, and quite contrary to the rule local society is not especially active just now. Of course, there will be social events on the holiday yet to come before this season of fasting and prayer begins, although as yet but few have been arranged for, with the exception of the Martha Washington dance to be given at the Casino on February 22, and possibly a social event at the Park Club. No doubt many events will be arranged for Lincoln's Birthday as well as on Washington's Birthday, as is the annual custom, but from now until Ash Wednesday it is expected that there will be a falling off in society attractions.

Without exception the social season this winter has been one of the most active in years, there being an unusual number of debutantes, dinners following, as well as many receptions, private and public, to engage the attention of society. The debut of Miss Virginia Hegeman early in the winter was the first of the social events and then followed other similar ones, after which the friends of the debutantes gave a number of dinners in their honor.

Both the Casino and the Park Club have been the scene of brilliant social affairs and it seems as though society has entertained to a larger extent than ever before. Following the Lenten season will come the outdoor sports, such as golf, tennis and baseball. One pleasing diversion during the winter in fair weather have been the events arranged by the Watchung Hunt Club. These hunts are held nearly every Saturday and it is seldom that there is not a large number of riders out to enjoy the healthful recreation.

Easter Sunday falls on April 25.

AT WILLIAMS' FUNERAL

Villagers Overcome and Pastor Sings "Abide With Me" Alone at Sad Service.

REFERENCE TO CRIME

In Sermon and Prayers Ministers Dwell on the Atrocious Crime—Obsequies at Watchung and Coontown.

"Since the hour that Cain slew his brother Abel, the history of the race has been marked with crime and it is the sin that creeps into the heart that might be the temple of the Most High God, if the soul so willed, that is responsible for this tragedy."

So spoke Rev. George Bowers, Sunday afternoon, in both the Mary E. Wilson Memorial chapel at Watchung and the Coontown church when he conducted funeral services over the body of George Williams, struck down in the prime of life by an assassin's hand, without chance to defend himself and with no warning of one of the most cowardly acts that has ever wrought up a peaceful New Jersey hamlet. In both instances the structures were inadequate to hold the throngs which gathered, the mourners coming from New York and Brooklyn, Plainfield and Dunellen, and all over Warren township. In the eyes of all, moist tears glistened and as the bereaved widow swayed into a seat a few feet from the casket, women sobbed and the lines about the men's mouths grew tighter.

In the Wilson Memorial chapel, where the first service was held, Rev. Mr. Bowers asked that it be opened with the singing of "Abide With Me," the murdered young man's favorite hymn, by the entire congregation. The sweet notes of the little organ sounded the prelude but it began the verse without any voice accompanying but that of the clergyman. Overcome by the sadness of it all, the mourners remained with bowed heads while the quavering voice of the divine went through the familiar lines:

"Abide with me, fast falls the eventide,
The darkness deepens, Lord with me abide;
When other helpers fail, and comforts flee,
Help of the helpless, O abide with me."

A heatfelt prayer was offered by Rev. George Watts, in which he asked Divine protection for the widow, the fatherless child and the relatives and friends who were suddenly bereft of one, who had gone away from them, happy and full of life, to be returned cold in death.

At this service and the one following at Coontown, Rev. Mr. Bowers based his remarks upon the text as found in Second Samuel, iii:34—"Thy hands were not bound, nor thy feet put into fetters: as a man falleth before wicked men, so fellest thou," and said in part:

"God is not responsible for this thing. He made us in His image and gave us the freedom of choice between good and evil. There are many who take the latter and their hearts become so steeped in crime that their consciences become hardened and their life on earth is what they make it. Ever since Abel was stricken through Cain's envy and jealousy, the secret of crime has been the same. It is spelled in three letters—s-i-n. The soul that chooses sin falls easily before the tempter and it is the sin that creeps into the heart that might be the temple of the Most High God that is reponsible for this terrible deed. Nay, verily, God is not responsible.

"Never in all my years of life have I been so concerned over a tragedy, or have I felt so much sorrow as I do at this time. From the very hour that I was apprised of the crime, it has been in my thoughts constantly and I know that the perpetrator will be punished—that he will suffer the wrath of God. A dark cloud hangs over this community and I am sure that all who knew this brother cannot help but be moved as I have been. He fell a victim to the evil in another's heart and we are all oppressed.

"Often have I stood beside the bier of a friend or neighbor, and sorrowed for the voice that was no more in this world, but never has it appealed to me as now. Think of the sorrow of the widow, of the aged father, who has often stood by the side of a grave and seen a loved one go into the narrow bed of clay; of the brother and sisters who knew him and loved him best, who saw him last in the bloom of health and with no warning of the shadow that was so soon to fall or the blow that was to be struck."

The choir sang "Jesus Savior Pilot Me" as he concluded and the mourners were permitted to view the features as they reposed in the casket.

As the cortege moved away from Watchung, first to Coontown and then to the little burial ground, where nine members of the Williams family have been laid away in the past three years, there seemed to be a hush all through the valley back of Plainfield, which was made still more mournful by the solemn, measured tones of the bell which had so often called George Williams to worship. The attendance included every member of the Watchung Social Club of which he was one of the organizers and which contributed a beautiful floral tribute, only one of the profusion which came from societies and friends. The club escorted the body to the grave, where a simple prayer concluded the services.

Those who bore the casket were six brothers-in-law: Paul Rensch, of Dunellen; John Gunther and Carl Engler, of Watchung; John Skellenger, of Plainfield, and Henry and John Schnadler, of Brooklyn.

R. F. D. ROUTE, NO. 3, MAY BE MUCH EXTENDED

PETITION BEING CIRCULATED BY FARMERS FOR POSTOFFICE SERVICE.

Residents in the northern end of Somerset county who are not now provided for by the rural free delivery mail service have drafted a petition and sent it to Washington asking that they be included on route No. 3, the last one established and operated from the Plainfield postoffice. Postmaster E. H. Bird, who is also interested in the matter, believes that the postal authorities may be willing to include the additional territory, provided it does not make the route too long.

The new territory being petitioned for covers about three miles and takes in several small towns adjacent to Warrenville, Gallia and Mt. Bethel. The residents in that section have seen the benefits of the service recently adopted and they are now anxious to get their mail regularly every day without being obliged to come to Plainfield for it.

Route No. 3 now covers close to twenty miles and the carrier is now able to make one trip a day and reach the local postoffice about 12 o'clock noon. If the new petition is granted the carrier on that route will cover the entire section in that part of Somerset county outside of Martinville, where there is a postoffice.

IRA F. R. VERMEULE IS LAID AT REST

FUNERAL SERVICES HELD AT HOME LARGELY ATTENDED.

The funeral services of the late Ira Fitz Randolph Vermeule were held Saturday at 1 o'clock from the home, 24 Sandford avenue, and were largely attended.

Mr. Vermeule came of sturdy old Holland stock. He was born in this city, January 8, 1825 and in 1847 he entered upon a merchantile career with his brother as a dry goods merchant in New Brunswick. Afterward he was in the clothing business in St. Louis and in 1869 he returned East and engaged with his brother in the manufacture of India rubber goods, which is now known as the Goodyear India Rubber Glove Manufacturing Company, of which his brother, John D. Vermeule, is now president, and in which he occupied an important position up to the time of his death.

Mr. Vermeule was past master of Anglo-Saxon Lodge, No. 137, F. and A. M., of Brooklyn.

Church Fair a Success.

The fair continued in the Babcock building Saturday afternoon and night under the auspices of St. Stephen's, was a successful as the first day. There was liberal patronage and a large attendance of members and friends of the parish. There was a musical programme in the evening by an orchestra composed of Charles Suhr, Kenneth Stuart and Morris Sorenson, and in addition there were the same features as were introduced Friday night. The proceeds from the fair will be used for the parish work and a substantial sum will be realized.

Arch Hacquer's New Position.

Archibald Hacquer has resigned from the reportorial staff of the Courier-News to take a higher position on the Newark Daily Advertiser. He will be assigned to the telegraph news desk on the Newark paper. Mr. Hacquer is a gifted writer and has an exceptionally good nose for news. Richard Larned, formerly of The Daily Press reportorial staff, has been a member of the inside staff of the Newark Advertiser for some time

Business House Changes.

Harry Feinberg, of West Front street, occupying a store in the Schepflin building, has leased through the agents, Leifke & Laing, the store at 222 West Front street, now occupied by Peter Flynn, Jr., the shoe dealer, and will take possession about April 1. Mr. Flynn has not yet announced where he will locate.

In Memory of First President.

Under the auspices of the Swedish Lutheran church a festival in memory of George Washington will be given at the German Lutheran church on Saturday, February 25.

FIGHTS ALIMONY DECREE

A. R. Keller Moves to Vacate Court's Order.

DECISION IS RESERVED

First Wife Got a Divorce From Plainfielder and Has Alimony Increased to $125 a Month.

Augustus R. Keller, of 937 West Seventh street, this city, has appealed to Judge Leventritt, of the Supreme Court, in New York, to vacate an order, obtained by his former wife, Annie L. Keller, increasing the amount of alimony that he is required to pay her from $85 to $125 a month. Mr. Keller asserts that he did not have an opportunity to be heard on the request for the increase in the alimony. Decision has been reserved.

Mr. Keller's second wife was named as co-respondent in the divorce proceedings and at the time was employed in his publishing offices.

The divorce was granted in April, 1902, by Judge Fitzgerald, of the New York Supreme Court, who sealed all the papers and threw a veil of secrecy over the proceedings. Keller was ordered to pay alimony of $85 a month and to give a $5,000 bond as guarantee. It appears that he failed to pay, and Justice O'Gorman issued an order adjudging him in contempt. Justice Scott denied a motion to vacate this order and Keller took an appeal. In the meantime he took up his residence in this city, thus freeing himself from the jurisdiction of the New York courts, making it impossible for the sheriff to obey the orders given him to put Keller in Ludlow street jail, New York.

The first Mrs. Keller alleges that her former husband has been guilty of additional contempt of court in having married contrary to the terms of the decree.

The trouble now in progress originally came about through Mrs. Keller securing an increase in her alimony, last May, from $85 to $125, Keller being required to furnish a $5 000 bond. Keller is said to have asserted that he would not pay it and that no court could make him.

TRINITY SOCIAL.

Ladies' Christian Work Society's Pleasing Entertainment.

A fitting substitute for the annual turkey supper, the sociable, under the auspices of the Ladies' Christian Work Society, of Trinity Reformed church, Thursday, was in every respect the success which always marks the social functions. Though it was considered wise to give up the annual turkey supper, which is usually held at about this time, the social time which the event has always afforded was greatly missed, and as a substitute nothing more pleasing to the church members could have been given. Mrs. A. Frazer, of Elizabeth, an entertainer who is well known to local audiences, delighted the listeners last night with interesting readings and novel recitations. Other features of the programme were solos and duets by Miss Florence Bennett and E. D. Young, of the church choir. They were accompanied by Miss May Randolph, and rendered several appreciated selections.

At the latter part of the evening, refreshments were served by the young men of E. F. Sheppard's Sunday-school class To Mrs. Cornelius Schenck and her committee is due the success of the sociable. Assisting her were Mrs. H. B. Paul, chairman; Mrs. Mary Disborough, Mrs. S. C. Baker and Mrs. E. T. VanWinkle. The refreshment committee was Mrs. B. D. Newell, Mrs. A. M. Gillem, Mrs. G. Q. Doliver, Mrs. Seaman Williams and Mrs. R. V. Kinney. The lecture room was tastefully decorated in pink by a committee composed of the following: Mrs. J. C. VanDyke, Mrs. George W. Cole, Mrs. H. VanName and Mrs. J. Beckman. The chandeliers were hung with pink paper and artificial roses. The other members of the society constituted the receiving and reception committee.

Dr. Richards' Success.

The Brick Presbyterian church, Fifth avenue and Thirty-seventh street, New York, of which Rev. Dr. W. R. Richards, formerly of the Crescent Avenue church, this city, is pastor, raised more money last year than any other church in New York. The amount was $336,000, a sum greater by nearly $40,000 than was raised by St. Bartholomew's Episcopal church, which usually takes the palm in this respect.

Will Give Minstrel Entertainment.

The Plainfield Amateur Dramatic Society, composed for the most part of West End young men, will give a minstrel performance in Y. M. C. A. Hall the last week in March. Walter Merton is to be interlocutor and William Firstbrook, Edwin Howes, Joseph Sweeney and George Wilson, are to be among the end men. Rehearsals are now being conducted regularly.

BOARD OF TRADE BANQUET

F. A. Dunham, Road Builder, Speaker of the Evening.

MARTINE'S ARGUMENT

Farmer Orator Urges Municipal Lighting Plant—Vocal Solos by Judge Runyon and Wm. Jeffery.

Attended by one of the largest gatherings it has had in many months, the local Board of Trade conducted a meeting, Thursday, that was alike instructive and entertaining. Disposing of routine business in the early part of the affair, a paper on permanent paving was read by F. A. Dunham, the well known civil engineer, who has built many miles of roads in all parts of the country, especially in New York State and the South. He treated the subject exhaustively and without making suggestions to the Board as to the best, related facts and figures compiled by him in his many years experience.

Mr. Dunham's paper was followed by a general discussion and he answered numerous questions put to him by members of the board. Permanent pavement and the best and most substantial way of construction has been taken up at nearly all of the board's recent meetings but no decision was ever arrived at in order to make a recommendation to the Common Council.

Following Mr. Dunham, James E. Martine told of the municipal lighting plant at Nashville, Tenn., which he has visited, and presented several of his well known arguments as to why it is better for a city to provide its own light than to buy it of a corporation. Another discussion was the result, in which R. P. Bates, superintendent of the Public Service Corporation's local plant, took an active part. Further remarks during the evening on the permanent pavement question were made by David Bowden, assistant city street commissioner, who supervised many contracts which Mr. Dunham undertook.

Interspersing the discussions, instrumental and vocal selections were given by City Judge William N. Runyon and William Jeffery, while cigars and light refreshments were served.

The committee which had charge of the arrangements consisted of Morris C. VanArsdale, Isaac Schwed and Charles W. Runyon. It is the intention of the board to have a similar affair each month and the next will be in charge of William A. Woodruff, William Jeffery and J. V. E. Vanderhoef.

GREET THEIR PASTOR.

Reception Given Rev. and Mrs. A. Finn by Congregation at Park Avenue Baptist Church.

The parlors of the Park Avenue Baptist church presented an unusually attractive appearance Thursday at the occasion of the annual reception given by the congregation to the pastor and his wife, Rev. and Mrs. A. E. Finn. Over two hundred people were present. The affair was given under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid and Young People's Societies.

Assisting Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Finn in receiving were Mr. and Mrs. E. K. Runyon, Mr. and Mrs. T. H. Kenney, Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Gildes and Mr. and Mrs. D. M. Runyon. During the evening the Y. M. C. A. orchestra, under the direction of Martin A. Korff, rendered a programme of popular music. At the conclusion of the reception, refreshments were served, which were provided by a committee composed of Mrs. A. D. Thompson, Mrs. Wheaton Lowry, Mrs. Charles VanWinckle. Mrs. Frank T. Ostrom was in charge of the affair in general, and chairman of the committee.

A Surprise Party.

A surprise party was given in honor of Miss Mae Huntington at her home on West Fourth street, Friday night. A violin solo was given by John Cauldfield and a piano solo by William Sunners. Other solos were given by James Buckley, James Cullem and Thomas Kennedy. A supper was served at midnight. The affair was in charge of Ella Lappim and May Kennedy.

Gloom at Fire Headquarters.

"Dick," the widely known, sagacious cat at fire headquarters is no more and the whole department is mourning. He had been the mascot of the East Second street house for nine years and he knew more tricks than any generally acquired by feline animals. "Dick" was picked up one cold night by Harry Bush, returning from a fire and was his especial pet.

Borough Election March 14.

The spring election in the borough will be held on Tuesday, March 14. Ten days prior to that time it is necessary for the borough report to be in hands of the voters

Took Civil Service Examination.

Several persons took the Civil Service examinations on Saturday for the positions of letter-carrier and postal clerks at the local postoffice.

SPRING ELECTIONS ARE ABOLISHED

Election Merger Bill Passes the Senate and It Has Governor's Signature.

EFFECTS THE BOROUGH

Mayor Smalley's Term Will be Extended Until January 1, 1906, by the New Law—Objections to It.

There will be no election in North Plainfield on March 14 and consequently Mayor Newton B. Smalley will continue in office until Jan. 1, 1906, the spring election being merged with the general election in the fall by a bill which has passed the Legislature and was signed by Governor E. C. Stokes this morning.

Mayor Newton B. Smalley.

The measure provides for election of all town, township, borough and other municipal officers on the general election day in November and it went through the State Senate yesterday afternoon. Senator Horner was conspicuous in opposing the bill, stating that it was a departure from good principle, although it might be good party policy, and that good government could never be too expensive. Senator Ferrell said the bill was in line with a disposition to consolidate all elections and that the people in rural sections were against it.

Senator Cresse said the bill seemed to be an attempt on the part of the leaders to take away the last vestige of home rule. Senator Bradley said that he thought residents of rural sections had sufficient intelligence to discriminate between election issues on a common election day. Others in favor of the bill who made remarks were Senator Wakelee, who emphasized the advantages of the fall election day as a holiday, free from business obligations. Senator Batcheller, who said the bill was no attempt to smother independence, and Senator Lee, who said the change where thus far tried had aroused increased interest rather than otherwise. Senator Bradley said in reply to Senator Horner's citing of Philadelphia retaining of spring elections that Philadelphia's example was a thing to be avoided on general principles.

Bill passed—12-4, those in negative being Ferrell, Horner, Cresse and Strimple. Under suspension of rules, bill released from custody of the Senate.

Councilmen J. K. Arnold, Republican, and J. P. Humble, Citizens, under the new law will also hold over as members of the North Plainfield Council until January next, although under the present law their terms would expire in March.

A Monster Calf.

Farmers and dairymen are much interest in a calf which was born at the home of Den. Gavin in North Plainfield three weeks ago. At birth the calf weighed one hundred pounds and its present weight is 380 pounds. The report seemed almost incredible and many farmers and others have visited the farm only to be convinced of the truth. The calf's mother was of Holstein stock and the sire a Durham. Both are registered stock. The calf is the object of much curiosity and hundred of visitors have been to the farm to see it.

Presented Perkins' Credentials.

Assemblyman Edward S. Coyne yesterday presented the credentials of Assemblyman Randolph Perkins who was unanimously elected on February 7 to fill the vacancy caused by the death of George H. Embree.

TOLD OF EXPERIENCE WITH JAPANESE SOLDIERS

MRS. G. K. PEARSON, A RETURNED MISSIONARY, MAKES ADDRESS.

Mrs. George K. Pearson, a returned missionary from Japan, was the speaker at the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Foreign Missionary Society, of the Crescent Avenue church, yesterday afternoon, the subject of her address being the "Work Among the Japanese Soldiers." Though Mrs. Pearson has lectured on the subject of Japan before in this city, at various societies, she touched more upon the Russo-Japanese War yesterday afternoon than she has in other addresses.

After telling briefly of the characteristics of the race, which have so often been spoken of at similar meetings, Mrs. Pearson referred at greater length to her personal work among the Japanese soldiers. Not leaving Japan until the war was well under way, Mrs. Pearson was in a position to realize as few can the causes leading up to the struggle with Russia, and the effects which the Russian tyranny produced. As she has stated before, in the Japanese people there are the greatest possibilities, and they have in them the characteristics from which one of the strongest Christian races on the globe might be produced. In her work among the soldiers, she had opportunity to see the real life of the inhabitants of the "Island Empire," and she became aware of the truth of the much talked of humanity which the Japs display. In their treatment of prisoners, in their care for the Russian sick, and in many other respects, the Japs, Mrs. Pearson said, showed themselves at times more Christian-like than the citizens of more civilized countries.

Will Live in Florida.

Charles B. Clifton, of this city, has purchased of Judge Cornwell his handsome property on Prospect avenue and Fairview street, Braidentown, Florida, and he intends to make that his winter home with his family. Mr. Clifton, together with Harry Campbell, with whom he is associated in business have extensive orange groves in Florida, and he has decided to spend his winters there in the future.

A Valentine Social.

For the benefit of Marconnier chapel, a well attended Valentine social was held last night at the home of W. M. Van Court A silver offering was received, from which a fair sum was realized to be devoted to the church fund. The evening was spent playing games appropriate to Valentine's Day. During the evening refreshments were served and general sociability prevailed.

P.A.C. SIGNS ITS PLAYERS

Greatest Aggregation Since the Days of the Old Crescents.

OPEN WITH ATHLETICS

Lindeman and Beisel Pitchers and Lamar Catcher—Records of the New Men—Partial Schedule.

Arrangements were practically completed yesterday for the baseball team that is to represent Plainfield on the diamond for the season of 1905 and there is every indication that the fans will see the best article of ball since the days of the old Crescents. Manager Woolston, with two exceptions, has secured his team and while it may be a little early to talk baseball, the cranks will be interested to know something about the lineup. As stated by the manager, "this lineup is bona-fide and barring accidents or other unavoidable reasons, the team will be this, with the exceptions noted:

Lindeman and Beisel, pitchers; Lamar, catcher; Driscoll, first base and captain; Lander or Shortell, second base; Kiernan, short-stop; "Mike" Leonard, third base; "Pete" Oregan, left field; Fultz or Gray, center field; Harry McCormick, right field.

It will be noticed that nearly all of the players comprise the Hoboken team of last season, and those who have seen them on the diamond know of their ability to put up the right kind of a contest. With Lindeman and Beisel, the pitching staff should be the best. Both men are in first-class condition and able to deliver the goods. As for Lamar, the catcher, his fine work behind the rubber and at the bat is too well known for comment. Outside of the big leagues he probably has no superior as a catcher. The infield should be a veritable stone-wall It is not positively settled whether "Billy" Lander or Shortell will cover second. Lander is under contract to coach the Columbia 'Varsity team until the first of June and if he cannot make arrangements to play here at the same time he will remain with Columbia until his contract expires. As for the other infielders their work has always been of the gilt-edged order, very fast in fielding and sure hitters.

The outfield is equally as fast as the infield. The fans know what Orgean can do, and whether Fultz or Gray covers center, it will be all right, and as for McCormick in right garden, there is nothing to fear. Fultz is now studying law in New York. His two-years' contract with the New York Americans has expired, but Clark Griffith would like to have him sign another two-year contract for less money, which he is not willing to do. It depends on the result of this whether he will play here or not. He and Lander are both graduates of Brown University and are anxious to play together.

McCormick played with the Pittsburg Nationals last season, having gone there from the New York Nationals. He has secured a clerical position with the Pennsylvania Steel and Iron Company in the New York offices and has decided to give up professional baseball, preferring to play one or two games a week. He is a fine fielder and a heavy batter.

It has been decided to open the season here on Saturday, April 15, when the Philadelphia Athletics will be the opposing team This date was closed this week. This should give baseball an auspicious opening with weather conditions right. Then through the season will follow contests with Atlantic City, Camden, Wilmington, the Philadelphia Giants, the Cuban Giants and Harrisburg, champions of the Tri-State League. A series of possibly five games will be arranged with Westfield, two here and two away with the "rubber" on grounds to be decided. It is also likely that games will be arranged with Rahway and New Brunswick. The object will be to give Plainfield the best baseball possible and to bring teams here that have a reputation.

All of the players engaged to play here are much pleased with the prospects for the season and they promise to do their full share in sustaining their reputation of the past. All of the games, with the exception of those at Westfield, will be played on Crescent Oval, and as soon as the weather is right the work of improving the grounds and providing ample seating capacity will begin. Arrangements will be made with the Public Service Corporation to have the best trolley service when a game is on so that patrons can be carried to and from the oval quickly.

THEODORE C. SCHAFUSS WEDS IN BROOKLYN

PLAINFIELDER TAKES MISS FORD AS HIS BRIDE.

Miss Eleanor Norma Ford, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Pownall Ford, of Brooklyn, and Theodore Caspar Schafuss, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Schafuss, of Fairview avenue, were married Tuesday at the Flatbush Congregational church, Brooklyn, in the presence of a large number of relatives and friends.

Miss Elizabeth Swift, of Albany, was maid-of-honor; the Misses Marguerite and Bessie Reed, of Pittsburg, bridesmaids; Master Stewart Pownall Ford, brother of the bride, page, and Samuel I. Graham, of Brooklyn, best man. The ushers were Dr. William Bradley, of Manhattan; Hugo Henckel and Thomas Burton Ford, of Brooklyn.

A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride's parents, 465 Seventeenth street. The groom has been a resident of North Plainfield about a year, having moved there from Brooklyn.

CRANFORD TAKES TWO GAMES FROM PARK CLUB

LOCAL TEAM FAILS TO BOWL ITS USUAL GAME.

The Park Club bowlers were again defeated in the Central Journal Bowling League, two out of three games going to their opponents, the Cranford Casino five, last night. The match was rolled at the Cranford team's alleys, the first game only going to the local pin-hitters. The scores were below the usual average of the Park Club bowlers. Barlow was still in the game, his first score, 211, being high mark for the Plainfielders.

On the Cranford team, Plummer, after rolling a measly 115, ended with a 219 in the last game, which was the high score of the evening. The following is the score of the match:

Brother of Dr. Long Succumbs to Bright's Disease.

John S. B. Long, brother of Dr. Monroe B. Long, of this city, and for many years the occupant of the Long Homestead at Washington Valley, near Martinville, passed away at his home Tuesday after a lingering illness Mr. Long was sixty-two years of age. He was a farmer, and was well known in this city, where he had often been a visitor.

For the last three years, Mr. Long's health has declined, and after suffering from pneumonia and a complication of troubles, his death was caused last night by Bright's disease. The house in which John Long spent his life, and where Dr. M. B. Long lived when a boy has been occupied by the Long family for the last century.

John Long leaves a wife and three children, Firman Long, of New Brunswick, and Jacob and Mary Long, who lived with him at the Homestead. In addition to Dr. M. B. Long, two brothers survive him, Jacob Long, of this city, and William Long, of Somerville. Mrs. Steven Staats, of West Second street, is a sister.

The funeral will take place at his late residence on Friday, and the body will be brought to this city for burial.

Strawride to Westfield.

A straw ride party gotten up by Frank Knight, of Richmond street, and numbering twenty young people, enjoyed a pleasant trip to Westfield and back last night. On returning to Plainfield adjournment was made to the home of Miss Edith Vail on East Sixth street, where refreshments were served.

Mrs. Lucy Buried.

Mrs. Bridget Lucy, a former resident of this city, who died at her home in New York on Monday at an advanced age, was buried in St. Mary's cemetery, today, the body being brought here by A. M. Runyon & Son, funeral directors.

FIGHTING "BLUE LAWS"

Rev. Dr. Lewis' Appeal Before Penna. Legislature's Com.

ARGUMENT APPLAUDED

Speaks on Behalf of the Keystone Seventh-Day Baptists, Who Are Prohibited Working on Sunday.

Rev. Dr. A. H. Lewis, editor of the Sabbath Recorder, appeared before the Judiciary Committee of the Pennsylvania State Senate at Harrisburg, Pa, yesterday, and spoke at some length at the hearing regarding the Sunday law now in force in that State. He appeared on behalf of the Seventh-Day Baptists of that State, the present law in effect prohibiting the members of that denomination from doing any manual labor on Sunday or conducting any business. These hearings are held biennially and Dr. Lewis was one of the principal speakers two years ago.

While making his appeal for liberty, Dr. Lewis was interrupted by outbursts of applause of the members and his friends. He reviewed the history of the Seventh-Day Baptists in the State of Pennsylvania, stating that in 1794 when the "blue laws" were being enacted they appeared before the Legislature and petitioned for their rights. Showing how closely indentified they have been with State interests he said that the Seventh-Day Baptists opened their homes after the Battle of Brandywine in 1777 and cared for the sick and wounded to the number of five hundred.

Dr. Lewis declared that Samuel Ward, of Rhode Island, a Seventh-Day Baptist, and a member of the Continental Congress, was chairman of the committee of the whole that proposed the name of George Washington as commander-in-chief and reported to him his election. The Declaration of Independence was translated in fifteen foreign languages by Seventh-Day Baptists of Pennsylvania, and copies of it were printed on a press owned by the denomination. This same press is now in the State historical rooms in Philadelphia.

The argument presented by Dr. Lewis was that the law has no right to designate any one day to be observed as the Sabbath, and it is for the purpose of amending the present statute that the denomination is earnestly working. In 1846 eight men, prominent, respectable and law-abiding Seventh-Day Baptists were under indictment in Pennsylvania for performing manual labor on Sunday The amendment now before the Legislature permits the selling of ice cream, candy, cigars, etc., which is now prohibited.

Opposing the Seventh-Day Baptists is a Scotch-Irish-Presbyterian element it is said, which seems to hold the key to the political situation, but Dr. Lewis says that he feels much encouraged with the prospects for a change in the law which will savor of greater freedom and justice.

TO BUILD NEW COURT HOUSE

Somerset County's Freeholders Unanimous in Their Decision.

PLANS READY SOON

Board Found Public Sentiment Favorable to Action—Thomas E. Gibson's Resolution.

The Board of Chosen Freeholders, at its monthly meeting held yesterday, took definite action relating to the building of a new court house for Somerset county. A resolution, introduced by Thomas E. Gibson, of Rocky Hill, was to the effect that, after making a thorough investigation of public sentiment by holding a public meeting to give the taxpayers a chance to object to a new structure, the Board had found the present Court house, jail, Surrogate's office and County Clerk's office to be inadequate, and that the Freeholders "proceed to take such steps as may seem necessary and proper for the erection of a Court House and buildings suitable for the use of the courts and county officers and to furnish same in readiness for occupancy."

This resolution was passed without a dissenting vote. It is probable that the Board will consider plans at the next meeting.

The estimated cost of the proposed court house and other necessary buildings is between $125,000 and $150,000.

Messrs. Gibson, Vreeland and Whitenack were appointed as a legislation committee on road laws. Their duties will be to examine all bills presented to the Legislature respecting roads and to favor such as is deemed favorable to Somerset county.

MUSICIANS WILL GIVE THEIR YEARLY CONCERT

PREPARATIONS BEING MADE FOR EVENT IN PARK AVENUE BAPTIST CHURCH.

According to to the annual custom of a number of local musicians, an organization has been effected through the efforts of Kenneth Shupp, as director, for the purpose of giving a concert in the Park Avenue Baptist church on Monday night, March 13, under the auspices of the Ladies' Aid Society. These musicians only give one concert during the season and it is proposed to make this year's affair one of the best. Only classical selections will be rendered from such composers as Mozart, Beethoven, Mendelssohn and Wagner.

The soloists for the concert will be Miss Florence O. Wohlfert, pupil of Franz Kaltenborn, violin, and W. Paulding DeNike, 'cello.

The organization is composed of the following musicians: Director, Kenneth Shupp; first violins—Arthur Mosher, Ernest Higham, Joseph Sattels, George Spier, Maurice Audsley; second violins—Dr. Gaston, F. De Robert; viola—G. W. V. Moy; flutes—Elmer Wheeler, Charles Shupp, Archibald Hallard; clarionet, James Hewitt; cornets—Whitney Franse and John Emery; trombone—Garret T. Dunham; double bass—Dr. J. Hervey Buchanan and Jacob Beyer; piano—Vincent G. Sokol; pipe organ, H. J. Harold.

A VALENTINE PARTY.

Given Last Night in Honor of Miss Ella Lounsbury.

Hearts were trumps at the Valentine party given last night in honor of Miss Ella Lounsbury, of Plainfield avenue, to about twenty of her friends. The affair was appropriate in every detail, red cardboard hearts forming the decorative scheme, which was decidedly effective. The hearts were pinned to the wall and curtains, and festooned in all parts of the room.

On one side of the reception hall, the large parlor was cleared for dancing, while in the dining room, the tables were set for hearts. There were five tables, the prizes in the game being won by Miss Hattie Messersmith and Frank Haseltine. The consolation rewards were given to Miss Beatrice Miner and Louis V. Wilson. After the game, dancing formed a pleasant feature of the evening's enjoyment, and later refreshments were served. The Valentine scheme was carried out even in respect to the refreshments, the cakes being heart shaped.

Party for Daughter.

Mr. and Mrs. George L. Chandler, of Johnston's Drive, gave a party yesterday afternoon for their daughter. A number of young friends of Miss Chandler were present and spent a pleasant time playing games, after which supper was served.

Mrs. Truitt's Luncheon.

Mrs. Joseph P. Truitt, of "Tunlaw," gave a luncheon at her home, yesterday, covers being laid for twelve. It was a Valentine luncheon and the decorations were appropriate to the occasion, heart-shaped cards being prominent everywhere, with a profusion of pink roses and pink satin ribbons. The favors were pink glass baskets. The guests were Mrs. William L. Saunders, Mrs. George Wharton Edwards, Mrs. Abram G. Hooley, Mrs. Evarts Tracy, Mrs. A. F. H. Streuli, Mrs. Percy Stewart, Mrs. Lewis G. Timpson, Mrs. H. W. Beebe, Mrs. Eugene Moore, Miss Kittie Stewart and Mrs. J. B. Probasco.

Heart Party in Honor of Cousin.

Miss Estelle B. Brooks, of West Fifth street, gave a "Valentine" heart party at her home last night, in honor of her cousin, Miss Maud Fay, of San Diego, Cal., who is visiting her. The first women's prize, a chafing dish, was won by Miss Ada VanHorne, and the men's, a shot gun, by Edward Hardingham. The consolation prize was awarded Harry E. Bentley. The remainder of the evening was spent in dancing and refreshments were served at a late hour.

Lecture Tomorrow Night.

Dr. Wilfred T. Grenfell will speak of his work as a physician and preacher on the coast of Labrador, where he has been working for the past six years, in the chapel of the Crescent Avenue Presbyterian church, tomorrow night at 8 o'clock. Prof. Norman Duncan, author of "Dr. Luke of the Labrador," is enthusiastic concerning Dr. Grenfell and his labors among the people of that coast.

Whist Club Meeting.

The regular meeting of the Watchung Whist Club was held last night at the home of Walter Walker, of Jackson avenue. The prizes were won by Mrs. Horace Conover and Mr. Walker, the second prizes going to Mrs. Walter Apgar and William Angleman. The next meeting of the club will be held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pearson, of Richmond street.

MILLINERY FADS.

A World of Beautiful Things to Choose From.

At last the day of the hateful flat hat which projected over into the next county is past, and we are now to have variety if nothing else. But the newest of the hats are so large that we are no longer to be accused of not getting full value for our money.

The hat that is most affected by the younger contingent is a large felt or beaver with a wide brim turned up sharply at one side and with an immense high crown that reminds one of the brave days of old when men wore such contrivances all decked with feathers and big buckles. But now it is only the fresh young faces to which they are allowed. A dark brown felt had a high crown and around that a band of black velvet, with a large buckle on the right side, while along the left was a bunch of paradise plumes laid closely, just hanging a little at the back. In front there was a soft rosette made of shorter plumes of the same dull plum shade.

Another of these high crowned hats had the brim slightly waved as it tipped down in front, and it was curled up in the back with a shaded short ostrich plume curled under the edge. Around the crown there was a whole panache of short brown ostrich tips and in front a bunch of lemon colored ones, which formed the starting point for an immense paradise sweep, also in lemon color.

Two Popular Shapes.

The turban and tricorne are still in vogue and are certainly pretty and becoming to every one. One tricorne is shown in the illustration. It is of woolly black felt and has at the left side a rosette of pale blue velvet ribbon extended along the back a short distance for the purpose of affording a hold for the hatpins which otherwise would have to be driven through the skull. Above the rosette is a natural paradise sweep, the colors being white, cream and faint brown. This is certainly a dainty conceit and is peculiarly adapted to the brunette type.

In the illustration are two dress hats for wear at all sorts of functions where hats are permissible. The one turned down is of white velvet made with a flat brim. The underside of the brim is incrusted with fine lace medallions over satin, and the crown is completely hidden under a mass of beautiful fluffy plumes, shading from pure white to a faint pink. The other is of white felt as to the outside of the brim, with folded white chiffon on the inner side. It is tilted high on the left to allow for a large bunch of American Beauty roses and foliage. More of the same are intwined with white tulle on the outside around the high crown. The tulle is gathered at the right and held under a buckle of whited silver and rhinestones.

The Pagoda Hat.

In another place I found a hat shaped like a lamp shade and called a pagoda. It was flat and round, but there were eight corners where the brim was pinched up into sharp points. The crown was rather high and had a flat Alsatian bow with a jeweled buckle directly in front. Other shapes show a turban front, sometimes with and sometimes without a visible crown. There is literally no limit to the caprices of the milliners in trimming these hats. Some have little rosettes set upright all around the brim, and these are of metal in many pretty fancies. Again, they will be of crocheted chenille or made of velvet ribbon. I think one might go absolutely insane trying to tell half their glories, but the most salient point about them all is the use of plumes. No trimming is more graceful or so universally becoming, but it does look queer to see on a heavy velvet or felt or beaver hat a trimming made up of feathers, flowers and tulle all together. Tulle is the most fragile of all the things offered to beauteous woman, and we naturally associate it with the short lived happiness of brides, but when a clever milliner gets hold of it she makes it seem twin to fur or felt.

For runabouts there is an unusually large choice of felts, and these are trimmed with darker stuffs, sometimes a piece of the dress material and a nice buckle or some short feather. The plainer these hats are the more stylish they are considered.

ODDS AND ENDS.

Spangled Gauze the Vogue—Stockinet Footwear—A Bisque Cloth Costume.

Colored spangled gauze in the design of a butterfly with outspread wings is one of the prettiest ideas seen on the new Watteau fans.

A stockinet for slipping over evening boots when driving represents a novelty in footwear. It has no fastening, but there is a seam down the middle front, and it is easily slipped on and off.

A curious passementerie has made its appearance lately, carried out in several shades of yellow and orange chenille mingled with various tones of brown leather. The leather is cut into bands the same width of the chenille and the two together twisted into designs of a floral or conventional type. This trimming is used on elaborate walking gowns.

Oriental satin in lovely shades is always worn, and crepe de chine should not be forgotten, on account of its lovely draping qualities.

Here is a suggestion for a most fetching calling costume of bisque cloth. It is tailorish in cut, the skirt made in three graduated parts, with rounded corners in front caught to produce a panel effect, with buttons of pale green and gold enamel. The bolero coat has long straps in front, with a cross tab in front trimmed with six enameled buttons. The belt and collar are of pale green velvet embroidered with gold thread. The sleeves are plaited at the top, taper toward the wrist and end in a smart cuff of velvet and lace.

The fetching little toque in the picture is of white chiffon, the brim becomingly evolved from white point lace. An aigret and long feather trim the toque at the side.

MODES OF THE MOMENT.

A New Golf Jersey—Stylish Dresses For Little Girls.

Stylish dresses for little girls are made of fancy plaid in Russian blouse style. White shields beautifully hand embroidered in gold brighten up these costumes.

Foulard silks will again be in evidence for dressy spring toilets, Dresden designs on white satin grounds being first choice. Floral patterns scattered over a striped or dotted surface is another favorite combination.

Spring and summer gowns will be almost exact reproductions of the advanced winter modes.

A smart touch of color is lent to many of the new storm coats by collar and cuffs of leather in natural color, green or scarlet.

The golf girl may revel in a new jersey, a smart double breast affair finished with a tartan collar.

The newest dust coats are long and loose, button all the way down the front and are belted in the back. They have a deep cape, gauntlet cuffs and a small standing collar.

Brooches of gold elaborately jeweled are used as hatpins to hold in place dainty headgear of tulle, lace and flowers.

The attractive dinner waist illustrated is of yellow crepe de paris. Over the full bloused bodice is arranged a deep collar of lace. About the shoulders are three bands of amber velvet. A chou and jabot of lace fasten the lace collar in front.

VAGARIES OF FASHION.

The Bolero Holds Its Own In Popularity—The Draped Bodice.

The bolero, which is so popular, is nothing like its Spanish namesake. The new development is a half loose coat which finishes in a round belt at the waist. Another example of the bolero is evolved of lace hung in loose plaits from the shoulders and confined at the waist by a high pointed girdle of soft silk. This girdle is pointed in front and rounded at the back.

The fitted and draped style of waist is gradually gaining in popularity. The loose, graceful blouse bodices so long in favor the average woman finds difficult to dispense with. Consequently a smart wardrobe will have waists of both styles.

Myrtle and lizard shades of green as well as the bronze tones, currant and various shades of red, medium violet, deep plum, burgundy and the golden browns will be the day wear tints for early spring gowns.

Most becoming and dainty are the exquisitely embroidered fine white chemisettes designed for wear with long tailor made coats.

A hat of one color and gown in a contrasting or harmonizing tone bid fair to be a fashionable vogue later in the season.

Very stunning is this dress of gun metal cashmere. The skirt is laid in fine plaits about the waist. At the knee the plaits flare, and each one is caught alternately with passementerie motifs. The sleeves are odd affairs consisting of circular ruffles trimmed with black velvet buttons.

FADS AND FANCIES.

Advance Spring Modes—Some of the New Jewelry Notions.

It is early to think of spring and summer fashions. Still many of the advanced modes are appearing in the shops. One summery novelty is the ribbon parasol.

A novel and dainty new parasol is reminiscent of the mikado's realm. It has bamboo sticks and is covered with white silk heavily embroidered with cherry blossoms in their natural colorings.

In the jewelry line amethysts are reigning in fashionable favor. Sleeve links, collars, brooches, hatpins and watch fobs are all made up in this lovely purple stone.

Jeweled graduated safety pins in sets of three are a new fancy. There is a long bar brooch to close the collar. The two smaller pins of diminishing length are placed below the long bar.

Jet is again used as a trimming on evening frocks, the new white variety being particularly smart.

The attractive waist illustrated is of light blue French flannel. It is tucked a few inches from the shoulders. Edging the plain cloth vest are rows of braid put on in lines, the outer line being in a looped design. A smartly tied ribbon scarf makes a pretty trimming down the front of the bodice. A girdle of ribbon encircles the waist.

Woman's Ways

Her Ideas of Size—The Helpless College Graduate and the Feminine Jollier

"Funny what odd ideas of distance and size the ordinary woman has," remarked the tailor. "I could forgive her in moments of terror—for instance, when she shrieks out excitedly, 'The burglar had a pistol that long' (the tailor illustrates with her hands the size of a small cannon), but what I can't stand is to have women come into my shop and order a suit with a skirt having just so much train (illustrating with her hands) and sleeves just so big (more hand illustration) and a little collar just so deep (measuring off on her finger). Well, I make it just as she says, and behold it is all wrong! 'Why, the idea,' she declares indignantly. 'Didn't I expressly show you just how long I wanted that skirt to lie on the ground?' And with her hands while she is talking she has described an elastic train anywhere from two to ten inches."

"I have my troubles also," sighed the furrier. "One woman complained the other day that I had made her fur coat too short, and she wanted two inches added. Fortunately I raised my head at the time and saw what manner of two inches she was measuring in the air. A little argument, with a rule, soon convinced her it was five inches and not two she desired, and it incidentally saved me a heated discussion and more ripping and piecing. That was not an exceptional case either. That sort of thing is almost a daily occurrence in every establishment in which fair woman holds sway."

A Course in Housekeeping.

"Why don't they have a practical course in college for future housekeepers?" asked the sensible woman. "At least a certain percentage of those girls are going to get married, whether the faculty recognizes the possibility or not. One of the first acts of such a graduate will be to start keeping house, and what on earth, please tell me, does she know about it? Oh, I don't mean merely sweeping, dusting and ordering a servant. These things come easily enough. But I am referring to that much more important part, the expense account. How is she going to know the price of things and how much it should cost her each month to run a house? How is she going to prevent the butcher and the groceryman from cheating her? Cheat her they will when they find out she can be cheated.

"The other day I was in a butcher shop, and I saw an instance of this helplessness. A pretty little woman with 'bride' written all over her entered and inquired the price of chops. That was bad enough, but when it developed that she didn't know what a loin chop was and demanded chops with nice large bones the proprietor of the shop fairly chuckled with glee and made signs behind her back to the salesman, who accordingly charged her double price for the chops.

"I recognized her as a graduate of a well known college. Precious little good her Greek and higher mathematics did her then, poor little soul!"

The Woman Jollier.

"Who says the woman jollier is a fraud?" remarked the bachelor. "The more there are of her sort the better. She helps us over the stony places of life, restores our confidence in ourselves and cheers us on to fresh effort.

"There are enough women in the world who believe it to be their bounden duty to tell us the exact truth about ourselves. There are enough women to find fault with us and mark the difference between their ideals and our humble selves. But only the most conceited man in the world is unaware of his faults, and why should he be continually reminded of them?

"Ah, yes, the woman jollier occasionally jollies us out of a few things, but then we know we are being jollied—and we want to be jollied."

OPERA CLOAKS.

Exquisite Wraps For Theater and Ball Use—The Poke Bonnet.

Oyster shell white is a favorite shade for smart opera cloaks. These cloaks are very smart when trimmed with dark fur and silver embroidery.

An odd evening coat is of gray liberty silk cut like a monk's cloak and lined with accordion plaited chiffon.

There is a stunning new coat which emanated from Paris, a kind of cross between the ordinary basque coat and the redingote. It is tight fitting, the basque being without fullness at the top, while at the hem it forms godets. The coat is worn open or closed and is elaborately trimmed. The sleeves are of moderate size.

In the up to date evening coiffure bows and aigrets have disappeared. The new hair adornment is a diamond twisted bar, with a pair of side combs to match or a single top comb of an odd and pretty design.

For those who revel in the picturesque there is a poke bonnet, a perfect duplicate of one worn in 1820. It is made in two distinct parts, a flaring poke front reaching from ear to ear, while the crown is round and boxlike. On the left side is a bunch of white ostrich tips held in place by a jeweled rosette.

Very smart for theater wear are the feather boas and muffs made of ostrich, coq or marabou feathers. Sets of these feathers are extremely fashionable in deep cerise shading to a delicate pink.

The girlish hat illustrated is of white felt trimmed with a wreath of pale blush pink roses and mossy green leaves.

DRESS ACCESSORIES.

Dainty Belts and Stocks For the Up to Date Costume.

The twentieth century girl hangs her chatelaine watch on a long black half inch silk ribbon. On the left side of her blouse she fastens the timepiece with a fancy gold safety pin a couple of inches long.

A pretty necktie to wear with shirt waists is made from three-quarters of a yard of plain satin ribbon four inches wide and from two yards of Dresden ribbon four inches in width. The stock piece about the throat is of folded ribbon of both kinds. The loops of the bow in front are of plain ribbon and the long knotted ends of the Dresden ribbon.

A fortunate girl had given to her on Christmas a perfectly stunning homemade belt. It consisted of nothing more elaborate than a yard and a quarter of five inch moss green satin ribbon. At the center of the back the ribbon was laid in three plaits. Holding these in place was a large oval piece of green suede leather cut in a fanciful stenciled design. Under the middle part of the conventional design colored silk was applied. This pretty device was used in place of a buckle. The ribbon ends which looped in front were ornamented with small designs in leather.

Crapes in pastel shades adorn reception hats of chiffon or uncut velvet, while white Irish lace is combined with black velvet for toques and picture hats.
